PREFACE

This is the fourth edition of the Code of Laws of the District of Columbia prepared and published pursuant to Title 1 U.S. Code, section 202. This edition contains all the general and permanent laws relating to or in force in the District of Columbia, on January 2, 1961, except such laws as are of application in the District of Columbia by reason of being laws of the United States general and permanent in their nature. The Code is prima facie evidence of existing law.

Many new features and improvements were incorporated in the 1940 edition, reflecting, as far as practicable, the preferences of the users of the Code who responded to a questionnaire sent out by the Committee on Revision of the Laws to several thousand attorneys and Government officers and employees within the District of Columbia.

An entirely new arrangement of subject matter was adopted which presents all the procedural statutes in Volume One and the general statutes, in modern alphabetical arrangement, in Volume Two of that edition.

A modern method of numbering the sections was adopted. The number before the dash indicates the title; the last two numbers indicate the section; and the middle number or numbers indicates the chapter. No chapter in any title has more than 60 sections. An example: Section 11-1208 would be found as Section 8 of chapter 12 in Title 11. Section 1-240 would be Title 1, chapter 2, section 40.

Provision has been made for future annual supplements in the form of pocket parts rather than separate volumes.

The 1940 edition was the first official Code containing the annotations of the court decisions interpreting these laws. Numerous cross references and historical notes have been added to increase the usefulness of this Code. These annotations, cross references and historical notes are brought up to the end of 1960 in this edition and will be kept current in the future annual supplements.

The work of preparing this edition was done by the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives with the assistance of the West Publishing Company and the Edward Thompson Company. The Committee acknowledges especially the valuable assistance rendered by the staff of Dr. Charles J. Zinn, law revision counsel for the Committee. Acknowledgment is also made to the numerous officials of the District and Federal governments and the members of the bench and bar of the District whose suggestions have been most helpful.

The Committee invites all criticisms and suggestions looking to the improvement of the Code.

Chairman.

WASHINGTON, D.C., January 1961.

A widow, after the death of her husband, incontinent, and without any difficulty, shall have her marriage and her inheritance and shall give nothing for her dower, her marriage, or her inheritance, which her husband and she held the day of the death of her husband, and she shall tarry in the chief house of her husband by forty days after the death of her husband, within which days her dower shall be assigned her (if it were not assigned her before) or that the house be a castle; and if she depart from the castle, then a competent house shall be forthwith provided for her, in the which she may honestly dwell, until her dower be to her assigned, as it is aforesaid; and she shall have in the meantime her reasonable estovers of the common; and for her dower shall be assigned unto her the third part of all the lands of her husband, which were his during coverture, except she were endowed of less at the church door. § 18-201a. Right of dower abolished—Exception—Intestate share—Right of spouse to encumber real property.

(a) The right of dower, and its incidents, are hereby abolished; except that with respect to parties who intermarried prior to the effective date of this Act, the wife shall retain her dower rights in all real estate whereof the husband, prior to the effective date of this Act, was seized of an estate of inheritance at any time during the marriage. As to any such real estate of which the husband dies seized, the share of the wife therein, as provided in section 18-101, shall be in lieu of her dower rights unless she elects to take the same in similar manner and within the period as authorized in section 18-211, providing for renunciation of devises and bequests under wills.

(b) The intestate share as provided by section 18-101, shall attach to all real property owned by husband or wife during coverture: Provided, That neither husband nor wife hereafter shall have the right to convey, transfer or encumber his or her real property free of the surviving spouse's interest in case of intestacy, as provided in sections 18-101, 18-201a, 18-210 to 18-212, 18-215a, 18-714 to 18-717, and 30-201, without joinder of the other spouse. NOTES TO DECISIONS

Purpose 2
Retroactive effect 3
Rights of incompetent wife 4

1. Construction with other laws

Section 18-204 depriving wife who has been adjudged incompetent of her rights of dower in any real property acquired by husband subsequent to adjudication of incompetency and while adjudication is in force, and this section providing that husband or wife does not have right to convey his or her property free of surviving spouse's interest in case of intestacy without joinder of other spouse, are not repugnant or inconsistent, and this section did not repeal section 18-204. Vito v. Bonart and Vito (1958, 163 F. Supp. 747).

2. Purpose

Purpose of this section providing that neither husband nor wife shall have right to convey, transfer or encumber his or her real property free of surviving spouse's interest in case of intestacy without joinder of other spouse is to prevent the destruction of the intestate share of one spouse by a conveyance made by other spouse during lifetime of the former. Vito v. Bonart and Vito (1958, 163 F. Supp. 747).

3. Retroactive effect

A retrospective operation will not be given to a statute which interferes with antecedent rights, or by which human action is regulated, unless such be the unequivocal and inflexible import of the terms, and the manifest intention of the legislature. Vito v. Vito and Bonart (1959, 272 F. 2d 555, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 326).

4. Rights of incompetent wife

Where before the effective date of this section providing that an intestate share would attach to all realty owned by husband or wife during coverture, husband entered into a contract to convey certain realty acquired subsequent to his wife's adjudication of incompetency, husband was authorized to convey the realty without his wife's signature, as fully as if he were unmarried, under section 18-204 providing for such a conveyance where a married woman has been found upon inquisition to be a lunatic or insane. Vito v. Vito and Bonart (1959, 272 F. 2d 555, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 326).

A widow shall be entitled to dower in lands held by equitable as well as legal title in the husband at any time during the coverture, whether held by him at the time of his death or not, but such right of dower shall not operate to the prejudice of any claim for the purchase money of such lands or other lien on the same. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1375, ch. 854, § 1158.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Common law rule 2
Decisions under prior law 1
Equitable lien 3
Refusal to release dower 4

1. Decisions under prior law

Appellant was entitled to a decree declaring a deed of trust to be without legal effect or operation to bar her of her right to dower in the premises therein mentioned and described; and her right and title to dower should, in all respects, be and remain as if said appellant had never joined in said deed; and she was entitled to an assignment of dower, and to an account for rents and profits for the time they have been wrongfully withheld from her. Follansbee v. Follansbee (1 App. D. C. 326).

When dower was not specifically assigned, the widow of the former owner and mother of the children would not be a proper party. Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Taylor (6 App. D. C. 259).

Inchoate right of dower could not be broader than the estate of the husband upon which it depended. Sis v. Boarman (11 App. D. C. 116).

A widow being in possession of the only piece of property in which her dower could be assigned, her right thereto ought to confer upon her such continuing right of possession as to bar ejectment by the heirs at law, whose duty it was to make the proper assignment. Wilkes v. Wilkes (18 App. D. C. 90).

2. Common law rule

At common law the wife had no dower in an equity of redemption. Follansbee v. Follansbee (1 App. D. C. 326).

The common law rule that a widow is not entitled to dower in lands to which the husband has a remainder in fee if the remainderman predecease the life tenant is not modified by 1901 Code, § 1158 (this section). Talty v. Talty (40 App. D. C. 587).

"Prior to 1896, there was no statute giving a wife dower in the equitable estate of her husband, and she was not entitled to any under the common law." Waggaman v. Dulaney (48 App. D. C. 14).

3. Equitable lien

Equitable lien was superior to dower right. Waggaman v. Dulaney (48 App. D.C. 14).

4. Refusal to release dower

Equity would not at instance of vendee decree specific performance of a contract for the sale of land when the wife of the vendor refused to relinquish her right of dower to the vendor. Barbour v. Hickey (2 App. D. C. 207, 24 L. R. A. 763).

Where wife of vendor is entitled to dower in the lands, conveyance of good title can not be made without her consent, and where she refuses to release her dower, equity will not enforce specific performance of husband's contract to sell. Reilly v. Cullinane (1923, 287 F. 994, 58 App. D.C. 17).

If a wife willingly leave her husband, and go away, and continue with her advouterer, she shall be barred forever of action to demand her dower, that she ought to have of her husband's lands, if she be convict thereupon, except that her husband willingly, and without coercion reconcile her, and suffer her to dwell with him; in which case she shall be restored to her action. (13 Edw. I, ch. 34, § 4, 1285; Kilty's Rept., p. 213; Alex. Brit. Stat., p. 138; Comp. Stat. D. C., p. 36, § 165.)

Where any married woman is a lunatic or insane, and has been so found upon inquisition, and the said finding remains in force, or where any married woman has been absent or unheard of for seven years, the husband of such lunatic or insane or absent person may grant and convey by his separate deed, whether the same be absolute or by way of lease or mortgage, as fully as if he were unmarried, any real estate which he may have acquired since the finding of such inquisition or since the beginning of such absence. In case where the husband, being impleaded for land, giveth up the land demanded unto his adversary by covin; after the death of the husband, the justices shall award the wife her dower, if it be demanded. In case the husband loseth the land by default, if the wife, after the death of her husband, demandeth her dower, and if it be alledged, that her husband lost the land, by judgment, and it be found that it was by default, the tenant must answer; then it behoveth the tenant to answer further, and to shew that he had right, and hath in the aforesaid land, according to the form of the writ that the tenant before purchased against the husband. And if he can shew that the husband of such wife had no right in the lands, nor any other but he that holdeth them, the tenant shall go quit, and the wife shall recover nothing of her dower; which thing if he can not shew, the wife shall recover her dower. Where it chanceth that a woman not having right to demand dower, the heir being within age, doth purchase a writ of dower against a gardian, and the gardian endoweth the woman by favour, or maketh default, or by collusion defendeth the plea so faintly, whereby the woman is awarded her dower in prejudice of the heir; it is provided, that the heir, when he cometh to full age, shall have an action to demand the seisin of his ancestor against such a woman, like as he should have against any other deforceor; yet so, that the woman shall have her exception saved against the demandant, to shew that she had right to her dower, which if she can shew, she shall go quit and retain her dower, and the heir shall be grievously amerced, according to the discretion of the justices; and if not, the heir shall recover his demand, &c. In like manner the woman shall be aided, if the heir or any other do implead her for her dower, or if she lose her dower by default, in which case the default shall not be so prejudicial to her, but that she shall recover her dower, if she have right thereto. NOTES TO DECISIONS

Common law 1
Construction 2
Purpose 3

1. Common law

Under common law existing in Maryland prior to creation of District of Columbia, a husband was not permitted to deprive his wife of her reasonable share of his estate, either directly or indirectly, and a bequest to wife was not considered in lieu of her legal interest, but instead she took both. Mead v. Phillips (1943, 135 F. 2d 819, 77 U. S. App. D. C. 365, 147 A. L. R. 322).

2. Construction

The statutory provision for widows in District of Columbia constitutes a recognition and, in part, a restatement of her rights at common law, and it is not to be regarded as an abrogation of common law, but instead, to extent that § 18-210 fails to cover the entire subject, the common law is to be looked to for amplification and definition. Mead v. Phillips (1943, 135 F. 2d 819, 77 U.S. App. D. C. 365, 147 A. L. R. 322)

3. Purpose

This section and § 18-211 requiring widow to elect between husband's will and her legal interests were enacted to avoid result reached by early cases permitting widow to take both under the will and her legal interest, but it was not their purpose to deprive a widow of her common-law rights. Mead v. Phillips (1943, 135 F. 2d 819, 77 U.S. App. D. C. 365, 147 A. L. R. 322).

§ 18-211. Renunciation of devises and bequests to spouse—Form—Limitation—Interest to be taken by widow or widower upon such renunciation.

Subject to the provisions of section 18-212, a widow or widower shall be barred of any rights or interest she or he may have in real or personal estate by any such devise or bequest unless within six months after administration may be granted on the deceased spouse's estate she or he shall file in the probate court a written renunciation to the following effect:

I, A. B., widow or widower of ----- late of -----, deceased, do hereby renounce and quit all claim to any devise or bequest made to me by the last will of my husband or wife exhibited and proved according to law; and I elect to take in lieu thereof my legal share of the real and personal estate of my said spouse.

If, during said period of six months, a suit should be instituted to construe the will of the husband or wife, the period of six months for the filing of such renunciation shall commence to run from the date when such suit shall be finally determined, by appeal or otherwise.

By renouncing all claim to any and all devises and bequests, made to her or him by the will of her husband or his wife, the surviving spouse shall be entitled to such share or interest in the real and personal estate which she or he would have taken had the deceased spouse died intestate. Except in cases of valid antenuptial or postnuptial agreements, and except in cases when it is expressly waived in a writing filed with the probate court within said six months period, this provision for the surviving spouse shall apply with like effect (without formal renunciation) to cases where the wife or husband has made no devise or bequest to her husband or his wife, and also to cases where nothing passes by such devise or bequest. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1376, ch. 854, § 1173; Apr. 19, 1920, 41 Stat. 567, ch. 153; Aug. 31, 1957, 71 Stat. 561, Pub. L. 85-244, § 6.)

AMENDMENTS

1957—Act Aug. 31, 1957, made section applicable to widowers.

1920—Act Apr. 19, 1920, inserted provisions requiring the period of six months for the filing of the renunciation to commence to run from the date when the suit construing the will of the husband shall be finally determined, by appeal or otherwise, and substituted "shall be entitled, in addition to her dower, to the distributive share of his personal property, which she would have taken had he died intestate, and, except in cases of valid antenuptial or postnuptial agreements, this provision for the wife shall apply with the effect (without formal renunciation) to cases where the husband has made no devise or bequest to his wife" for "shall be entitled to one-third part of the personal estate of her husband which shall remain after payment of his debts and claims against him, and no more."

1. Acceptance of terms of will

When widow was aware of her rights within the six-months' period, and did not so renounce them, for the reason that she accepted an annuity instead of her right of dower, she could not make an election later for the purpose of getting refund of income tax. Semmes v. United States (Ct. Cl. 1934, 6 F. Supp. 119).

A widow may not defeat the general purpose of the will by a sale of the property and a division of its proceeds four years after she has elected, by acquiescence and by conduct, to take the provision the will makes for her. Evans v. Evans (1932, 55 F. 2d 533, 60 App. D.C. 371).

2. Caveat

Where caveat of alleged widower of deceased testatrix was not filed in District of Columbia within three months allowed by statute as to personalty, and alleged widower had filed a renunciation of provisions of will and election to take his legal share as of intestacy under statute, and there were no children born of alleged marriage, so that alleged widower had no interest by curtesy, motion to dismiss caveat would be granted because not timely filed and because alleged widower had no interest sufficient to entitle him to maintain caveat. In re Phillips' Estate (1953, 111 F. Supp. 453).

3. Common law

Under common law existing in Maryland prior to creation of District of Columbia, a husband was not permitted to deprive his wife of her reasonable share of his estate, either directly or indirectly, and a bequest to wife was not considered in lieu of her legal interest, but instead she took both. Mead v. Phillips (1943, 135 F. 2d 819, 77 U. S. App. D. C. 365, 147 A. L. R. 322).

The common-law rights of widow, as restated and recognized in this section barring widow's common-law rights in husband's estate unless within time specified she files written renunciation of bequests contained in her husband's will, remain intact until a valid election has been made by her, or in her behalf, against those interests. Id.

4. Construction

Under District of Columbia Code, where testator left no child, parent, grandchild, brother or sister or child of a brother or sister, widow who renounced will made by her husband, was entitled to the whole of her husband's personal estate. Wegenast v. Pheylan (1952, 195 F. 2d 776, 90 U.S. App. D.C. 277).

The statutory requirement of an election by widow between her husband's will and her common-law rights is not a "privilege" bestowed by this section but is a "limitation" upon the common-law rights of the widow and must be so construed. Mead v. Phillips (1943, 135 F. 2d 819, 77 U. S. App. D. C. 365, 147 A. L. R. 322).

This section barring widow's common-law rights in husband's estate unless within specified time she files written renunciation of bequest contained in her husband's will is not a "statute of limitations". Id.

The statutory provision for widows in District of Columbia constitutes a recognition and, in part, a restatement of her rights at common law, and it is not to be regarded as an abrogation of common law, but instead, to extent that sections 18-210 et seq. fail to cover the entire subject, the common law is to be looked to for amplification and definition. Id.

5. Defective bequest

If husband's bequest in favor of widow is defective, there is no requirement that widow make an election. Mead v. Phillips (1943, 135 F. 2d 819, 77 U.S. App. D.C. 365, 147 A. L. R. 322).

6. Defective gift

Addition of name of depositor's brother to bank account under circumstances not amounting to a gift and for purpose of permitting brother to obtain money in event of depositor's death was ineffective as amounting to an attempted testamentary disposition without compliance with testamentary requirements and as evading this section permitting widow to claim distributive share of personal estate of husband when will makes no devise in her favor. Gibson v. Industrial Bank of Washington (D. C. Mun. App. 1944, 36 A. 2d 62).

7. Deprivation of rights

The common-law rights of dower in land and of "thirds" in personal property depended, not alone on the welfare of the widow, but of her children as well, and therefore to interpret a statutory limitation on the common-law rights in such manner as to cut them off arbitrarily, upon death of an incompetent widow, would be to disregard one of the two primary purposes of this section. Mead v. Phillips (1943, 135 F. 2d 819, 77 U.S. App. D.C. 365, 147 A. L. R. 322).

8. Election by court

Upon request, an equity court can act on behalf of, and in interest of, an insane widow in making election between widow's common-law rights and bequest in her husband's will. Mead v. Phillips (1943, 135 F. 2d 819, 77 U. S. App. D. C. 365, 147 A. L. R. 322).

An incompetent widow cannot, personally, make an election to renounce husband's will, but court of competent jurisdiction can exercise the power, in her behalf, during statutory period or thereafter, prior to her death. Id.

Where widow's privilege of renouncing bequest contained in husband's will is not exercised on behalf of incompetent widow during her lifetime and matter is brought to attention of equity court, it is court's duty to make election, weighing, in doing so, the various considerations including provision which was made for care and comfort of widow, prior to her death, and the court's determination should be made as of time when widow was living, in light of circumstances then existing. Id.

9. Insane or incompetent widow

Where widow was incompetent at time of death of her husband, widow had no right to elect whether to accept or renounce husband's will, and upon death of widow her administrator had no such authority. Boyer, Administrator C.T.A. etc., v. Bealor Executrix etc. (1959, 271 F. 2d 845, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 262).

Where widow was incompetent and unable to exercise privilege of renouncing bequest contained in her husband's will, if determination was not made of rights of the widow and of her estate, the husband's will would be inoperative as to her and his estate would be distributed, as to her, in the same manner as if he had died intestate. Mead v. Phillips (1943, 135 F. 2d 819, 77 U.S. App. D.C. 365, 147 A. L. R. 322).

Where widow is incompetent, the welfare of widow is not sole consideration in determining whether bequest contained in her husband's will should be renounced on behalf of widow, but welfare of her heirs or other dependents may be considered. Id.

The policy of District of Columbia in regard to application to insane widow of this section barring widow of common-law rights in husband's estate unless within time specified she files a renunciation of bequest in husband's will is clearly manifested in section 12-201 governing limitation of actions, which contains a blanket exemption in favor of infants and insane persons. Id.

Where widow's privilege of renouncing bequest contained in husband's will was not exercised on behalf of incompetent widow during her lifetime, complaint of administratrix of widow's estate to recover widow's share of husband's estate and to recover widow's property and damages from trustee of the incompetent widow stated a cause of action. Id.

10. Laches

Where trustee of insane widow was also beneficiary and representative of the husband's estate, trustee's "laches" in protecting interests of widow could not deprive equity court of power to act in widow's interest in making an election between widow's common-law rights and bequest contained in her husband's will. Mead v. Phillips (1943, 135 F. 2d 819, 77 U.S. App. D.C. 365, 147 A. L. R. 322).

Where an equity court acts in interest of an insane widow in determining whether bequest in husband's will should be renounced, bad faith or laches of heirs or representatives may become proper considerations, along with others, to guide court, but such considerations provide no basis for concluding that an equity court has no power to act in interest of an insane widow or that inaction of her trustee constitutes an election solely by reason of lapse of time. Id.

11. Petition, right to

If heirs or representatives of insane widow delay in petitioning equity court to act on behalf of insane widow in making an election between widow's common-law rights and bequest in husband's will, those interested in the husband's estate can petition the court to act. Mead v. Phillips (1943, 135 F. 2d 819, 77 U.S. App. D.C. 365, 147 A. L. R. 322).

12. Presumptions

The fact that money was expended under husband's will for care and comfort of his insane widow did not authorize a presumption that the widow had elected to abide by the provisions of her husband's will. Mead v. Phillips (1943, 135 F. 2d 819, 77 U.S. App. D.C. 365, 147 A. L. R. 322).

13. Purpose

The purpose of this section barring widow's common-law rights in husband's estate unless within time specified she files written renunciation of bequest contained in husband's will is that renunciation shall constitute an "election to reject", and a failure to renounce shall constitute an "election to accept" the offer. Mead v. Phillips (1943, 135 F. 2d 819, 77 U.S. App. D.C. 365, 147 A. L. R. 322).

The widow's privilege of renouncing bequest contained in her husband's will and electing to enjoy her dower or statutory rights is intended to permit her to decide whether her interests will be better served by another arrangement. Id.

This section and § 18-210 requiring widow to elect between husband's will and her legal interests were enacted to avoid result reached by early cases permitting widow to take both under the will and her legal interest, but it was not their purpose to deprive a widow of her common-law rights. Id.

14. Renunciation required

A widow must file a renunciation of her rights under the will in order to take under the law; inadequate provisions under the will do not relieve her of this duty. Cahill v. Eberly (1930, 38 F. 2d 539, 59 App. D.C. 228).

Mere oral declarations privately made by the widow can not take the place of a written renunciation. Id.

15. Representative of widow

A widow's representative cannot act in her behalf to make renunciation of husband's will, except with permission of court, or unless a statute confers the power. Mead v. Phillips (1943, 135 F. 2d 819, 77 U.S. App. D. C. 365, 147 A. L. R. 322).

Where guardian ad litem of incompetent widow made no suggestion concerning an election in widow's behalf to renounce bequest in husband's will, it was duty of trustee to request promptly a determination by equity court of the widow's interest and where trustee had failed to act it became the duty of the widow's representative to request proper action. Id.

Where widow was incompetent, guardian ad litem made no suggestion concerning an election in widow's behalf to renounce bequest contained in her husband's will and widow's trustee who was also beneficiary and representative of the husband's estate failed to act for protection of interests of widow, court of equity could exercise power of renunciation after expiration of statutory period and after widow's death. Id.

16. Trust property

Where wife has vested remainder interest in trust property, but interest of wife was divested because she predeceased life tenant, husband had no estate of curtesy in the trust property on death of wife and death of life tenant. Noreen et al. v. Sparks et al. (1952, 103 F. Supp. 588, motion denied 104 F. Supp. 675, cause remanded 204 F. 2d 56, 92 U.S. App. D.C. 164).

If the surviving spouse does not renounce as provided in section 18-211, she or he shall be entitled to receive the benefit of all provisions in her or his favor in the will of the deceased spouse and shall share, in accordance with sections 18-101, 18-701, 18-702, 18-703 and 18-704, in any estate of the deceased spouse undisposed of by the will. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1377, ch. 854, § 1174; Aug. 31, 1957, 71 Stat. 561, Pub. L. 85-244, § 7.)

AMENDMENT

1957—Act Aug. 31, 1957, amended section generally. Prior to such amendment section read as follows: "If the will of the husband devise and bequeath a part of both real and personal estate to the wife, she shall renounce the whole or be otherwise barred of her right to both real and personal estate."

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Effect of solvency 1
Gifts causa mortis 2
Option to purchase real estate 3

1. Effect of solvency

Where it is substantially stated in the bill that decedent's estate will be solvent, plaintiff's remedy may best be sought in the probate court rather than in court of equity. Street v. Stubblefield (1927, 20 F. 2d 1017, 57 App. D. C. 276, certiorari denied 48 S. Ct. 121, 275 U.S. 564, 72 L. Ed. 428).

2. Gifts causa mortis

Money paid defendant by his brother shortly before the latter's death, at a time when his illness was expected to result in death at any time, was a valid gift causa mortis, where decedent was of sound mind at the time of the gift, the defendant cared for him during his last illness and paid the final expenses, and there was sufficient personality remaining to satisfy the widow's claim. Railey v. Railey (1940, 30 F. Supp. 121).

3. Option to purchase real estate

Ninety-nine-year lease, with option to purchase, is personality. Bean v. Reynolds (15 App. D. C. 125).

4. Rents

If there is enough personality to pay debts, the rents accruing after death of testator need not be used. Brosnan v. Fox (1923, 284 F. 923, 52 App. D. C. 143).

The discharge or bequest, in a will, of any debt or demand of a testator against any executor named in a will, or against any other person, shall not be valid as against the creditors of the deceased, but shall be construed only as a specific bequest of such debt or demand, and the amount thereof shall be included in the inventory of the effects of the deceased and be assets for the payment of his debts, if necessary for that purpose, and, if not so necessary, shall be paid in the same manner and proportion as other specific legacies. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1240, ch. 854, § 318.)

The naming of any person as executor in a will shall not operate as a discharge or bequest of any just claim which the testator had against such executor; but such claim shall be included among the credits and effects of the deceased in the inventory, and the executor shall be liable for the same, as for so much money in his hands, at the time such debt or demand becomes due; and he shall apply and distribute the same, in the payment of debts and legacies and among the next of kin, as part of the personal estate of the deceased: Provided, That in such cases the sureties of the executor shall not be liable if the claim against the executor would have been uncollectible if some other person had been executor. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1240, ch. 854, § 319; June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 529, ch. 1329.)

AMENDMENT

1902—Act June 30, 1902, added the proviso.

On the failure of the executor to give in such claim in the list of debts due the deceased, any person interested in the administration may allege the same by petition to said probate court, and the said court, with consent of the parties, may decide on the same, or it may be referred by the parties, with the court's approval; or at the instance of either party the court may direct an issue to be tried by a jury; and if said claim shall in any of such proceedings be decided to be a just claim of the decedent against the executor, said executor shall be charged with the amount thereof as aforesaid. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1240, ch. 854, § 320.)

In like manner it shall be the duty of every administrator and collector to give in a claim against himself, and on his giving it, or failure so to do, there shall be the same proceeding as above described with regard to an executor; and the same rule shall apply to his sureties. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1240, ch. 854, § 321; June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 529, ch. 1329; Apr. 19, 1920, 41 Stat. 563, ch. 153.)

AMENDMENTS

1920—Act Apr. 19, 1920, added the words "and collector."
1902—Act June 30, 1902, added the words "and the same shall apply to his sureties" at the end.

It shall be the duty of the executor, administrator, or collector or of the appraisers to give notice to the persons immediately interested in the administration, or at least two of them, if they are numerous, of the time and place of making said appraisement, and thereupon they shall proceed at said time and place to value said property and estate, setting down each article or item separately, with the value thereof, in dollars and cents, and when such appraisement shall have been completed they shall certify the same under their hands and seals, and the same shall be returned with the inventory. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1239, ch. 854, § 312; June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 529, ch. 1329.)

desperate, and also an account of all moneys belonging to the deceased which shall come to his hands. And whenever, after an inventory has been returned, assets not therein included shall come to the knowledge of the executor, administrator, or collector an additional inventory and appraisal shall be promptly prepared and filed in the manner aforesaid. But if said decedent shall have been at the head of a family, or a householder, the property exempt under sections 15-401 to 15-403, as therein stated, shall so continue exempt from all claims against said decedent, and shall be distributed by the court to such members of the family or household as in the judgment of the court the necessity and exigencies of the particular case may require. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1239, ch. 854, § 314.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Family portraits 1
Sale of exempted property 2

1. Family portraits

Family portraits "seem to have been recognized as heirlooms at common law, and as such went to the heirs at law, and not to the executor * * *." By custom they are not included in the inventories in the District. Brown v. Easterhazy (25 W. L. R. 478).

2. Sale of exempted property

In case an inventory shall be returned by a collector, duly appointed, the executor or administrator thereafter administering shall, within two months after his appointment, either return a new inventory in place of the collector's inventory or an acknowledgment in writing that he has received from the collector the articles contained in the first inventory, and consents to be answerable for the same, as if said inventory had been made out by him as administrator, unless it shall appear that he has been prevented from making such return by the improper detention of the personal estate of the deceased by the collector. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1239, ch. 854, § 315; June 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 268, ch. 242, § 4.)

Constitutionality 1
Insolvent estates 2
Law governing interest 3
Liability for non-payment 4
Measure of tax on encumbered property 5

Purpose 7
Remedy 8

1. Constitutionality

This section properly construed does not give an unconstitutional preference to local creditors over non-resident creditors. Duehay v. Acacia Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1939, 105 F. 2d 768, 70 App. D.C. 245, 124 A. L. R. 1268).

2. Insolvent estates

The correct rule in the administration of an insolvent estate is to marshal the assets and distribute them ratably among creditors of the same class, irrespective of their source. Sackett, Chapman, Brown & Cross v. Osgood (1945, 149 F. 2d 825, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 99).

3. Law governing interest

In ancillary administration proceedings in estate of a Maryland resident, question as to rate of interest allowable on claims against estate was to be determined under District of Columbia law. Hightstown Rug Co. v. National Sav. & Trust Co. (1947, 162 F. 2d 10, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 204).

4. Liability for non-payment

Fact that voluntary payment by local debtor of local assets to a foreign domiciliary executor or administrator might afford a valid acquittance of the debt under some circumstances does not establish that a debtor who refuses to pay such assets voluntarily to such foreign representative should be held liable in damages. Cameron v. Riggs Nat. Bank of Washington, D.C. (1944, 53 F. Supp. 56).

A bank which refused to make payment to foreign domiciliary executor of testatrix's funds held by bank in checking and savings accounts until elapse of period of one year within which local debtors could assert their claims against the assets, unless otherwise protected against such claims, was not liable for interest on the funds withheld, as damages. Id.

5. Measure of tax on encumbered property

While a tax on inheritance or succession is not a property tax but a duty or excise laid on the privilege of taking property by descent, it is measured by the market value of the transferred property at the time the owner died. Hyman v. District of Columbia (1957, 247 F. 2d 585, 101 U.S. App. D.C. 179).

Where an unqualified devise transfers legal title, if it is encumbered at the date of death, the then market value of the property transferred is the gross value, less the encumbrance for inheritance tax purposes. Id.

Where decedent owed her brother a large sum of money and her will provided that if he had a claim on her realty interest, devise thereof should be "subject to such claim or lien" District of Columbia Inheritance Tax should have been computed not on the gross value of the realty received by the brother, but on the value thereof after the brother's claim thereon had been deducted. Id.

6. Participating creditors

Where insolvent nonresident died possessed of property in the District of Columbia, ancillary administrator was appointed, but no claims were filed by local creditors, and only two nonresident creditors presented claims, the District Probate Court had discretionary power to require that other creditors, who had filed claims in the domiciliary estate, be given notice and allowed to participate with creditors who had filed claims in ancillary estate. Sackett, Chapman, Brown & Cross v. Osgood (1945, 149 F. 2d 825, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 99).

7. Purpose

This section is intended for the protection of local creditors. Sackett, Chapman, Brown & Cross v. Osgood (1945, 149 F. 2d 825, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 99).

8. Remedy

Under this section, local creditors are given an opportunity to assert their claims against local assets of a decedent domiciled elsewhere. Cameron v. Riggs Nat. Bank of Washington, D.C. (1944, 53 F. Supp. 56).

9. Time for assertion of claims

Section 18-518 reducing from nine to three months the period for bringing suit on rejected claim against estate was not intended to apply to claim against estate in process of administration at time of enactment of statute, and hence action for services rendered deceased and not compensated for in deceased's will as promised by deceased could be instituted within nine months after rejection of claim, where section was amended after administration of estate had begun. Kalis v. Leahy (1951, 188 F. 2d 633, 88 U.S. App. D.C. 166, certiorari denied 71 S. Ct. 797, 341 U.S. 926, 95 L. Ed. 1358).

This section providing that District of Columbia assets of a nonresident decedent are subject to claims of persons domiciled in District, and subject to administration in District, provided prosecution of claims is begun within six months after death of decedent, was intended to extend protection to local creditors for six months only, and where no claims were filed against bank account of a nonresident decedent within six months of death bank was required to honor demand of nonresident representative. Gearheart, Jr., Administrator, v. Bank of Commerce & Savings (1956, 138 F. Supp. 472).

Ordinarily, the period of one year fixed by this section is period that local debtor may reasonably await assertion of claims of local creditors before making payment to a foreign domiciliary executor or administrator, unless otherwise protected against such claims. Cameron v. Riggs Nat. Bank of Washington, D.C. (1944, 53 F. Supp. 56).

TIME FOR ACTION AGAINST ANCILLARY

This section, making property of nonresident decedent subject of administration in District of Columbia " * * * Provided, The prosecution of such claims is begun in said court within six months after the death of such decedent", does not place time limitation on filing of action by local creditor against ancillary administrator. Stitt v. Simpson Admt'x etc. (D.C. Mun. App. 1959, 154 A. 2d 719).

10. Transmission of funds

Where there were no locally domiciled creditors, the probate court might, in its discretion, order the funds in hands of ancillary administrator to be transmitted to the domiciliary administrator, even though some creditors from other states had presented their claims locally. Sackett, Chapman, Brown & Cross v. Osgood (1945, 149 F. 2d 825, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 99).

No executor or administrator shall be bound to discharge any claim against his decedent unless the same shall be exhibited to him, legally authenticated, or unless such claim shall have been passed by the probate court and entered by the register of wills upon his docket. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1247, ch. 854, § 357.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

1. Construction

The meaning of this section is to be deduced from the language of its heading as well as from the language of the body thereof. Clawans v. Sheetz (1937, 92 F. 2d 517, 67 App. D.C. 366).

The phrase "To be noticed" and the words "To discharge" must be read together to determine the meaning of the statute. Id.

No executor or administrator shall discharge any claim against his decedent (otherwise than at his own risk) unless the same be first passed by the probate court, or unless the said claim shall be proved according to the following rules: (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1243, ch. 854, § 330.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Disputed claims 1
 Liability of executor or administrator 2

1. Disputed claims

"Under section 330 of the code (this section) the approval of a claim properly proved relieves the executor or administrator from liability if he elects to pay it; but, by section 342 (§ 18-516) he may contest it at law, and in such action the approval of the probate court is deprived of even evidentiary value * * *. It is settled in this District that the probate court is without jurisdiction to compel an executor or administrator to pay a claim asserted against a decedent's estate." Miniggio v. Hutchins (43 App. D.C. 117).

2. Liability of executor or administrator

This section was designed to relieve the executor or administrator from liability if he should elect to pay claims passed upon by the court, or properly proved. Clawans v. Sheetz (1937, 92 F. 2d 517, 67 App. D.C. 366).

3. Suit

There is nothing in this section which prevents suit on a claim which has neither been exhibited to the executor legally authenticated nor passed by the probate court. Clawans v. Sheetz (1937, 92 F. 2d 517, 67 App. D.C. 366).

The voucher or proof of a judgment or decree shall be a short copy thereof under seal, attested by the clerk of the court where it was obtained, who shall certify that the said judgment or decree hath not been satisfied. There shall likewise be a certificate of some person authorized to administer an oath, indorsed on or annexed to a statement of the debt due on such judgment or decree, that the creditor or his agent since the death of the deceased hath taken before him the following oath, to wit: "That the creditor hath not received any part of the sum for which the judgment or decree was passed except such part (if any) as is credited"; and if the creditor on the judgment or decree be an assignee of the person who obtained it, the oath shall go on and say further, "and that to the best of his knowledge or belief no other person hath received any parcel of the said sum except such part (if any) as is credited," and an assignee shall also produce the assignment under the hand of the assignor; and if there be more than one assignment, each assignment shall be produced under the hand of the party assigning. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1243, ch. 854, § 331.)

In case of a specialty, bond, note, check, or protested bill of exchange, the vouchers shall be the instrument of writing itself, or a proved copy in case it be lost, with a certificate of the oath made as aforesaid since the death and indorsed on or annexed to the instrument, or a statement of the claim "that no part of the money intended to be secured by such instrument hath been received or any security or satisfaction given for the same except what (if any) is credited." (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1243, ch. 854, § 332.)

If the creditor in such instrument be an assignee, there shall be the same oath of the creditor or agent, according to the best of his knowledge and belief, with respect to any payments prior to the time of the assignment. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1243, ch. 854, § 333.)

In case of a bill of exchange or other commercial paper, the protest or other things which would be required (if the deceased were alive) shall be necessary to justify an executor or administrator in making payment or distribution. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1243, ch. 854, § 334.)

If the claim be for rent, there shall be produced the lease itself, or the deposition of some credible witness or witnesses, or an acknowledgment in writing of the deceased, establishing the contract and the time which hath elapsed during which rent was chargeable, and a statement of the sum due for such rent, with an oath of the creditor or agent indorsed thereon "that no part of the sum due for said rent or any security or satisfaction for the same hath been received except what (if any) is credited."

The proof of a claim for rent in arrear, so as to render the same a preferred claim, shall be the proofs and vouchers for rent aforesaid, and proof that the claim is such that an attachment therefor might be levied on said deceased's goods and chattels in the hands of the administrator, but the preference given for rent is not to impair the landlord's right of attachment if he thinks proper to exercise it. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1243, ch. 854, § 335.)

The vouchers or proofs of any claim on open account shall be a certificate of an oath taken by the creditor or agent since the death, indorsed on or annexed to the account, that the account as stated is just and true, and that he, the creditor, or any one for him, hath not received any part of the money stated to be due or any security or satisfaction for the same except what (if any) is credited. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1243, ch. 854, § 336.)

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Statute of limitations

Proof and presentation of claim under this section would operate to suspend the running of the statute of limitations. Berry & Whitman Co. v. Dante (43 App. D. C. 110).

When an affidavit or deposition to prove claims shall have been taken out of the District, the same shall be good if taken and certified as aforesaid by a notary public, or by some person there authorized to administer an oath, and certified to be such under the seal of the clerk of any court of record, or by any officer having official cognizance of the fact, and the said oath shall be as available as if taken before an officer authorized to administer an oath within this District: Provided, That such additional certificate shall not be required as to notaries public within the United States or any place under the jurisdiction thereof when the seal of such notary is attached. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1244, ch. 854, § 337; June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 529, ch. 1329.)

AMENDMENT

1902—Act June 30, 1902, added the proviso.

If the creditor be an executor or an administrator the claim shall not be received, although vouched and approved as aforesaid, unless he make oath, to be certified as aforesaid, "that it does not appear from any book or writing of his decedent that any part of the said claim hath been discharged except what (if any) is credited, and that to the best of the deponent's knowledge and belief no part of the said claim hath been discharged and no security or satisfaction given for the same except what (if any) is credited." (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1244, ch. 854, § 338.)

In no case shall an executor or administrator be allowed to retain for his own claim against the decedent, unless the same be passed by the probate court, and every such claim shall stand on an equal footing with other claims of the same nature. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1244, ch. 854, § 339.)

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Examination by court

Administratrix' claims against estate will be critically examined by probate court and will not be allowed unless the court is satisfied that they are good. Perkins v. Berger (1945, 145 F. 2d 856, 79 U.S. App. D.C. 286).

The register of wills shall enter in a suitable book, to be provided by him for that purpose, all claims against a decedent as they are regularly passed by the probate court, giving the date of the passage, the name of the creditor, the character of such claim, whether on note or open account, bond, bill, obligation, judgment, or other evidence of debt, and the amount thereof, and the entry of a claim upon such docket shall be taken as notice to the executor or administrator of its existence. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1246, ch. 854, § 354.)

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Notice of claim

The executor is charged with notice of claims only in case they shall be exhibited to him, legally, and then treated, or shall have been passed by the probate court and entered by the register of wills upon his docket. Clawans v. Sheetz (1937, 92 F. 2d 517, 67 App. D.C. 366).

The claim thus entered (as provided in section 18-513) shall not afford any evidence as to the justice or correctness of any debt therein entered whenever the same shall be controverted by an executor or administrator in any suit instituted for the recovery of such debt; nor shall the same be construed to take any debt out of the operation of a plea of limitations. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1246, ch. 854, § 355.)

It shall not be considered as the duty of an executor or administrator to avail himself of the act of limitations to bar what he supposes to be a just claim, but the same shall be left to his honesty and discretion. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1244, ch. 854, § 341.)

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Approval of court

Under this section providing that it shall not be duty of executor or administrator to avail himself of act of limitations to bar what he supposes to be just claim but matter shall be left to his honesty and discretion, administrator first passes upon justice of barred claims then, such claims must be critically examined by probate court and they may not be allowed unless court is satisfied that they are just. Helen Rothenberg, Caveator, etc. v. Rothenberg (1959, 273 F. 2d 825, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 11).

No executor or administrator shall be obliged to discharge any claim of which vouchers and proofs shall be exhibited as aforesaid, but may reject and at law dispute the same in case he shall have reason to believe that the deceased never owed the debt, or had discharged the same, or a part thereof, or had a claim in bar. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1244, ch. 854, § 342.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

In general 1.

Executors special undertaking 2

1. In general

An executor or administrator may contest a claim properly proved at law. Clawans v. Sheetz (1937, 92 F. 2d 517, 67 App. D.C. 366).

2. Executors special undertaking

Although executrix in giving a special undertaking rendered herself personally liable for all debts and just claims against testator, special bond given by executrix did not guarantee claimant's right to recover on claim rejected by executrix and claimants were required to sue within statutory period. Selby and Fuller v. McNeill (D.C. Mun. App. 1955, 116 A. 2d 160).

In no case shall the order made by the probate court that an account or claim will pass when paid be deemed of validity to establish such claim or account; but in case the executor or administrator thinks fit to contest the same such account or claim shall derive no validity from the order aforesaid, but shall be proved in the same manner as if no such order had been made. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1244, ch. 854, § 343.)

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Effect of passing claim

An executor or administrator may contest at law a claim properly proved, and, in such action, the approval of the probate court by this section is deprived of even evidentiary effect. Clawans v. Sheetz (1937, 92 F. 2d 517, 67 App. D.C. 366).

If a claim be exhibited against an executor or administrator which he shall think it his duty to dispute or reject, he may retain in his hands assets proportioned to the amount of the claim, which assets shall be liable to other claims, or to be delivered up or distributed in case the claim be not established; and if on any claims exhibited and disputed as aforesaid the creditor or claimant shall not, within three months after such dispute or rejection, commence a suit for recovery the creditor shall be forever barred; and the executor or administrator may plead this section in bar, together with the general issue or other plea proper to bring the merits of the cause to trial; and on any dividend to be made three months after such dispute or rejection and failure to bring suit the executor or administrator may proceed to pay or distribute as if he had not knowledge or notice of such claim or as if it did not exist; but if the claim be put in suit within the three months it may be ascertained by verdict or otherwise, and the court shall proceed as herein directed, regard being had to the rules herein laid down as to the notice to be given by the executor or administrator and distribution or payment be made after such notice. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1245, ch. 854, § 348; June 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 268, ch. 242, § 5.)

AMENDMENT

1949—Act June 24, 1949, substituted "three months" for "nine months" wherever appearing.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Action against devisee 2
Claim in process of administration 3
Computation of time 4
Construction 5
Decisions under prior law 1

1. Decisions under prior law

Prior to enactment of the Code, law of Maryland as to limitations was in force in the District. Glover v. Patten (1897, 17 S. Ct. 411, 165 U.S. 394, 41 L. Ed. 760).

2. Action against devisee

A right of action by decedent's creditors to subject decedent's property in hands of devisee under decedent's will to payment of plaintiffs' claims was not extinguished by their failure to institute action against executor of decedent's estate within three months, limited by this section, after executor's rejection of claims. Robinson v. Henderson (1956, 145 F. Supp. 463).

3. Claim in process of administration

The 1949 amendment to this section reducing from nine to three months the period for bringing suit on rejected claim against estate was not intended to apply to claim against estate in process of administration at time of enactment of statute, and hence action for services rendered deceased and not compensated for in deceased's will as promised by deceased could be instituted within nine months after rejection of claim, where this section was amended after administration of estate had begun. Kalis v. Leahy (1951, 188 F. 2d 633, 88 U.S. App. D.C. 166, certiorari denied 71 S. Ct. 797, 341 U.S. 926, 95 L. Ed. 1358).

4. Computation of time

A claim so exhibited and disputed is specifically barred, unless suit for its recovery is commenced within nine months after its rejection. National Sav. & Trust Co. v. Ryan (1920, 262 F. 613, 49 App. D.C. 159). See, also, Clawans v. Sheetz (1937, 92 F. 2d 517, 67 App. D.C. 366).

If a claim is exhibited to the executor, legally authenticated, and the executor rejects it, his rejection sets in motion the running of the three-month statute of limitations, and any claim sued upon more than three months after rejection is barred. Lewis v. Smith, Executor, etc. (D.C. Mun. App. 1959, 151 A. 2d 188).

The exhibition of an authenticated claim prior to the appointment of the executor was a sufficient exhibition so that, upon qualification, executor could make an effective rejection of it, and where the claimant did not bring suit thereon within three months, he was barred by the short statute of limitations. Id.

Action on claim against testator's estate filed more than two years and 11 months after rejection of claim by executrix was barred. McNeill and Fuller v. Selby (D.C. Mun. App. 1955, 116 A. 2d 160).

Although executrix in giving a special undertaking rendered herself personally liable for all debts and just claims against testator, special bond given by executrix did not guarantee claimant's right to recover on claim rejected by executrix and claimants were required to sue within statutory period. Id.

5. Construction

This section is designed to facilitate the administration and distribution of estate, but since it is an exceptional abbreviation of the general statute of limitations, it must be given a construction almost penal in its strictness, and hence if an executor rejects a claim which has not been exhibited to him, legally authenticated, his attempted rejection does not start the running of the short statute of limitations. Lewis v. Smith, Executor, etc. (D.C. Mun. App. 1959, 151 A. 2d 188).

An executor or administrator shall, within thirteen months from the date of his letters, or within such further time, not exceeding four months longer, as shall be allowed by the probate court on his making oath that he has reason to apprehend that the personal estate and assets which are or shall be in his hands will be insufficient to discharge the just debts of and claims against the deceased, discharge all such claims known to him or pay each claimant his just proportion of the money then in his hands (retaining as herein directed); it shall likewise be his duty once in every term of six months after the first distribution to make a distribution of the money which hath since come to his hands until he shall have fully administered, and on failure his administration bond may be put in suit. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1244, ch. 854, § 344.)

In paying the debts of a decedent, after the payment of funeral expenses according to the condition and circumstances of the deceased, not exceeding six hundred dollars, an executor or administrator shall observe the following rules: Claims for rent in arrear against deceased persons, for which an attachment might be levied by law, shall have preference. Judgments and decrees of courts in the District of Columbia shall next be wholly discharged. After such claims for rent, judgments, and decrees shall be satisfied, all other just claims shall be on an equal footing without priority or preference. If there be not sufficient to discharge all such judgments and decrees, a proportionate dividend shall be made between the judgment and decree creditors. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1246, ch. 854, § 356.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Application of statutes 1
Funeral expenses 2
Judgment not docketed 3
Monument 4

1. Application of statutes

The statutes are equally applicable to the administration of all estates in the District, whether domiciliary or ancillary. Duehay v. Acacia Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1939, 105 F. 2d 768, 70 App. D.C. 245, 124 A.L.R. 1268).

2. Funeral expenses

This section and section 11-605 limiting the amount for funeral expenses to $600 merely provide for a limitation on the amount which may be given priority over claims of other creditors and beneficiaries, and not an invariable maximum that must always be observed, and therefore claim for funeral expenses in amount of $3,863 was properly ordered to be paid pro rata with other general claims lawfully payable out of deceased's estate. National Metropolitan Bank of Washington v. Joseph Gawler's Sons (D.C. Mun. App. 1947, 52 A. 2d 280).

Executors were not controlled by limitation of this section and § 20-605 in view of discretionary authority granted them by will empowering executors to pay funeral expenses in such amount as they deemed proper, but they were bound to act in good faith and expend only such amount as in their discretion they deemed proper. National Metropolitan Bank of Washington v. Joseph Gawler's Sons (1948, 168 F. 2d 571, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 307, 4 A.L.R. 2d 930).

Executors did not have burden to establish good faith and sound discretionary action under provision of will empowering them to pay funeral expenses in such amount as they deemed proper, and burden was on funeral establishment which attacked their action, to prove the charge. Id.

This section and § 20-605 relating to funeral expenses limit amount allowable for funeral expenses in absence of authority by testator to contrary and even then such sections should control where estate is insolvent. Id.

3. Judgment not docketed

Judgment of municipal court not docketed in Supreme Court is not entitled to preference. In re Neuland's Estate (44 W. L. R. 378).

4. Monument

An allowance to executrix for purchase of monument placed over grave of deceased is proper, where the rights of creditors have not been prejudiced. Sinnott v. Kenaday (14 App. D.C. 1, reversed on other grounds 21 S. Ct. 233, 179 U.S. 606, 45 L. Ed. 339).

Any executor or administrator shall be entitled to appoint a meeting of creditors on some day by the court approved, and passage of claims, payment, or distribution may be there made under the court's direction and control. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1247, ch. 854, § 358.)

In all cases where an executor or administrator is to make payment or distribution among the creditors of his decedent, he may give notice three successive weeks previously in some convenient newspaper of the time and place for making it; and in case the creditor shall not attend in person or by agent or attorney to receive the amount or proportionable part of his claim, all interest on such claim or proportionable part shall cease from that time: Provided, That the executor or administrator shall at any time thereafter on demand pay the said claims, or a proportionable part, to the party, his agent, or attorney duly authorized; and whenever the executor or administrator shall proceed to make an additional payment or dividend he may advertise as aforesaid, and interest shall stop as aforesaid; and if at the time for the making of any additional dividend a just claim, established as hereinbefore directed, shall be exhibited, the creditor shall be entitled to such sum as will place him on an equal footing with those who have already received a dividend. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1244, ch. 854, § 345.)

It shall be the duty of an executor or administrator to pay all just claims against his decedent exhibited to him, or a just proportionable part thereof, according to the assets; and if any claim be known to him (although the same be not exhibited) he shall retain the same, or a just proportionable part, for the benefit of the creditor: Provided, That if any executor or administrator shall have actual knowledge of a claim which has not been exhibited or passed he shall give notice in writing to the creditor, requiring the claim to be either exhibited or passed, as herein provided, within thirty days if such creditor be a resident and within ninety days if he be a nonresident of said District, and after the expiration of such period, and after the expiration of the period for distribution provided by section 18-519 the executor or administrator shall not be required to retain any part of the estate for the benefit of such creditor, unless in the meantime such claim shall have been so exhibited or passed. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1245, ch. 854, § 346.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Basis for rejection 1
Failure to exhibit 2
Sufficiency of exhibition 3

1. Basis for rejection

Where claimant filed a duly authenticated claim with the office of the register of wills and the claim was entered on the claims docket, ruling that the executor could take notice of the claim from the court's records, and effectively reject it, was erroneous, since the only way in which the executor could reject the claim was if there was an actual exhibition of the claim to him, legally authenticated. Lewis v. Smith, Executor, etc. (D.C. Mun. App. 1959, 151 A. 2d 188).

2. Failure to exhibit

This section does not provide that failure to exhibit in response to the notice will bar the claim. Clawans v. Sheetz (1937, 92 F. 2d 517, 67 App. D.C. 366).

3. Sufficiency of exhibition

The exhibition of an authenticated claim prior to the appointment of the executor was a sufficient exhibition so that, upon qualification, executor could make an effective rejection of it, and where the claimant did not bring suit thereon within three months, he was barred by the short statute of limitations. Lewis v. Smith, Executor, etc. (D.C. Mun. App. 1959, 151 A. 2d 188).

And if any action shall be commenced against an executor or administrator for the recovery of a larger debt or damages than he shall think due, so that the same can not be ascertained before verdict, the executor or administrator shall be allowed to retain such sum to meet the said debt or damages as the probate court shall allow, and if more than enough be allowed, the party shall afterwards account for it, but nothing shall be retained on account of such further debt or damages where the court shall be satisfied that there will be money sufficient coming in after such dividend to meet the said damages, or a just proportion thereof, regard being had to other claims. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1245, ch. 854, § 347.)

In case all the assets have been paid away, delivered, or distributed as herein directed, and a claim shall afterwards be exhibited of which the executor or administrator hath not knowledge or notice by the exhibition of the claim legally authenticated, as herein required, he shall not be answerable for the same; and if he be sued for any claim and shall make it appear to the court in which suit is brought that he hath so paid away, delivered, or distributed, and the plaintiff can not prove that the defendant had notice as aforesaid before such payment, delivery, or distribution, the court shall not proceed to give judgment (although the amount of the claim against the deceased may be ascertained) until the plaintiff shall be able to show further assets coming into the defendant's hands, but if the plaintiff shall prove notice, as aforesaid, of the said claim against the defendant, judgment may be immediately given for such sum as the plaintiff ought to have received at the dividend, and fieri facias may issue and have effect, and further judgment may be given on coming in of further assets. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1245, ch. 854, § 349.)

NOTE TO DECISION

1. In general

An executor is exonerated as to any claims as to which he had not legal notice prior to distribution. Clawans v. Sheetz (1937, 92 F. 2d 517, 67 App. D.C. 366).

No executor or administrator who shall, after the lapse of six months after the date of his letters, have paid away assets to the discharge of just claims shall be answerable for any claim of which he had no knowledge or notice by an exhibition of the claim legally authenticated: Provided, That at least three months before he shall make distribution he shall have caused to be inserted in so many newspapers as the probate court may direct an advertisement as follows, or fully to the following effect, namely: "This is to give notice that the subscriber, of ———, hath obtained from the probate court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary (or of administration) on the personal estate of ———, late of ———, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the ——— day of ——— next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate.

"Given under my hand this ——— day of ———." (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1246, ch. 854, § 350; June 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 268, ch. 242, § 6.)

AMENDMENT

1949—Act June 24, 1949, substituted "six months" for words "one year", and "at least three months" for "at least six months".

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Claim in process of administration 2

Historical 1

Necessity of exhibit 3

1. Historical

This section is similar to the Maryland Act of 1798 as amended (Acts 1828, ch. 131, § 2). Clawans v. Sheetz (1937, 92 F. 2d 517, 67 App. D.C. 366).

2. Claim in process of administration

The 1949 amendment to section 18-518 reducing from nine to three months the period for bringing suit on rejected claim against estate was not intended to apply to claim against estate in process of administration at time of enactment and hence action for services rendered deceased and not compensated for in deceased's will as promised by deceased could be instituted within nine months after rejection of claim, where section 18-518 was amended after administration of estate had begun. Kalis v. Leahy (1951, 188 F. 2d 633, 88 U.S. App. D.C. 166, certiorari denied 71 S. Ct. 797, 341 U.S. 926, 95 L. Ed. 1358).

3. Necessity of exhibit

Knowledge or notice of a claim to an executor must be by an exhibition of the claim, legally authenticated. Parish v. Hedges (34 App. D. C. 21).

The executor or administrator may report to the court, with an affidavit of the proof thereof annexed, the fact of having given such notice, and the court, on being satisfied that its order has been complied with and the said notice has been given, shall indorse on said report its certificate that it has been proven to its satisfaction that said notice hath been given as therein reported, and shall order said report and certificate to be recorded among the records of the court. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1246, ch. 854, § 351; June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 529, ch. 1329.)

AMENDMENT

1902—Act June 30, 1902, struck out the word "their" and inserted in lieu thereof the word "its," following the words "satisfied that" and "proven to."

The said report and certificates shall be prima facie evidence, in all cases whatever, of the giving of such notice as therein stated. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1246, ch. 854, § 352.)

A copy of said report, certificate, and order, under the seal of the register of wills, shall be legal and competent evidence. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1246, ch. 854, § 353.)

Whenever it shall appear by the first or other account of an executor or administrator that all the claims against, or debts of, the decedent which have been known by or notified to him have been discharged or allowed for in his account, it shall be his duty to deliver up and distribute the surplus or residue of the personal estate not disposed of by any will, as hereinafter directed: Provided, That his power and duty with respect to future assets shall not cease; and after such delivery he shall not be liable for any debts afterwards notified to him, provided he shall have advertised as hereinbefore directed, unless assets shall afterwards come into his hands which shall be answerable for such debts. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1247, ch. 854, § 359.)

Chapter 6.—SALE OF ASSETS

Sec.

- 18-601. Sale of personal estate.
- 18-602. Order for sale.
- 18-603. Power of sale in will.
- 18-604. Sale of real estate directed in will—Procedure.
- 18-605. Power of co-executors to sell under power in will.
- 18-606. Survivor of several trustees.
- 18-607. Sale of real estate.
- 18-608. Bond to prevent sale of real estate.
- 18-609. Sale of real estate to satisfy debts and legacies.
- 18-610. Sale of property subject to dower.
- 18-611. Appointment of trustee to sell real estate—Bond of trustee.

In case any executor or administrator shall not have money sufficient to discharge the just debts of and claims against the decedent, the probate court shall, on his application, made after the return of an inventory, direct a sale of the personal property therein contained, or of such part as the court may think proper, and in such manner and on such terms as the court may direct. The court shall have power to direct a sale as aforesaid, if deemed by the court advantageous to the persons interested in the administration, on the application of any of the said persons. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1240, ch. 854, § 322.)

No executor or administrator shall sell any property of his decedent without an order of the probate court authorizing such sale; and any such sale made without a previous order authorizing it shall be void and pass no title to the purchaser. If any executor or administrator shall sell, pledge, or dispose of any property without such previous order, his letters may be revoked and an administrator appointed, whose duty it shall be immediately to recover possession of said property, and such removed executor or administrator may be proceeded against by attachment; but where there are two or more executors or administrators, and a sale, pledge, or disposition of property has been made without the consent of all, the revocation shall only extend to the person or persons so offending, and the remaining executors or administrators shall have power to discharge the duties of their office and institute proceedings for the recovery of the property and attachment as aforesaid. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1240, ch. 854, § 323.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Application of section 1
Common law 2
Construction 3
Jurisdiction 4

1. Application of section

This section should be applied where an administrator not only has become actively a party to an arrangement by which another makes an appropriation of estate assets such as a business before his appointment but during the course of his administration confirms it by refusing to include the property within his inventory, to report, or to account for the profits of the business, and to take steps to secure its recovery or legal disposition after full warning that that might be required. Burke v. Canfield (1941, 121 F. 2d 877, 74 App. D.C. 6).

2. Common law

"At common law an executor or administrator had absolute power of disposal over all personal property coming into his hands, including choses in action, and such sales protected purchasers, except where fraud appeared." Phoenix Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Harris (45 App. D. C. 474).

3. Construction

"Owing to this rule of the common law, statutes providing for the granting of decrees of court as to sales generally are construed to be for the protection of the administrator and not as a limitation of his power." Phoenix Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Harris (45 App. D. C. 474).

"The provisions of section 323 (this section) of our code were intended to apply merely to local executors and administrators dealing with property within this jurisdiction. The section declares, * * *, his letters may be revoked, clearly indicating, we think, that the prohibition was not intended to extend to contracts made by executors and administrators of other jurisdictions. In other words, this statute was addressed to the constituent elements or validity of a local contract by executors and administrators, rather than to the procedure to be followed in establishing all contracts by executors and administrators, wherever made." Id.

4. Jurisdiction

District court, in an action for construction of a will, had no authority to order sale of testatrix' realty, such matter being one to be determined by probate court in accordance with applicable sections of District of Columbia. Littlepage et al. v. Hart and Littlepage Jr. (1958, 250 F. 2d 774, 102 U.S. App. D.C. 111).

Section 18-602 shall not be construed to apply to any case where an executor shall be authorized by will of his testator to make sale of any property. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1241, ch. 854, § 324.)

In all cases in which a testator has directed his real estate to be sold for the payment of his debts or legacies, the executor may sell and convey the same, and shall account for the proceeds thereof to the probate court in the same manner that he is bound to account for the proceeds of personal estate; but such sale shall not be valid unless ratified by said court after notice given by publication according to the practice in equity. In case the executor shall refuse or decline to act, or shall die without executing the power vested in him, it shall be lawful for the court, on the application of any person interested, to appoint an administrator de bonis non with the will annexed to execute such power in the same manner in which the executor appointed by the will might have done. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1241, ch. 854, § 325.)

CROSS REFERENCE

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Approval of court 1
Price of bid 2
Rejection of offer or bid 3

1. Approval of court

Where executor was empowered by will to sell real estate at his discretion, court's refusal to approve sale by executor because of a higher bid would not be disturbed, except that before accepting the higher bid the court should afford the original bidder, and other bidders, opportunity to submit further bids if desired. De Marco v. Kertz (1945, 151 F. 2d 305, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 204).

The Judicial Sales Act, 28 U. S. C. §§ 847-849, and the local civil rules of the District Court for the District of Columbia adopted thereunder are applicable only to sales which are required or authorized by court order, and not those under a power created by will; hence, for sales made by executor under terms of a will, ratification by the probate court according to the practice in equity is required, and not in accordance with provisions of said sections. Id.

2. Price of bid

Where a will authorizes executor to sell real estate at his discretion, the bidder makes his offer to the executor subject to the approval of the court, as required by this section, and in selling the property the court is acting as trustee for the parties in interest and must exercise a wise, judicial discretion to secure for the estate the highest price consistent with a just regard for the rights of the bidder. De Marco v. Kertz (1945, 151 F. 2d 305, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 204).

The general rule applicable to public judicial sales of property, that the court will not ordinarily set aside a sale made in the manner prescribed by law because of mere inadequacy of price, grew out of the necessity of encouraging free bidding at public sales, and rule is not applicable to a private sale. Id.

3. Rejection of offer or bid

Where a will authorizes executor at his discretion to sell real estate, a private offer, which is made subject to ratification by the court under this section, may be rejected when a higher bid is made at any time prior to ratification. De Marco v. Kertz (1945, 151 F. 2d 305, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 204).

Where part of the executors named in any testament of any person so making or declaring any will of any lands, tenements, or other hereditaments to be sold by his executors, after the death of any such testator, do refuse to take upon him or them the administration and charge of the same testament and last will wherein they be so named to be executors, and the residue of the same executors do accept and take upon them the cure and charge of the same testament and last will; then all bargains and sales of such lands, tenements, or other hereditaments, so willed to be sold by the executors of any such testator, as well heretofore made, as hereafter to be made by him or them, only of the said executors that so doth accept, or that heretofore hath accepted and taken upon him or them any such cure or charge of administration of any such will or testament, shall be as good and as effectual in the law, as if all the residue of the same executors named in the said testament, so refusing the administration of the same testament, had joined with him or them in the making of the bargain and sale of such lands, tenements, or other hereditaments so willed to be sold by the executors of any such testators, which heretofore hath made or declared, or that hereafter shall make or declare any such will, of any such lands, tenements, or other hereditaments after his decease, to be sold by his executors. (21 Henry VIII, ch. 4, § 1, 1529; Kilty's Rept. p. 230; Alex. Br. Stat., p. 280; Comp. Stat. D. C., p. 20, § 85.)

CODIFICATION

This section sets forth a British statute continued in force by virtue of act Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1189, ch. 854, § 1.

In all cases where two or more trustees shall be appointed by last will to execute a trust, or shall be empowered to sell, dispose of, or convey lands or other property devised to them jointly, upon the death of any one or more of them the survivor or survivors shall be held authorized to execute such trust or power; and if any one of such trustees shall in writing, signed by him and attested by a witness, relinquish or disclaim said trust or refuse to act under said will, and shall deliver such writing to the probate court of the District for record, the right of such trustee to act shall cease, and the remaining trustee or trustees appointed by said will shall be authorized to execute the trusts of said will and make all sales and execute all conveyances and other acts necessary for that purpose. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1241, ch. 854, § 326.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

1. Effect of death

A trust charged upon the executors, as such, does not become extinct by the death of one of them, and if the executors were authorized to sell real estate, the survivor can sell it. Kennedy v. Mangan (1922, 278 F. 1009, 51 App. D.C. 296).

When will devised real property in trust for missing brother and if not heard from in seven years to have trustees sell, in such case the trustees had power to sell the property after seven years for the benefit of legatees, and equity would limit power to sell only if required by express terms of the will. Id.

The probate court shall have plenary authority to administer also the real estate situated in the District of Columbia of decedents so far as may be necessary for the payment of debts and legacies, and to distribute among those entitled thereto any surplus proceeds of any sale of real estate made in the course of such administration, and the bonds of all executors and administrators shall be responsible for the proceeds of sale of all real estate sold by them under the order of the said justice for such purposes of administration: Provided, however, That no such sale shall be made unless the same be required for the purposes of paying debts and such legacies as are chargeable upon the real estate, nor until the auditor of the court shall have ascertained and reported such debts and legacies, the deficiency of personal assets, and the real estate necessary to be sold for the payment of debts and legacies; and such report shall be subject to exception. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1214, ch. 854, § 146; June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 527, ch. 1329.)

AMENDMENT

1902—Act June 30, 1902, struck out the words "a deficiency of personal assets for such purposes" and inserted in lieu thereof the words "such debts and legacies, the deficiency of personal assets, and the real estate necessary to be sold for the payment of debts and legacies."

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Allowance of litigation costs 2
Collateral attack 3
Decisions under prior law 1
Distribution after payment of debts 4
Executors' expenses 5
Jurisdiction 6
Personal property must be found to be insufficient 7

1. Decisions under prior law

Prior to the enactment of the Code, the Supreme Court of this District had "jurisdiction and power to decree the sale of the real estate of a deceased debtor, whether the title be legal or equitable, for the payment of debts; and upon the allegation that the deceased was seized * * * and died indebted, there would be furnished a foundation for a decree of sale of such real estate." Duncanson v. Manson (3 App. D.C. 260, affirmed 17 S. Ct. 647, 166 U.S. 533, 41 L. Ed. 1105).

2. Allowance of litigation costs

Where testator, prior to his second marriage, had made will giving his property to his stepchildren, but shortly after testator's death a child was born of the second marriage, resulting in litigation and a holding that the will was revoked by the marriage and birth of the child, and the personal estate was insufficient to pay all costs of litigation, the court properly charged against the real estate an allowance to executors for services of their attorneys and an allowance to the infant's guardian ad item. Pascucci v. Hart (1947, 160 F. 2d 255, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 12).

The authority of the probate court to sell real estate to pay debts and legacies includes the right to sell to pay the ordinary and necessary administration costs, and where litigation was necessary in the establishment of an infant's right to title to realty, the costs of such litigation would be entitled to priority over debts and legacies. Id.

3. Collateral attack

If the court had jurisdiction, the sale cannot be attacked collaterally. Duncanson v. Manson (3 App. D.C. 260, affirmed 17 S. Ct. 166, U.S. 533, 41 L. Ed. 1105).

4. Distribution after payment of debts

When the real estate of an intestate is sold in administration proceeding in the District of Columbia for the payment of his debts, there can be no distribution of any part of the proceeds until after payment of all of the estate's debts, and this provision is not limited to debts payable to residents of the District. Wiggins v. Mayer (1928, 22 F. 2d 869, 57 App. D.C. 293).

5. Executors' expenses

Where a suit to cancel a deed was not for the purpose contemplated by §§ 18-607 to 18-609 and consequently compliance with the terms of these sections was not a condition precedent to executors' right to institute action, court erred in disallowing their expenses. Ramsey v. Curtis (1950, 182 F. 2d 687, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 386).

6. Jurisdiction

District court, in an action for construction of a will, had no authority to order sale of testatrix' realty, such matter being one to be determined by probate court in accordance with applicable sections of District of Columbia. Littlepage et al. v. Hart and Littlepage Jr. (1958, 250 F. 2d 774, 102 U.S. App. D.C. 111).

7. Personal property must be found to be insufficient

The statute contemplates a prior determination of the insufficiency of the personal property before an administrator can claim rents. Shields v. Shields (1940, 101 F. 2d 255, 69 App. D.C. 331).

An order for the sale of the real estate shall not be granted if any of the persons interested in the estate shall give bond to the United States, with security to be approved by said probate court, conditioned to pay all the debts or legacies, or both, as the case may be, that shall eventually be found due, and the costs of administration. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1214, ch. 854, § 147.)

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Executors' expenses

Where a suit to cancel a deed was not for the purpose contemplated by §§ 18-607 to 18-609 and consequently compliance with the terms of these sections was not a condition precedent to executors' right to institute action, court erred in disallowing their expenses. Ramsey v. Curtis (1950, 182 F. 2d 687, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 386).

If the said probate court shall be satisfied, upon a report of the auditor, that it is necessary to sell said real estate, or part thereof, it shall authorize the same, or so much thereof as may be necessary for the payment of the debts or legacies, or both, to be sold by the executor or administrator, on such terms as the court may direct. Any surplus of the proceeds of such sale, after payment of debts and legacies and costs of administration, shall be deemed real estate, and shall be distributed among the heirs or devisees as the right may appear. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1214, ch. 854, § 148.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Effect of directions in will 1 Executors' expenses 2

1. Effect of directions in will

A conveyance of real estate to trustees with specific directions to sell as soon as possible, converted such property into personalty, by the doctrine of equitable conversion, and was therefore subject to federal estate tax. Tait v. Dante (C.C.A. 4, 1935, 78 F. 2d 303, certiorari denied 56 S. Ct. 134, 296 U.S. 614, 80 L. Ed. 436).

2. Executors' expenses

Where a suit to cancel a deed was not for the purpose contemplated by §§ 18-607 to 18-609 and consequently compliance with the terms of these sections was not a condition precedent to executors' right to institute action, court erred in disallowing their expenses. Ramsey v. Curtis (1950, 182 F. 2d 687, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 386).

Where there shall be a widow entitled to dower in the real estate of the decedent, the probate court, before authorizing a sale of said real estate, shall issue a commission to one or more suitable persons to set off and assign her dower out of such estate, and her dower shall be assigned to her; or, if the court shall find the widow's dower can not be set off without injury to the property, if she shall consent thereto by her answer to the petition, the real estate may be sold free of her dower, and she shall receive out of the proceeds a commutation of her dower according to the practice in equity. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1215, ch. 854, § 149.)

CROSS REFERENCE

Abolition of right of dower, see § 18-201a.

If any person shall die having devised real estate to be sold for the payment of debts or other purposes without having appointed a trustee to sell or convey the property, or if the person so appointed shall neglect or refuse to execute the trust, or shall die before the execution of such trust, the equity court shall have authority, on the application of any person interested, to appoint a trustee to sell and convey said property and apply the proceeds of sale to the purposes intended. And in all cases where a trustee shall be appointed by last will and testament to execute any trust, and any person interested in the execution of such trust shall make it appear that it is necessary for the safety of those interested therein that the trustee should give bond and security for the due execution of the trust, the said court may order and direct that such bond be given by the trustee by a day named, and on failure of the trustee to give such bond, with security to be approved by the court as directed, the court may displace such trustee and appoint another in his stead, who shall give such bond; and such bond shall be given to the United States and may be sued on for the use of any person interested. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1204, ch. 854, § 94.)

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Removal of trustee

Where testator devised realty in trust to cotrustees, and the trustees were incompatible, and one trustee had employed obstructionist tactics to hinder execution of trust by the other, and had taken no steps himself to execute the trust, under District of Columbia Code, court would appoint other trustee as sole trustee. Hughes et al. v. Hughes (1953, 112 F. Supp. 899).

When any person shall die leaving any real estate in possession, remainder, or reversion, and not leaving personal estate sufficient to pay his debts, the said equity court, on any suit instituted by any of his creditors, may decree that all the real estate left by such person, or so much thereof as may be necessary, shall be sold to pay his debts; and this section shall apply to cases where the heirs or devisees are residents or nonresidents, are of full age or infants, are of sound mind or non compos mentis, and also to cases where the deceased left no heirs or it is not known whether he left heirs or devisees or the heirs or devisees be unknown; and if there be no known heirs the attorney of the United States for the District of Columbia shall be notified of said suit and appear thereto. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1204, ch. 854, § 96.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Parties 2
Personal estate insufficient 3

1. Collateral attack

If sale of real estate is made under a decree, an infant cannot successfully in later proceeding, collaterally attack the decree when he was present in person and did not object to appointment of guardian for him. Duncanson v. Manson (3 App. D.C. 260, affirmed 17 S. Ct. 647, 166 U.S. 533, 41 L. Ed. 1105).

2. Parties

In a creditors' bill filed for purpose of subjecting real estate of a deceased person as assets to payment of his debts, the executor or administrator is a necessary party, but if there are no personal assets, and consequently no qualified executor or administrator, a creditors' bill may be maintained without executor or administrator. Plumb v. Bateman (2 App. D.C. 156).

3. Personal estate insufficient

Allegation and proof of deficiency in personal assets is jurisdictional in proceedings under this section. Dahlgren v. National Sav. & Trust Co. (41 App. D.C. 201).

In suit brought under this section by creditors of a decedent, a decree ordering the sale of decedent's real estate for payment of creditors' claims was affirmed, the personal estate being insufficient to pay them. West v. McLaughlin (1927, 18 F. 2d 813, 57 App. D.C. 163).

NOTES TO DECISIONS

1. In general

"It is not the full and complete administration of the estate that marks the period for distribution, but the payment of or allowance for all debts and claims made known against the estate, after notice given, and when that is done it at once becomes the duty of the administrator to deliver up and distribute the residue of the estate to those entitled thereto." *Sterrett v. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1249, ch. 854, § 374; Apr. 19, 1920, 41 Stat. 563, ch. 153.)

AMENDMENT

1920—Act Apr. 19, 1920, added the words "or surviving husband."

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Renunciation of will

Under District of Columbia Code, where testator left no child, parent, grandchild, brother or sister or child of a brother or sister, widow who renounced will made by her husband, was entitled to the whole of her husband's personal estate. Wegenast v. Pheylan (1952, 195 F. 2d 776, 90 U. S. App. D. C. 277).

If there be a widow or surviving husband and a child or children, or a descendant or descendants from a child, the widow or surviving husband shall have one-third only. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1249, ch. 854, § 375; Apr. 19, 1920, 41 Stat. 563, ch. 153.)

AMENDMENT

1920—Act Apr. 19, 1920, added the words "or surviving husband."

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Causa mortis gifts 1
Decedent's earned income 2
Life estate 3

1. Causa mortis gifts

The United States Supreme Court has held in cases involving a gift causa mortis that title to the property passes at the time of delivery, subject to a condition subsequent that the grantor may revoke the transfer if he lives and that it cannot, therefore, be considered as property of which the grantor dies possessed. Wilkins v. Woodruff (D. C. Mun. App. 1950, 74 A. 2d 59).

2. Decedent's earned income

Code subdivision, providing for compensation for period between discharge and reinstatement and that reinstated employee shall "for all purposes" be deemed to have rendered service during such period, must be read in its entirety with all of Code provisions for payment of compensation "due" deceased employee, and under the Code provisions, so read, widow, rather than estate, of deceased employee who had not designated beneficiary was entitled to amount paid in settlement of deceased employee's claim for back salary even though it had not yet been determined at time of death that he was entitled to reinstatement and back pay. Joyce v. Scott (1959, 265 F. 2d 369, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 177).

3. Life estate

Will construed to give wife life estate in realty during widowhood, consent of devisees necessary to sale. Evans v. Evans (1932, 55 F. 2d 533, 60 App. D.C. 371).

If there be a widow or surviving husband and no child or descendants of the intestate, but the said intestate shall leave a father or mother, or brother or sister, or child of a brother or sister, the widow or surviving husband shall have one-half. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1249, ch. 854, § 376; Apr. 19, 1920, 41 Stat. 563, ch. 153.)

AMENDMENT

1920—Act Apr. 19, 1920, added the words "or surviving husband."

NOTES TO DECISIONS

War-risk insurance 1
Widow's preference 2
Wrongful death 3

1. War-risk insurance

Distributees of war-risk insurance policy after death of the widow were to be determined as of the date of the death of the insured, under this section and § 385 of the Code (§ 18-713). Condon v. Mallan (1929, 30 F. 2d 995, 58 App. D.C. 371).

Where decedent's estate consisted of proceeds from war risk insurance policy and decedent was resident of District of Columbia at the date of death, the law of the District is controlling. Id.

2. Widow's preference

Under District of Columbia law, a widow has a statutory preference to letters of administration, but this preference is subject to court's discretion. Randall v. Bockhorst (1956, 232 F. 2d 334, 98 U.S. App. D.C. 77).

Where District Court revoked letters of administration granted to decedent's sister, and it appeared that decedent's widow had a claim against major portion of estate, had been long separated from decedent and had delayed a year after death before seeking to be appointed administratrix, district court should have considered an alternative to appointment of widow as administratrix. Id.

3. Wrongful death

Under the Wrongful Death Act, § 3, the proceeds of the recovery are required to be distributed among the next of kin, which includes both the widow and father, where the decedent leaves no surviving child. Doleman v. Levine (1935, 55 S. Ct. 741, 295 U.S. 221, 79 L. Ed. 1402).

The surplus, exclusive of the widow's or surviving husband's share, or the whole surplus (if there be no widow or surviving husband), shall go as follows: (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1250, ch. 854, § 377; Apr. 19, 1920, 41 Stat. 563, ch. 153.)

AMENDMENT

1920—Act Apr. 19, 1920, added the words "or surviving husband."

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Wrongful death

Under the Wrongful Death Act, § 3, the proceeds of the recovery are required to be distributed among the next of kin, which includes both the widow and father, where the decedent leaves no surviving child. Doleman v. Levine (1935, 55 S. Ct. 741, 295 U.S. 221, 79 L. Ed. 1402).

If there be children and no other descendants, the surplus shall be divided equally among them. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1250, ch. 854, § 378.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

1. Indebtedness to children

When mother dies indebted to children and bequeaths to them a portion of her own estate which is more than the indebtedness, such bequest is not in satisfaction for they would inherit the entire estate if no will had been made. Patton v. Glover (1 App. D.C. 466, affirmed 17 S. Ct. 411, 165 U.S. 394, 41 L. Ed. 760).

When mother borrowed money on real estate and gave it to son to establish him in business, taking no security therefor but under agreement that it would be deducted from his share of estate, such advancement operates as an ademption of a legacy. Miller v. Payne (28 App. D. C. 396).

If there be a child or children and a child or children of a deceased child, the child or children of such deceased child shall take such share as his, her or their deceased parent would, if living, be entitled to, and every other descendant or descendants in existence at the death of the intestate shall stand in the place of his, her, or their deceased ancestor: Provided, That if any child or descendant shall have been advanced by the intestate, by settlement or portion, the same shall be reckoned in the surplus, and, if it be equal or superior to a share, such child or descendant shall be excluded, but the widow shall have no advantage by bringing such advancement into reckoning: And provided further, That, if any child or descendant shall have received from the intestate any real estate by way of advancement, which shall not be equalized under the provisions of section 18-108, the value of any such advancement shall be treated as personality for the purposes of this section; but maintenance or education or money or realty, given without a view to a portion or settlement in life, shall not be deemed advancement; and in all cases those in equal degree claiming in the place of an ancestor shall take equal shares. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1250, ch. 854, § 379; June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 530, ch. 1329.)

AMENDMENT

1902—Act June 30, 1902, struck out the word "personality" and inserted in lieu thereof the word "personalty."

CROSS REFERENCE

Advancement as satisfaction of legacy, see § 19-109.

If there be no child, or descendant, the whole shall go to the father and mother in equal shares, or to the survivor of them. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1250, ch. 854, § 380; Mar. 6, 1935, 49 Stat. 39, ch. 28, § 1.)

AMENDMENT

1935—Act Mar. 6, 1935, amended section generally. Prior to such amendment, section read as follows: "If there be a father and no child or descendant, the father shall have the whole; if there be a mother and no father, child or descendant, the mother shall have the whole."

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Wrongful death

Under the Wrongful Death Act, § 3, the proceeds of the recovery are required to be distributed among the next of kin, which includes both the widow and father, where the decedent leaves no surviving child. Doleman v. Levine (1935, 55 S. Ct. 741, 295 U.S. 221, 79 L. Ed. 1402).

If there be a brother or sister, or child or descendant of a brother or sister, and no child, descendant, or father or mother of the intestate, the said brother, sister, or child or descendant of a brother or sister shall have the whole. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1250, ch. 854, § 381.)

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Construction

A decision of the Maryland court, though not binding in this jurisdiction, should be given great weight in interpreting a statute of the District of Columbia which was presumably derived from the same source as the Maryland statute. Wilson v. Charlent (1949, 81 F. Supp. 690).

Every brother and sister of the intestate shall be entitled to an equal share, and the child or children, or descendants of a brother or sister of the intestate, shall stand in the place of their deceased parents respectively. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1250, ch. 854, § 382.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Construction 1
Per stirpes or per capita 2

1. Construction

A decision of the Maryland court, though not binding in this jurisdiction, should be given great weight in interpreting a statute of the District of Columbia which was presumably derived from the same source as the Maryland statute. Wilson v. Charlent (1949, 81 F. Supp. 690).

2. Per stirpes or per capita

In construing an illiterate will children of testator's brothers held to take per capita rather than per stirpes under residuary clause, although testator had used the words "divided between my Brother Edwin and Charles children." McIntire v. McIntire (1933, 24 S. Ct. 196, 192 U.S. 116, 48 L. Ed. 369).

After children, descendants, father, mother, brothers, and sisters of the deceased and their descendants, all collateral relations in equal degree shall take, and no representation among such collaterals shall be allowed. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1250, ch. 854, § 383; June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 530, ch. 1329.)

AMENDMENT

1902—Act June 30, 1902, deleted words "and there shall be no distinction between the whole and half-blood" which followed "shall be allowed."

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Cousins

Where will devised the residue consisting of personal property to heirs at law and next of kin in accordance with existing laws of the District, the surviving next of kin, who were first cousins, are entitled to take all the personality as against second cousins who would have been heirs had realty been devised. Binford v. Diller (1949, 177 F. 2d 731, 85 U.S. App. D.C. 365).

If there be no collaterals, the grandfathers and grandmothers, or such of them as survive, shall take alike. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1250, ch. 854, § 384; Mar. 6, 1935, 49 Stat. 39, ch. 28, § 2.)

AMENDMENT

1935—Act Mar. 6, 1935, amended section generally. Prior to such amendment, section read as follows: "If there be no collaterals, a grandfather may take, and if there be two grandfathers they shall take alike; and a grandmother, in case of the death of her husband, the grandfather, shall take as he might have done."

If any person entitled to distribution shall die before the same shall be made, his or her share shall go to his or her representatives. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1250, ch. 854, § 385.)

NOTE TO DECISION

1. In general

The widow on the death of her husband was a distributee of one-half of his personal estate. Owing to her being the beneficiary, this portion could not be ascertained until her death. Her estate then became entitled to her share, and her next of kin, her daughter, inherited her estate. Condon v. Mallan (1929, 30 F. 2d 995, 58 App. D.C. 371).

No right in the inheritance to real or personal property shall accrue to or vest in any person other than the children of the intestate and their descendants, unless such person is in being and capable in law to take as heir or distributee at the time of the intestate's death; but any child or descendant of the intestate born after the death of the intestate shall have the same right of inheritance as if born before his death. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1250, ch. 854, § 386; Aug. 31, 1957, 71 Stat. 562, Pub. L. 85-244, § 9 (a).)

AMENDMENT

1957—Act Aug. 31, 1957, amended section generally. Prior to such amendment, section read as follows: "Posthumous children of intestates shall take in the same manner as if they had been born before the decease of the intestate, but no other posthumous relation shall be considered as entitled to distribution in his or her own right."

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1957 AMENDMENT

Amendment of section by act Aug. 31, 1957, effective 90 days after Aug. 31, 1957, see note under section 18-101.

NOTE TO DECISION

1. In general

"A child en ventre sa mere is deemed to be in esse for the purpose of taking a remainder, or any other estate or interest which is for his benefit, whether by descent, by devise, or under the statute of distribution." Craig v. Rowland (10 App. D. C. 402).

In no case shall there be any distinction between the kindred of the whole and the half-blood. (June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 530, ch. 1329; Aug. 31, 1957, 71 Stat. 562, Pub. L. 85-244, § 9(b).)

AMENDMENT

1957—Act Aug. 31, 1957, substituted "In no case shall there be any distinction between the kindred of the whole and the half-blood" for "In the distribution of personal estate there shall be no distinction between the whole and half-blood."

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1957 AMENDMENT

Amendment of section by act Aug. 31, 1957, effective 90 days after Aug. 31, 1957, see note under section 18-101.

The illegitimate child or children of any female and the issue of any such illegitimate child or children shall be capable to take real and personal estate by inheritance from their mother, or from each other, or from the descendants of each other, as the case may be, in like manner as if born in lawful wedlock.

When such illegitimate child or children shall die leaving no descendants, or brothers or sisters, or the descendants of such brothers or sisters, then and in that case the mother of such illegitimate child or children shall be entitled to the real and personal estate of such illegitimate child or children, and if the mother be dead, the heirs or distributees of the mother shall take in like manner as if such illegitimate child or children had been born in lawful wedlock. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1250, ch. 854, § 387; Aug. 31, 1957, 71 Stat. 562, Pub. L. 85-244, § 9(c).)

AMENDMENT

1957—Act Aug. 31, 1957, specified that the share of the illegitimate children or their mother shall consist of the real and personal estate.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Construction 1
Of terms 2
Legislative intent 3
Proceeds of insurance policy 4

1. Construction

A decision of the Maryland court, though not binding in this jurisdiction, should be given great weight in interpreting a statute of the District of Columbia which was presumably derived from the same source as the Maryland statute. Wilson v. Charlent (1949, 81 F. Supp. 690).

2. Construction of terms

"The mother of illegitimate children may be their next of kin, and illegitimate children of any female are next of kin to each other," and the phrase "next of kin" in section 1301 of the Code (§ 16-1201) is used in the same sense. Southern R. Co. v. Hawkins (35 App. D.C. 313, 21 Ann. Cas. 926).

3. Legislative intent

"It was evidently the intent of Congress in enacting this statute to remove the common-law disability of inheritance through the maternal line, and to that extent places illegitimates upon the same basis as legitimates. This amounted to a declaration of public policy." Southern R. Co. v. Hawkins (35 App. D.C. 313, 21 Ann. Cas. 926).

Congress intended that an illegitimate child, insofar as inheritance is concerned, is to be considered in all respects as the child of its mother. It would be highly artificial to draw a distinction between property of which the mother was seized and possessed at the time of her death and the property of which she should have become seized and possessed had she lived. Wilson v. Charlent (1949, 81 Supp. 690).

4. Proceeds of insurance policy

Where claim under Federal Employees' Group Life Insurance Act arose in District of Columbia, wherein, with regard to descent of personality, illegitimate children are on equal standing with those born in lawful wedlock insofar as mother's estate is concerned, illegitimate children of insured were entitled to share proportionately with her legitimate children in proceeds of policy. Brantley and Mathis v. Skeens, Guardian ad litem (1959, 266 F. 2d 447, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 246).

If there be no widow or widower or relations of the intestate within the fifth degree, which shall be reckoned by counting down from the common ancestor to the more remote, the surplus of real and personal property shall escheat to the District of Columbia to be used by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia for the benefit of the poor. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1251, ch. 854, § 388; Aug. 31, 1957, 71 Stat. 562, Pub. L. 85-244, § 9(d).)

AMENDMENT

1957—Act Aug. 31, 1957, inserted words "or widower" following "no widow", and substituted "the surplus of real and personal property shall escheat" for "the whole surplus shall belong."

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1957 AMENDMENT

Amendment of section by act Aug. 31, 1957, effective 90 days after Aug. 31, 1957, see note under section 18-101.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Conversion of property 1
Power of court 2
Presumptions 3
Remand for further proof 5
Remoteness of relationship 4
Time when title vests 6
Veterans Administration payments 7

1. Conversion of property

Where, in 1879, one died without known heirs or next of kin and a sum of money was found on his person which the authorities turned over to the policemen's pension fund, an administrator appointed in 1886 could recover such fund in tort for conversion since there was no authority in law for turning the money over to the pension fund. Tucker v. Nebeker (2 App. D.C. 326).

2. Power of court

The probate court, upon a finding that there are no heirs of deceased intestate, has power to decree distribution to District of Columbia as escheatee. Frazier v. Kutz (1944, 139 F. 2d 380, 78 U.S. App. D.C. 241).

The probate court's jurisdiction to hear, determine and decree upon all claims between executors and administrators and legatees or persons entitled to a distributive share of an intestate estate includes duty of finding that there are or that there are not statutory heirs, and upon the finding to make distribution as this section requires. Id.

The probate court has power, in absence of next of kin, to order in a proper case the payment of residuum of intestate's estate to an escheatee, as this section provides. Id.

3. Presumptions

There is a presumption that an intestate left heirs and the presumption obtains until claimant by escheat overcomes it by strong and convincing evidence. Frazier v. Kutz (1944, 139 F. 2d 380, 78 U.S. App. D.C. 241).

4. Remoteness of relationship

A bequest to each one of testatrix's cousins living at the time of testatrix's death, irrespective of the remoteness of relationship, and of whether his or her parent cousin should be living, was not intended to incorporate this section, which provides that intestate property shall pass to the District, when there are no relations within the fifth degree. Dalton v. White (1942, 129 F. 2d 55, 76 U.S. App. D. C. 93).

5. Remand for further proof

Where creditor filed petition for administration of deceased's estate stating that after diligent search, creditor was satisfied that deceased died intestate and without surviving relation, and District of Columbia relied upon allegations of creditor's petition, pleadings and evidence were insufficient to authorize probate court to determine whether the District was entitled to distribution under this section, and case was remanded for determination of question whether intestate died without heirs. Frazier v. Kutz (1944, 139 F. 2d 380, 78 U.S. App. D. C. 241).

6. Time when title vests

If on death of an intestate there were no kin within classes named in this section, property after payment of debts eo instante vested in and became property of the District of Columbia as statutory escheatee. Frazier v. Kutz (1944, 139 F. 2d 380, 78 U.S. App. D.C. 241).

7. Veterans Administration payments

Estate of decedent derived from payments made by Veterans Administration for benefit of decedent, who was not survived by next of kin, and whose last legal residence was in the District of Columbia escheated, under express terms of statute, to the Government and not to the District of Columbia. In re Germanovich's Estate (1954, 122 F. Supp. 169).

In case the surplus remaining in the administrator's hands after payment of all just debts exhibited and proved or notified and not barred, or after retaining for the same, shall consist of specific property or articles mentioned in the inventory or inventories, the administrator, if he can not satisfy the parties, may apply to the court to make distribution, and the court may appoint a day for making distribution and by summons call on the said parties to appear; and the said court may, at the appointed time, proceed to distribute. But if a majority in point of value shall neglect to appear, or appearing shall object to the distribution of the articles, or if the court shall deem a sale of the said articles or any part of them more advantageous, a sale shall be directed accordingly, and the rules herein laid down relative to a sale by order of the said court shall be observed. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1251, ch. 854, § 389.)

Whenever a distribution of specific articles is to be made the probate court may appoint two disinterested persons, not in any way related to the parties concerned, to make such distribution among the persons entitled as to them shall seem meet and proper; or if, in their opinion, upon a view of such articles, no distribution among the persons entitled could be by them made which would operate equally, but a sale thereof would be more advantageous to such persons, they shall return to the probate court their opinion in writing, and the court shall thereupon order a sale of such articles, upon reasonable notice, and cause the proceeds of such sale to be equally distributed among the parties entitled. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1251, ch. 854, § 390.)

When any person entitled, after payment of debts, shall be in want of subsistence or greatly straitened in his circumstances, and shall apply to the probate court by petition, and satisfy the court that he is in want of subsistence or greatly straitened in circumstances, and that it probably will not require more than one-half of the assets to discharge the debts, the court may direct the administrator to deliver to the petitioner any part of what the court shall suppose will be his distributive share, or any part of a legacy or bequest in money not exceeding one-third part, the said petitioner giving bond, with security approved by the court, to the administrator for returning the same or an equivalent, with interest, whenever so directed by the court; and the court shall have power to determine in a summary way on any such petition, after summons against such administrator duly returned "summoned" or "non est." (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1251, ch. 854, § 391.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

In general ¹
Trustees ³

1. In general

"Section 391 (this section) authorizes the court to deliver any part of what the court shall suppose will be the distributive share," and the requirement of a bond is sufficient protection in the event that the beneficiary should subsequently be divested of her interest in the estate. Hutchins v. Hutchins (41 App. D. C. 122).

2. Collectors

Collector may be authorized to make partial distribution under this section. Hutchins v. Hutchins (41 App. D. C. 122).

3. Trustees

This section confers no jurisdiction on an equity court to order partial distribution of a fund administered by a trustee under its supervision. Hutchins v. Dante (40 App. D. C. 262).

The court, in like manner, on any petition by a person in such circumstances to whom a specific legacy or bequest has been made, being satisfied that the assets, exclusive of all specific legacies, will not be nearly exhausted by debts, may direct the executor or administrator with the will annexed to deliver to the petitioner the said specific legacy or bequest on his giving bond as aforesaid. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1251, ch. 854, § 392.)

Where a bequest of personal property or money is made to a female and directed by the will to be paid on her attaining to full, mature, or to a lawful age, such female shall be entitled to receive and demand such personal property or money on her arriving at the age of eighteen years or being married. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1251, ch. 854, § 393.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

1. In general

Under a will directing the payment of income from an estate to a female "when she shall reach the age of eighteen years," she is entitled to receive it on attaining that age, and it should not be paid to her guardian. Perin v. Perin (41 W. L. R. 265).

This section provides an exception to the general rule under common law that infants, whether male or female, attain their majority at the age of 21 years. Jones v. Jones (1934, 72 F. 2d 829, 63 App. D.C. 373, 95 A.L.R. 352).

Any administrator shall be entitled to appoint a meeting of persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, on some day by the court approved, and payment or distribution may be there made under the court's direction and control. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1251, ch. 854, § 394.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

1. In general

"Ordinarily it would be safer for an administrator to pursue the course pointed out by this latter section (this section), but there is no express command of the law that he should do so." Miller-Shoemaker Real Estate Co. v. Sturgeon (31 App. D.C. 406).

"This provision merely gives expression to the well-settled rule that a legacy is payable in cash, unless some other form of payment is authorized by the person entitled. In the present case the distributee was a non-resident, and the executors, waiving their right to make payment here under the direction of the court, assumed the risk of sending the money by check to California. To absolve themselves from responsibility to the distributee, it must appear that he expressly or impliedly authorized them so to act, and, unless he did, in contemplation of law the money still is in their hands and they must respond to the order of the court" directing them to pay it. In this case the check was received and cashed by an imposter, and the executors were directed to pay the legatee his distributive share. Moore v. Moore (47 App. D. C. 23).

Settlement of administrator's first and final accounts was not to be given the effect of an adjudication of distributee's rights. Claudy v. Duvall (1925, 5 F. 2d 381, 55 App. D.C. 319).

Upon the death of any person leaving a surviving spouse the said surviving spouse shall be entitled to an allowance out of the personal estate of said decedent of the sum of $500 for his or her use, and that of any minor children, to be paid in money or in specific property at its fair value as may be elected, and which allowance shall be exempt from any and all debts and obligations of the decedent, and subject only to payment of funeral expenses not exceeding $200; and, if there be no surviving spouse, the surviving minor children if any there be shall be entitled to a like allowance, and which shall be payable, in the discretion of the probate court, to the person having their custody or to such other person as it shall designate, and shall be used by such person solely for said minor's care and maintenance. Said family allowance shall be in addition to the respective share or shares of the surviving spouse and children. (Mar. 3, 1901, ch. 854, § 394 (a), as added June 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 269, ch. 244.)

When any person dies, leaving a small estate consisting only of personal property of a value not in excess of $500, and there be a surviving spouse or minor children entitled to the family allowance authorized in section 18-801, if such surviving spouse or minor children (acting through the person having their custody or a next friend) file in the probate court a petition, under oath, declaring: The time and place of decedent's death; the known next of kin; the known assets and by whom held; that petitioner has made a diligent search to discover all assets of the deceased; the amount of funeral expenses and to whom due; and that said assets do not exceed $500 in value, the probate court, if satisfied that the allegations in the petition are true, shall pass a final order (1) declaring that no formal administration is necessary and no probate is required of any will; (2) fixing the amount of funeral expenses allowable, to whom due, and out of what property to be paid; (3) vesting title to the remainder of the property in the surviving spouse or minor children, as the case may be, in satisfaction of his, her, or their family allowance; and (4) directing the person or persons having possession of said property to pay over, transfer, and deliver the same as allotted. The probate court may also authorize in said order, or by further order, the sale of any of said property as the exigencies of the situation require. (Mar. 3, 1901, ch. 854, § 394 (b), as added June 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 269, ch. 244.)

(1) When anyone dies intestate, leaving a small estate consisting only of personal property of a value not in excess of $500, and there be no spouse or minor children surviving, if the person entitled to be preferred in the appointment of an administrator files in the probate court a petition, under oath, declaring: The time and place of decedent's death; the known next of kin; that diligent search has been made for a will; the known creditors, together with the amount of each claim, including contingent and disputed claims; and funeral expenses; the known assets and by whom held; that petitioner has made a diligent search to discover all assets and debts of the deceased; that said assets do not exceed $500 in value; and that there are no known legal proceedings pending in which the decedent is a party; the probate court, if satisfied that the allegations in said petition are true, shall pass a preliminary order declaring that no formal administration is necessary and instructing the petitioner to publish once in substantially the usual form notice to creditors to exhibit their claims duly authenticated, within thirty days after such notice, and which notice shall be inserted in one newspaper of general circulation in the District of Columbia as said court shall direct.

(2) Whenever such a preliminary order has been passed and the notice has been published and the time provided in such notice has expired, the petitioner shall file, under oath, a statement, with the usual proof of publication attached, that the notice has been published, and that the said time has expired, and listing all then known creditors, including contingent and disputed claims, and the amount of each claim. If satisfied that said statement is true, and after hearing and disposing of any objections filed in the probate court by any one interested in the estate, the probate court shall pass a final order (1) directing the petitioner to pay from the estate all of said claims, in the order of priority provided by law, and (2) authorizing any person having possession of any property of the decedent's estate to transfer, pay over, and deliver the same in accordance with petitioner's directions, and (3) decreeing that, after the Register of Wills certifies upon said final order that he has seen the vouchers for the payment of said claims and is satisfied that said claims, as well as the fees herein-after provided for, have been paid, then the remaining balance of the estate, if any, shall be vested as follows: First, in the adult surviving children equally, and, secondly, if there be no adult surviving children, then in those persons who would be entitled thereto under the statute of distributions (the share of any minor shall be payable, in the discretion of the probate court, to the person having custody or to such other person as it shall designate, to be used solely for the care and maintenance of such minor).

(3) The probate court may also provide in its final order for sale of any property, upon such terms as it deems advisable, and for the distribution of the proceeds in accordance with its final order. (Mar. 3, 1901, ch. 854, § 394 (c), as added June 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 269, ch. 244.)

In the absence of fraud, no person who pays over, transfers, or delivers any property pursuant to the provisions of a final order entered under section 18-802, or to the directions of a petitioner acting under authority of a final order under section 18-803, shall be liable for the application thereof, nor shall any such person, nor any person who receives any property pursuant to the provisions of a final order entered under section 18-802, or to the directions of a petitioner acting under authority of a final order under section 18-803, be responsible for any claims on account of the payment, transfer, delivery, or receipt of such property; and the property distributed pursuant to a final order in either case shall be and become the absolute property of the respective distributees thereof. (Mar. 3, 1901, ch. 854, § 394 (d), as added June 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 269, ch. 244.)

No petitioner under this chapter shall be required to be represented by an attorney, or to give bond, nor receive any commission for performing any work or services hereunder. (Mar. 3, 1901, ch. 854, § 394 (e), as added June 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 269, ch. 244.)

The Register of Wills shall prepare, and make available, forms whereby the petition and final order under section 18-802, and the petition, preliminary order, the statement, the final order, and the certificate of payment under section 18-803, shall constitute in each case one connected instrument. In lieu of all other fees, costs, or charges, the Register of Wills shall receive a fee of $5 for all services and work administered under this chapter, including the taking of all affidavits plus a fee of 25 cents for each certified copy of the aforesaid instruments. (Mar. 3, 1901, ch. 854, § 394 (f), as added June 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 269, ch. 244.)

The discovery of any additional property of the decedent, after the filing of a petition in either case provided for in this chapter, shall be reported by the petitioner to the probate court as soon as discovered by him. The existence of said additional property shall not invalidate any proceedings under this chapter except when the additional property is discovered before the passage of the final order provided for, and either (1) is real estate or (2) increases the total value of the estate to more than $500, in which case no final order shall be passed under this chapter and the court shall require regular administration. Where additional property is discovered after passage of the final order, if said property is entirely personal and does not increase the value of the total estate to more than $500, then such additional property may be distributed pursuant to a new petition under the appropriate section of this chapter; in all other cases such additional property may not be distributed under this chapter. (Mar. 3, 1901, ch. 854, § 394 (g), as added June 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 269, ch. 244.)

Any person who makes a false affidavit under this chapter, or who willfully violates any order of the probate court under this chapter or any other provision of this chapter, shall be liable to a fine of not exceeding $500 for each offense. (Mar. 3, 1901, ch. 854, § 394 (h), as added June 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 269, ch. 244.)

All Acts or parts of Acts inconsistent with the provisions of this chapter shall be, and they are hereby, repealed to the extent of such inconsistency but only to such extent. (Mar. 3, 1901, ch. 854, § 394 (i), as added June 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 269, ch. 244.)

This chapter shall apply to the estates of all persons dying after June 24, 1949. (Mar. 3, 1901, ch. 854, § 394 (j), as added June 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 269, ch. 244.)

(Mar. 28, 1958, 72 Stat. 67, Pub. L. 85-356, § 1.)

Where the title to property or the devolution thereof depends upon priority of death and there is no sufficient evidence that the persons have died otherwise than simultaneously, the property of each person shall be disposed of as if he had survived, except as provided otherwise in this chapter. (Mar. 28, 1958, 72 Stat. 67, Pub. L. 85-356, § 2.)

If property is so disposed of that the right of a beneficiary to succeed to any interest therein is conditional upon his surviving another person, and both persons die, and there is no sufficient evidence that the two have died otherwise than simultaneously, the beneficiary shall be deemed not to have survived. If there is no sufficient evidence that two or more beneficiaries have died otherwise than simultaneously and property has been disposed of in such a way that at the time of their death each of such beneficiaries would have been entitled to the property if he had survived the others, the property shall be divided into as many equal portions as there were such beneficiaries and these portions shall be distributed respectively to those who would have taken in the event that each of such beneficiaries had survived. (Mar. 28, 1958, 72 Stat. 67, Pub. L. 85-356, § 3.)

Where there is no sufficient evidence that two joint tenants or tenants by the entirety have died otherwise than simultaneously the property so held shall be distributed, or descend as the case may be, one-half as if one had survived and one-half as if the other had survived. If there are more than two joint tenants and all of them have so died the property thus distributed or descended shall be in the proportion that one bears to the whole number of joint tenants.

The term "joint tenants" includes owners of property held under circumstances which entitled one or more to the whole of the property on the death of the other or others. (Mar. 28, 1958, 72 Stat. 67, Pub. L. 85-356, § 4.)

Where the insured and the beneficiary in a policy of life or accident insurance have died and there is no sufficient evidence that they have died otherwise than simultaneously, the proceeds of the policy shall be distributed as if the insured had survived the beneficiary. (Mar. 28, 1958, 72 Stat. 67, Pub. L. 85-356, § 5.)

This chapter shall not apply in the case of wills, living trusts, deeds, or contracts of insurance, or any other situation where provision is made for distribution of property different from the provisions of this chapter, or where provision is made for a presumption as to survivorship which results in a distribution of property different from that here provided. (Mar. 28, 1958, 72 Stat. 67, Pub. L. 85-356, § 6.)

This chapter shall not apply to the distribution of the property of a person who has died before it takes effect. (Mar. 28, 1958, 72 Stat. 68, Pub. L. 85-356, § 7.)

This chapter shall be so construed and interpreted as to effectuate its general purpose to make uniform the law in those States which enact it. (Mar. 28, 1958, 72 Stat. 68, Pub. L. 85-356, § 8.)

If any of the provisions of this chapter or the application thereof to any persons or circumstances is held invalid, such invalidity shall not affect other provisions or applications of the chapter which can be given effect without the invalid provisions or application, and to this end the provisions of this chapter are declared to be severable. NOTES TO DECISIONS

Fraud and undue influence 2

Sound and disposing mind 6
Status as married woman 7

1. Evidence

Any degree of importunity or undue influence which deprives the testator of his free agency, and which is such as he is too weak to resist, and in effect renders the instrument not his free and unconstrained act, is sufficient to and will invalidate the will or testament of the party. Barbour v. Moore (4 App. D. C. 535).

Declarations of testator and his relations with the parties are competent circumstances tending to throw light upon his state of mind and disposition. The only limitation is that it shall not be received as proof of the independent fact or the truth of the things declared, but as supplementary only to direct proof of the alleged fraud and undue influence. Manogue v. Herrell (13 App. D. C. 455).

Testimony plainly of a hearsay character, including the certificates of the physicians for the commitment of testator to insane asylum is inadmissible, especially when testimony of physicians themselves was not taken. Keely v. Moore (22 App. D.C. 9, affirmed 25 S. Ct. 169, 196 U.S. 38, 49 L. Ed. 376).

In Federal courts a will is not set aside on evidence showing only suspicion or possibility of undue influence. Robinson v. Duvall (27 App. D.C. 535, affirmed 28 S. Ct. 260, 207 U.S. 583, 52 L. Ed. 351).

It was proper to submit question to jury to determine testamentary capacity of testatrix, a woman of about eighty-two years, when she executed will during a decline of her physical and mental condition. Morgan v. Adams (29 App. D.C. 198, error dismissed 213 S. Ct. 213, 211 U.S. 627, 53 L. Ed. 362).

Trial court did not err when it excluded evidence which tended to show a delusion affecting person more than thirty years before the making of the will and codicils. Turner v. American Security & Trust Co. (29 App. D. C. 460, affirmed 29 S. Ct. 420, 213 U.S. 257, 53 L. Ed. 788).

Testimony of testatrix's brother, who had made his home with her for 36 years, that testatrix had repeatedly agreed or promised in presence of others to leave him her real estate if he remained single and continued to live with her was admissible on issues of undue influence and testamentary capacity in opposition to probate of will naming testatrix's sister sole beneficiary. Duckett v. Duckett (1943, 134 F. 2d 527, 77 U.S. App. D.C. 303).

2. Fraud and undue influence

If sole beneficiary of will, after taking sole charge of testatrix, first made false statements to other relatives with purpose of inducing them not to visit testatrix and then allowed her to suppose, contrary to fact, that the other relatives were making no effort to see testatrix, doing nothing for her and showing no interest in her welfare, such conduct would constitute both "fraud" and "undue influence" which would vitiate the will. Duckett v. Duckett (1943, 134 F. 2d 527, 77 U.S. App. D.C. 303).

3. Incorporation of document

Testator may so construct disposition of his property as to have recourse to some paper or document in order to explain his intention and to apply provisions of his will to the subject matter thereof. This doctrine of incorporation by reference must clearly identify the instrument to which will refers and must be in existence at the date of the will. Vestry of St. John's Parish v. Bostwick (8 App. D. C. 452).

4. Law governing

The law of wills and of probate as existing in Maryland on February 27, 1801, was and is the law of the District of Columbia, except as since altered by Congress. Pascucci v. Alsop (1945, 147 F. 2d 880, 79 U.S. App. D.C. 354, certiorari denied 65 S. Ct. 1406, 325 U.S. 868, 89 L. Ed. 1987). See, also, In re Allen's Estate (1946, 64 F. Supp. 107).

5. Nature of proceedings

Proceedings for the probate of wills are statutory and are substantially in rem. The proceeding is upon the will itself and to determine its status. The judgment runs against no person, but is, simply, that the instrument before the court is, or is not, the will of the testator. Cruit v. Owen (21 App. D. C. 378).

6. Sound and disposing mind

Where trial judge thought testatrix was not in a condition to execute a serious document, such as a will or deed or contract, with judgment and understanding at time she signed will which had been written for her, direction of verdict upholding the will was error, and judgment would be reversed and cause remanded for new trial. Collins v. Dobbins (1952, 198 F. 2d 763, 70 U.S. App. D.C. 287).

Fact to be found by the jury is not that the testator was demented at the particular time or that he was victim of insane delusions, but whether from any one of these conditions that he was not of sound and disposing mind and of capacity to make a valid deed or contract. National Safe Deposit, Sav. & Trust Co. v. Heiberger (19 App. D. C. 506).

If person of sound mind executes a will, and the same is his voluntary act, the law presumes knowledge on his part of its contents and such presumption also applies to illiterates. Lipphard v. Humphrey (28 App. D. C. 355, affirmed 28 S. Ct. 561, 209 U.S. 264, 52 L. Ed. 783, 14 Ann. Cas. 872).

An insane delusion exists when a person conceives the existence of something fanciful and extravagant, something having no foundation in reason or fact, and is dominated and controlled by such imagination, and therefore acts as he would not otherwise have acted. Riddle v. Gibson (29 App. D. C. 237).

If one acts under a delusion superinduced by false testimony, of the falsity of which he has no knowledge, it cannot be said that he is the victim of an insane delusion. Morgan v. Morgan (30 App. D. C. 436, 13 Ann. Cas. 1037).

The test is whether the testator, at the time of executing the paper purporting to be his will, was capable of making a valid deed or contract. Lewis v. American Security & Trust Co. (1923, 289 F. 916, 53 App. D.C. 258). See, also, Thompson v. Smith (1939, 103 F. 2d 936, 70 App. D.C. 65, 123 A.L.R. 76).

7. Status as married woman

Will made by married woman while separated from husband, from whom she is later divorced, was not revoked although she subsequently remarried. Chapman v. Dismer (14 App. D. C. 446).

No nuncupative will made after Jan. 1, 1902, shall be valid in the District; but any soldier being in actual military service, or mariner being at sea, may dispose of his movables, wages, and personal estate by word of mouth: Provided, That such disposition shall be proved by at least two witnesses who were present at the making thereof and were requested by the testator to bear witness that such was his last will, nor unless such will were made in the time of the last sickness of the deceased, and the substance thereof reduced to writing within ten days after the making thereof. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1434, ch. 854, § 1634.)

All wills and testaments shall be in writing and signed by the testator, or by some other person in his presence and by his express directions, and shall be attested and subscribed in the presence of the said testator by at least two credible witnesses, or else they shall be utterly void and of no effect; and, moreover, no devise or bequest, or any clause thereof, shall be revocable otherwise than by some other will or codicil in writing or other writing declaring the same, or by burning, canceling, tearing, or obliterating the same by the testator himself or in his presence and by his direction and consent; but all devises and bequests shall remain and continue in force until the same be burned, canceled, torn, or obliterated by the testator or by his direction in the manner aforesaid, or unless the same be altered or revoked by some other will, testament, or codicil in writing, or other writing of the testator signed in the presence of at least two witnesses attesting the same, any former law or usage to the contrary notwithstanding. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1433, ch. 854, § 1626.)

1. Alteration

Where a testator properly executed a will on two sheets of paper, and subsequently attempted to alter the will by substituting another sheet for the first, which was discarded, without notifying witnesses, or signing in the presence of witnesses, it is not entitled to probate. Henry v. Fraser (1929, 29 F. 2d 633, 58 App. D.C. 260, 62 A.L.R. 1364).

2. Birth of child

Where testator was unmarried and without children by a former marriage at time he executed will which contained no provision for any child of subsequent marriage, his subsequent marriage and the birth of a child amounted to an implied revocation of the previously executed will, notwithstanding this section specifying with particularity the manner in which will may be revoked. Pascucci v. Alsop (1945, 147 F. 2d 880, 79 U.S. App. D.C. 354, certiorari denied 65 S. Ct. 1406, 325 U.S. 868, 89 L. Ed. 1987).

A will in favor of wife executed by married man without children was not revoked by subsequent birth of a child. Allen v. Heron (1946, 157 F. 2d 707, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 298).

Where will was executed after testator's marriage, subsequent birth of a child to the marriage did not operate as a revocation of will. In re Allen's Estate (1946, 64 F. Supp. 107).

3. Cancellation

Pencil cross-marks across entire first page of will and large parts of second and third page, and across individual words and attestation clause, constituted "cancellation" of will. In re Smith's Estate (1948, 77 F. Supp. 217).

4. Construction

In ascertaining meaning of this section governing revocation of will, court was to be guided by the construction of like provision of statute of frauds by courts of England and like provisions by courts of Maryland, from which jurisdiction, this section had been adopted. Pascucci v. Alsop (1945, 147 F. 2d 880, 79 U.S. App. D.C. 354, certiorari denied 65 S. Ct. 1406, 325 U.S. 868, 89 L. Ed. 1987).

Where this section, specifying with particularity the manner in which a will may be revoked and concluding with words "any former law or usage to the contrary notwithstanding," had been adopted from Maryland which had adopted the English statute of frauds which had been enacted in 1676, it was the "law or usage" prior to 1676 that was affected by those words. Id.

Where English statute has been adopted, the known and settled construction of the statute by courts of law is considered as silently incorporated into the statute, or is received with all the weight of authority. Id.

In absence of District of Columbia decisions construing this section regarding cancellation of wills, cases from other jurisdictions having similar statutory provisions are persuasive. In re Smith's Estate (1948, 77 F. Supp. 217).

5. Dependent relative revocation

Attempted revision of bequest of six thousand eight hundred dollars after execution and attestation of will by writing other numbers and numerals over the word "six" and corresponding but entirely obliterated numeral was ineffective to revoke or revise bequest and hence under doctrine of "dependent relative revocation," original bequest must prevail. In re Chaconas' Estate (1948, 80 F. Supp. 549).

Where second will, revoking first will, was cancelled by pencil marks across portions of will and attestation clause, without substituted will being prepared and without clear and convincing showing that testator had determined what disposition to make of property upon revocation, the doctrine of "dependent relative revocation" was inapplicable and second will must be deemed to have been revoked, without reinstating first will. In re Smith's Estate (1948, 77 F. Supp. 217).

6. Evidence

In probate proceeding, testimony that, some months after tearing of will, testator had told witness that he had left his wife all his property and wanted his brothers to have nothing was relevant to issue whether tearing of will by testator and his widow was animo revocandi and its exclusion was prejudicial error. Savoy v. Savoy et ano. (1955, 220 F. 2d 364, 94 U.S. App. D.C. 411).

In the absence of other evidence of intent of testatrix in making various cancellations in her own handwriting on the face of original will, unwitnessed holographic writing found after death in writing desk drawer with original will constituted persuasive "evidence" that cancellations on original will were conditional and were dependent upon the consummation of an effective revised testamentary disposition along the lines of uncompleted suggestions in holographic writing. Wolfe v. Snyder (1943, 48 F. Supp. 227).

Evidence established that cancellations in testatrix' handwriting on the face of original will were "conditional revocations" dependent upon consummation of an effective revised testamentary disposition in accordance with suggestions in unwitnessed holographic writing found in writing desk drawer with original will, and no such revised disposition having been consummated, the cancellations were ineffective, leaving original will in force. Id.

7. Formalities

The re-execution of a will requires the same formalities as required for its original execution. Notes v. Doyle (32 App. D. C. 413).

Unless the formalities prescribed are complied with, the instrument is void. Association Survivors of Seventh Georgia Regiment v. Lerner (1925, 3 F. 2d 201, 55 App. D.C. 156).

Execution of will—qualification of witnesses—interest, see Peters v. Peters (1935, 78 F. 2d 215, 64 App. D.C. 331).

8. Marriage

In the United States, in absence of a statute abolishing the common-law rule and establishing a new rule in its place, the marriage of a man and the birth of a child, capable of inheriting, revoke a prior will, if both occur after the execution thereof, especially where the child is born after the death of its father. Pascucci v. Alsop (1945, 147 F. 2d 880, 79 U.S. App. D.C. 354, certiorari denied 65 S. Ct. 1406, 325 U.S. 868, 89 L. Ed. 1987).

9. Order of signatures

Will was valid even though attesting witnesses signed it before testatrix where all signed at substantially same time and in each other's presence. Billings v. Woody (1948, 167 F. 2d 756, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 219, certiorari denied 69 S. Ct. 46, 335 U.S. 822, 93 L. Ed. 377).

10. Partial cancellation

Partial cancellation of will should be regarded as a final act of "revocation" by the testator in the absence of evidence that the act of cancellation was merely a deliberative act performed with the intention of later executing a codicil or a new will. Wolfe v. Snyder (1943, 48 F. Supp. 227).

11. Presumptions

Marks amounting to cancellation on face of will are presumed to have been placed on document with intent to revoke. In re Smith's Estate (1948, 77 F. Supp. 217).

12. Revocation

In probate proceeding in which widow offered torn will for probate where she testified that she and testator had torn will during argument, if jury found the tearing so occurred, they had to determine whether or not the tearing was animo revocandi, and if tearing of a will is accidental or unaccompanied by necessary intent, it does not constitute revocation. Savoy v. Savoy et ano. (1955, 220 F. 2d 364, 94 U.S. App. D.C. 411).

A conveyance of the title subsequently declared void does not operate as a revocation of a previous will. McGowan v. Elroy (28 App. D. C. 188).

Subsequent marriage of testatrix and birth of issue does not revoke will. Morris v. Foster (1922, 278 F. 321, 51 App. D.C. 238, certiorari denied 42 S. Ct. 586, 259 U.S. 582, 66 L. Ed. 1074).

Where cancellation or destruction of will is connected with the making of another will so as fairly to raise the inference that testator meant revocation of old will to depend upon the efficacy of the new disposition, if the will intended to be substituted is inoperative from defect of attestation or any other cause, the revocation falls and the original will remains in force. Wolfe v. Snyder (1943, 48 F. Supp. 227).

13. Signature on envelope

Writing which purported to be the will of decedent, which was executed by decedent, folded and sealed in an envelope, the face of which envelope was inscribed "my last will and testament" followed by witnesses' signatures under such inscription, was not entitled to probate because paper upon which witnesses affixed their signatures was not physically attached to paper purporting to be the will and witnesses had not affixed their signatures to will itself. In re Lee's Estate (1948, 80 F. Supp. 293).

14. Subscription

The evidence would allow an inference that the testator had signed in an adjoining room before he brought the will to the room in which the witnesses were present, and in the absence of clear and convincing testimony to the contrary, the presumption of regularity is not defeated. Betts v. Lonas (1949, 172 F. 2d 759, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 206).

15. Transfer effective at death

Generally, where design of owner of bank deposit is to retain sole control during his life and intended transfer or gift is not to take effect until death, arrangement is testamentary in character and void under statute of wills. Gibson v. Industrial Bank of Washington (D. C. Mun. App. 1944, 36 A. 2d 62).

16. Law governing

All wills, in their very nature, are ambulatory and revocable during the life of the testator; and, in respect to personal estate, they speak only from and have effect upon the death of the testator; and to say that a will shall have effect and be declared valid in respect to a prior law, which has been repealed and given place to a different rule as a substitute, is to declare valid a testamentary paper without existing law to support it. Colonna v. Alton (23 App. D. C. 296).

17. Witnessing

Attesting witnesses need not know the contents of the document; "they may attest it without the presence of each other; they, or any of them, need not see the testator sign the will, provided he acknowledge the signature to each of the witnesses; and they need not even know that the document they have witnessed is a will." Notes v. Doyle (32 App. D. C. 413).

It is not necessary that testator should sign his will in the presence of witnesses, but that he shall, before witnesses sign, indicate that the document is his will and that he has signed it. Bullock v. Morehouse (1927, 19 F. 2d 705, 57 App. D.C. 231).

If any person shall attest the execution of any will or codicil to whom any beneficial devise, legacy, estate, interest, gift, or appointment of or affecting any real or personal estate, other than and except charges on lands, tenements or hereditaments for payment of any debt or debts, shall be thereby given or made, such devise, legacy, estate, interest, gift, or appointment, shall, so far only as concerns such person attesting the execution of such will or codicil, or any person claiming under him, be utterly null and void; and such person shall be admitted as a witness to the execution of such will or codicil; notwithstanding such devise, legacy, estate, interest, gift or appointment mentioned in such will or codicil. (25 Geo. II, ch. 6, § 1, 1752; Kilty's Rep., p. 253; Alex. Br. Stat., p. 781; Comp. Stat., D. C., p. 557, § 5.)

CODIFICATION

This section sets forth a British statute continued in force by virtue of act Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1189, ch. 854, § 1.

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Intestate share

Although by statutes legacies to persons who are witnesses to will and testify to establish same, are void, a witness-legatee who was also an heir at law could testify as to the execution of the will and take his bequest thereunder, but in an amount no greater than his intestate share. Manoukian v. Tomasian (1956, 237 F. 2d 211, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 57, certiorari denied 77 S. Ct. 588, 352 U.S. 1026, 1 L. Ed. 2d 596).

No person to whom any beneficial estate, interest, gift, or appointment shall be given or made, which is null and void under section 19-104, and who shall have been examined as a witness concerning the execution of such will or codicil, shall, after he shall have been so examined, demand or take possession of or receive any profits or benefit of or from any such estate, interest, gift, or appointment so given or made to him in or by any such will or codicil; or demand, receive, or accept from any person or persons whatsoever, any such legacy or bequest, or any satisfaction or compensation for the same, in any manner, or under any colour or pretence whatsoever. (25 Geo. II, ch. 6, § 7, 1752; Kilty's Rep., p. 253; Alex. Br. Stat., p. 783; Comp. Stat. D. C., p. 558, § 7.)

CODIFICATION

This section sets forth a British statute continued in force by virtue of act Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1189, ch. 854, § 1.

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Construction

Statutes providing that legacies to persons who are witnesses to a will and testify to establish same are void, are not, unlike most portions of District of Columbia Code, acts of Congress passed for the government of the District, but are part of the law of the District because they are British statutes which were recognized as being in force in Maryland prior to cession of the District in 1801 and maintained in effect by act of Congress retaining all common law in force in Maryland. Manoukian v. Tomasian (1956, 237 F. 2d 211, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 57, certiorari denied 77 S. Ct. 588, 352 U.S. 1026, 1 L. Ed. 2d 596).

In case, by any will or codicil already made or hereafter to be made, any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, are or shall be charged with any debt or debts; and any creditor whose debt is so charged, hath attested or shall attest the execution of such will or codicil, every such creditor, notwithstanding such charge, shall be admitted as a witness to the execution of such will or codicil. (25 Geo. II, ch. 6, § 2, 1752; Kilty's Rep., p. 253; Alex. Br. Stat., p. 782; Comp. Stat. D. C., p. 558, § 6.)

CODIFICATION

This section sets forth a British statute continued in force by virtue of act Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1189, ch. 854, § 1.

No appointment made by will in the exercise of a power shall be valid unless the same be so executed that it would be valid for the disposition of the property to which the power applies if it belonged to the testator. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1434, ch. 854, § 1629.)

No will or codicil, or any part thereof, which shall be in any manner revoked shall, after being revoked, be revived otherwise than by the re-execution thereof, or by a codicil executed in the manner hereinbefore required, and then only to the extent to which an intention to revive is shown. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1433, ch. 854, § 1627.)

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Application of statute

Section has no bearing when the doctrine of "dependent relative revocation" is invoked. In Re Nutting's Estate (1949, 82 Supp. 689, affirmed 187 F. 2d 357, 87 U.S. App. D.C. 351, 28 A.L.R. 2d 521).

A provision for or advancement to any person shall be deemed a satisfaction, in whole or in part of a devise or bequest to such person contained in a previous will if it would be so deemed in case the devisee or legatee were the child of the testator; and, whether he be a child or not, it shall be so deemed in all cases in which it shall appear from parol or other evidence to be so intended. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1434, ch. 854, § 1630.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Evidence 1
Parent as debtor 2
Presumptions 3

1. Evidence

Evidence established that payments made by testator during lifetime to brother were made in payment of trust obligation arising before execution of will and were not intended to be in partial satisfaction of bequest to brother. In re Chaconas' Estate (1948, 80 F. Supp. 549).

2. Parent as debtor

Where parent, who is a debtor to his child, makes an advancement to such child, it is presumed to be a satisfaction pro tanto of the debt. Glover v. Patten (1897, 17 S. Ct. 411, 165 U.S. 394, 41 L. Ed. 760).

3. Presumptions

A legacy is never presumed to be in satisfaction of a trust obligation. In re Chaconas' Estate (1948, 80 F. Supp. 549).

If a devisee or legatee die before the testator, leaving issue who survive the testator, such issue shall take the estate devised or bequeathed as the devisee or legatee would have done if he had survived the testator, unless a different disposition be made or required by the will. Unless a contrary intention appear by the will, such property as shall be comprised in any devise or bequest in such will which shall fail or be void or otherwise incapable of taking effect shall be deemed included in the residuary devise or bequest, if any, contained in such will. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1434, ch. 854, § 1631.)

Charitable bequests 1
Common law 2

Cy pres doctrine 4
Death of legatee 5

Trust funds 7
Vested remainder 8

1. Charitable bequests

Charitable bequest was not void for uncertainty. Washington Loan & Trust Co. v. Hammond (1922, 278 F. 569, 51 App. D.C. 260).

2. Common law

The common law still prevails in this District as to devises and bequests contained in the residuum. George Washington University v. Riggs Nat. Bank of Washington, D.C. (1937, 88 F. 2d 771, 66 App. D.C. 389).

At common law, a bequest of personalty which failed of distribution would go to the residuum or next of kin, but not so as to devises of realty. Id.

3. Construction

Where a bequest was made to a legatee and the legatee predeceased grantor and where the residuary clause distributed the residue including lapsed legacies to four institutions, the special bequest passes into the residuary estate and goes to the institution named. Bunker v. Jones (1950, 181 F. 2d 619, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 231).

4. Cy pres doctrine

The doctrine of "judicial cy pres" applies in the District of Columbia. Noel v. Olds (1944, 138 F. 2d 581, 78 U. S. App. D. C. 155, certiorari denied 64 S. Ct. 611, 321 U. S. 773, 88 L. Ed. 1067).

The doctrine of judicial cy pres is recognized in the District of Columbia but the facts of the case do not warrant the invocation of such doctrine. Roberds v. Markham (1949, 81 F. Supp. 38).

5. Death of legatee

Under will devising half of residuary estate to testatrix' sister who predeceased testatrix, that portion of residue went to sister's children rather than to heirs of the testatrix. Mitchell v. Merriam et al. (1951, 188 F. 2d 42, 88 U.S. App. D.C. 213, certiorari denied 71 S. Ct. 855, 341 U.S. 935, 95 L. Ed. 1363).

A sum bequeathed by will to testator's deceased brother's widow, who predeceased testator, goes to her issue on his death. Second National Bank of Washington v. Spinks (1954, 122 F. Supp. 153, affirmed 214 F. 2d 853, 94 U.S. App. D.C. 424).

Death of a specific legatee prior to death of the testator will "lapse" the legacy in the absence of a statute otherwise providing. Wolfe v. Snyder (1943, 48 F. Supp. 227).

6. Intent

Words of a will cannot be ignored in searching its meaning as the court must look within the four corners of the will for the intention of the testatrix and the language must be given effect. If and when read with other parts of the will such intent can be ascertained, the statute does not apply in this case. Pace v. Bradley (1949, 171 F. 2d 350, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 212).

7. Trust funds

Testamentary provision for issue of beneficiary for life of testamentary trust to take the balance of trust fund was a "different disposition made or required by will" within meaning of this section, and hence where beneficiary for life predeceased testatrix his issue took the trust fund outright. Wolfe v. Snyder (1943, 48 F. Supp. 227).

8. Vested remainder

Where will bequeathed to niece all household furniture, jewelry and other personal property, except cash, and bequeathed to brother all the rest, residue and remainder of estate except that if brother should predecease testatrix or for any other reason could not personally take residue, then it was to go to niece, testatrix's vested remainder in estate subject to life estate, passed to brother who survived testatrix but who along with niece, predeceased life tenant. Bank of Galesburg, etc. v. Lawrenson, Jr., etc., and Waters, etc. (1956, 240 F. 2d 31, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 345).

It shall be lawful for any person in whose possession or custody a will or codicil shall be after the death of the testator or testatrix, to open and read the same in the presence of any near relatives of the deceased, who may conveniently have notice thereof, and of other persons, and immediately thereafter to deliver such will or codicil to the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, holding a special term as a probate court, or to the register of wills, until due proceedings may be had for proving the same, or until it be demanded by an executor or other person authorized to demand it, for the purpose of having it proved according to law. (Mar. 3, 1901, ch. 854, § 1635a, as added June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 545, ch. 1329, and amended June 25, 1936, 49 Stat. 1921, ch. 804; June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 991, ch. 646, § 32(b); May 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 107, ch. 139, § 127).

CHANGE OF NAME

Act June 25, 1936, substituted "District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia" for "Supreme Court of the District of Columbia."

Act June 25, 1948, eff. Sept. 1, 1948, as amended by act May 24, 1949, substituted "United States District Court for the District of Columbia" for "District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia."

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Time for probate

While the statutes regulating the probate of wills provides no time within which probate shall be applied for, yet they contemplate that this shall be speedily done. McGowan v. Elroy (28 App. D.C. 188).

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Equitable estate 1
Presumption 2
Title, passage of 3

1. Equitable estate

Devise of equitable estate remaining in grantor, after he has created a naked power in one to convey an estate to another upon the performance of a condition. Mayer v. American Security & Trust Co. (33 App. D.C. 391, affirmed 32 S. Ct. 222 U.S. 295, 56 L. Ed. 206).

2. Presumption

In determining whether the property of a testator passes by his will, there is a presumption that he did not intend to die intestate, which presumption is greatly strengthened by words of general description in the residuary clause. Fairclaw v. Forrest (1942, 130 F. 2d 829, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 197, 143 A.L.R. 1154, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 531, 318 U.S. 756, 87 L. Ed. 1130).

3. Title, passage of Where property or interest is devisable at the time of testator's death, and testator has sufficiently indicated his testamentary intention to dispose of it, the will is effective to pass the title to the devisee. Fairclaw v. Forrest (1942, 130 F. 2d 829, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 197, 143 A.L.R. 1154, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 531, 318 U.S. 756, 87 L. Ed. 1130).

No devise or bequest of lands, or goods, or chattels to any minister, public teacher, or preacher of the gospel, as such, or to any religious sect, order, or denomination, or to or for the support, use, or benefit of or in trust for any minister, public teacher, or preacher of the gospel, as such, or any religious sect, order, or denomination, shall be valid unless the same shall be made at least one calendar month before the death of the testator. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1434, ch. 854, § 1635.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Construction 1
Dependent relative revocation 2
Sectarian institutions 3

1. Construction

Statute is to be strictly construed, since its purpose is to prevent improvident testamentary gifts to the exclusion of lawful heirs. Such a construction should be adopted which will prevent intestacy and not one which will render the will invalid. The doctrine of "dependent relative revocation" is to be applied to facts presented. In Re Nutting's Estate (1949, 82 F. Supp. 689, affirmed 187 F. 2d 357, 87 U.S. App. D.C. 351, 28 A.L.R. 2d 521).

2. Dependent relative revocation

Where two prior wills contained residuary devises identical with that in latest will, which will was drawn for purpose of correcting formal defects within 30 days of testatrix' death, and provisions in latest will for benefit of two religious institutions were invalid under statute rendering invalid testamentary gifts for benefit of any religious sect made within one month of death, religious institutions would be held entitled to receive devises for them under earlier wills under doctrine of "dependent relative revocation," and notwithstanding revocatory clause in latest will, on ground that testatrix did not intend that revocatory clause should be effective until new devise became effective. Linkins et al. v. Protestant Episcopal Cathedral Foundation of the District of Columbia et al. (1951, 187 F. 2d 357, 87 U.S. App. D.C. 351, 28 A.L.R. 2d 521).

3. Sectarian institutions

Georgetown College was not a sectarian institution, so that bequest made to it less than one calendar month before testator's death was not void. Speer v. Colbert (1906, 26 S. Ct. 201, 200 U.S. 130, 50 L. Ed. 403).

Every devise and bequest purporting to be of all real or personal property, or both, belonging to the testator shall be construed to include also all property of either or both kinds, respectively, over which he has a general power of appointment, unless the contrary intention shall appear in the will or codicil containing such devise or bequest. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1434, ch. 854, § 1633; June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 545, ch. 1329.)

AMENDMENT

1902—Act June 30, 1902, deleted a phrase, "and the legal title of all such property which he holds in trust," following the word "appointment."

A devise of the land of a testator, or of his land in any place, or in the occupation of a person named or otherwise described in a general manner, shall be construed to include his leasehold estates or any of them to which such descriptions shall extend, as well as freehold estates, unless a contrary intention shall appear by the will. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1434, ch. 854, § 1632.)

Any will executed after January 17, 1887, and before the first day of January 1902, devising real estate, from which it shall appear that it was the intention of the testator to devise property acquired after the execution of the will, shall be deemed, taken, and held to operate as a valid devise of all such property; and any will executed after January 1, 1902, which shall by words of general import devise all the estate or all the real estate of the testator shall be deemed, taken, and held to operate as a valid devise of any real estate acquired by said testator after the execution of such will, unless it shall appear therefrom that it was not the intention of the testator to devise such after-acquired property. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1433, ch. 854, § 1628; June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 545, ch. 1329.)

AMENDMENT

1902—Act June 30, 1902, added the first part of the section ending with the words "January 1, 1902."

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Intention 1
Passage by residuary clause 2
Property in entirety 3
Purpose 4
Residuary clause 5
Will, effective date 6

1. Intention

Although a testator may dispose by will of after-purchased lands, it is nevertheless necessary that his intention to make such disposition should clearly appear upon the face of the will. Bradford v. Matthews (9 App. D. C. 438).

Under act of June 30, 1902, a will is made to operate and take effect upon all real estate of the testator owned by him at the time of his death, unless it shall appear from the will that it was not the intention of the testator to devise such after-acquired property. Crenshaw v. McCormick (19 App. D. C. 494).

2. Passage by residuary clause

Any will containing a general residuary clause, or general devise of all of the testator's real property, sufficient under the old law to pass all real estate possessed at the time of its execution, would pass all after-acquired real estate as well. Taylor v. Leesnitzer (37 App. D.C. 356).

3. Property in entirety

A will by either spouse disposing of property held in entirety will be given effect when the other spouse dies first and the will remains unchanged and unrepublished until the death of the survivor. Fairclaw v. Forrest (1942, 130 F. 2d 829, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 197, 143 A.L.R. 1154, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 531, 318 U.S. 756, 87 L. Ed. 1130).

4. Purpose

The purpose of this section making wills executed after January 1, 1902, effective as to after-acquired real estate in absence of intention to contrary, was to make general words of devise effective without reference to the time of acquisition of property and not to change the nature of estates from inalienable or nondevisable to devisable ones. Fairclaw v. Forrest (1942, 130 F. 2d 829, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 197, 143 A.L.R. 1154, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 531, 318 U.S. 756, 87 L. Ed. 1130).

5. Residuary clause

Where will executed in 1928 stated that testatrix's husband had been excluded from benefits thereunder because all the real estate in which testatrix was interested was held in joint tenancy with husband and all of testatrix's earnings for 25 years had gone into such real estate, and the residuary clause devised all the residue, real, personal, and mixed, to testatrix's brother, and testatrix's husband thereafter died before testatrix whose will was not thereafter republished, the residuary clause was valid, as respects real estate theretofore owned by testatrix in joint tenancy with her husband who had predeceased testatrix. Fairclaw v. Forrest (1942, 130 F. 2d 829, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 197, 143 A.L.R. 1154, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 531, 318 U.S. 756, 87 L. Ed. 1130).

6. Will, effective date

Before the Wills Act of 1837 and the after-acquired property statutes, the testator could not devise realty which he did not own at the time he made his will because of the theory that a devise of realty took effect on the date of the execution of the will but so far as it formerly applied to exclude after-acquired property from the effects of the will, this section has overruled such theory and the will is effective as of the date of death. Fairclaw v. Forrest (1942, 130 F. 2d 829, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 197, 143 A.L.R. 1154, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 531, 318 U.S. 756, 87 L. Ed. 1130).

Upon the filing of a petition for probate of a will, notice, as hereinafter provided, shall be issued to all persons who would be entitled to or interested in the estate of the testator in case such will had not been executed to appear in said court on a date named in the notice, and to show cause why the prayer of the petition should not be granted.

(a) Such notice may be by a citation in which the return date named is not earlier than ten days after the filing of said petition, and which citation shall be served in the District of Columbia, by the United States marshal, or deputy marshal, not less than five days before the return day named in said citation.

(b) Such notice may be by a citation in which the return date named is not earlier than twenty days after the filing of said petition, and which citation shall be served not less than ten days before the return date named in said citation: Provided, That such citation may be served only on non-residents of the District of Columbia, and upon residents of said District who have been returned "Not to be found" under paragraph (a) of this section, and such service may be made only by a person not less than eighteen years of age who is not a party to or otherwise interested in the estate of the decedent, and the return in such case must be made under oath in the District of Columbia, unless the person making the service be a sheriff or deputy sheriff, a marshal or deputy marshal, authorized to serve process where service is made, and such return must show the time and place of service.

(c) Such notice, whenever there is proof by the petition for probate or by other affidavit that any or all of such persons, interested as aforesaid, are nonresidents of the District of Columbia, or whenever they or any of them have been returned "Not to be found" under paragraph (a) of this section, may be by a publication in which the return date named is not less than thirty days after the date of the first appearance of the publication, and which shall be published once in each of three successive weeks in some newspaper of general circulation in the District of Columbia, and a copy of this published notice shall be mailed to the last-known address of each of the persons, interested as aforesaid, who is not shown to have been returned served personally under either paragraph (a) or paragraph (b) of this section. The court may by general rule prescribe the form of such notice by publication, and may order such other publication as the case may require.

In all cases where it is made to appear to the satisfaction of the court that all or any of the next of kin or heirs at law of the deceased are unknown, such unknown next of kin or heirs at law may be proceeded against and described in the publication of notice hereinbefore provided for as "the unknown next of kin," or "the unknown heirs at law," as the case may be, of the deceased, and by such publication of such notice under such designation such unknown next of kin and heirs at law shall be as effectually bound and concluded as if known and their names were specifically set forth in said order of publication.

In case any will shall have been admitted to probate prior to June 30, 1902, upon publication against unknown heirs or next of kin, any person interested may file a petition for further probate of such will, alleging that the heirs at law or next of kin of the deceased, or some of them, as the case may be, are unknown, and upon satisfactory showing being made to the court publication of notice may be made against the unknown next of kin or heirs at law of the deceased; and upon such publication being made, as required by the court, a decree may be made confirming such previous probate, and such decree so made shall be as effectual as if the said heirs at law or next of kin were named in the order of publication. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1211, ch. 854, § 130; June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 526, ch. 1329; June 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 267, ch. 241, § 1.)

AMENDMENTS

1949—Act June 24, 1949, among other changes in the first paragraph, set out separately paragraphs (a), (b) and (c).

1902—Act June 30, 1902, struck out the following: "If the parties in interest, or any of them, be unknown, upon statement of that fact in the petition under oath, they may be described therein, and in the notice of publication, as the unknown heirs and next of kin of the decedent, with like effect as if known and specifically named in the petition, notice and proceedings," and inserted the last two paragraphs.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Jurisdiction of probate court 1
Law governing 2
Voluntary appearance 3
Waiver of citation 4

1. Jurisdiction of probate court

Probate court has been clothed with full and complete jurisdiction to take proof of wills of either personal or real estate, and to admit the same to probate and record, and Congress, having established this special court for this special purpose, intended its jurisdiction to be exclusive. Gracie v. American Security & Trust Co. (1922, 277 F. 543, 51 App. D.C. 141).

2. Law governing

The law of wills and of probate as existing in Maryland on February 27, 1801, was and is the law of the District of Columbia, except as since altered by Congress. Pascucci v. Alsop (1945, 147 F. 2d 880, 79 U.S. App. D.C. 354, certiorari denied 65 S. Ct. 1406, 325 U.S. 868, 89 L. Ed. 1987). See, also, In re Allen's Estate (1946, 64 F. Supp. 107).

3. Voluntary appearance

Where a petition alleged widower as only next of kin, upon whom service was had, and he appeared, filed a caveat, and the will was sustained, and thereafter publication was had for unknown heirs, and the widower moved to vacate the verdict on the ground that court was without jurisdiction because of failure to publish before framing the issues, jurisdiction attached to any person who voluntarily appeared. Lewis v. Luckett (32 App. D. C. 188, affirmed 31 S. Ct. 682, 221 U.S. 554, 55 L. Ed. 851).

4. Waiver of citation

Citation may be waived (see § 19-304) and such waiver of citation does not estop the filing of a caveat. Bowen v. Howenstein (39 App. D.C. 585, Ann. Cas. 1913E, 1179).

Any person, although not cited, who may be interested in sustaining or defeating the will may appear and support or oppose the application to admit the same to probate. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1212, ch. 854, § 133.)

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Sufficiency of interest

"Any interest, however slight, is sufficient to entitle a party to oppose a testamentary paper, and for like reason, such interest entitles a party to insist upon probate." Vestry of St. John's Parish v. Bostwick (8 App. D. C. 452).

Whenever it shall appear that any party interested as aforesaid is under age, or non compos, the court shall appoint a guardian ad litem to represent said party at the hearing of the application to admit the will to probate, and with authority to file a caveat, as he may be advised, in behalf of said party. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1212, ch. 854, § 138.)

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Appearance of incompetency

This section providing that whenever, in a proceeding to probate a will, it shall "appear" that a party interested is non compos mentis, the court may appoint a guardian with authority to file a caveat, did not authorize the filing of an amendment to a caveat to a will probated in 1953 alleging the incompetency of the son of testatrix in 1955, since the incompetency did not "appear" when the will was probated. Merchant v. Davies (1957, 244 F. 2d 347, 100 U.S. App. D.C. 258).

If all parties interested adversely to the will shall waive the notice aforesaid and consent that the will be admitted to probate and record, it may be so admitted to probate and record without the proceedings directed as aforesaid: Provided, That in no case shall any will or testament be admitted to probate and record save upon formal proof of its proper execution. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1212, ch. 854, § 135.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Proof 2
Waiver of citation 3

1. Jurisdiction of probate court

Probate court has exclusive jurisdiction to take proof of wills and to admit the same to probate and record. Gracie v. American Security & Trust Co. (1922, 277 F. 543, 51 App. D.C. 141).

2. Proof

Admission by caveator of formal execution of will does not dispense with necessity for proof thereof. National Safe Deposit, Sav. & Trust Co. v. Heiberger (19 App. D. C. 506).

3. Waiver of citation

Waiver of citation does not preclude subsequent filing of caveat. Bowen v. Howenstein (39 App. D.C. 585).

Waiver of citation does bring party within jurisdiction of court. Fardon v. Washington Loan & Trust Co. (44 App. D.C. 69).

When the notice as prescribed in section 19-301 has been completed in any case, the court shall proceed, if no caveat be filed, to take the proofs, or to consider the proofs theretofore taken, of the execution of the will. All the witnesses to such will who are within the District and competent to testify must be produced and examined, or the absence of any of them satisfactorily accounted for. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1211, ch. 854, § 131; June 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 267, ch. 241, § 2.)

AMENDMENT

1949—Act June 24, 1949, substituted "When notice as prescribed in section 19-301 has been completed in any case, the court shall proceed, if no caveat be filed, to take the proofs, or to consider the proofs theretofore taken, of the execution of the will" for "On the day appointed as aforesaid, or such subsequent day as the court may appoint, due proof of such publication and mailing being made, the court shall proceed to take proof of the will".

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Illiterate testators 1
Production of witnesses 2
Proof of signature 3

1. Illiterate testators

The same rule applies in cases of illiterate testators. Lippard v. Humphrey (28 App. D.C. 355, affirmed 28 S. Ct. 561, 209 U.S. 264, 52 L. Ed. 783, 14 Ann. Cas. 872).

2. Production of witnesses

"In all cases the subscribing witnesses, if living and within the jurisdiction, must be called to prove the fact of execution; and if it appears from their evidence that the will was formally executed and the testator competent, it must be admitted to probate." Lippard v. Humphrey (28 App. D.C. 355, affirmed 28 S. Ct. 561, 209 U.S. 264, 52 L. Ed. 783, 14 Ann. Cas. 872).

3. Proof of signature

"When any of the witnesses to a will has died, proof of his signature is sufficient prima facie proof of attestation of the will by him." Keely v. Moore (22 App. D. C. 9, affirmed 25 S. Ct. 169, 196 U.S. 38, 49 L. Ed. 376).

In case the will contains a devise of real estate, and any attesting witness thereto residing in the District is unable, from sickness, age, or other cause, to attend court, the register of wills may, with such will, attend upon said witness and take his testimony. If the testimony of resident attesting witnesses or witness to such will shall have been taken, and any other such witness to said will shall reside out of the District or be temporarily absent therefrom, but within the United States, it shall be sufficient to prove the signature of such witnesses so out of the District.

If the sole witnesses to such will shall be out of said District as aforesaid, or if one or more should be within the United States and one or more be in some foreign country, then it shall be sufficient to take the testimony of any one or all within the United States, as the court may determine, and to prove the signatures of those whose testimony is not required to be taken.

If all such witnesses shall be out of the United States, then it will be sufficient to take the testimony of such of them as the court may require, and to prove the signature or signatures of the others.

The testimony of such witnesses out of the District to be taken hereunder shall be under a commission issued by the court to one or more competent persons, and in such case the original will or codicil shall accompany the commission and be exhibited to the witnesses.

No notice need be given of the time and place of taking such testimony, unless in a case in which probate is opposed. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1211, ch. 854, § 132.)

Depositions 1
Evidence 2
Nonresident witness 3
Testimony of witness in foreign country 4

1. Depositions

Depositions can be substituted for oral testimony only by statutory authority. Hutchins v. Hutchins (41 App. D. C. 367).

2. Evidence

Declarations of testatrix made after execution of her will showing that she made a different disposition of her property are inadmissible, especially when there is no tendency to show want of mental capacity. Lipphard v. Humphrey (28 App. D.C. 355, affirmed 28 S. Ct. 561, 209 U.S. 264, 52 L. Ed. 783, 14 Ann. Cas. 872).

3. Nonresident witness

"Section 132 of the Code (this section) specifically provides that, if the testimony of the resident witness is taken and any other witness resides out of the District, it shall be sufficient to prove the signature of such nonresident witness, and that the will shall thereupon be admitted to probate." Scott v. Herrell (31 App. D. C. 45).

4. Testimony of witness in foreign country

D.C. Code 1901, § 1058 (§ 14-201) expressly provides that to take the testimony of a witness in a foreign country, letters rogatory shall issue, addressed to some court of record therein, accompanied by the interrogatories and cross-interrogatories propounded to the witness. Hutchins v. Hutchins (41 App. D.C. 367).

If, upon or prior to the hearing of the application to admit the will to probate, any party in interest shall file a caveat in opposition, duly verified, and setting forth facts inconsistent with the validity of the will, the said will shall not be admitted to probate until the issues raised by said caveat shall be determined, as hereinafter directed. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1212, ch. 854, § 136.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Burden of proof 1
Equitable remedies 2
Party in interest 3
Right to administer 4

1. Burden of proof

Under a caveat to a will challenging the mental capacity of the testator, whether before or after the will has been admitted to probate, the burden of proof on the issue whether the testator was of sound and disposing mind and capable of executing a valid deed or contract, is upon the caveator. Brosnan v. Brosnan (1923, 44 S. Ct. 117, 263 U.S. 345, 68 L. Ed. 332).

2. Equitable remedies

"Equity furnishes the only complete remedy in the exceptional class of cases * * * where the complex relief sought consists in setting aside a deed and will embracing the same property and the same parties, enjoining the beneficiaries * * * and declaring them trustees * * * with a general order for an accounting. This is true, even though there be * * * an adequate statutory remedy (this section and § 19-309)." Karrick v. Landon (41 App. D. C. 416).

3. Party in interest

A widow was a "party in interest" within meaning of this section so as to be permitted to file caveat against will, under circumstances, where will listed debts which were assertedly due testator's children, which might be barred by limitation but which, if allowed as first charge as directed, might depreciate value of widow's share, where there was a substantial issue as to testamentary capacity and named executor whom widow asserted had joined in procuring execution of will so as to list such claims, would, in first instance, pass on debts. Helen Rothenberg, Caveator, etc. v. A. Rothenberg (1959, 273 F. 2d 825, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 11).

Interest which caveator must possess to enable him to assail validity of will in District of Columbia is such that, had testator died intestate, caveator would have been entitled to distributive share in estate, and such share would be different from that which caveator would be entitled to if will were held valid. Kimberland v. Kimberland (1953, 204 F. 2d 38, 92 U.S. App. D.C. 145).

4. Right to administer

Where testatrix by purported will left her entire estate to her son, and estate included no realty in District of Columbia, and son offered will for probate in District of Columbia, husband of testatrix lacked necessary interest in estate to file a caveat, even though husband might be appointed administrator if will should be set aside, since husband would take same share of estate whether will was or was not sustained. Kimberland v. Kimberland (1953, 204 F. 2d 38, 92 U.S. App. D.C. 145).

If, upon hearing the proofs submitted, the court shall be of opinion that the will was duly executed and the testator was competent to execute the same, and no caveat shall be filed against the admission of the same to probate, the court shall decree that the said will be admitted to probate and record. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1212, ch. 854, § 134.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Sufficiency of interest 1
Time for filing 2

1. Sufficiency of interest

Where caveat of alleged widower of deceased testatrix was not filed in District of Columbia within three months allowed by statute as to personalty, and alleged widower had filed a renunciation of provisions of will and election to take his legal share as of intestacy under statute, and there were no children born of alleged marriage, so that alleged widower had no interest by curtesy, motion to dismiss caveat would be granted because not timely filed and because alleged widower had no interest sufficient to entitle him to maintain caveat. In re Phillips' Estate (1953, 111 F. Supp. 453).

2. Time for filing

Where caveat of alleged widower of deceased testatrix was not filed in District of Columbia within three months allowed by statute as to personalty, and alleged widower had filed a renunciation of provisions of will and election to take his legal share as of intestacy under statute, and there were no children born of alleged marriage, so that alleged widower had no interest by curtesy, motion to dismiss caveat would be granted because not timely filed and because alleged widower had no interest sufficient to entitle him to maintain caveat. In re Phillips' Estate (1953, 111 F. Supp. 453).

After a will has been admitted to probate, any person in interest shall have six months from the date of the order of probate in which to file a caveat to said will, praying that the probate thereof be revoked. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1212, ch. 854, § 137; June 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 268, ch. 243; July 14, 1960, 74 Stat. 553, Pub. L. 86-674, § 1.)

AMENDMENTS

1960—Act July 14, 1960, reduced the time within which a caveat may be filed from one year after the decree to six months from the date of the order of probate.

1949—Act June 24, 1949, eliminated provisions, which, in cases of wills of personal property, required a caveat to be filed within three months after the decree, permitted persons interested and actually served with process or personally appearing, in cases of wills of real estate, to file a caveat within one year of the decree, authorized persons interested who were returned "Not to be found" to file a caveat within two years of the decree, and which empowered minors to file caveats within one year after reaching the age of 21.

Section 2 of act July 14, 1960, provided that: "The amendment made by the first section of this Act [to this section] shall apply only to wills admitted to probate after the date of enactment of this Act [July 14, 1960]."

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Appeal 1
Appearance 2
Defense to compulsory accounting 3
Estoppel to file 4
Sufficiency of interest 6
Time for filing 7
Waiver 8

1. Appeal

Appellate court will not reach the question of fraud upon the merits because a caveator cannot raise on appeal an issue which he failed to pose as an issue to be tried in a caveat proceeding. Probate procedure in this jurisdiction gives any person in interest ample opportunity to raise by caveat, prior to the decree of probate, any issue he may wish to raise in respect of the validity of a will. Langston v. Schwartz (1949, 174 F. 2d 31, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 329).

2. Appearance

Signing of waiver constitutes appearance, but, by leave of court, same may be withdrawn. Fardon v. Washington Loan & Trust Co. (44 App. D. C. 69).

Signing of waiver brings one within one-year limitation, notwithstanding fact that there was a subsequent order of publication. Id.

3. Defense to compulsory accounting

After probate of a will and until revocation, executor is required to act in accordance with terms of will, and, in absence of wrongdoing on his part, is fully protected in so doing. Cashell v. Eslin (1944, 55 F. Supp. 747).

4. Estoppel to file

Whether receipt of legacy under will works an estoppel to file a caveat and effect of offer to return the same, see Craighead v. Alexander (38 App. D.C. 229).

5. Right to file

"The object of the section is to extend to the persons coming within its description a certain period within which to contest a will that has been regularly admitted to probate. As to them the probate is not a finality until the expiration of the prescribed periods. Until then the right to the caveat is absolute." Craighead v. Alexander (38 App. D. C. 229).

Waiver and consent does not deprive any person of right to file a caveat. Fardon v. Washington Loan & Trust Co. (44 App. D.C. 69).

6. Sufficiency of interest

The interest which a person must possess to enable him to assail the validity of a will is such that, had the testator died intestate, he would have been entitled to a distributive share in the estate. Angell v. Groff (42 App. D. C. 198).

Petition for caveat of will must show petitioner to be "next of kin," but also "person in interest." Naylor v. Mealy (1934, 67 F. 2d 693, 62 App. D.C. 321).

To be a person interested, a beneficiary under a prior will must show that, except for the effect of the later will, if valid, to revoke the earlier one, the latter remained the last will and testament of the testator until his death. Werner v. Frederick (1938, 94 F. 2d 627, 68 App. D.C. 158).

An heir, claiming by intestacy, may caveat a probated will regardless of possible effect of an earlier purported will which has not been proved or put in issue by any one claiming under it. Lonas v. Betts (1947, 160 F. 2d 281, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 55).

7. Time for filing

Where caveat to will probated in 1953 alleged that son of testatrix was incompetent when will was probated and proposed amendment alleged that incompetence was known or should have been known to the proponent and was not brought to the attention of the probate court, proposed amendment was properly rejected in view of the one-year statute of limitations on filing caveats, which contains no exceptions giving an incompetent or his committee a longer time than one year in which to file a caveat. Merchant v. Davies (1957, 244 F. 2d 347, 100 U.S. App. D.C. 258).

When the caveat was not filed until more than three months after the order of probate, the allegations of fraud, practiced in procuring the waiver of citation and service, were evidently made to excuse their failure to proceed within statutory period, and when further delayed for year and day, it was of no effect. Craighead v. Alexander (38 App. D. C. 229).

When person was legally alive for more than two years after the probate of his father's will, he was barred from caveating the will, and his heirs, having no rights which they could assert during his lifetime, are likewise barred. Angell v. Groff (42 App. D. C. 198).

The dismissal of a caveat to a will, which involved real and personal property, in so far as caveat was a caveat to a will of personal property, was proper where will was admitted to probate on July 5, 1938, and caveat was not filed until June 30, 1939. Hengesbach v. Hengesbach (1940, 114 F. 2d 845, 73 App. D.C. 1).

8. Waiver

Beneficiary of will of testator, by affixing her signature to document entitled "consent to probate and letters testamentary" did not unequivocally waive her statutory right to file a caveat on the ground that the waiver was founded upon consideration because of benefit conferred upon the beneficiary and by detriment incurred by the executors. McNamara v. Miller, Sr. et al. (1959, 269 F. 2d 511, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 64).

Beneficiary of will by affixing her signature to document entitled "consent to probate and letters testamentary" did not unequivocally waive her statutory right to file a caveat based on estoppel where the executors failed to demonstrate that damage would have resulted to them had the caveat been entertained. Id.

Beneficiary, by affixing her signature to document entitled "consent to probate and letters testamentary" did not unequivocally waive her statutory right to file a caveat on the ground that such waiver constituted a judicial admission, where the waiver was a statement of assertion or concession made for an independent purpose, thus not coming within the requirements of a judicial admission insofar as any issue pending before the court was concerned, and where there was no issue as to which the judicial admission could apply. Id.

While issues raised by a caveat are pending, either for trial or on appeal, no prior will shall be admitted to probate. (Mar. 3, 1901, ch. 854, § 137a, as added Apr. 19, 1920, 41 Stat. 557, ch. 153.)

The court may, in all cases of controversy therein, direct a plenary proceeding to be had, by bill or petition, to which there shall be answer under oath, which may be compelled by the usual process, and all the depositions shall be taken down in writing and filed; or, if either party shall require it, the court shall direct an issue to be made up to be tried by a jury. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1213, ch. 854, § 139.)

§ 19-312. Trial of issues as to wills—Trial by jury—Notice—Service to absent parties not essential for jurisdiction—Judgment.

Whenever any caveat shall be filed, issues shall be framed under the direction of the court for trial by jury: Provided, That in all cases in which all persons interested are sui juris and before the court the issues may be tried and determined by the court, without a jury, upon the written consent of all such parties. If they are to be tried by a jury, they shall be triable in said probate court by petit jurors drawn for service in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia; and at least ten days prior to the time of trial all of the heirs at law or next of kin of the decedent, or both together, as the case may require, and all persons claiming under the will in question, or any other instrument on file purporting to be a will of the decedent, shall be each served with a copy of said issues and a notification of the time and place of the trial thereof. If any one of them be an infant or of unsound mind he shall have a guardian ad litem appointed for him by the court before such trial shall proceed. If, as to any party in interest, the notification shall be returned "not to be found," the court shall assign a new day for such trial, and shall order publication, at least twice a week for a period of not less than four weeks, of the substance of the issues and of the date fixed for the trial thereof in some newspaper of general circulation in the District, and may order such further publication as the case may require. And the United States District Court for the District of Columbia may from time to time prescribe and revise rules and regulations for service personally upon such party outside of the District of Columbia of a copy of such issues and notification. Personal service on absent parties shall not be essential to the jurisdiction of the court. The proceeding for impaneling a jury for the trial of said issues shall be the same as if they were being tried in the court of appeals. In all cases in which such issues shall be tried the verdict of the jury and the judgment of the court thereupon shall, subject to proceedings in error and to such revision as the common law provides, be res judicata as to all persons; nor shall the validity of such judgment be impeached or examined collaterally. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1213, ch. 854, § 140; June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 526, ch. 1329; Apr. 19, 1920, 41 Stat. 557, ch. 153; June 25, 1936, 49 Stat. 1921, ch. 804; June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 991, ch. 646, § 32 (a), (b); May 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 107, ch. 139, § 127.)

AMENDMENTS

1920—Act Apr. 19, 1920, provided for service in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, and struck out a sentence following the sentence ending "of the court" and provisions which related.

1902—Act June 30, 1902, substituted "the substance of the issues and of the date fixed for trial thereof" for "a copy of the issues and notification of trial."

CHANGE OF NAME

Section 32(a) of act June 25, 1948, eff. Sept. 1, 1948, as amended by act May 24, 1949, substituted "court of appeals" for "Circuit Court."

Section 32(b) of act June 25, 1948, eff. Sept. 1, 1948, as amended by act May 24, 1949, substituted "United States District Court for the District of Columbia" for "District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia."

1. Burden of proof

"In the District of Columbia, under a caveat to a will challenging the mental capacity of the testator, whether before or after the will has been admitted to probate, the burden of proof on the issue whether the testator * * * was of sound and disposing mind and capable of executing a valid deed or contract, is upon the caveator." Brosnan v. Brosnan (1923, 44 S. Ct. 117, 263 U.S. 345, 68 L. Ed. 332).

2. Construction

Under § 6 of the act of Congress of June 8, 1898, the word "week" was not intended to mean the conventional week beginning with Sunday and ending with Saturday, but a period of seven consecutive days. Leach v. Burr (17 App. D.C. 128, affirmed 23 S. Ct. 393, 188 U.S. 510, 47 L. Ed. 567).

This section is still in force, notwithstanding Rule 38, U.S. Code, title 28, Appendix, relating to jury trials, demand therefor, and waiver thereof, in view of rule 81 following said section providing that rules do not apply to probate proceedings in the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia except to appeals therein, and hence the failure to demand jury trial in a will contest was not a "waiver" of the right thereto. In re Cottrill's Estate (1941, 39 F. Supp. 689).

Rule 1, § 2, of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia providing that in determining contested issues of law or fact or of law and fact in probate proceedings, District Court rules and federal procedural rules shall also govern procedure on motions, depositions, discovery and testimony and at hearing or trial of issues, does not purport to modify this section. Id.

Under 28 U. S. Code, former § 723b [now covered by 28 U. S. Code § 2072] providing that all laws in conflict with procedural rules shall be of no further force or effect, Rule 38, U.S. Code, title 28, Appendix, relating to jury trials, demand therefor, and waiver thereof is not applicable as such to will contests in the District of Columbia, and does not in effect repeal this section in view of Rule 82 providing that rules do not apply to probate proceedings in the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia except to appeals therein. Id.

3. Directed verdict

In proceeding to probate will, where there was no evidence of fraud sufficient to justify submission of such issue to jury the trial judge properly directed a verdict against caveators on such issue. Pollard v. Hawfield (1948, 170 F. 2d 170, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 374, certiorari denied 69 S. Ct. 514, 336 U.S. 909, 93 L. Ed. 1073, rehearing denied 69 S. Ct. 654, 336 U.S. 929, 93 L. Ed. 1089).

4. Discretion of court

In proceeding to probate will where it did not appear that physician had had any experience or training in mental illnesses or that he had ever treated or observed any paralytic case which had resulted in impairment of the mind and there was but little if any evidence in the record to indicate that either partial paralysis of the testatrix with its resultant confinement or advanced age of testatrix caused any impairment of mind, limiting testimony of physician as to paralysis and refusing to permit him to testify to effect of paralysis on mental faculties was not an abuse of discretion. Pollard v. Hawfield (1948, 170 F. 2d 170, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 374, certiorari denied 69 S. Ct. 514, 336 U.S. 909, 93 L. Ed. 1073, rehearing denied 69 S. Ct. 654, 336 U.S. 929, 93 L. Ed. 1089).

5. Evidence

Where probate of will naming testatrix's sister sole beneficiary was opposed on ground of undue influence and want of testamentary capacity, § 14-302 providing that if one of original parties to transaction or contract has died, the other party thereto shall not be allowed to testify to any declaration of the deceased in suit against personal representative of deceased did not require exclusion of testimony of testatrix's brother that testatrix had repeatedly agreed or promised in presence of others to leave him her real estate if he remained single and continued to live with her. Duckett v. Duckett (1943, 134 F. 2d 527, 77 U.S. App. D.C. 303).

The persons named as executors and legatees in an alleged will cannot, in order to probate the will, be permitted to utilize § 14-302 providing that if one of original parties to transaction or contract has died the other party thereto shall not be allowed to testify to any declaration of deceased in suit against personal representative of deceased. Id.

Testimony of testatrix' brother, who had made his home with her for 36 years, that testatrix had repeatedly agreed or promised in presence of others to leave him her real estate if he remained single and continued to live with her was admissible on issues of undue influence and testamentary capacity in opposition to probate of will naming testatrix's sister sole beneficiary. Id.

Where probate of will is opposed on ground of fraud and undue influence, it is not necessary that there be direct proof of undue influence. Id.

A finding that testator's subscription to purported will was procured by fraud, coercion, misrepresentation, undue influence, and pretension, executed by the sole beneficiary named in will, or some other person, was supported by sufficient evidence. Duckett v. Duckett (1945, 150 F. 2d 985, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 195).

Evidence supported finding that will had been procured by undue influence, duress or coercion by beneficiary, so that it should be denied probate. Martin v. Staples (1947, 164 F. 2d 106, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 370).

6. Harmless or prejudicial error

In will contest, refusal to permit attorney for testatrix to testify concerning instruction given him by testatrix on ground that communication was privileged was error. Sorrels v. Alexander (1944, 142 F. 2d 769, 79 U.S. App. D. C. 112).

Where witness was permitted to use notes to refresh her memory, refusal to strike out testimony of witness when it developed on cross-examination that some of notes were not made until two years after event about which witness testified was not reversible error where counsel failed to object to use of notes when witness asked if she might use them, and later when it developed that they had not been made contemporaneously, counsel not only failed to move that her testimony be stricken from record, but used her notes in argument to jury. Id.

In will contest, erroneous refusal to permit attorney for testatrix to testify concerning instructions given him by testatrix did not authorize reversal, where record did not show what was intended to be elicited from witness or time when the instructions were received. Id.

In will contest, where it was developed when counsel for testatrix was on witness stand that he had held in his possession, and not offered for probate for a period of two weeks wills of testatrix's brother-in-law and sister, remark of court that when will is left with an attorney to be filed "it ought to be filed immediately" was not prejudicial where judge in subsequent charge left jury free to determine, without comment on his part, weight to be given to the evidence. Id.

7. Instructions

In proceeding to probate will, refusal of requested prayers on presumption of undue influence and on testamentary capacity was not error where the charge given properly informed the jury as to the law. Pollard v. Hawfield (1948, 170 F. 2d 170, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 374, certiorari denied 69 S. Ct. 514, 336 U.S. 909, 93 L. Ed. 1073, rehearing denied 69 S. Ct. 654, 336 U.S. 929, 93 L. Ed. 1039).

8. Questions for jury

In proceeding for probate of will, where there was evidence that testatrix' sister, who was named sole beneficiary, after taking sole charge of testatrix first made false statements to other relatives with purpose and effect of inducing them not to visit testatrix and then allowed her to suppose, contrary to fact, that the other relatives were making no effort to see testatrix, doing nothing for her and showing no interest in her welfare, issues of fraud and undue influence were for the jury. Duckett v. Duckett (1943, 134 F. 2d 527, 77 U.S. App. D.C. 303).

In will contest, evidence on question whether testatrix at time of making and signing the will was of sound and capable mind was sufficient for jury. Sorrels v. Alexander (1944, 142 F. 2d 769, 79 U.S. App. D.C. 112).

In will contest, evidence on question whether will was obtained or procured by undue influence, duress or coercion was sufficient for jury. Id.

In will contest, evidence of fraud in procurement of will was sufficient for jury. Frene v. Muratori (1944, 142 F. 2d 768, 79 U. S. App. D. C. 101).

9. Review

Order framing issues is interlocutory only, and reviewable only by special appeal. Hutchins v. Hutchins (40 App. D.C. 180).

In proceeding to probate will where no exceptions were taken to the charge on undue influence and testamentary capacity, charge on such matters could not be attacked on appeal. Pollard v. Hawfield (1948, 170 F. 2d 170, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 374, certiorari denied 69 S. Ct. 514, 336 U.S. 909, 93 L. Ed. 1073, rehearing denied 69 S. Ct. 654, 336 U.S. 929, 93 L. Ed. 1039).

10. Stay by prohibition

Prohibition will not lie to stay proceedings under an order framing issue for trial by jury. In re Dahlgren (30 App. D. C. 588).

11. Trial

The trial proceeded when it was shown by the record that at the time the issues were framed and the trial fixed, and at the trial the caveatees were present in person and by their attorneys. Storey v. Storey (30 App. D. C. 41).

Any person interested under any will filed in the office of the register of wills for the District of Columbia prior to June 8, 1898, may offer the same for probate as a will of real estate, whereupon such proceedings shall be had as by this Code are authorized in regard to wills offered for probate after said date. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1213, ch. 854, § 141.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

In general 1
Effect of probate of wills 2
Equity jurisdiction 3
Jurisdiction 4

1. In general

This section is permissive and not mandatory. Young v. Norris Peters Co. (27 App. D. C. 140).

2. Effect of probate of wills

Stepgrandchildren of a decedent lacked standing to maintain action to annul marriage of decedent and to set aside conveyance of interest in realty to decedent's wife after marriage, since stepgrandchildren as such could not contest marriage alone, and their claim to realty rested upon will of decedent which devised realty to decedent's stepgrandchildren, but will was not probated so that stepgrandchildren could not take realty even if conveyance and marriage were voided. Norris v. Harrison (1952, 198 F. 2d 953, 91 U.S. App. D.C. 103).

3. Equity jurisdiction

Determination of title to real estate devised by will is within the general jurisdiction of a court of equity. Beyer v. Le Fevre (1902, 22 S. Ct. 765, 186 U.S. 114, 46 L. Ed. 1080).

4. Jurisdiction

By act of June 8, 1898, 30 Stat. 434, ch. 394, plenary jurisdiction was given the District Supreme Court of all questions as to wills devising real estate in the District of Columbia. Leach v. Burr (1903, 23 S. Ct. 393, 188 U.S. 510, 47 L. Ed. 567).

NOTES TO DECISIONS

- Compensation although disqualified 1
- Construction 2
- Derivation of probate system 3
- Discretion of court 4
- Disqualification or removal 5
- Fraud in securing appointment 6

1. Compensation although disqualified

Where petitioners failed to bring the disqualification of the administrator to the attention of the probate court until administration was almost completed, such administrator will be allowed reasonable commissions and compensation to date of appointment and qualification of his successor, including expenses and reasonable attorney's fees, and costs of the proceeding will be taxed against petitioners. In re Allen's Estate (1940, 30 F. supp. 243).

2. Construction

This section prohibiting granting of letters testamentary or of administration to person convicted of infamous crime is not discretionary, and if such disqualification is discovered after letters have been issued appointment should be revoked. Dial v. Johnson (1958, 259 F. 2d 189, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 32).

3. Derivation of probate system

The District of Columbia probate system is largely derived from Maryland, and, ordinarily, courts of the District follow Maryland decisions. Randall v. Bockhorst (1956, 232 F. 2d 334, 98 U.S. App. D.C. 77).

4. Discretion of court

Under District of Columbia statutes relating to appointment of administrators of decedents' estates, a court has discretion to select an administrator from outside the immediately preferred class, provided there is a sound reason to depart from the scheme of statutory preferences, but a next of kin who is not barred by specific statutory disqualification and who applies for letters of administration has a mandatory preference over a creditor or a person not in any preferred classification. Randall v. Bockhorst (1956, 232 F. 2d 334, 98 U.S. App. D.C. 77).

5. Disqualification or removal

In proceeding on petition for removal of administrator on ground that he had been convicted of an infamous crime, order refusing removal must be vacated and set aside in order that there could be an express judicial finding made as to whether administrator had been convicted as alleged, and order entered for his removal if finding was against him on that issue. Dial v. Johnson (1958, 259 F. 2d 189, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 32).

An order removing a disqualified administrator is a final appealable order. Perry v. Wilson (1931, 48 F. 2d 1021, 60 App. D.C. 109).

Petitioners whose knowledge of the disqualification of administrator existed at the time of his appointment are reprimanded by the court for failure to disclose it at that time. In re Allen's Estate (1940, 30 F. Supp. 243).

Conviction of conspiracy to violate the National Prohibition Act is sufficient to disqualify and cause removal of an administrator. Id.

6. Fraud in securing appointment

If trial court found that administrator had perpetrated fraud in securing appointment, trial court should exercise its discretion to determine whether fraud was a sound reason for it to depart from statutory scheme in designating administrator. Dial v. Johnson (1958, 259 F. 2d 189, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 32).

under twenty-one years of age, the bond executed by him for the faithful performance of his duties shall be as binding as if he were of full age. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1236, ch. 854, § 294.)

In case any will admitted to probate shall not appoint an executor, or the executor therein appointed shall have died or renounced the executorship, or shall be incompetent to serve, administration shall be granted with the will annexed to the person who would have been entitled to administration in case of the intestacy of the deceased testator: Provided, however, That if there be a residuary legatee named in such will, he shall be preferred to all, except a widow. And the condition of the bond of the administrator so appointed and the oath to be taken by him and his duties and liabilities shall be the same if he had been appointed executor in the will and had received letters testamentary. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1236, ch. 854, § 298.)

Whenever any person shall apply to the probate court for letters testamentary or of administration, he shall set forth, under oath, as fully as possible, all the personal and real estate left by the decedent and the amount of his debts as far as can be ascertained; and the penalty of the bond required of him, except in the cases provided for in sections 20-203, 20-302, 20-303, shall be sufficient to secure the proper application of all the personal estate of the testator or intestate; and when it shall become necessary to sell the real estate of the decedent, in part or in whole, the executor or administrator shall give such additional bond, with approved security, as shall be directed by the court, to secure the proper application of the proceeds arising from such sale or sales. And whenever an executor is empowered by the will to make sale of the real estate of the testator, for any purpose, he shall account for said proceeds in said court. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1236, ch. 854, § 295.)

If an executor or administrator shall die before the administration of the estate is completed, letters of administration de bonis non or de bonis non cum testamento annexo, as the case may require, shall be granted, in the discretion of the court, giving preference, however, to the person who would be entitled in the order given in sections 20-201 to 20-219, if he shall actually apply for the same; and the form of the letters shall be the same as in the case of an original administration, except that it shall be confined to the property of the deceased not already administered, and the authority shall be to administer all property herein described as assets and not distributed and delivered or retained by the executor or former administrators, under the court's direction. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1237, ch. 854, § 299.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Appointment of brother or mother 1
Discretion of court 2

1. Appointment of brother or mother

Where decedent's father was also his administrator, the appointment, at father's death, of brother as administrator, to exclusion of divorced mother, was proper. Haviland v. Harriss (1931, 50 F. 2d 1069, 60 App. D.C. 255).

2. Discretion of court

Under District of Columbia statutes relating to appointment of administrators of decedents' estates, a court has discretion to select an administrator from outside the immediately preferred class, provided there is a sound reason to depart from the scheme of statutory preferences, but a next of kin who is not barred by specific statutory disqualification and who applies for letters of administration has a mandatory preference over a creditor or a person not in any preferred classification. Randall v. Bockhorst (1956, 232 F. 2d 334, 98 U.S. App. D.C. 77).

§ 20-106. Will proved after letters granted—Letters revoked—Administrator's liability—Pending actions—Accounting—Prior distribution—Will declared invalid after distribution—Liability.

If administration be granted, and a will disposing of the estate of the deceased shall afterwards be proved according to law, and letters testamentary shall have issued thereon, the same shall be considered a revocation of the letters of administration. But the administrator shall not be held to answer for any acts done by him according to law, in good faith, and in ignorance of such will and before any actual or implied revocation of his letters; and the executor obtaining letters shall be authorized to prosecute any actions at law or in equity commenced by the administrator and obtain judgment in his own name, and likewise to defend any suit commenced against the administrator; and said executor shall have the benefit of all judgments obtained by the administrator and be bound by all judgments obtained against him to the extent of assets received by said executor, unless such judgments were obtained by fraud. And it shall be the duty of said administrator to account for and deliver to the executor without delay all goods, chattels, and personal estate and proceeds of any realty sold in his possession, belonging to the deceased, in default of which his bond may be put in suit by the executor or administrator cum testamento annexo.

And if distribution of the estate, or any part thereof, shall have been lawfully made by the administrator, the distributee or distributees, and their personal representatives, and not the administrator so distributing the estate, shall be answerable for the property so distributed, or its value, to the person or persons thereto entitled.

And if any will be hereafter adjudged invalid in any action begun after distribution of the estate, or any part thereof, lawfully made by the executor or executrix, in good faith and without knowledge on his or her part of the invalidity of such will, and without notice that such action was intended, the distributee or distributees of the property, and their personal representatives, and not such executor or executrix, shall be answerable for the property, or its value, to the person or persons thereto entitled. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1235, ch. 854, § 290; June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 528, ch. 1329.)

AMENDMENT

1902—Act June 30, 1902, changed the first part of the second sentence of the first paragraph before the semicolon which formerly read: "But all acts done by the administrator according to law, before any actual or implied revocation of his letters, shall be valid and effectual," and added the last two paragraphs of the section.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Defenses to compulsory accounting 1

Duty of executor 2

Effect of letters of administration 3

1. Defenses to compulsory accounting

That time within which a caveat to will could be filed by heirs not found within jurisdiction but given notice of application for probate of will by publication had not yet expired was not a sufficient defense to residuary legatee's action against executor to compel an accounting and distribution of residuary estate. Cashell v. Eslin (1944, 55 F. Supp. 747).

2. Duty of executor

After probate of a will and until its revocation, executor is required to act in accordance with terms of will, and, in absence of wrongdoing on his part, is fully protected in so doing. Cashell v. Eslin (1944, 55 F. Supp. 747).

3. Effect of letters of administration

Letters of administration granted on a petition setting out the existence of a will and averring that no proceedings had been taken for its probate and seeking no adjudication as to the will, and the order being silent on that point, is not an adjudication that decedent died intestate. Morris v. Foster (1922, 278 F. 321, 51 App. D.C. 238, certiorari denied 42 S. Ct. 586, 259 U.S. 582, 66 L. Ed. 1074).

A subsequent probate of the will and granting of letters testamentary revoke the letters of administration. Id.

§ 20-107. Removal of co-executor, co-administrator, or co-collector for negligence or misconduct—Complaint—Recovery of loss or damage.

If any joint executor, administrator, or collector shall apprehend that he is likely to suffer by the negligence or misconduct in the administration or the improper use or misapplication of the assets of the estate by any co-executor, co-administrator, or co-collector, he may make complaint to said court; and if said complaint shall be adjudged well founded, the court shall have authority, in its discretion, to revoke the powers and authority of the executor, administrator, or collector so complained of and to compel the delivery and surrender to the remaining executor, administrator, or collector of the assets and all books, papers, and evidences of debt of the estate that may be in the possession or control of the person so dismissed from the administration; and the remaining executors, administrators, or collectors shall be entitled to recover, in an action on the case, for any loss or damage they may suffer through the executor, administrator, or collector whose powers shall have been revoked as aforesaid. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1210, ch. 854, § 125.)

NOTE TO DECISION

Grounds for removal 1

Jurisdiction 2

1. Grounds for removal

This section providing that if any joint executor, administrator, or collector shall apprehend that he is likely to suffer by negligence or misconduct in administration or improper use or misapplication of assets of estate by any coexecutor, coadministrator, or cocollector, he may make complaint to court, and if complaint shall be adjudged "well founded," court shall have authority, in its discretion, to revoke powers and authority of executor, administrator, or collector, does not necessarily require that complaint be adjudged "well founded" in sense that there be a final determination on merits of question of ownership of controverted property, before removal can be had. Goldsborough v. Marshall (1957, 243 F. 2d 240, 100 U.S. App. D.C. 134).

Where husband of deceased wife and a daughter of deceased wife by former marriage were appointed as co-administrators of estate of deceased wife, and controversy arose as to whether certain realty standing in name of deceased wife and sum of money deposited in husband's name were in fact property of husband, and daughter filed a motion under this section as administrator for removal of husband as coadministrator, husband's removal was authorized by this section, on ground that daughter's complaint was "well founded." Id.

2. Jurisdiction

Where husband of deceased wife and one of deceased wife's daughters were appointed as coadministrators of estate of wife, and daughter filed motion for removal of husband as coadministrator, because of controversy as to whether realty standing in deceased wife's name and sum of money deposited in husband's name were in fact property of husband, and federal District Court entered first order removing husband and appointing a neutral party as administrator, and husband then appealed from first order, District Court had jurisdiction to enter second order appointing another neutral party as administrator, when first neutral party declined appointment. Goldsborough v. Marshall (1957, 243 F. 2d 240, 100 U.S. App. D.C. 134).

Whenever the probate court shall be satisfied that the bond already given by an executor or administrator is insufficient, the said executor or administrator may be required to file an additional bond, and on his failure to do so his letters may be revoked. And upon the revocation of letters testamentary or of administration under this provision, the executor or administrator whose letters are so revoked shall forthwith deliver to any substituted executor or administrator all the assets of his testator or intestate in his possession or under his control. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1236, ch. 854, § 296.)

CROSS REFERENCE

Bonds required of trust companies, see §§ 26-333, 26-334.

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Petition for additional bond

Court has power, upon petition of attorney who has contract with executrix for payment of a fee, but no lien on proceeds of judgment, alleging insolvency of executrix and her intention to remove the fund from the jurisdiction on its receipt, to require the executrix to give additional bond, or revoke her letters and thus prevent collection of judgment by her. Parish v. McGowan (39 App. D.C. 184, reversed on other grounds 35 S. Ct. 543, 237 U.S. 285, 59 L. Ed. 955). See, also, Cropper v. McLane (6 App. D.C. 119, dismissed 16 S. Ct. 1200, 163 U.S. 682, 41 L. Ed. 316).

If any surety of an executor or administrator shall apprehend himself to be in danger of suffering from the suretyship, he may apply to the probate court, and the said court may call upon the party to give counter security, to be approved by the court; and if the party so called on shall not, within a fixed reasonable time, give counter security, the court may order the property remaining in the hands of such executor or administrator to be delivered up to such surety, and the court may enforce the delivery by proper process; and an inventory of the property delivered to such surety shall be returned without delay, and the property contained in such inventory shall be by the said surety sold, distributed, and delivered up, as the case may require, under the immediate order of the court, as if such surety were executor or administrator; but inasmuch as it would be inconvenient to creditors and others interested in the estate, if there should be a double administration, the executor or administrator shall go on to discharge his trust, unless the court revoke his letters for some just cause, as hereinbefore directed, and he shall be answerable for the property in the same manner as if it were not on his default as aforesaid delivered to the surety; and he shall be entitled to sue the said surety and recover damages in case he shall suffer from the misconduct of such surety, in diminishing any part of the property, without obtaining an allowance for the same from the court; and the said surety shall bring into court, to be deposited with the register of wills, the money arising from the sale of any property as aforesaid, to be applied according to the meaning of this code. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1211, ch. 854, § 128.)

NOTE TO DECISION

1. "Property" defined

Term "property" as herein used includes the proceeds of the sale of property. In re McKnight's Estate (1 App. D. C. 28).

On the application of an administrator de bonis non the court may order the executor or the administrator of a deceased executor or administrator to deliver over to him all the personal property that was in the hands of the said deceased executor or administrator, as such, and also all the money, bonds, notes, accounts, and evidences of debt which the said deceased executor or administrator may have taken, received, and had at the time of his death, including the proceeds of sale of either personal or real estate made by said deceased executor or administrator, which shall be deemed unadministered assets. CROSS REFERENCE

On the failure of said executor or administrator to comply with said order by a day named, the court may enforce its order by attachment against such executor or administrator, and may direct the bond of the deceased executor or administrator, or that of the executor or administrator so failing, or both, to be put in suit for the use of the administrator de bonis non. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1237, ch. 854, § 302.)

§ 20-112. Liability of executor or administrator of a deceased executor or administrator for conversion of property of estates.

All and every the executor and executors, administrator or administrators of an executor or administrator of right, who shall waste or convert to his own use, goods, chattels, or estate of his testator or intestate, shall from henceforth be liable and chargeable in the same manner as his or their testator or intestate should or might have been. (4 and 5 Wm. and Mary, ch. 24, § 12, 1692; Alex. Br. Stat., p. 585; Comp. Stat. D. C., p. 41, § 180.)

CODIFICATION

This section sets forth a British statute continued in force by virtue of act Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1189, ch. 854, § 1.

Whenever, under the provisions of a will, it shall be necessary for an executor or an administrator cum testamento annexo to retain in his hands the personal estate or any part thereof after all just claims are discharged, as where money or some other thing is directed to be paid at a distant period or upon a contingency, the probate court shall have the power, on the application of such executor or administrator or of a party interested, to decree or give directions in relation thereto; and it shall be the duty of said executor or administrator to apply to the said probate court, and the said court shall have full power to decree or direct what part of the personal estate shall be retained or appropriated for the purpose and in what manner it shall be disposed of, and the legacy or benefit intended by the will shall be secured to the person to be entitled at a future period or contingency, and how the necessary part of the personal estate to be appropriated for the purpose shall be prevented from lying dead or being unproductive, and how it shall be applied, agreeably to the intent of the will or the construction of law, in case the contingency shall not take place. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1248, ch. 854, § 369.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Duties of executor 1
Status of executor 2

1. Duties of executor

Under a bequest of the income of a fund to a life tenant, with remainder over, it is the duty of the executor to invest the fund, pay the income to the person entitled for life, and preserve the principal for the remainderman. Payne v. Robinson (26 App. D.C. 283, 6 Ann. Cas. 784).

2. Status of executor

"The executor does not cease to be executor because the period of administration, so called, may be passed. He is still executor as long as he has anything under the will to execute." Marfield v. McCurdy (25 App. D. C. 342).

"The principal difference between an executor during the period of administration and an executor after the lapse of the period of administration is that the former is responsible to the probate court for the faithful execution of his trust, the latter to a court of equity." Id.

The probate court may, in its discretion, authorize any fiduciary accountable to it to continue any business of the decedent for a period of twelve months after decedent's death: Provided, That, upon good cause shown, the probate court may, in its discretion, extend the said period. No order shall be entered so authorizing a fiduciary until he shall have filed a petition under oath, supported by the affidavits of two reputable persons familiar with the decedent's business, setting forth the appraised value of the business, whether the decedent conducted it at a profit or loss and the approximate amount thereof, and the estimated amount of the expenses per month necessary to be incurred in order to continue the business. Any fiduciary who is given such authorization shall file monthly statements showing all receipts and disbursements, debts contracted and obligations incurred, and the profit or loss; and the court, in its discretion, may order the discontinuance of the business at any time.

Debts contracted and obligations incurred by the fiduciary in so continuing the business of the decedent shall be deemed to be an expense of administration of the estate. (Mar. 3, 1901, ch. 854, § 123a, as added Apr. 19, 1920, 41 Stat. 556, ch. 153, and amended June 18, 1953, 67 Stat. 66, ch. 131, § 1.)

AMENDMENTS

1953—Act June 18, 1953, empowered the probate court upon good cause shown, to extend the period to continue a business.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Computation of commissions 1
Continuing business 2

1. Computation of commissions

No case is made for payment to executor in operating decedent's business over and above the amount already permitted by the Code. Stoner v. Doherty (1950, 182 F. 2d 673, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 368).

2. Continuing business

Executor is not required to continue the business of a decedent although he followed the appropriate practice in obtaining the approval of the court to do so. Stoner v. Doherty (1950, 182 F. 2d 673, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 368).

§ 20-117. Executor's or administrator's bond—Recording—Copies—Ex rel. actions upon—Actions by subsequent administrator—Actions by creditors.

Every bond executed by an executor or administrator shall be recorded in the office of the register of wills; and any person conceiving himself to be interested in the administration of the estate shall be entitled to have or demand a copy of such bond, under the hand and seal of the register of wills, on which an action may be maintained, in the name of the United States, for the use of the party interested, and judgment may be recovered in such action for the damage actually sustained. And an administrator appointed in the place of an executor or administrator who has resigned, been removed, or whose letters have been revoked, may in like manner maintain an action against the executor or former administrator and his sureties, on his administration bond, for all loss and damage to the estate resulting from this breach of duty. No creditor shall be entitled to maintain an action on a testamentary or administration bond for any claim against a testator or intestate until, when practicable, an action has been commenced against the executor or administrator of the deceased and a summons issued therein has been returned "Not to be found," or a writ of fieri facias or of attachment, issued on a judgment against such executor or administrator, has been returned "nulla bona," or until such apparent insolvency of the executor or administrator or insufficiency of his effects as in the judgment of the court before which such action may be tried shall show the said creditor to be without remedy except by such action on the executor's or administrator's bond. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1236, ch. 854, § 297; June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 529, ch. 1329.)

AMENDMENT

1902—Act June 30, 1902, inserted the words "when practicable" after the word "until."

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Actions within section 1
Construction by Maryland Court 2
Effect of judgment 3
Execution and return 4
Special undertaking 5

1. Actions within section

This section was inapplicable to action against an executrix, on a special bond, to recover value of a note executed by testator. Hawley v. Hawley (1940, 114 F. 2d 745, 72 App. D. C. 376).

This section governs actions on general bonds and the normal "administration of estates" which involves the collection, management, and distribution of estate, including legal proceedings necessary to satisfy claims of creditors, next to kin, legatees, or whatever other parties may have any claim to property of a deceased person. Id.

2. Construction by Maryland court

A decision of the Maryland Court of Appeals interpreting Maryland statute from which a section of District of Columbia Code was derived was not controlling because rendered after law was adopted by the District, but was persuasive of proper interpretation of the District statute. Hawley v. Hawley (1940, 114 F. 2d 745, 72 App. D.C. 376).

3. Effect of judgment

Whether a judgment or decree against an administrator is conclusive evidence of the debt in an action against the surety on his bond, although the preponderance of authority seems to affirm that it is, see Bonding Co. v. United States ex rel. Paynter (23 App. D.C. 535).

4. Execution and return

"The requirement of execution and return was satisfied, notwithstanding the return was made the next day after issue, by order of the plaintiff's attorney." Bonding Co. v. United States ex rel. Paynter (23 App. D. C. 535).

5. Special undertaking

That executor with consent of residuary legatee gave a special undertaking instead of a general bond did not affect executor's obligation to account to residuary legatee and make distribution of such legatee's share of residuary estate within a reasonable time after such residue could be determined. Cashell v. Eslin (1944, 55 F. Supp. 747).

The giving of a special undertaking by executor creates a personal obligation to creditors and legatees not present where a general bond is given. Cashell v. Eslin (1944, 55 F. Supp. 747).

In the case of the grant of either original or ancillary letters testamentary, or of administration, or of collection, or of guardianship, the person designated shall, if a nonresident of the District of Columbia, file in the office of the register of wills, before the issuance of such letters, an irrevocable power of attorney designating the register of wills and his successors in office as the person upon whom all notices and process issued by any competent court in the District of Columbia may be served, with like effect as personal service, in relation to any suit, matter, cause, or thing affecting or pertaining to the estate in which the letters are issued. It shall be the duty of said register of wills to forthwith forward by registered mail to the address of such fiduciary, which shall be stated in said power of attorney, any notice or process served upon said register as aforesaid.

In the event that any fiduciary shall fail to file such power of attorney within ten days after the passing of the order of appointment, such order shall thereupon stand revoked, and he shall forfeit all rights to the office. (Mar. 3, 1901, ch. 854, § 308a, as added Apr. 19, 1920, 41 Stat. 562, ch. 153.)

If any person, after having accepted the office of executor or administrator, shall desire to retire from and resign the same, he may file his petition to that effect, accompanied by a full and particular account, under oath, of his receipts and disbursements, if any, and the court shall thereupon direct such notice as it may think proper to be given of said application, and, if no cause be shown to the contrary, may release and discharge him from his office and pass such order as to costs and commissions and impose such terms in other respects as the nature of the case may require: Provided, That such executor or administrator shall not, by said discharge, be released from any liability for past acts, defaults, or omissions of duty. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1235, ch. 854, § 292.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

- Contents of petition 1
- Discretion of court 2
- Eligibility 3
- Property 4
- Removal of administrator 5

1. Contents of petition

Where petition of sister of deceased in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia properly asked for letters of administration and necessarily claimed that deceased died intestate because his holographic will was unwitnessed, the petition did not make two claims and had only one purpose, namely, the securing of administration, though it prayed that the holographic will be denied probate and record, and therefore appeal of sister from order denying motion for rehearing would not be dismissed, on ground that it offended Federal Rule of Civil Procedure, Rule 54(b), U.S. Code, title 28, Appendix, providing that when more than one claim for relief is presented, court may direct entry of final judgment on one or more but less than all of the claims only on expressed determination that there is no just reason for delay and on express direction for entry of judgment. Shafer v. Children's Hospital Society of Los Angeles, Calif. (1959, 285 F. 2d 107, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 123).

2. Discretion of court

Under District of Columbia statutes relating to appointment of administrators of decedents' estates, a court has discretion to select an administrator from outside the immediately preferred class, provided there is a sound reason to depart from the scheme of statutory preferences, but a next of kin who is not barred by a specific statutory disqualification and who applies for letters of administration has a mandatory preference over a creditor or a person not in any preferred classification. Randall v. Bockhorst (1956, 232 F. 2d 334, 98 U.S. App. D.C. 77).

3. Eligibility

Consul of Greece in the city of Washington entitled to sole administration of estate of deceased national. (See notes to § 20-107.) Diamantopoulos v. Glekas (1926, 11 F. 2d 200, 56 App. D.C. 151).

Appointment of administrator in Virginia does not imply a finding of domicile in Virginia. In re Grinnage's Estate (1939, 101 F. 2d 695, 69 App. D.C. 370).

Appointment of administrator in Virginia does not prevent granting of letters of administration of personality in the District by the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia. Id.

4. Property

A claim against the United States does not furnish the foundation for a local administration when the decedent was domiciled in another jurisdiction at the time of his death. In re Coit's Estate (3 App. D. C. 246).

A government check in the possession of the treasurer of the United States, payable to a particular person, is for jurisdictional purposes personal property in the District of Columbia. In re Grinnage's Estate (1939, 101 F. 2d 695, 69 App. D.C. 370).

5. Removal of administrator

Unless power of probate court to remove an administrator for a particular cause can be found in this chapter or by necessary inference therefrom, it does not exist. Perkins v. Berger (1945, 145 F. 2d 856, 79 U.S. App. D.C. 286).

The fact that administratrix asserted a stale claim against deceased's estate did not authorize removal of administratrix. Id.

Every administrator, except corporations authorized to act as administrators, shall, before entering on his duties, file in the probate court his bond to the United States, with security approved by the court, in such penalty as the court shall direct, with condition to administer according to law all the money, goods, chattels, rights, and credits of the deceased; and when the court shall have ordered the sale of the decedent's real estate, he shall give a like bond conditioned to administer the proceeds of the real estate that may be sold for the payment of the decedent's debts which shall come into his possession, or to the possession of any other person for him, and in all other respects perform the trust reposed in him, and shall also take and subscribe an oath similar to that prescribed for executors. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1234, ch. 854, § 274.)

CROSS REFERENCE

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Consular officer

A bond is required where Greek consul is appointed administrator of estate of deceased national. Diamantopoulos v. Glekas (1926, 11 F. 2d 200, 56 App. D.C. 151).

If the person appointed as administrator shall be entitled to the residue of the estate after the payment of the debts, he may, instead of the bond herein provided for, execute a bond, with security approved by the court, in such penalty as the court may consider sufficient, conditioned for the payment of all the debts and claims against the deceased, and all damages which shall be recovered against him as administrator; and where the administrator shall file the consent in writing of those entitled to the residue and they shall all be of full age, the court may, if it sees fit, direct that only such special bond be given, and in such cases the administrator shall not be required to return any inventory or account, but shall be personally answerable for all debts, claims, and damages that may be recovered against him, in like manner as the executor who gives a similar bond: Provided, That the surety or sureties in said bond shall not be liable for a greater amount than the penalty thereof. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1234, ch. 854, § 275; June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 528, ch. 1329.)

AMENDMENT

1902—Act June 30, 1902, added the clause beginning with the words "and where" and ending with the words "be given."

CROSS REFERENCE

Bonds required of trust companies, see §§ 26-333, 26-334.

NOTE TO DECISION

1. In general

Where ordinarily dispute involved in action by widow against administrator to recover her distributive share of estate would be within jurisdiction of federal District Court for the District of Columbia sitting as a Court of Probate, but action was brought in Municipal Court of the District of Columbia because administrator had given a special bond, which relieved him from accounting and made personally answerable for debts and claims against estate, and it was determined that widow was entitled to prevail, administrator was not entitled to allowance of attorneys' fees. Ashton v. Ashton (D.C. Mun. App. 1955, 117 A. 2d 459).

If the intestate leave a widow or surviving husband and a child or children, administration, subject to the discretion of the court, shall be granted either to the widow or surviving husband or to the child, or one or more of the children qualified to act as administrator, and further subject to the discretion of the court as follows: (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1234, ch. 854, § 276; Apr. 19, 1920, 41 Stat. 561, ch. 153.)

AMENDMENT

1920—Act Apr. 19, 1920, added the words "or surviving husband."

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Appointment of outsider 1
Caveat 2
Right to appointment 3
Widow's preference 4

1. Appointment of outsider

Under this section providing that, if intestate leaves widow or child, administration shall be granted either to widow or child, appointment of complete outsider as administrator was not justified, even though widow had failed in earlier proceeding to establish documents proffered by her as decedent's will and was seeking to charge estate with expenses of that proceeding and relations between widow and decedent's child were strained. Brooks v. De Lacy etc. (1958, 257 F. 2d 227, 103 U.S. App. D.C. 223).

2. Caveat

Where testatrix by purported will left her entire estate to her son, and estate included no realty in District of Columbia, and son offered will for probate in District of Columbia, husband of testatrix lacked necessary interest in estate to file a caveat, even though husband might be appointed administrator if will should be set aside, since husband would take same share of estate whether will was or was not sustained. Kimberland v. Kimberland (1953, 204 F. 2d 38, 92 U.S. App. D.C. 145).

3. Right to appointment

These statutory regulations imply a right to appointment upon the part of the described parties, in the absence of disqualification, and consequently after they are once regularly appointed and qualified they can not be removed without notice and a trial. Brosnan v. Brosnan (1923, 289 F. 547, 53 App. D.C. 149).

In the absence of competent relatives or creditors administration shall be granted at the discretion of the court. Diamantopoulos v. Glekas (1926, 11 F. 2d 200, 56 App. D.C. 151).

4. Widow's preference

Under District of Columbia law, a widow has a statutory preference to letters of administration, but this preference is subject to court's discretion. Randall v. Bockhorst (1956, 232 F. 2d 334, 98 U.S. App. D.C. 77).

Where District Court revoked letters of administration granted to decedent's sister, and it appeared that decedent's widow had a claim against major portion of estate, had been long separated from decedent and had delayed a year after death before seeking to be appointed administratrix, district court should have considered an alternative to appointment of widow as administratrix. Id.

If there be a widow or surviving husband and no child, the widow or surviving husband shall be preferred, and next to the widow or surviving husband or children a grandchild shall be preferred. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1234, ch. 854, § 277; Apr. 19, 1920, 41 Stat. 561, ch. 153.)

AMENDMENT

1920—Act Apr. 19, 1920, added the words "or surviving husband."

NOTES TO DECISIONS

1. Widow's preference

Under District of Columbia law, a widow has a statutory preference to letters of administration, but this preference is subject to court's discretion. Randall v. Bockhorst (1956, 232 F. 2d 334, 98 U.S. App. D.C. 77).

Where District Court revoked letters of administration granted to decedent's sister, and it appeared that decedent's widow had a claim against major portion of estate, had been long separated from decedent and had delayed a year after death before seeking to be appointed administratrix, district court should have considered an alternative to appointment of widow as administratrix. Id.

If there be neither widow or surviving husband, nor child, nor grandchild to act, the father shall be preferred; and if there be no father, the mother shall be preferred. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1234, ch. 854, § 278; Apr. 19, 1920, 41 Stat. 561, ch. 153.)

AMENDMENT

1920—Act Apr. 19, 1920, added the words "or surviving husband."

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Brother or mother

Appointment of decedent's brother as administrator de bonis non upon death of decedent's father and administrator, held properly within discretion of court on motion of divorced mother for removal. Haviland v. Harriss (1931, 50 F. 2d 1069, 60 App. D.C. 255).

If there be neither widow or surviving husband, nor child, nor grandchild, nor father, nor mother to act, brothers and sisters shall be preferred. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1234, ch. 854, § 279; Apr. 19, 1920, 41 Stat. 561, ch. 153.)

AMENDMENT

1920—Act Apr. 19, 1920, added the words "or surviving husband."

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Discretion of court 1 Nonresident alien 2

1. Discretion of court

Under District of Columbia statutes relating to appointment of administrator of decedents' estates, a court has discretion to select an administrator from outside the immediately preferred class, provided there is a sound reason to depart from the scheme of statutory preferences, but a next of kin who is not barred by specific statutory disqualification and who applies for letters of administration has a mandatory preference over a creditor or a person not in any preferred classification. *Randall v. 2. Nonresident alien

Brother of deceased alien who was naturalized preferred to widow and parents who are nonresident aliens. Lely v. Kalinoglu (1935, 76 F. 2d 983, 64 App. D.C. 213, 100 A.L.R. 1523, certiorari denied 55 S. Ct. 925, 295 U.S. 765, 79 L. Ed. 1707).

If there be neither widow or surviving husband, nor child, nor grandchild, nor father, nor mother, nor brother, nor sister, the next of kin shall be preferred. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1234, ch. 854, § 280; Apr. 19, 1920, 41 Stat. 562, ch. 153.)

AMENDMENT

1920—Act Apr. 19, 1920, added the words "or surviving husband."

Males shall be preferred to females in equal degree. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1234, ch. 854, § 281.)

Relations of the whole-blood shall be preferred to those of the half-blood in equal degree, and relations of the half-blood shall be preferred to relations of the whole-blood in a remoter degree. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1234, ch. 854, § 282.)

Relations descending shall be preferred to relations ascending, in the collateral line; that is to say, for example, a nephew shall be preferred to an uncle. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1234, ch. 854, § 283.)

None shall be preferred in the ascending line beyond a father or mother, or in the descending line below a grandchild. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1234, ch. 854, § 284.)

A feme sole shall be preferred to a married woman in equal degree. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1235, ch. 854, § 285.)

Relations on the part of the father shall be preferred to those on the part of the mother, in equal degree. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1235, ch. 854, § 286.)

If any person described in sections 20-204 to 20-216 should be incompetent to serve, then administration shall be granted as if such person were not living. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1235, ch. 854, § 287.)

If there be no relations, or those entitled decline or refuse to appear and apply for administration, on proper summons or notice, administration may be granted to the largest creditor applying for the same; and if creditors neglect to apply, it may be granted at the discretion of the court. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1235, ch. 854, § 288.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Appointment by other court 1
Date of appointment 2
Discretion of court 3
Remand for further proof 4
Statutory scheme 5
Validation of acts 6

1. Appointment by other court

The validity of appellee's appointment as administratrix by the New Jersey court is not an essential condition to her appointment as administratrix ad litem. Welch v. Welch (1927, 19 F. 2d 686, 57 App. D.C. 212).

2. Date of appointment

Where one has so conducted himself by management of a business and sale of assets belonging to a decedent that he becomes an executor de son tort, his subsequent appointment as administrator reflects back to the death of the decedent. Penn v. Whidden (D. C. Mun. App. 1945, 42 A. 2d 136).

3. Discretion of court

Under District of Columbia statutes relating to appointment of administrators of decedents' estates, a court has discretion to select an administrator from outside the immediately preferred class, provided there is a sound reason to depart from the scheme of statutory preferences, but a next of kin who is not barred by specific statutory disqualification and who applies for letters of administration has a mandatory preference over a creditor or a person not in any preferred classification. Randall v. Bockhorst (1956, 232 F. 2d 334, 98 U.S. App. D.C. 77).

4. Remand for further proof

Where creditor filed petition for administration of deceased's estate stating that after diligent search, creditor was satisfied that deceased died intestate and without surviving relation, and District of Columbia relied upon allegations of creditor's petition, pleadings and evidence were insufficient to authorize probate court to determine whether the District was entitled to distribution under escheat statute, § 18-717, and case was remanded for determination of question whether intestate died without heirs. Frazier v. Kutz, (1944, 139 F. 2d 380, 78 U.S. App. D. C. 241).

5. Statutory scheme

This section setting forth scheme as to who shall be appointed administrator, court may in its discretion depart from the statutory scheme where there is a sound reason to do so. Dial v. Johnson (1958, 259 F. 2d 189, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 32).

6. Validation of acts

Where one has so conducted himself by management of business and sale of assets belonging to a decedent that he becomes an executor de son tort, his subsequent appointment as administrator validates any previous acts which would have been valid if done after his appointment and his acts as executor de son tort, though void, are thereby made valid. Penn v. Whidden (D. C. Mun. App. 1945, 42 A. 2d 136).

Upon any application for letters of administration, such notice thereof shall be given, by publication or otherwise, as the rules of the court may require. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1235, ch. 854, § 289; June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 528, ch. 1329.)

AMENDMENT

1902—Act June 30, 1902, deleted the words "but it shall not be necessary to notify any collateral relatives more remote than brothers and sisters of the intestate" following "may require."

If any person entitled to administration shall, in writing, decline the same, the court shall proceed as if such person were not entitled. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1235, ch. 854, § 291.)

The form of letters of administration shall be as follows:

District of Columbia, to wit:

The United States of America.

To all persons to whom these presents shall come, greeting:

Know ye that administration of the goods, chattels, and credits of ———, late of ———, deceased, is hereby granted and committed unto ———, of ———.

AMENDMENT

1902—Act June 30, 1902, changed the word "present" to "presents."

CHANGE OF NAME

Act June 25, 1936, substituted "District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia" for "Supreme Court of the District of Columbia."

Act June 25, 1948, eff. Sept. 1, 1948, as amended by act May 24, 1949, substituted "United States District Court for the District of Columbia" for "District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia", and "Chief Judge" for "Chief Justice."

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Ancillary letters 1
Liability of executor 2

1. Ancillary letters

Where testatrix, who was domiciled in Michigan and whose estate and beneficiaries were largely in Michigan but who had intangible property in District of Columbia, named resident of District of Columbia, as sole executor, but Michigan court appointed Michigan resident as administrator with will annexed, because Michigan law forbids appointment of a nonresident executor, it was within discretion of District of Columbia court to appoint the Michigan executor as ancillary administrator. Purcell v. Cramton (1944, 143 F. 2d 22, 79 U.S. App. D.C. 99).

The requirement of this section that when any will shall have been authenticated and admitted to probate letters testamentary thereon shall be issued to the executor named therein, if he is legally competent and will accept the trust, does not apply to ancillary letters. Id.

2. Liability of executor

An executor executing a general bond is responsible for payment of debts and claims to extent of assets collected only, and cannot be sued on general bond until determination is made of the extent to which creditors can be paid from assets. Hawley v. Hawley (1940, 114 F. 2d 745, 72 App. D. C. 376).

Whenever a testator shall, by last will and testament, request that his executor be not required to give bond for the performance of his duty, in such case the bond required of the executor shall be in such penalty as the court may consider sufficient to secure the payment of the debts due by the testator: Provided, however, That the penalty of such bond shall not exceed double the value of the personal estate; and when less than this sum it may be increased, or an additional bond may be required, whenever it shall be made to appear to the court that the bond as given is insufficient to secure the payment of the debts of the testator: And provided further, That whenever any party interested shall make it appear to the court that any executor who has given such bond only as is herein provided for is wasting the assets of the estate, or that the assets are in danger of being lost, wasted, or misappropriated, then the said executor may be removed or required to give additional bond with security in a penalty sufficient to secure the interests of all the creditors, distributees, and legatees entitled to take said estate, and on his failure to give bond as required his letters may be revoked; and upon such revocation the same results shall ensue as provided in section 20-108. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1232, ch. 854, § 263; June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 528, ch. 1329.)

AMENDMENT

1902—Act June 30, 1902, struck out the words "creditor, distributee, or legatee entitled to take under the will," and inserted in lieu thereof the words "party interested."

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Avoidance of deed

If deed was procured by undue influence and deceased grantor left a valid will, her executor had right to avoid the deed. Kashouty v. Deep (1942, 126 F. 2d 233, 75 U.S. App. D. C. 259).

If the executor is the residuary legatee of the personal estate of the testator, or provided the residuary legatee of full age shall notify his consent to the court, he may, instead of the bond prescribed as aforesaid, give bond with security approved by the court, and in a penalty prescribed by the court, conditioned to pay all the debts and just claims against the testator, and all damages which shall be recovered against him as executor, and all legacies bequeathed by the will, in which case he shall not be required to file any inventory or render any account. And if such bond be given by the executor, he shall be answerable for the full amount of all debts, claims, and damages that may be recovered against him as executor as if he were sued in his own right, and any legatee may recover the full amount of his legacy in a suit on the executor's bond or in equity, and the giving of the bond shall be considered an assent to the legacy: Provided, That the surety or sureties in said bond shall not be liable for a greater amount than the penalty thereof. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1232, ch. 854, § 264.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Actions on bonds 1
Executor's special undertaking 2
Liability of executor 3

1. Actions on bonds

This section does not prevent recovery on special bond until debt or claim sued upon has been recovered in a separate action brought against executor. Hawley v. Hawley (1940, 114 F. 2d 745, 72 App. D.C. 376).

2. Executor's special undertaking

Although executrix in giving a special undertaking rendered herself personally liable for all debts and just claims against testator, special bond given by executrix did not guarantee claimant's right to recover on claim rejected by executrix and claimants were required to sue within statutory period. McNeill and Fuller v. Selby (D.C. Mun. App. 1955, 116 A. 2d 160).

3. Liability of executor

A special bond given by an executor who is also residuary legatee operates as an admission that there are sufficient assets in the estate to pay all debts and forecloses that question, and executor assumes thereby responsibility of payment of debts to the full extent of his personal estate. Hawley v. Hawley (1940, 114 F. 2d 745, 72 App. D. C. 376).

When two or more persons are appointed executors, the court may take a separate bond with security from each of them or a joint bond with security from all of them together. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1233, ch. 854, § 265.)

If there be only one executor named in the will, and he shall have been present at the probate of the will, and shall not within twenty days thereafter file a bond and qualify as executor by taking the oath aforesaid, letters of administration with the will annexed may be granted as if no executor had been named. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1233, ch. 854, § 266.)

If said executor shall not have been present at the probate of the will, but shall be within the District, a summons may be issued to him, either at the instance of any person interested or ex officio by the register of wills, requiring him to appear and file his bond as required by law within twenty days after service of said summons; and if he be not found in said District, notice shall be given to him by publication to appear within thirty days after the first publication of said notice, and on his failure to appear and give his bond and qualify by taking the prescribed oath, as aforesaid, administration may be granted as if no executor had been named in the will. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1233, ch. 854, § 267; June 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 268, ch. 242, § 2.)

AMENDMENTS

1949—Act June 24, 1949, struck out the words "twenty" and "within thirty days after the first publication", and inserted in lieu thereof, respectively, the words "five" and "within ten days after publication".

If there be more than one executor named in a will, there may be the same proceeding with respect to each of them as if he were the sole executor, and any circumstances under which letters of administration may be granted on failure of a sole-named executor shall authorize the granting of letters testamentary to one or more of the executors on failure of one or more of the others; and any circumstances under which letters of administration may be granted on failure of a sole-named executor shall authorize the granting of such letters of administration on failure of all the executors named to appear and qualify as aforesaid. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1233, ch. 854, § 268.)

If any executor named in a will shall file or transmit to the probate court an attested renunciation of his executorship, there shall be the same proceeding with respect to granting letters testamentary or of administration as if the party so renouncing had not been named in the will. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1233, ch. 854, § 269.)

If any person named as executor be disqualified from serving, letters testamentary or of administration may be granted as if he had not been named as executor. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1233, ch. 854, § 270.)

In case letters testamentary shall be granted to one or more of the executors named in a will on failure of the rest, no executor not named in said letters shall in any manner interfere with the administration; and if letters of administration with the will annexed shall be granted, no executor named in the will shall in any manner interfere with the administration; and no executor named in a will shall, before letters testamentary are granted to him, have any power to dispose of any part of the estate of the deceased or to interfere therewith, further than is necessary to collect and preserve the same. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1233, ch. 854, § 271.)

The following shall be the form of letters testamentary to be issued under the seal of the probate term of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia:

District of Columbia, to wit:

The United States of America.

To all persons to whom these presents shall come, greeting:

Know ye that the last will and testament of ———, of ———, deceased, hath, in due form of law, been exhibited, proved, and recorded in the office of the register of wills of the District of Columbia, a copy of which is to these presents annexed, and administration of all the goods, chattels, and credits of the deceased is hereby granted and committed unto ———, the executor by said will appointed.

In no case shall the executor of an executor, as such, be entitled to administration de bonis non on the estate of the first deceased. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1237, ch. 854, § 300.)

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Appointment

Where judgment creditor, who had become resident and domiciliary of Virginia, died in Virginia while appeal from such judgment was pending, and person named as executor in judgment creditor's purported will had filed such will with clerk of court in Virginia but had not taken further proceedings thereunder, the district court should have appointed a collector of assets of estate of judgment creditor. Belt v. Lynn (1954, 211 F. 2d 431, 94 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Every collector, except corporations authorized to act as such, before letters shall be issued to him, shall execute a bond to the United States, in a penalty and with security to be approved by said court, with the following condition:

"The condition of the above obligation is such that if the above bounden — shall well and honestly discharge the office of collector of the goods, chattels, and personal estate of —, deceased, in the District of Columbia, and shall make or cause to be made a true and perfect inventory or inventories of such of said goods, chattels, personal estate, and debts as shall come to his possession or knowledge and make return of the same to the probate court of the District, and shall also deliver to the person or persons who shall be authorized by the court to receive them such of said goods, chattels, personal estate, and debts as shall come to his possession, except such as shall be allowed for by said court, then the said obligation shall be void; it shall otherwise be in full force and virtue at law."

And he shall also take and subscribe the following oath:

"I, —, do swear that I will well and truly discharge the office of collector of the goods, chattels, and personal estate of —, deceased, according to the tenor of the letters granted me by the probate court of the District of Columbia and the directions of law, to the best of my knowledge, so help me God." CROSS REFERENCE

The collector shall collect the goods, chattels, and personal estate of the deceased, including the debts due him, and cause the same to be appraised and return an inventory thereof, as an administrator is required to do, and may, under the authority of the court, sell perishable articles and bring suits for debts or other property, as an administrator may do, and shall account for the money recovered. The said collector may, if authorized by the court, take possession of, hold, manage, conserve, and control all real estate affected by the will or wills in dispute, and said collector shall discharge, pendente lite, all the duties of an administrator, including the payment of debts, and shall be liable to an action by any creditor of the deceased and shall be entitled to the protection of any provision of law expressly relating to executors and administrators.

Said collector may be allowed a commission not exceeding 10 per centum on the personal property, debts due the estate, and rentals from real estate actually collected by him.

In the event that such collector is authorized by the court to take possession of the real estate affected by such will or wills as hereinbefore set forth, the letters of collection shall so expressly specify, and his bond as such collector, in addition to the several matters set forth in section 20-402, shall specifically include the faithful performance of his duties with respect to such real estate. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1238, ch. 854, § 306; Apr. 19, 1920, 41 Stat. 562, ch. 153.)

AMENDMENT

1920—Act Apr. 19, 1920, deleted the words "said collector may be authorized and directed by the court to discharge, pendente lite, all or any of the duties of an administrator, including the payment of debts" and inserted the second sentence of the first paragraph; raised the maximum from 3 to 10 per centum; and, added the last paragraph.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Attorney's fees 1
Commission 2
Decisions under prior law 3
Powers of collector 4

1. Attorney's fees

An attorney whose services are rendered to an estate at request of collector of estate may look to the estate for his compensation and measure of allowance to the attorney is such as court may consider proper in light of applicable facts. Buck v. Putnam (1945, 146 F. 2d 662, 79 U.S. App. D. C. 295).

Where account of collector of estate showed collection of assets to amount of approximately $580,000, allowance of fee of $6,000 to collector's attorney for services rendered by him to collector in administration of estate was not an abuse of discretion. Id.

2. Commission

Where account of collector of an estate showed collection of assets to amount of approximately $580,000, allowance of a commission of 1½ percent of fund handled by collector during the 10-month period which he served was not an abuse of discretion. Buck v. Putnam (1945, 146 F. 2d 662, 79 U.S. App. D.C. 295).

3. Decisions under prior law

Probate court has authority, in case of the contest of a will, to appoint a collector of the personal estate, under sec. 304 of the 1901 Code (31 Stat. 1237, ch. 854 (§ 20-401)), and his powers, when so appointed, are those in general of a temporary administrator. Hutchins v. Dante (40 App. D. C. 262).

Duty of executors and trustees in respect to the payment of income is merely ministerial, and the collector, acting as administrator, may, under the court's direction, temporarily perform that duty. Hutchins v. Hutchins (41 App. D. C. 122).

Under secs. 306-308 of the 1901 Code (31 Stat. 1238, ch. 854 (§§ 20-403 to 20-405)), collectors may bring suits, but there is no expression permitting suits to be brought against them. Berry & Whitmore Co. v. Dante (43 App. D. C. 110).

Attorneys rendering services to the estate may recover fees from collector when such services were requested by collector in his representative capacity. Brandenburg v. Dante (1920, 261 F. 1021, 49 App. D.C. 141).

4. Powers of collector

Collector has no power under this section (as amended) to prosecute appeal from order disbaring his decedent from practice of law. Metzger v. O'Donoghue (1923, 288 F. 461, 53 App. D.C. 107).

A collector of an estate for time being performs all duties and exercises all powers of an administrator. Buck v. Putnam (1945, 146 F. 2d 662, 79 U.S. App. D.C. 295).

On the granting of letters testamentary or of administration the power of any such collector shall cease, and it shall be his duty to deliver, on demand, all the property and money of the decedent in his hands, except as before excepted, to the person obtaining such letters, and the executor or administrator may be permitted to prosecute any suit commenced by said collector as if the same had been begun by said executor or administrator, and may also defend any suit brought against said collector by any creditor of the deceased. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1238, ch. 854, § 307; Apr. 19, 1920, 41 Stat. 562, ch. 153.)

AMENDMENT

1920—Act Apr. 19, 1920, added the last phrase.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Action commenced by collector 1
Services of attorney 2
Variance between decree and order 3

1. Action commenced by collector

Upon granting of letters testamentary or of administration, power of collector of assets of estate of judgment creditor would cease, and executor or administrator could be permitted to prosecute any action commenced by collector. Belt v. Lynn (1954, 211 F. 2d 431, 94 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

2. Services of attorney

This section contemplates that the collector may bind the estate for the services of counsel. Brandenburg v. Dante (1920, 261 F. 1021, 49 App. D.C. 141).

3. Variance between decree and order

Where petitioner, seeking writ of habeas corpus, had been ordered to turn over concealed assets to collector of deceased's estate, whereas petitioner was held in contempt on petition of executor of estate for failing to deliver assets to the executor who had been appointed subsequent to the entry of the turn-over order, alleged variance between contempt decree and the turn-over order was not "fatal," since, upon the grant of letters to the executor, he was entitled to prosecute any suit commenced by the collector as if the suit had been begun by the executor. Watkins v. Rives (1942, 125 F. 2d 33, 75 U.S. App. D.C. 109).

If the said collector shall neglect or refuse to deliver over the property and estate to the executor or administrator, the court may, by citation and attachment, compel him to do so, and the executor or administrator may also proceed, by civil action, to recover the value of the assets from him and his sureties by action on his bond. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1238, ch. 854, § 308; Apr. 19, 1920, 41 Stat. 562, ch. 153.)

AMENDMENT

1920—Act Apr. 19, 1920, deleted the following: "Such collector shall not be liable to an action by any creditor of the deceased."

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Right to sue

Congress was careful to use words that in no way abridged the right to pursue such a remedy of one in whose favor the remedy was inferentially recognized in the preceding sections. Brandenburg v. Dante (1920, 261 F. 1021, 49 App. D.C. 141).

Executors and administrators shall have full power and authority to commence and prosecute any personal action at law or in equity which the testator or intestate might have commenced and prosecuted: Provided, however, That in tort actions, the said right of action shall be limited to damages for personal injury except for pain and suffering resulting therefrom; and they shall also be liable to be sued in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia in any action at law or in equity, except as aforesaid, which might have been maintained against the deceased; and they shall be entitled to or answerable for costs in the same manner as the deceased would have been, and shall be allowed for the same in their accounts, unless it shall appear that there were not probable grounds for instituting or defending the suits in which judgments or decrees shall have been given against them. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1241, ch. 854, § 327; June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 529, ch. 1329; June 25, 1936, 49 Stat. 1921, ch. 804; June 19, 1948, 62 Stat. 488, ch. 598, § 2; June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 991, ch. 646, § 32(b); May 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 107, ch. 139, § 127.)

AMENDMENTS

1948—Act June 19, 1948, deleted the words "except actions for injuries to the person or to the reputation" and substituted the words: "Provided, however, In tort actions, the said right of action shall be limited to damages for personal injury except for pain and suffering resulting therefrom."

1902—Act June 30, 1902, deleted the words "slander and for" and inserted the words "or to the reputation" after "injuries to the person."

CHANGE OF NAME

Act June 25, 1936, substituted "District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia" for "Supreme Court of the District of Columbia."

Act June 25, 1948, eff. Sept. 1, 1948, as amended by act May 24, 1949, substituted "United States District Court for the District of Columbia" for "District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia."

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Attachment or garnishment 1
Compromise 2
Construction 3
Jurisdiction 4
Parties 5
Reliance on statute 6
Res judicata 7
Sale by executor 8

1. Attachment or garnishment

The District Court for District of Columbia has exclusive jurisdiction of suits against an executor on claims against the estate, but an attachment or garnishment directed to an executor, in connection with an action against a third party who claims an interest in the estate, is not a "suit against executor" within jurisdiction of district court. Frank v. Malone (1942, 126 F. 2d 651, 75 U.S. App. D.C. 296).

2. Compromise

Where executor reasonably believed that estate was entitled to claim Government bonds notwithstanding their registration in names of decedent or another person, and reasonably claimed an interest in savings account deposits which were made entirely from decedent's money, and when question of ownership of bonds and deposits was first raised, such other person might have made claim of complete ownership of both, the situation furnished the basis for a valid compromise and settlement of the respective claims. Magruder v. National Metropolitan Bank of Wash. (D. C. Mun. App. 1945, 40 A. 2d 828).

3. Construction

While perhaps proviso excepting damages for pain and suffering is somewhat inartistically drawn, nevertheless it is not ambiguous and the legislative history supports this conclusion. Phillips v. Lust (1949, 82 F. Supp. 63).

4. Jurisdiction

"An executor or administrator cannot be sued in another jurisdiction than that which the administration of the estate is depending, for an accounting, or for acts involving the administration of the estate, or the assets thereof in his hands as such executor or administrator." Johns v. Herbert (2 App. D. C. 485).

If, however, he becomes a trustee of the property, after the estate should be closed, "he is amenable to suit in the courts of any jurisdiction within which he may be found." Id.

"An administrator or executor cannot sue or be sued in his representative capacity in any other jurisdiction than the one of his appointment, except where it is permitted by the laws of the jurisdiction in which the suit is sought to be maintained." Bryan v. Curtis (30 App. D.C. 234).

The right conferred by section 329 of the 1901 code (§ 20-505) does not imply "that suit can be maintained in the courts of the District against such administrator or executor." Id.

Section 1 of the Municipal Court Act (41 Stat. 1310), this section, and section 328 of the 1901 code (§ 20-502) are in pari materia, and must be construed together. The municipal court has no jurisdiction over suits against executors or administrators. Sanford v. Sanford (1923, 286 F. 777, 52 App. D.C. 315).

5. Parties

Where mortgagor executed mortgage covering Pennsylvania realty and died resident of Pennsylvania, mortgagor's administrator was a "necessary party" to suit for an accounting against mortgagees by executrix of estate of mortgagor's mother who was the mortgagor's sole heir. Cain v. Hutson (1942, 127 F. 2d 19, 75 U.S. App. D.C. 335, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 53, 317 U. S. 656, 87 L. Ed. 527).

6. Reliance on statute

In a prior case, § 20-501 of Code was construed as not only permitting but requiring the presence of an executor as a plaintiff in action of this nature, and as such case has not been changed or overruled, etc., executors were warranted in relying upon the Code provision, so construed, as direct statutory authority to institute action to avoid a deed. Ransey v. Curtis (1950, 182 F. 2d 687, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 386).

Where success of executrix in suit to set aside testator's sale of realty would inure solely to individual benefit of executrix as sole beneficiary under will, ordinary distinction between her representative and her individual capacity was not material for purposes of application of doctrine of res judicata by virtue of prior ejectment suit against executrix individually. Jamison v. Garrett (1953, 92 U.S. App. D.C. 232, 205 F. 2d 15).

Where former ejectment action brought by grantee of realty against possessor who claimed an equitable title under grantor's oral agreement to devise was settled by stipulation which provided that possessor should receive payment for all rights and should deliver to grantee a quitclaim deed, judgment therein, which incorporated stipulation, was res judicata of subsequent suit by possessor, as executrix of grantor's will of which she was sole beneficiary, to set aside sale of realty to grantee, but in which she failed to assert any ground which was unknown to her at time of ejectment action. Id.

8. Sale by executor

When will directs the executor to sell the real estate of testator, the legal title vests in him and he has the power to convey, and also authority to enforce specific performance of contract for the sale. Griffith v. Stewart (31 App. D.C. 29, affirmed 30 S. Ct. 528, 217 U.S. 323, 54 L. Ed. 782, 19 Ann. Cas. 639).

If the verdict of the jury in any suit against an executor or administrator be against such executor or administrator, or if he shall be willing to confess judgment, and the debt or damages which the deceased (if he or she were alive) ought to pay be ascertained by verdict, or confession, or otherwise, the court shall thereupon assess the sum which the executor or administrator ought to pay, regard being had to the amount of assets in his hands and the debts due to other persons; and if it shall appear to the court that there are assets to discharge all just claims against the deceased, the judgment shall be for the whole debt or damages found by the jury, or confessed, or otherwise ascertained, and costs; and if it shall appear to the court that there are not assets to discharge all such just claims, the judgment shall be for such sum only as bears a just proportion to the amount of the debt or damages and costs, regard being had to the amount of all the just claims and of the assets—that is to say, as the amount of all the said claims shall be to the assets, so shall the amount of the said debt or damages and costs be to the sum required, for which judgment is to be given.

And in no case shall the court proceed to assess as aforesaid and to pass such judgment against an executor or administrator until the time limited by law or by the court for the executor or administrator to pass his account shall have expired: Provided, That the said executor or administrator shall make oath (or affirmation, as the case may require) that he hath not assets to discharge all such just claims; and the account settled by the probate court, in which the debt or damages sued for ought to be stated, shall be evidence to show the amount of assets and claims; and the court shall have power, when the real debt or damages are ascertained, to refer the matter to an auditor to ascertain the sum for which judgment shall be given; and in case the judgment shall be for a sum inferior to the real debt or damage and costs, it shall go on and say "that the plaintiff be entitled to such further sum as the court shall hereafter assess on discovery of further assets in the hands of the defendant"; and the court, at any time afterwards, when applied to by the plaintiff, on three days' notice to the defendant or his attorney, may assess and give judgment for such further proportionable sum as the plaintiff shall appear entitled to, regard being had as aforesaid to the amount of the debt and other claims; and on any judgment passed as aforesaid a fieri facias may issue against the defendant, and either his own goods or the goods of the deceased may be thereupon taken and sold, and it shall be the duty of the executor or administrator to discharge said judgment or put it on a footing with other just claims, and on failure his administration bond may be put in suit by the plaintiff. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1242, ch. 854, § 328.)

Assets 1
 Defenses 2
 Judgment 3
 Jurisdiction 4
 Procedure in collection of claims 5

1. Assets

"Assets" for purpose of determining sufficiency of "assets" to discharge just claims of estate means property, real or personal, tangible or intangible, legal or equitable, which can be made available for, or can be appropriated to, the payment of debts. Stoner v. National Metropolitan Bank of Washington (1948, 77 F. Supp. 699).

2. Defenses

Executors sued for debt or damages and making oath under this section as to insufficiency of assets cannot successfully raise such defense by merely raising doubt as to sufficiency of assets or leaving matter vague, but must establish precisely the condition of estate so that court may not know exactly what part of claim should be allowed, and hence oath that "executors cannot determine that they will have sufficient assets to pay all claims" was insufficient. Stoner v. National Metropolitan Bank of Washington (1948, 77 F. Supp. 699).

3. Judgment

In action against an executor on a demand, unless defense of insufficiency of assets is interposed, judgment may be entered for the full amount of demand sued on. Hawley v. Hawley (1940, 114 F. 2d 745, 72 App. D. C. 376).

In action against an executor on a demand, a fieri facias may issue against the executor, and either his own goods or goods of deceased may be taken and sold. Id.

Final judgment would not be entered against administratrix of one liable for accounting until plaintiff had complied with this section governing judgments against executor or administrator, and court would retain jurisdiction for purpose of enabling plaintiff to comply and of entering final judgment. Cafritz v. Corporation Audit Co. (1945, 60 F. Supp. 627).

4. Jurisdiction

Section 1 of the Municipal Court Act (§ 11-703) and sections 327 and 328 of the 1901 Code (§§ 20-501, 20-502) are in pari materia, and must be construed together. Cases covered by said sections 327 and 328 are to be treated as exceptions to those coming within the purview of section 1. Sanford v. Sanford (1923, 286 F. 777, 52 App. D. C. 315).

5. Procedure in collection of claims

Proceeding for collection of claims against estate is against executor in his official capacity to determine amount of demand sued on, the value of assets in hands of executor, and proration of the two. Hawley v. Hawley (1940, 114 F. 2d 745, 72 App. D. C. 376).

If an executor, administrator, or collector shall believe that any person conceals any part of his decedent's estate, he may file a petition in said court alleging such concealment, and the court may compel an answer thereto on oath; and if satisfied, upon an examination of the whole case, that the party charged has concealed any part of the estate of the deceased, the court may order the delivery thereof to the executor, administrator, or collector, and may enforce obedience to such order in the same manner in which orders of said court may be enforced. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1209, ch. 854, § 122.)

CROSS REFERENCE

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Determination of ownership 1
 Jurisdiction 2

1. Determination of ownership

On petition of creditor, court is without jurisdiction to order fund in possession of third person (who claims an interest therein) paid into the registry of the court. Cook v. Speare (13 App. D.C. 446).

Purpose of section is to furnish prompt remedy for discovery of assets and their reduction to possession when discovered. "But we are unable to find a further intention to confer upon the probate court jurisdiction to determine the question of the actual ownership of such property" as between executor and rival claimant. Richardson v. Daggett (24 App. D. C. 440).

2. Jurisdiction

The probate court of the District of Columbia does not have jurisdiction to decide disputes concerning title or possession of property, as between representatives of an estate and strangers who claim adversely to the estate. Watkins v. Rives (1942, 125 F. 2d 33, 75 U.S. App. D.C. 109).

Where petitioner had offered for probate a will in which he was named executor and he acted upon his testamentary authority and did not question jurisdiction of probate court of District of Columbia over him until after an earlier will had been admitted to probate, and rule had been sought by new executor to require the petitioner to show cause why he should not be adjudged in contempt for failure to comply with a turn-over order, the petitioner's conduct constituted a "waiver" of objection that he became a stranger to the estate from the moment that the will which he had offered for probate was declared invalid, and that therefore probate court was without jurisdiction to adjudge him in contempt. Id.

If any person interested in any decedent's estate shall by petition allege that the executor, administrator, or collector has concealed or has in his hands and has omitted to return in the inventory or list of debts any part of his decedent's assets, and the court shall finally adjudge and decree in favor of the allegations of the petition, in whole or in part, it shall order an additional inventory or list of debts, as the case may be, to be returned by the executor, administrator, or collector, and appraisalment to be made accordingly, to comprehend the assets omitted, and the court may compel obedience to said order, and, if the same is not complied with, revoke the letters testamentary or of administration or of collection and order the bond of the executor, administrator, or collector to be put in suit. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1210, ch. 854, § 124.)

CROSS REFERENCE

Criminal penalty for concealing or converting assets of estate, see § 22-1404.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Jurisdiction 1 Right to hearing 2

1. Jurisdiction

Where an executor asserts title to assets adversely to the decedent's estate, the probate court of the District of Columbia has jurisdiction under statute to try the question of title thereby presented. Watkins v. Rives (1942, 125 F. 2d 33, 75 U. S. App. D. C. 109).

2. Right to hearing

Petition charging executor with concealing assets is a pleading only and not evidence; and executor is entitled to his day in court—in other words, to a trial upon the evidence. Brosnan v. Brosnan (1923, 289 F. 547, 53 App. D. C. 149).

It shall be lawful for any person or persons to whom letters testamentary or of administration have been granted by the proper authority in any of the United States or the territories thereof to maintain any suit or action and to prosecute and recover any claim in the District in the same manner as if the letters testamentary or of administration had been granted to such person or persons by the proper authority in the said District; and the letters testamentary or of administration, or a copy thereof certified under the seal of the authority granting the same, shall be sufficient evidence to prove the granting thereof, and that the person or persons, as the case may be, hath or have administration: Provided, nevertheless, That the probate court of the District shall have the power, upon the petition of anyone interested, to require from such person or persons the security required by law in like cases from a resident administrator or executor, or the said court may grant auxiliary or ancillary letters, as the case may require, to the same or other persons. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1242, ch. 854, § 329.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Ancillary letters 1 Law governing 3 Parties in specific performance 2

1. Ancillary letters

Where testatrix, who was domiciled in Michigan and whose estate and beneficiaries were largely in Michigan but who had intangible property in District of Columbia, named resident of District of Columbia as sole executor, but Michigan court appointed Michigan resident as administrator with will annexed, because Michigan law forbids appointment of a nonresident executor, it was within discretion of District of Columbia court to appoint the Michigan executor as ancillary administrator. Purcell v. Cramton (1944, 143 F. 2d 22, 79 U. S. App. D. C. 99).

The requirement of § 20-301, that when any will shall have been authenticated and admitted to probate letters testamentary thereon shall be issued to the executor named therein, if he is legally competent and will accept the trust, does not apply to ancillary letters. Id.

Ordinarily ancillary letters are granted to the domiciliary executor or administrator. Id.

2. Parties in specific performance

Such an executor may maintain specific performance without joining heirs. Griffith v. Stewart (31 App. D. C. 29, affirmed 30 S. Ct. 528, 217 U. S. 323, 54 L. Ed. 782, 19 Ann. Cas. 639).

3. Law governing

"Letters of administration obtained in the jurisdiction of the domicil of the decedent prevail over letters of administration de bonis non granted in this District, and the statute confers upon such foreign administrator the right 'to recover from any individual within the District of Columbia effects or money belonging to the testator or intestate, and that letters testamentary or of administration obtained in either of the States or Territories of this Union give a right to the person having them to receive or give discharges for assets, without suit, which may be in the hands of any person in the District of Columbia.' Kane v. Paul (14 Pet. (39 U. S.) 33, 10 L. Ed. 341)." Southern R. Co. v. Hawkins (35 App. D. C. 313, 21 Ann. Cas. 926).

A suit filed by a Maryland executor for specific performance of a contract to buy realty located in Maryland must be governed by the law of that state. Griffith v. Stewart (31 App. D. C. 29, affirmed 30 S. Ct. 528, 217 U. S. 323, 54 L. Ed. 782, 19 Ann. Cas. 639).

Local administrator, however, may maintain action for death by wrongful act over the objection of the defendant where "the foreign executor did not attempt to bring this suit, and is not here complaining because it was brought by appellee. In such a situation, we think, he may be presumed to have waived any right conferred upon him by the local statute, and that such waiver may be taken advantage of by the real party in interest." Southern R. Co. v. Hawkins (35 App. D. C. 313, 21 Ann. Cas. 926). See, also, Western Union Tel. Co. v. Lipscomb (22 App. D. C. 104).

Under this section, the domiciliary administrator of a Michigan decedent's estate might have the estate in the District of Columbia administered by the probate court, or might apply for the appointment of an ancillary administrator. Wiggins v. Mayer (1928, 22 F. 2d 869, 57 App. D. C. 293).

While authorizing a domiciliary administratrix to sue in the courts of the District of Columbia, this section limits the purposes of such suits and, by implication, limits exercise of the power to situations in which no ancillary administration has been granted in the District. Duehay v. Acacia Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1939, 105 F. 2d 768, 70 App. D. C. 245, 124 A.L.R. 1268).

Nothing contained in this section reveals an intention on the part of Congress to abandon the well-established principle of law which governs ancillary administrations. Id.

No creditor by a bond which purports to bind the heirs of the obligor shall be entitled to sue the heirs at common law in respect of assets descended to them, but debts by specialty and by simple contract, without distinction, shall be payable primarily out of the personal estate, and, if that be insufficient, shall be payable equally and without preference out of the proceeds of the real estate. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1247, ch. 854, § 360.)

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Real estate mortgages

Debts by specialty and by simple contract, shall be payable primarily out of the personal estate. Mortgage on devised real estate must be paid out of the personal property. Tracy v. Atwell (1929, 32 F. 2d 392, 58 App. D. C. 397).

(Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1248, ch. 854, § 364.)

- Counsel fees 1
- Effect of settlement 2
- Income from specific bequests 3

1. Counsel fees

Counsel fees for defending will be charged against the estate. McIntire v. McIntire (1904, 24 S. Ct. 196, 192 U. S. 116, 48 L. Ed. 369).

2. Effect of settlement

3. Income from specific bequests

Dividends accruing after death of testatrix upon shares of stock specifically bequeathed are not subject to administrative costs until residuary bequests are exhausted. Nash v. Ober (2 App. D. C. 304).

4. Interest on assets

If executor mingles money belonging to estate with his own or is negligent in not paying it over or investing it to render it productive, he is chargeable with interest. Mades v. Miller (2 App. D. C. 455).

On the other side shall be stated the disbursements by him made, namely: First. Funeral expenses, to be allowed at the discretion of the court, according to the condition and circumstances of the deceased, not exceeding six hundred dollars: Provided, That for special cause shown the court may make such additional allowance not exceeding four hundred dollars as such special circumstances may warrant. 1. Ancillary commissions

Where commissions to ancillary executors of approximately 2.5 percent of the amount of the ancillary estate and the attorney's fees in approximately the same amount were allowed and there was nothing in the record to indicate that a caveat was pending or immediately contemplated at the domicile of the testatrix, District Court did not abuse its discretion in allowing the fees and commission. Powell v. Ogden & Sellers, Ancillary etc. (1960, 278 F. 2d 451, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 6).

Where commissions of approximately 2.5 percent of the amount of the ancillary estate and attorney's fees in approximately the same amount were allowed, the Court of Appeals would assume that the domiciliary court, in fixing commissions, would take into account the payments made to the same persons in their capacity as ancillary executors, notwithstanding that the 10 percent limitation in the District statute could not apply outside the jurisdiction and hence could not place a limit on the commissions allowable to the domiciliary executors. Id.

2. Authority for payments

An executor should not make payments to himself on account of commissions until he has been authorized by court to do so. Doherty v. Stoner (1948, 169 F. 2d 965, 83 U. S. App. D. C. 365).

Where it was certain, because of size of inventory and provision of will fixing his compensation at 10% thereof, that executor would ultimately be entitled to commissions largely in excess of advances on commissions which he prematurely paid to himself, and that executor had substantially completed his work, unauthorized withdrawals by executor resulted in no harm to estate, and executor would not be charged with interest on commissions which he withdrew prematurely. Id.

3. Compensation of executor or administrator

This section "Places a limitation beyond which the court may not go in allowing compensation for the services of an executor or administrator, or executors or administrators, in administering an entire estate." Brosnan v. Fox (1923, 284 F. 923, 52 App. D. C. 143).

"In the case of succession the court must make only such allowances * * * to the succeeding executors or administrators within the limitation fixed by the statute." Id.

The court has power to compensate an executor for defending the validity of a contested will, which is finally adjudicated void. Id.

4. Computation of commissions

Where executor sold testatrix' realty, executor was entitled to have his commission based on gross sale price rather than net sum received, notwithstanding that debts and charges were taken out of sale price by title insurance company which handled the settlement after sale and that only the net sum was turned over to executor. Doherty v. Stoner (1948, 169 F. 2d 965, 83 U. S. App. D. C. 365).

Where testatrix on date of her death had on deposit in local bank the sum of $44,219.73, and bank held her note for $25,000, and on due date, which was before executor qualified, bank charged testatrix' account with principal of note and accrued interest, so that executor succeeded to a credit of only $19,053.06, entire deposit of $44,219.73 was properly a part of inventory upon which executor's commissions were to be calculated. Id.

No case is made for payment to executor in operating decedent's business over and above the amount already permitted by the Code. Stoner v. Doherty (1950, 182 F. 2d 673, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 368).

5. Discretion of court

Provision in will directing that executor be allowed maximum compensation permitted by law nullified court's discretion under this section as to amount of executor's commissions. Doherty v. Stoner (1948, 169 F. 2d 965, 83 U. S. App. D. C. 365).

6. Effect of settlement of final accounts

Settlement of administrator's first and final accounts held not to be given the effect of an adjudication of distributee's rights. Claudy v. Duvall (1925, 5 F. 2d 381, 55 App. D. C. 319).

7. Funeral expenses

A child's guardian would be granted permission to pay funeral expenses of child's mother in a reasonable amount out of estate received by child and where such allowances out of a decedent's estate were limited by this section to a maximum of $600, payment would be authorized in that amount instead of the sum of $821 prayed for. In re Fitzwater's Guardianship (1947, 69 F. Supp. 866).

This section placing a limit of $600 on disbursements by executor or administrator for funeral expenses means $600 for a funeral within the District of Columbia, so that where a body has been transported from the District of Columbia for burial elsewhere executor or administrator may disburse not more than $600 for expenses in the District of Columbia and not more than $600 for expenses outside of the District of Columbia. In re Tunison's Estate (1948, 75 F. Supp. 573).

8. Inventory items

Disbursements for payroll, operating and miscellaneous expenses incurred in continuing a business until its sale are not inventory items within the meaning of the section authorizing commissions. Stoner v. Doherty (1950, 182 F. 2d 673, 86 U. S. App. D. C. 368).

9. No allowance prior to final settlements

"An executor, prior to final settlement of the estate, or the termination of his services in connection with the estate, is not entitled to an allowance of commissions." Brosnan v. Fox (1923, 284 F. 923, 52 App. D. C. 143).

An executor is not entitled to commission prior to final settlement of estate or termination of his services, but such rule should not be applied in such a way as to create unnecessary hardship. Doherty v. Stoner (1948, 169 F. 2d 965, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 365).

If anything be bequeathed to an executor by way of compensation, no allowance of commission shall be made unless the said compensation shall appear to the court to be insufficient; and if so, it shall be reckoned in the commission to be allowed by the court. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1248, ch. 854, § 366.)

The executor or administrator of a deceased executor or administrator who shall die before an account of his administration hath been rendered shall render an account showing the amount of the assets received and the payments made by his decedent, and the account shall, if found by the court to be correct, be admitted to record as other administration accounts. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1249, ch. 854, § 370.)

CROSS REFERENCE

Accounting for deceased executor or administrator, see § 20-110.

The husband of an executrix or administratrix who shall die before a final account of her administration shall have been settled shall render such account, if required by the court, showing thereby the amount of money and property received and of payments and disbursements made by such executrix or administratrix, or that may have been received or paid by him, and not before accounted for with the court; and the account so rendered shall, if found by the court to be correct, be admitted to record as other administration accounts in cases where the executrix or administratrix rendered them in person; and in case of refusal of the husband to render such account, the court may proceed against him by attachment, and may commit him until he shall render such account. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1249, ch. 854, § 371.)

The probate court shall have power to make allowance to any executor, administrator, or collector for property of the decedent which hath perished or been lost without the fault of the party; and no profit shall be made and no loss sustained by an executor or administrator in the increase or decrease of the estate under his management; but he shall return an inventory and account for such increase, and may be allowed for such decrease on the settlement of the final or other account. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1249, ch. 854, § 372.)

§ 20-610. Executor or administrator of deceased executor or administrator entitled to commission—To render accounts.

The executor or administrator of the deceased executor or administrator shall return, on oath, to the court, on or before the day named as provided in section 20-111, a list of the bonds, notes, accounts, and money provided in section 20-110, and shall be entitled to retain out of the money such commission as the court shall allow, not exceeding ten per centum on the principal inventory, and the personal estate and money turned over by him shall be assets in the hands of the administrator de bonis non, to be accounted for by him as such. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1237, ch. 854, § 303.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Agreements as to compensation 1
Compensation fixed by will 2
Time for payment 3

1. Agreements as to compensation

"An executor or administrator may agree to serve for less than the compensation fixed in the statute, and if he does so the agreement will be enforced." Washington Loan & Trust Co. v. Convention of Protestant Episcopal Church of Diocese of Washington (1924, 293 F. 833, 54 App. D. C. 14, 34 A. L. R. 913).

2. Compensation fixed by will

Executor qualifying under will fixing commission at 3 per cent. can not subsequently claim a larger sum, although it acted on advice of counsel that the limitation was void and stated in its petition that it based its application on that advice. Washington Loan & Trust Co. v. Convention of Protestant Episcopal Church of Diocese of Washington (1924, 293 F. 833, 54 App. D. C. 14, 34 A. L. R. 913).

Allowance of commission. Sinnott v. Kenaday (14 App. D. C. 1, followed in 14 App. D. C. 484, reversed on other grounds 21 S. Ct. 233, 179 U. S. 606, 45 L. Ed. 339). See, also, Marfield v. McCurdy (25 App. D. C. 342); Howard v. Howard (38 App. D. C. 575); Brosnan v. Fox (1923, 284 F. 923, 52 App. D. C. 143).

3. Time for payment

Generally, an executor's commissions should be withheld until final settlement of the estate or termination of his services, but this rule is one of caution and should not be applied so as to create unnecessary hardship. Maloney v. Foundry M. E. Church (1944, 139 F. 2d 388, 78 U. S. App. D. C. 263).

Where the bulk of an estate had been collected and the balance appeared to be dependent on the results of long litigation, the executor, claiming a commission of 5 per cent of the principal assets converted to cash, should be given an opportunity to show that postponement of payment would be an unreasonable hardship not necessary to protect the estate against his resignation or disqualification. Id.

In its discretion, after hearing evidence, the court may allow advance payment of an executor's commissions if it finds that otherwise unavoidable delay in final settlement will cause an unreasonable hardship and there is no reasonable probability that the remaining amount will be insufficient to satisfy claims of a possible successor. Id.

§ 20-701. Petition for appointment of receiver, where absentees interested in property—United States Attorney necessary party.

If a person entitled to or having an interest in property in the District of Columbia has disappeared or absconded from the District of Columbia, and it is not known where he is, or if such person, having a wife or minor child, dependent to any extent upon him for support, has disappeared or absconded without making sufficient provision for such support, and it is not known where he is, or if his whereabouts is known and he has been without the District of Columbia continuously for two years or longer, anyone who would under the law of the District of Columbia be entitled to administer upon the estate of such absentee if he were deceased, or if no one is known to be so entitled, any suitable person, or such wife, or someone in her or such minor's behalf, may file a petition under oath in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, sitting in equity, stating the name, age, occupation, and last known residence or address of such absentee, the date and circumstances of the disappearance or absconding, and the names and residence of other persons, whether members of such absentee's family or otherwise, of whom inquiry may be made, and containing a schedule of his property, real and personal, so far as known, within the District of Columbia, and praying that such property may be taken possession of and a receiver thereof appointed under the provisions of this chapter. The United States attorney in and for the District of Columbia shall be made a party to every such petition and shall be given due notice of all subsequent proceedings under said sections. (Apr. 8, 1935, 49 Stat. 111, ch. 46, § 1; June 25, 1936, 49 Stat. 1921, ch. 804; June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 991, ch. 646, § 32(b); May 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 107, ch. 139, § 127.)

NOTE TO DECISION

1. "Without the District" defined

To be "without the District of Columbia continuously for two years or longer" must be held to mean to be uninterruptedly and physically beyond the confines of the District, and not merely to establish residence outside of the District. De Ruiz v. De Ruiz (1937, 88 F. 2d 752, 66 App. D. C. 370).

The court may thereupon issue a warrant directed to the United States marshal in and for the District of Columbia, commanding him to take possession of the property named in said schedule and hold it subject to the order of the court and make return of said warrant as soon as may be, with a statement of his actions thereon and a schedule of the property so taken. The marshal shall post a copy of the warrant upon each parcel of land named in the schedule and cause so much of the warrant as relates to land to be recorded with the recorder of deeds of the District of Columbia. He shall receive such fees for serving the warrant as the court allows, but not more than those established by law for similar service upon a writ of attachment. If the petition is dismissed, said fees and the cost of publishing and serving the notice hereinafter provided shall be paid by the petitioner; but if a receiver is appointed, they shall be paid by the receiver and allowed in his account. (Apr. 8, 1935, 49 Stat. 111, ch. 46, § 2.)

Upon the return of such warrant, the court may issue a notice reciting the substance of the petition, the warrant, and the marshal's return, which shall be addressed to such absentee and to all persons who claim of record an interest in said property, or who are known to petitioner to claim an interest in said property, and to all whom it may concern, citing them to appear at a time and place named and show cause why a receiver of the property named in the marshal's schedule should not be appointed and said property held and disposed of under the provisions of this chapter. (Apr. 8, 1935, 49 Stat. 111, ch. 46, § 3.)

The return day of said notice shall be not less than thirty nor more than sixty days after its date unless otherwise ordered by the court. The court shall order said notice to be published not less than once in each of three successive weeks in one or more newspapers within the District of Columbia, and a copy to be posted in a conspicuous place and upon each parcel of land named in the marshal's schedule, and a copy to be mailed to the last known address of such absentee. The court may order other and further notice to be given within or without the District of Columbia. (Apr. 8, 1935, 49 Stat. 112, ch. 46, § 4.)

The absentee or any person who claims an interest in any of the property may appear and show cause why the prayer of the petition should not be granted. The court may, after hearing, dismiss the petition and order the property in possession of the marshal to be returned to the person entitled thereto, or it may appoint a receiver of the property which is in the possession of the marshal and named in his schedule. If a receiver is appointed, the court shall find and record the date of the disappearance or absconding of the absentee; and such receiver shall give bond to said court in such sum and with such condition as the court orders, with a corporate surety thereon approved by the court. (Apr. 8, 1935, 49 Stat. 112, ch. 46, § 5.)

After the approval of such bond the court may order the marshal to transfer and deliver to such receiver the possession of the property under the aforesaid warrant, and the receiver shall file in said court a schedule of the property received by him. (Apr. 8, 1935, 49 Stat. 112, ch. 46, § 6.)

§ 20-707. Receiver may take possession of additional property of and debts due absentee—Appointment of receiver.

Such receiver upon petition filed by him may be authorized and directed by the court to take possession of any additional property within the District of Columbia which belongs to such absentee and to demand and collect all debts due such absentee from any person within the District of Columbia, and hold the same as if it had been transferred and delivered to him by the marshal. (Apr. 8, 1935, 49 Stat. 112, ch. 46, § 7.)

If such absentee has left no corporeal property within the District of Columbia, but there are debts and obligations due or owing to him from persons within the District of Columbia, a petition may be filed as provided in section 20-701, stating the nature and amount of such debts and obligations, so far as known, and praying that a receiver thereof may be appointed. The court may thereupon issue a notice as above provided, without issuing a warrant, and may, upon the return of said notice and after a summary hearing, dismiss the petition or appoint a receiver and authorize and direct him to demand and collect the debts and obligations specified in said petition. The receiver shall give bond as provided in section 20-705, and shall hold the proceeds of such debts and obligations and all property received by him, and distribute the same as hereinafter provided. The court may confer upon the receiver such further authority as may be conferred under section 20-707. (Apr. 8, 1935, 49 Stat. 112, ch. 46, § 8.)

The court may make orders for the care, custody, leasing, and investing of all property and its proceeds in the possession of the receiver. After the appointment of a receiver, upon his petition and after notice, the court may order all or part of said property, including the rights of the absentee in land, to be mortgaged, or sold at public or private sale, to supply money for payments authorized by this chapter or for reinvestment approved by the court. (Apr. 8, 1935, 49 Stat. 112, ch. 46, § 9.)

The court may order said property or its proceeds acquired by mortgage, lease, or sale to be applied in payment of charges incurred or that may be incurred in the support and maintenance of the absentee's wife and minor children, and to the discharge of such debts and claims for alimony as may be proved against said absentee. (Apr. 8, 1935, 49 Stat. 113, ch. 46, § 10.)

The court may authorize the receiver to adjust by arbitration or compromise any demand in favor of or against the estate of such absentee. (Apr. 8, 1935, 49 Stat. 113, ch. 46, § 11.)

The receiver shall be allowed such compensation and disbursements as the court orders, to be paid out of said property or proceeds. If within fourteen years after the date of the disappearance and absconding as found and recorded by the court, such absentee appears, or an administrator, executor, assignee in insolvency, or trustee in bankruptcy of such absentee is appointed, such receiver shall account for, deliver, and pay over to him the remainder of said property. If such absentee does not appear and claim said property within such fourteen years, all his right, title, and interest in said property, real or personal, or the proceeds thereof shall cease, and no action shall be brought by him on account thereof. (Apr. 8, 1935, 49 Stat. 113, ch. 46, § 12.)

If at the expiration of such fourteen years said property has not been accounted for, delivered, or paid over under the provisions of section 20-712, the court shall order the distribution of the remainder to the persons to whom, and in the shares and proportions in which, it would have been distributed if such absentee had died intestate within the District of Columbia on the day fourteen years after the date of the disappearance or absconding as found and recorded by the court. (Apr. 8, 1935, 49 Stat. 113, ch. 46, § 13.)

If such receiver is not appointed within thirteen years after the date found by the court under section 20-705, the time limited for accounting for, or fixed for distributing, said property or its proceeds, or for barring actions relative thereto, shall be one year after the date of the appointment of the receiver instead of the fourteen years provided in sections 20-712 and 20-713; except that the time limited for accounting for, or fixed for distributing, any additional property or its proceeds within the District of Columbia coming into the possession of such receiver during such one year period, or for barring actions relative thereto, shall be one year after the date possession is taken by such receiver. (Apr. 8, 1935, 49 Stat. 113, ch. 46, § 14.)

Nothing contained in this chapter shall be construed as repealing or modifying sections 14-501 or 14-502. (Apr. 8, 1935, 49 Stat. 113, ch. 46, § 15.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

1. Custody of child

In habeas corpus proceeding brought by illegitimate child's mother who sought control and custody of child who was in control of nonparent, awarding of custody of child to mother was not an abuse of discretion, where mother had made persistent efforts to obtain child and evidence indicated that she was a presently fit mother. Bell and Bell v. Leonard (1958, 251 F. 2d 890, 102 U.S. App. D. C. 179).

Custody of child awarded to mother notwithstanding that after divorce she committed adultery with the man she subsequently married, the father of child having died and left the child in the possession of grandfather. Sardo v. Villapiano (1936, 81 F. 2d 255, 65 App. D.C. 121).

It is established both by statute and common law that as between the grandfather and the mother the child should be entrusted to the mother, unless such a course is inconsistent with the child's welfare. Id.

A child of parties to divorce proceeding is a "ward of court" and the court has power to change the custody of the child, to enforce parental obligations to provide for maintenance, and if necessary to remove the child from the custody of both parents. Emrich v. McNeil (1942, 126 F. 2d 841, 75 U. S. App. D. C. 307, 146 A. L. R. 1146).

A reservation in original divorce decree is not necessary for the exercise of court's continuing jurisdiction concerning custody and maintenance of minor child. Id.

Where husband established a separate domicile in the District of Columbia, the wife remaining in North Carolina with the minor children by agreement, in granting husband a divorce the District of Columbia court was without jurisdiction to make an award of custody of children, since their domicile remained in North Carolina. Oxley v. Oxley (1947, 159 F. 2d 10, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 346).

Every father or mother, whether of full age or not, when the other parent does not survive, may, by last will and testament, appoint a guardian of the person to have the care, custody, and tuition of his or her infant child, not being a married female; and if the person so appointed shall refuse the trust, the probate court may appoint another person in his place. NOTES TO DECISIONS

Continuance of jurisdiction 1
Enforcement of decrees 2
Jurisdiction 3

1. Continuance of jurisdiction

Where United States District Court holding Probate Court once assumed jurisdiction over parties to proceedings involving guardianship of child, that jurisdiction continued for all purposes, and if either party felt aggrieved by the orders of the court his remedy lay with that court or on appeal therefrom. Johnson v. Austin, Guardian, etc. (D.C. Mun. App. 1960, 162 A. 2d 495).

Jurisdiction of the United States District Court holding Probate Court did not stop short of enforcing its own decrees in proceedings to remove guardian of child and appoint another guardian. Id.

2. Enforcement of decrees

Although recourse to District Court may be necessary to effectuate decrees of District Court holding Probate Court, Probate Court is but an arm of District Court and the full judicial machinery of the District Court is available to enforce lawful decrees of its component parts. Johnson v. Austin, Guardian, etc. (D.C. Mun. App. 1960, 162 A. 2d 495).

Even if the United States District Court holding Probate Court were powerless to enforce a custody decree, other avenues are open in the District Court to give litigants relief through enforcement of such a decree. Id.

3. Jurisdiction

The United States District Court holding Probate Court has jurisdiction to grant custody of minors in guardianship cases. Johnson v. Austin, Guardian, etc. (D.C. Mun. App. 1960, 162 A. 2d 495).

Jurisdiction over guardianship matters is given to United States District Court holding Probate Court, while Domestic Relations Jurisdiction is vested in Domestic Relations Branch of the Municipal Court. Id.

The probate court shall have power to appoint guardians to indigent boys for the purpose of securing their enlistment in the naval or marine service of the United States, as provided by law, free of all costs on account of such proceeding. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1217, ch. 854, § 166.)

The register of wills shall prepare papers in connection with appointment of guardians to enable indigent boys to enlist in the United States Navy as provided by law, without making any charge therefor. (July 14, 1892, 27 Stat. 154, ch. 171.)

When any infant whose father or mother may be living shall, by gift, or otherwise, be entitled to any property, the probate court may require the father or mother, as guardian, to give bond and security to account for the property, and on his or her failure or refusal so to do may appoint another person guardian, who shall give bond as in other cases. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1215, ch. 854, § 152.)

§ 21-107. Husband, parent, or testamentary guardian may be enjoined from interfering with minor's estate.

On application of any friend of an infant entitled to real or personal estate, or in the exercise of its own discretion, the court may enjoin any parent or husband or testamentary guardian of such infant from interfering with said infant's estate without being appointed and giving bond as guardian of such estate. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1369, ch. 854, § 1129.)

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Felonies

Under this section prescribing fine not exceeding $1,000 or imprisonment for not more than five years, or both, as punishment for any offense not specifically covered by sections of this code, all common-law misdemeanors, not embodied in any act of Congress, became felonies in District of Columbia, since any offense potentially punishable by imprisonment for more than one year is a "felony." U.S. v. Davis (1947, 71 F. Supp. 749, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 99, 167 F. 2d 228, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 1501, 334 U.S. 849, 92 L. Ed. 1772).

In case of the death of either parent from whom his or her minor children shall inherit or take by devise or bequest, such parent may by deed or last will and testament appoint a guardian of the property of the children, subject to the approval of the proper court of the District of Columbia: And provided further, That nothing herein contained shall be held to limit or affect the power of a court of equity to appoint some other person guardian of such children when it shall be made to appear to said court that the welfare of said children requires it. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1369, ch. 854, § 1123.)

CODIFICATION

Section is based on the proviso clauses of section 1123 of act Mar. 3, 1901. Remainder of section is classified to section 21-101.

NOTE TO DECISION

1. In general

By this provision the power of equity to guard the welfare of the child is preserved. Church v. Church (1921, 270 F. 359, 50 App. D.C. 237).

The probate court shall have power to appoint a guardian or guardians to any infant orphan entitled to any property, real, personal, or mixed, within the District, or whose person and residence may be within the District, except where such orphan may have a testamentary guardian. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1215, ch. 854, § 150.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Law governing 1 Nonresident infants 2

1. Law governing

A guardian of the estate should be appointed "in accordance with the laws of the place in which the property is found." Lehmer v. Hardy (1924, 294 F. 407, 54 App. D.C. 51).

2. Nonresident infants

"The courts of the District of Columbia have no authority to appoint guardians of the persons of infants who do not reside and are not domiciled within their territorial jurisdiction." Lehmer v. Hardy (1924, 294 F. 407, 54 App. D.C. 51).

Subject to the provisions of sections 21-101 to 21-103, 21-108, and 21-129, whenever land shall descend or be devised to any infant under twenty-one years of age, or such infant shall be entitled to a distributive share of the personal estate of an intestate, or to a legacy or bequest under a last will, or shall acquire any real or personal property by gift or purchase, the probate court may appoint a guardian of said infant's estate; and if there shall be a guardian of the person of such infant the guardian of the estate so appointed may be the same or a different person: Provided, however, That no person, except trust companies, shall act as guardian of the estate of more than five infants at one and the same time unless the infants are entitled to shares of the same estate. The said appointment may be made at any time after the probate of the will or the grant of administration where the infant is entitled as a devisee, legatee, or next of kin. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1369, ch. 854, § 1127; Mar. 3, 1927, 44 Stat. 1383, ch. 350.)

AMENDMENT

1927—Act Mar. 3, 1927, changed "the said court" to "the probate court" and added the proviso to the first sentence.

lected by the court; and whenever, after a guardian of the estate has been previously appointed, the infant shall select a new guardian upon arriving at the age of fourteen years, and said new selection is approved by the court, and the person so selected is duly appointed and qualified, the guardian previously appointed shall settle his final account and turn over his ward's estate to the newly appointed guardian. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1369, ch. 854, § 1128.)

CODIFICATION

The word "hereinafter" refers to the remainder of the sections of chapter 31 of act Mar. 3, 1901, they being §§ 1129—1142. These sections are classified to §§ 21-107, 21-111, 21-114 to 21-116, 21-119, 21-120, 21-123 to 21-128, and 21-130.

Every orphan or other infant to whom the probate court is authorized to appoint a guardian shall be entitled, on arriving at the age of fourteen years, notwithstanding any appointment of guardian before made by the court, to elect a guardian for himself; but such guardian must be approved by the court and shall be required to give bond as in other cases, and be subject to the control of the court as other guardians are. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1215, ch. 854, § 155.)

(Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1371, ch. 854, § 1140.)

Said petition must be under oath and be accompanied with duly certified copies of so much of the record and proceedings as shows the appointment of such guardian or committee and that he has given a sufficient bond to account for all property and money that may come into his hands by virtue of the authority hereby conferred. The court may thereupon issue to such guardian or committee ancillary letters as such guardian or committee, without citation, or may cite such persons as it may think proper to show cause why the said application should be refused; and the said court shall require from such person or persons the security required by law in like cases from a resident guardian or committee. NOTES TO DECISIONS

- Compensation of Conservator 1
- Temporary conservator 2
- Limitation of compensation 3

1. Compensation of conservator

In view of facts that duties of conservator and guardian are basically the same, and that District of Columbia Code providing for appointment of conservators is silent as to compensation of conservators and merely provides that conservators shall have same rights and powers as guardians and that court shall have the same powers with respect to property of any person for whom conservator has been appointed as it has with respect to property of infants under guardianships, compensation of conservator should be fixed under this section limiting compensation of guardians to fixed percentage of amounts actually collected if and when disbursed. In re Searle (1953, 118 F. Supp. 273).

2. Compensation of temporary conservator

Compensation of temporary conservator would not be determined under this section fixing compensation of guardian but would be determined by considering the character of services rendered, the size of the estate, and the compensation awarded guardian ad litem and attorney for the guardian. In re Searle (1953, 118 F. Supp. 273).

3. Limitation of compensation

Limitation of compensation of committee of insane person to five per cent. of amount received and disbursed precludes allowance of additional fees. Hines v. Paregol (1935, 77 F. 2d 953, 64 App. D.C. 306).

Committee who has wisely and judiciously preserved the estate of a lunatic should not be denied reasonable compensation merely because he had preserved the estate instead of expending it. In re Gallen (1937, 18 F. Supp. 683).

Any allowance which may be made to a guardian for the clothing, support, maintenance, education, or other expenses incurred for the ward or his estate, before said guardian shall have given bond or been appointed, shall have the same effect and operation in law as if the same had been made subsequently to the appointment of said guardian and his giving bond. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1371, ch. 854, § 1137.)

Whenever any guardian shall think that the interests of his ward will be promoted by a sale of his real estate for the purpose of reinvesting the proceeds in other property or securities, he may make application therefor to the probate court, and such proceedings shall be had thereupon as directed in sections 21-201 to 21-213. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1371, ch. 854, § 1136.)

CODIFICATION

See codification note under § 21-126.

The natural guardianship or the appointive guardianship of the person aforesaid shall cease, in the case of a male infant when he is twenty-one years of age, and in the case of a female infant when she is eighteen years of age or marries. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1369, ch. 854, § 1126.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

- Majority of female infants 1
- Marriage of infant 2

1. Majority of female infants

There is no statute in force in the District of Columbia which clearly provides that female infants shall as a general rule attain their majority at the age of 18 years; exceptions to the common-law rule have been provided by statute, but these recognize the continued existence of the general rule of the common law. Jones v. Jones (1934, 72 F. 2d 829, 63 App. D.C. 373, 95 A.L.R. 352).

2. Marriage of infant

Where a 13-year-old girl, legally married, was committed to the Board of Children's Guardians two years later as destitute and homeless, and later committed to the Reform School as incorrigible, she was not entitled to release on habeas corpus, on the ground of her marriage. Richardson v. Browning (1927, 18 F. 2d 1008, 57 App. D.C. 186).

On the arrival of any ward at the age of twenty-one years the guardian shall exhibit a final account of his trust to the court, and shall deliver up, agreeably to the court's order, to the ward all the property of said ward in his hands, including bonds and other securities, and on his failure so to do his bond may be put in suit in the name of the United States for the use of the party interested, and he may be attached, as herein elsewhere provided. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1371, ch. 854, § 1139.)

an infant or person non compos mentis claims any right or interest in such property under and in virtue of any such contract, the court in either case shall have the same power to decree the execution of such contract or to pass any just and proper decree that the court would have if the parties were of full age and sound mind. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1203, ch. 854, § 92.)

(Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1215, ch. 854, § 156.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Historical 1

Sale for reinvestment 2

1. Historical

Prior to enactment of the Code, orphan's court of the District had jurisdiction to decree sale of infant's real estate for his support or education. Thaw v. Ritchie (1890, 10 S. Ct. 1037, 136 U.S. 519, 34 L. Ed. 531).

2. Sale for reinvestment

Decree of District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia for sale of infant's property for purpose of reinvestment is not subject to collateral attack. United States ex rel. Hine v. Morse (1911, 31 S. Ct. 37, 218 U.S. 493, 54 L. Ed. 1123).

The infant, together with those who would succeed to the estate if he were dead, shall be made parties defendant; and it shall be the duty of the court to appoint some fit and disinterested person to be guardian ad litem for the infant, who shall answer the bill under oath. The infant also, if above the age of fourteen, shall answer the bill in proper person, under oath. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1216, ch. 854, § 157.)

Every fact material to determine the propriety of such sale or exchange shall be clearly proved by disinterested witnesses, whose testimony shall be taken in writing in the presence of the guardian ad litem or upon interrogatories agreed upon by him. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1216, ch. 854, § 158.)

If the court shall be satisfied from the evidence that the interests of the infant require a sale or exchange, as prayed, and the rights of others will not be violated thereby, such sale or exchange may be decreed, and the costs of the suit shall be paid out of the infant's estate; otherwise they shall be paid by the complainant. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1216, ch. 854, § 159.)

Terms of sale—Disposition of proceeds.

Any such sale may be made upon such terms as to cash and credit as the court may direct, and a lien shall be retained on the property sold for the purchase money; and the proceeds of such sale shall be invested for the infant's benefit in other real estate or in such other manner as the court may direct; and if the infant, after any such sale, shall die intestate or under twenty-one years of age, the proceeds of such sale, or so much thereof as may remain at his death, if not reinvested in other real estate, shall be considered as real estate, and shall pass accordingly to such persons as would have been entitled to the estate if it had not been sold. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1216, ch. 854, § 160.)

In decreeing an exchange of the infant's estate for other property the court shall not be bound to require equality or sameness in the quantity or character of the estate or interest, and the court may appoint trustees to execute the deeds necessary to carry such exchange into effect. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1216, ch. 854, § 161.)

Death while infant—Conversion of proceeds.

Where an infant is entitled to a particular estate, as for life or years, and another person is entitled to an estate in remainder or reversion or executory devise in the same property, or such other person is entitled to the particular estate and the infant is entitled in remainder or reversion or by way of executory devise, the court shall have the same power to decree a sale or exchange as aforesaid, having reference solely to the interests of the infant: Provided, The other person so interested will consent to such sale or exchange and execute the conveyances necessary to carry the same into effect. And the court shall direct the annual income from the fund or property acquired by such sale or exchange to be applied according to the interests of the respective parties. And in case of the death of said infant under twenty-one years of age the proceeds of any such sale not invested in real estate shall be deemed real estate and pass to those who would be entitled if the property had not been sold. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1216, ch. 854, § 162; June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 527, ch. 1329.)

AMENDMENT

1902—Act June 30, 1902, inserted after the word "reversion" in the first sentence the words "or executory devise."

In cases where it shall appear to the court that it will be to the advantage of the infant that his real estate shall be demised, the said court shall have the power to decree that the same be so demised for a term of years not to exceed the minority of the infant, yielding such rents and on such terms and conditions as the court may direct: Provided, That where the infant is entitled to only a part of the estate as tenant in common, joint tenant, tenant of the particular estate, or remainderman, or otherwise, all the owners of the other interests assent to the passing of such decree. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1216, ch. 854, § 163; June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 527, ch. 1329.)

AMENDMENT

1902—Act June 30, 1902, deleted after the word "court" in the first sentence the words "by proof taken in a similar proceeding to that provided for in the foregoing sections," and inserted in the proviso the words "tenant in common, joint tenant."

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Assignment of contract 1
Mortgage of minor's realty 2

1. Assignment of contract

Assignment of an existing lease is not a "demise" within this section providing for court approval of any demise of an infant's real estate. Sweeney v. Jacobsen (1952, 103 F. Supp. 393, 92 U.S. App. D.C. 93, affirmed 202 F.2d 461).

2. Mortgage of minor's realty.

Orphans court had power to authorize sale of minor's realty for his support, and hence power to authorize a mortgage. Middleton v. Parke (3 App. D. C. 149).

In cases where it shall appear to the court by proof that it would be for the benefit and advantage of the infant to raise money by mortgage for his maintenance or to improve his real property or to pay off charges, liens, or incumbrances thereon, the court may, on the application of the guardian or of the infant by next friend, decree a conveyance of said property, by mortgage or deed of trust, to be executed by the guardian, on such terms as may seem to the court expedient; and this section shall apply to cases where the infant holds jointly or in common with other persons of full age or holds a portion of the estate, as a particular estate, for life or years or in remainder or reversion: Provided, That the other owners interested, all being of full age, will consent to such decree and unite in said mortgage or deed of trust. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1216, ch. 854, § 164; June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 527, ch. 1329.)

AMENDMENT

1902—Act June 30, 1902, deleted the words "as provided in the foregoing section" and inserted after the word "mortgage," the words "for his maintenance or."

If any contract has been made for the sale of the lands, tenements, or hereditaments by any person or persons interested therein jointly or in common with any infant, idiot, or person non compos mentis, for and in behalf of all the persons so interested, which the court, upon a hearing and examination of all the circumstances, shall consider to be for the interest and advantage both of such infant, idiot, or person non compos mentis and of the other person or persons interested therein to be confirmed, the court may confirm such contract and order a deed to be executed according to the same; and all sales and deeds made in pursuance of such order shall be sufficient in law to transfer the estate and interest of such infant, idiot, or person non compos mentis in such lands, tenements, or hereditaments. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1203, ch. 854, § 93.)

(a) With respect to the District of Columbia, any adult person may make a gift of securities to a person who has not attained the age of 21 years on the date of the gift (hereinafter referred to as the "minor") in the following manner:

(b) The person designated as a custodian under this section is hereinafter called "the custodian". (Aug. 3, 1956, 70 Stat. 1028, ch. 947, § 1.)

A gift made in the manner prescribed in section 21-214 shall be irrevocable and shall convey to the minor indefeasibly vested legal title to the securities thus delivered, but no guardian of the person or property of the minor shall have any rights, duties or authority with respect to any property held at any time by the custodian under the authority of sections 21-214 to 21-224 unless said guardian shall himself be or become custodian in accordance herewith. (Aug. 3, 1956, 70 Stat. 1028, ch. 947, § 2.)

(a) The custodian shall hold, manage, invest and reinvest the property held by him as custodian, including any unexpended income therefrom, as hereinafter provided. He shall collect the income therefrom and apply so much or the whole thereof and so much or the whole of the other property held by him as custodian as he may deem advisable for the support, maintenance, education and general use and benefit of the minor, in such manner, at such time or times, and to such extent as the custodian in his absolute discretion may deem suitable and proper, without court order, without regard to the duty of any person to support the minor and without regard to any other funds which may be applicable or available for the purpose. To the extent that property held by the custodian and the income thereof is not so expended, it shall be delivered or paid over to the minor upon the minor's attaining the age of twenty-one years, and in the event that the minor dies before attaining the age of twenty-one years it shall thereupon be delivered or paid over to the estate of the minor.

(b) The custodian may sell, exchange, convert, or otherwise dispose of any and all of the securities or other property held by him in such manner and at such time or times, for such prices and upon such terms as he may deem advisable; he shall have the power in his sole and absolute discretion to retain any and all securities delivered to him within the meaning and under the authority of sections 21-214 to 21-224 without reference to the statutes relating to permissible investments by fiduciaries; he shall invest the minor's property in such securities as would be acquired by prudent men of discretion and intelligence who are seeking a reasonable income and the preservation of their capital without reference to the statutes relating to permissible investments by fiduciaries or hold part or all of the same in one or more bank accounts in his name as such custodian; he may vote in person or by general or limited proxy with respect to any securities held by him; he may consent directly or through a committee or other agent to the reorganization, consolidation, dissolution or liquidation of any corporations, the securities of which may be held by him, or to the sale, lease, pledge or mortgage of any property by or to any such corporation.

(c) In addition to the foregoing rights, powers, and duties with respect to any securities or other property held by the custodian, the custodian, in his name as such custodian, shall have all the powers of management which a guardian of the property of the minor would have.

(d) The custodian may execute and deliver any and all instruments in writing which he may deem advisable to carry out any of the foregoing powers. No issuer of securities, transfer agent, registrar, or bank, or other person acting on the instructions of any person purporting to be a custodian or donor, shall be responsible for determining whether any person has been duly designated as a custodian under sections 21-214 to 21-224, or whether any purchase, sale, or transfer to or by any person as custodian is in accordance with or authorized by sections 21-214 to 21-224, or shall be obliged to inquire into the validity under sections 21-214 to 21-224 of any instrument or instructions executed or given by a person purporting to act as custodian or donor, or be bound to see to the application by any person purporting to act as custodian of any money or other property paid or delivered to him. All registered securities held by the custodian from time to time shall be registered in his name followed by the words "as custodian for a minor under the laws of the District of Columbia". All other property held by the custodian for the minor under the authority of sections 21-214 to 21-224 shall be kept separate and distinct from the custodian's own personal funds and property and shall be maintained at all times in such a manner as to identify it clearly as the minor's property held by the custodian under the authority of sections 21-214 to 21-224. (Aug. 3, 1956, 70 Stat. 1029, ch. 947, § 3.)

A person acting as custodian, other than a guardian of the property of the minor, shall receive no compensation for his services but shall be entitled to reimbursement from the property held by him as custodian for the reasonable expenses incurred in the performance of his duties hereunder. A guardian of the property of the minor, when acting as custodian under the authority of sections 21-214 to 21-224, may receive such additional compensation for his services as guardian as he would be entitled to receive if the property held by him as custodian hereunder were held by him in his capacity as guardian, in addition to the other property of the minor held by him in that capacity. (Aug. 3, 1956, 70 Stat. 1030, ch. 947, § 4.)

A custodian who is not compensated for acting as such shall be under no obligation to give bond for the faithful performance of his duties and shall not be liable for any losses to the property held by him except such as are the result of his bad faith or intentional wrongdoing or result from his investing the minor's property in a manner other than as prescribed in section 21-216 (b). (Aug. 3, 1956, 70 Stat. 1030, ch. 947, § 5.)

A custodian may resign by (1) executing and duly acknowledging an instrument of resignation designating a successor custodian who is an adult member of the minor's family or a guardian of the minor, (2) delivering such instrument to the successor custodian, (3) causing securities, if in registered form, to be registered in the name of the successor custodian as such, and (4) delivering to the successor custodian such securities so registered together with all other property held by him as custodian. (Aug. 3, 1956, 70 Stat. 1030, ch. 947, § 6.)

In the event of the death or incapacity of the custodian before the minor attains the age of twenty-one years, if there is a duly appointed and acting general guardian of the property of the minor at the time of such death or incapacity of the custodian, he shall become the successor custodian, but if there is no duly appointed and acting general guardian of the property of the minor at said time, the successor custodian shall be the adult member of the minor's family or a guardian of the minor, designated by will or duly acknowledged instrument of appointment executed by the last acting custodian. If no such designation is made by the last acting custodian, his legal representative may designate in writing an adult member of the minor's family or a guardian of the minor a successor custodian. (Aug. 3, 1956, 70 Stat. 1030, ch. 947, § 7.)

Any successor custodian shall have all the rights, powers and duties of a custodian under the authority of sections 21-214 to 21-224. (Aug. 3, 1956, 70 Stat. 1030, ch. 947, § 8.)

The next friend or legal representative of a minor, in whose behalf securities are held by a custodian under sections 21-214 to 21-224, or the minor in his own right, no later than one year after reaching twenty-one years of age, shall be entitled to maintain an action in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia against such custodian, or his estate for an accounting and delivery of the securities and unexpended income, in the event of the death, inability, or neglect to act of such custodian. (Aug. 3, 1956, 70 Stat. 1030, ch. 947, § 9.)

(a) The term "security" as used in sections 21-214 to 21-224 means any note, stock, bond, debenture, evidence of indebtedness, collateral trust certificate, transferable share, voting trust certificate, certificate of deposit for a security or, in general, any interest or instrument commonly known as a security, or any certificate of interest or participation in, temporary or interim certificate for, or warrant or right to subscribe to or purchase, any of the foregoing.

(b) A security is in "registered form" when its terms specify a person entitled to the security or to the rights it evidences and specify that its transfer may be registered upon books maintained for that purpose by or on behalf of an issuer.

(c) A security is in "bearer form" when it runs to bearer according to its terms and not by reason of any endorsement.

(d) The term "member of the minor's family" as used in sections 21-214 to 21-224 means the minor's parents, grandparents, brothers, sisters, uncles and aunts, whether of the whole blood or the half blood, or by or through legal adoption.

(e) The term "legal representative" as used in sections 21-214 to 21-224 means, as may be appropriate in the circumstances, the executor, administrator, general guardian, or committee (conservator) of the property of the person to whose legal representative reference is made.

(f) A gift made under authority of sections 21-214 to 21-224 to a guardian of the minor as custodian shall be deemed to have satisfied the requirements of said sections if the person to whom delivery has been made is either guardian of the person or guardian of the property of the minor, duly appointed in the District of Columbia or in the State, Territory or country where the minor was domiciled at the time of the delivery of the gift. (Aug. 3, 1956, 70 Stat. 1030, ch. 947, § 10.)

Sections 21-214 to 21-224 shall not be construed as providing an exclusive method for making gifts of securities to minors. (Aug. 3, 1956, 70 Stat. 1031, ch. 947, § 11.)

The equity court shall have full power and authority to superintend and direct the affairs of persons non compos mentis, and to appoint a committee or trustees for such persons after hearing the nearest relatives of such person, or some of them if residing within the jurisdiction of the court, and to make such orders and decrees for the care of their persons and the management and preservation of their estates, including the collection, sale, exchange, and reinvestment of their personal estate, as to the court may seem proper. In the event that the person has no known relative residing within the jurisdiction of the court, then the court shall appoint some disinterested person to act as guardian ad litem for such person in the proceedings for the appointment of a committee or trustee. The committee or trustee shall account for all profit and increase of the estate of such person and the annual value thereof and shall be credited for taxes, repairs, improvements, expenses. The court shall allow a reasonable compensation for services rendered by the committee not exceeding a commission of 5 per centum of the amounts collected if and when disbursed. The court may, upon such terms as under the circumstances of the case it may deem proper, decree the conveyance and release of any right of dower of a person non compos mentis, whether the same be inchoate or otherwise. (Mar. 3, 1901, ch. 854, § 115b, as added June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 524, ch. 1329, and amended Feb. 10, 1927, 44 Stat. 1067, ch. 100.)

1. Adjudication as necessary

This section is not operative until a person has been adjudged non compos mentis except in case of application for an ancillary committee. Cooper v. Burton (1942, 127 F. 2d 741, 75 U.S. App. D.C. 298).

A general or domiciliary committee for an allegedly insane person in New Jersey could not be appointed by District of Columbia courts without an adjudication of insanity, and there could not be an adjudication of insanity in absence of personal jurisdiction over the person. Id.

This section relates solely to appointment of committees or trustees for persons who have been adjudged non compos mentis, and it could not be relied on in support of a petition to obtain an adjudication to that effect. Id.

2. Allegations of petition

Under no statute is court authorized to commit any person for mental examination on petition which fails to state facts upon which an allegation of present insanity is based. In the Matter of Dallas O. Williams (1958, 157 F. Supp. 871, affirmed 252 F. 2d 629, 102 U.S. App. D.C. 248).

3. Costs and maintenance of ward committed to Government Hospital

District of Columbia has an action against the committee of an insane person with homicidal tendencies, who has been committed to Government Hospital for the Insane, to recover from his estate for costs and maintenance. DePue v. District of Columbia (45 App. D.C. 54, Ann. Cas. 1917E, 414).

4. Functions of committee

Under law of District of Columbia, committee of an incompetent is the mere conservator of the ward's estate and his authority is mainly ministerial or administrative. In re Estate of Church (1956, 141 F. Supp. 703).

Under law of District of Columbia, committee of an incompetent cannot, without authority of the court which appointed him, exercise a right which is personal to the incompetent or perform an act which is contrary to the incompetent's intentions expressed before his disability. Id.

This section conferring on equity court full power and authority to superintend and direct affairs of persons non compos mentis, implies that any discretionary power of committee of an incompetent must be exercised under supervision of the appointing court. Id.

5. Hearing to be allowed relatives

Appointment before hearing relatives is voidable and not void. Coleman v. Schwartz (1921, 268 F. 701, 50 App. D.C. 111).

6. Lunatic's suit for annulment of marriage

Lunatic may file suit for annulment of marriage, through next friend, but committee should be joined as party defendant. Mackey v. Peters (22 App. D. C. 341).

7. Procedural requirements

Procedural requirements of civil insanity statute were enacted by Congress for protection of all persons alleged to be insane in civil proceedings, and those statutory safeguards are not to be withheld from those with criminal records. In the Matter of Dallas O. Williams (1958, 157 F. Supp. 871, affirmed 252 F. 2d 629, 102 U. S. App. D. C. 248).

8. Procedure for commitment

This section dealing with court's power to superintend and direct affairs of persons who have been adjudged non compos mentis provides no procedure for commitment of insane persons. In the Matter of Dallas O. Williams (1958, 157 F. Supp. 871, affirmed 252 F. 2d 629, 102 U.S. App. D.C. 248).

9. Property, jurisdiction over

District of Columbia courts have power to grant protection to property of insane persons wherever they may be at a particular time, if the property itself is located in the District. Cooper v. Burton (1942, 127 F. 2d 741, 75 U. S. App. D. C. 298).

10. Property rights of surviving co-owner

Where one purchased United States Savings Bonds in her own name and in name of her son as co-owners, and mother then became incompetent and her committee unnecessarily redeemed bonds without authorization of court or notice to co-owner son, and mother then died, son was entitled to substituted bearer bonds or to whatever funds could be traced to bearer bonds which existed at time of mother's death. In re Estate of Church (1956, 141 F. Supp. 703).

11. Reimbursement

Under section 21-318 providing for commitment of insane person and that committee of such person, if estate is sufficient for purpose, shall pay cost to District of Columbia for maintenance, and that, if it appears that insane person has not sufficient estate out of which his maintenance may "properly" be fully met, then court may order payment by relatives of such sum necessary to provide for maintenance, the word "properly" does not refer to adequacy of estate after making allowance for support of dependents, but refers to general equity power of court to make such orders and decrees for management and preservation of insane person's estate as to court may seem proper, and hence act does not give authority to fix payments by committee at less than full cost of care where funds of estate are adequate. District of Columbia v. Graves (1952, 104 F. Supp. 538).

Provision that the committee or trustee of insane person shall reimburse the District for care and expenses up to the time of the appointment of such committee or trustee was intended to relate back to the date of the passage of the act and no further. Baker v. District of Columbia (39 App. D. C. 42).

12. Residence

The United States District Court for the District of Columbia has no power to adjudicate the mental condition of a lunatic in New Jersey because she formerly lived in the District. Cooper v. Burton (1942, 127 F. 2d 741, 75 U. S. App. D. C. 298).

13. Selection of committee

Court has discretion in selection of committee. Coleman v. Schwartz (1921, 268 F. 701, 50 App. D.C. 111).

No person shall be appointed by any court of the District of Columbia as committee or trustee if such person is serving as committee or trustee of as many as five non compos mentis persons. (Mar. 3, 1927, 44 Stat. 1383, ch. 349.)

The equity court shall have the same power in respect of the freehold or leasehold estates of such persons as is provided for in relation to the estates of infants, to be exercised upon the application of the guardian, trustee, or committee of such person; and upon the death of any such person non compos mentis the proceeds of any sale of his estate which may have been invested otherwise than in real estate shall be deemed real estate, and shall descend as the property or estate would if it had not been sold. (Mar. 3, 1901, ch. 854, § 115c, as added June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 524, ch. 1329.)

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Jurisdiction of court

Courts of equity have no inherent jurisdiction to decree sale of lunatic's property for better investment. Clark v. Mathewson (7 App. D. C. 382).

The said court may order any part of the estate of a person non compos mentis, for whom a committee, guardian, or trustee has been appointed, to be sold, when necessary for his maintenance, upon application of said committee, guardian, or trustee, and full proof of the necessity of such sale. Upon the application of any judgment creditor or mortgagee of a person non compos mentis the court may decree a sale of the real or personal estate of such non compos mentis, or such part thereof as may be necessary to pay the claim of such creditor, upon being satisfied that such claim is just and there are no other means of paying the same. (Mar. 3, 1901, ch. 854, § 115d, as added June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 524, ch. 1329.)

CROSS REFERENCE

Liability of relatives or committee for costs of maintenance and treatment, see § 21-318.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

1. Payment of expenses of incompetent

It is the duty of the committee or trustee to pay maintenance charges up to the date of appointment, and the expense thereafter becomes a liability of the lunatic's estate, to be enforced under the general statutes for the administration of lunatic's property. Fitzhugh v. District of Columbia (1940, 109 F. 2d 837, 71 App. D.C. 290).

St. Elizabeths Hospital is a United States Government institution, but insane persons residing in the District of Columbia are admitted and the expense of their support and treatment is chargeable to the District of Columbia. Id.

No sales of the property of infants or persons non compos mentis made by authority of sections 21-301 to 21-304 shall be valid and effectual to pass title to the property sold until they have been reported to and ratified by the court. (Mar. 3, 1901, ch. 854, § 115e, as added June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 524, ch. 1329.)

Proceedings instituted upon petition of the commissioners of the District of Columbia to determine the mental condition of alleged indigent insane persons and persons alleged to be insane, with homicidal or otherwise dangerous tendencies shall be according to the provisions of the code of law for the District of Columbia relating to lunacy proceedings. (Feb. 23, 1905, 33 Stat. 740, ch. 738, § 1.)

CODIFICATION

Act Mar. 3, 1903, 32 Stat. 1043, ch. 1006, § 1, which required proceedings to commit indigent insane persons, and insane persons having violent or dangerous tendencies to be taken in the equity court of the District and to be in conformity with the law in force in the District on Jan. 30, 1899, is omitted as superseded by this section. Insanity proceedings are presently covered by act Aug. 9, 1939, 53 Stat. 1293, ch. 620, which is classified to section 21-310 et seq.

§ 21-307. Jury in lunacy proceedings instituted by Commissioners—Appointment of committee or trustee—Costs and expense of maintenance—Payment.

The jury to be used in case the commissioners of the District of Columbia are the petitioners shall be impaneled by the United States marshal for said District, upon order of the court, from the jurors in attendance upon the criminal courts of said District, who shall perform such services in addition to and as part of their duties in said criminal courts: Provided, That during such time as jurors are not in attendance upon said criminal courts the court may direct the said marshal to impanel the jurors in attendance upon the municipal court of said District, who shall perform such duties in addition to and as part of their duties in said municipal court; or the said court may direct a special jury to be summoned for such inquisitions. In case any such person adjudged to be of unsound mind has property, real or personal, the equity court of said District shall have full power in the same cause to appoint a committee or trustee of the person and estate of such person, according to the provisions of section 21-301, and such committee or trustee shall reimburse, out of the funds of the lunatic, the District of Columbia for all court costs expended or incurred by it and for all moneys by it expended or costs incurred in caring for and treating such insane person up to the time of such appointment. (Feb. 23, 1905, 33 Stat. 740, ch. 738, § 1; Apr. 1, 1942, 56 Stat. 190, ch. 207, § 1.)

CONSOLIDATION OF POLICE COURT AND MUNICIPAL COURT

"Municipal court" was substituted for "police court" to conform to act Apr. 1, 1942, which consolidated the Police Court and the Municipal Court. See section 11-751.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Claim against veterans' committee 1
Reimbursement 2

1. Claim against veterans' committee

District of Columbia could not recover, out of funds paid by Veterans' Administration to committee of veteran, for payments made to hospital for veteran's maintenance and treatment prior to appointment of committee for veteran. District of Columbia v. Reilly etc. (1957, 249 F. 2d 524, 102 U. S. App. D. C. 9).

2. Reimbursement

Where insane person was committed to hospital and committee was appointed of person and estate, and committee was ordered to pay certain sum, less than actual cost, to District of Columbia for hospital care, upon death of insane person, even if estate were inadequate to satisfy entire amount of balance of cost of care, District would be entitled to judgment for entire balance and to be paid its pro rata share out of proceeds of estate on same basis as any other creditor. District of Columbia v. Graves (1952, 104 F. Supp. 538).

There is hereby established a Commission on Mental Health (hereinafter referred to as the commission), which shall examine alleged insane persons, inquire into the affairs of such persons, and the affairs of those persons legally liable as hereinafter provided for the support of said alleged insane persons, and make reports and recommendations to the court as to the necessity of treatment, the commitment, and payment of the expense of maintenance and treatment of such insane persons. The said commission shall be drawn from a panel of nine, who shall be appointed by the judges of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia.

Eight members of said panel shall be physicians who have been practicing medicine in the District of Columbia, and who have had not less than five years' experience in the diagnosis and treatment of mental diseases, none of whom is financially interested in the hospital in which the alleged insane person is to be confined, and the ninth member shall be a member of the bar of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia who has been engaged in the general active practice of law in the District of Columbia for a period of at least five years prior to his appointment. Each physician member of the panel shall be assigned by the Chief Judge of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia to active service on the commission for three months in each calendar year, and the Chief Judge may change such assignments at any time at his discretion. The two physician members on active service and the lawyer member shall constitute the commission for the purposes of this section. The members to whom any case is referred shall continue to act in respect to that case until its final disposition, unless the court shall otherwise order. Physician members of the commission may practice their profession during their tenure of office. The lawyer member of the commission shall be chairman thereof, and it shall be his duty, and he shall have authority to direct the proceedings and hearings in such a manner as to insure dependable ascertainment of the facts, by relevant, competent, and material evidence, and so as to insure a fair and lawful conduct and disposition of the case. The lawyer member shall devote his entire time to the work of the commission. The judges shall also appoint an alternate lawyer member of the commission, who shall have the same qualifications as that member, and who may be designated by the Chief Judge to act as a member of the commission in absence of the lawyer member; for such service the alternate shall receive for each day of actual service the same compensation as fixed in accordance with the provisions of the Classification Act of 1949, as amended, for the lawyer member of the commission. Original appointments of physicians shall be two each for one, two, three, and four years, respectively, the lawyer member to be appointed for four years. Thereafter appointments shall be for four years each. The salaries of the members of the commission and of employees shall be fixed in accordance with the provisions of the Classification Act of 1949, as amended.

The said commission shall act in all respects under the direction of the equity court. The court may compel, by subpoena, the appearance of alleged insane persons before the commission for examination, and may compel the attendance of witnesses before the commission. If it shall appear to the satisfaction of the commission that the appearance before it of any alleged insane person is prevented by reason of the mental or physical condition of such person, the commission may, in its discretion, examine such person at the hospital in which such person may be confined, or, with the consent of the relatives, or of the person with whom such person may reside, at the residence of the alleged insane person.

The court may in its discretion appoint an attorney or guardian ad litem to represent the alleged insane person at any hearing before the commission or before the court, or before the court and jury, and shall allow the attorney or guardian ad litem so appointed a reasonable fee for his services. Such fees may be charged against the estate or property, if any, of the alleged insane person, or taxed as costs against the petitioner in the proceedings, or, in the case of an indigent person, charged against the funds of the commission, as the court, in its discretion may direct.

The office and records of the sanitary officer, District of Columbia, are hereby transferred from the Metropolitan Police Department to the commission and the sanitary officer shall be secretary of the commission. Suitable quarters shall be provided for the commission by the commissioners of the District of Columbia. (June 8, 1938, 52 Stat. 625, ch. 326, § 2; Aug. 9, 1939, 53 Stat. 1299, ch. 620, § 16; June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 991, ch. 646, § 32 (a), (b); May 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 107, ch. 139, § 127; Aug. 2, 1949, 63 Stat. 889, ch. 383, § 8; Oct. 25, 1949, 63 Stat. 889, ch. 710; Oct. 28, 1949, 63 Stat. 972, ch. 782, title XI, § 1106(a).)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Appointment of counsel 1
Habeas corpus proceeding 2
Representation by counsel 3

1. Appointment of counsel

Alleged insane person has a right to be represented by counsel in proceeding to commit him as a person of unsound mind, and if he is not so represented independently the court shall appoint either an attorney or guardian ad litem. Dooling v. Overholser (1957, 243 F. 2d 825, 100 U. S. App. D. C. 247).

Where proceeding was commenced to commit person to hospital as a person of unsound mind, and court appointed counsel for such person and granted her request that counsel be discharged, such person was not represented by counsel or guardian ad litem at proceeding, and her commitment was invalid. Id.

2. Habeas corpus proceeding

Even though it appears factually on a habeas corpus hearing that petitioner is insane, if he has been confined under a void statute or a void proceeding, he is entitled to order of discharge so far as his then confinement is concerned. Dooling v. Overholser (1957, 243 F. 2d 825, 100 U. S. App. D. C. 247).

Where person of unsound mind had been committed to hospital under invalid proceeding, habeas corpus proceeding would be remanded to district court for discharge of party from custody unless within five days after entry of order new incompetency proceedings were instituted. Id.

Where petitioner seeks writ of habeas corpus to obtain release from confinement in mental hospital on ground that his mental health is restored, and petitioner demands an examination by independent experts, or in a doubtful case, even in absence of such a demand, it is the right of court to seek assistance of Commission on Mental Health in determining sanity of petitioner. De Marcos v. Overholser (1943, 137 F. 2d 698, 78 U.S. App. D.C. 131, certiorari denied 64 S. Ct. 157, 320 U. S. 785, 88 L. Ed. 472, rehearing denied 64 S. Ct. 204, 320 U. S. 813, 88 L. Ed. 491).

This section establishing the Commission of Mental Health vests a discretion in court to require the Commission's expert assistance in a habeas corpus proceeding in which by reason of his poverty petitioner is unable to secure the testimony of other professional witnesses. Id.

In habeas corpus proceeding where petitioner sought release from confinement on ground that his mental health was restored, and requested that court provide expert witnesses in petitioner's behalf, not members of Commission on Mental Health, court denying request should have offered petitioner an examination by the Commission, but defect was cured by petitioner's insistence in appellate court that such relief if offered would be refused. Id.

In habeas corpus proceeding by petitioner who had been duly committed to hospital for insane pursuant to this chapter, the record raised sufficient doubt as to petitioner's insanity at present time to require a re-examination of his mental condition by the Commission on Mental Health in accordance with this chapter, under which he was committed. Ex parte De Marcos (1946, 65 F. Supp. 231).

Where evidence of petitioner seeking release from detention and of doctor-psychiatrist in charge of petitioner was insufficient to create doubt on judgment of those detaining petitioner as insane, trial judge did not abuse his discretion in failing to submit without request, question of petitioner's mental condition to the Commission on Mental Health. Appel v. Overholser (1948, 164 F. 2d 511, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 379).

3. Representation by counsel

In proceedings before commission on mental health relative to sanity of person, such person must be represented either by an attorney or a guardian ad litem who is an impartial person not otherwise interested in the proceeding; the guardian ad litem need not always be an attorney, he may be a relative or friend selected by the court. Dooling v. Overholser (1957, 243 F. 2d 825, 100 U. S. App. D. C. 247).

Where question was raised whether representation by counsel or guardian ad litem was required in incompetency proceeding before Mental Health Commission and Court of Appeals held the commitment invalid because of absence of representation before both the commission and the court, the ruling as to need for representation before commission was not obiter dictum even if commitment could have been found to be invalid for lack of representation in court alone. Id.

The salary of the executive secretary of the Commission on Mental Health shall be at the rate of $3,000 per annum and the salary of each physician-member shall be at the rate of $3,800 per annum. (July 15, 1939, 53 Stat. 1007, ch. 281, § 1; June 12, 1940, 54 Stat. 307, ch. 333, § 1.)

CODIFICATION

Provisions relating to the salary of each physician-member were inserted by act June 12, 1940.

Any person with whom an alleged insane person may reside, or at whose house he may be, or the father or mother, husband or wife, brother or sister, or the child of lawful age of any such person, or the nearest relative or friend available, or the committee of such person, or an officer of any charitable institution, home, or hospital in which such person may be, or any duly accredited officer or agent of the Board of Public Welfare, or any officer authorized to make arrests in the District of Columbia who has arrested any alleged insane person under the provisions of sections 21-326 to 21-331, may apply for a writ de lunatico inquirendo and an order of commitment, or either thereof, for any alleged insane person in the District of Columbia, by filing in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia a verified petition therefor, containing a statement of the facts upon which the allegation of insanity is based.

Any person believing he has, or is about to, become mentally ill may, upon his own written application, in the discretion of the chief psychiatrist of Gallinger Municipal Hospital, enter Gallinger Municipal Hospital for observation and place himself subject to examination and commitment as hereinafter provided. (Aug. 9, 1939, 53 Stat. 1293, ch. 620, § 1; June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 991, ch. 646, § 32(b); May 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 107, ch. 139, § 127.)

CHANGE OF NAME

PRIOR PROVISIONS

Act Mar. 3, 1901, ch. 854, § 115a, as added June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 524, ch. 1329, and amended Apr. 19, 1920, 41 Stat.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Commitment procedure	2
Community interest	9
Construction	3
With other laws	4
Decision under prior law	1

Right to counsel	7
Sufficiency of petition	8

1. Decision under prior law

The United States District Court is not shown to have lost jurisdiction over either the subject matter of the criminal prosecution or the person of petitioner, by reason of the proceedings to determine his sanity, or those connected therewith or consequent thereon (D. C. 1901 Edit. § 927). Ormsby v. United States (C.C.A. 6, 1921, 273 F. 977).

2. Commitment procedure

When person suspected of insanity is also accused of crime, trial court is not to be permitted to commit such person to a mental hospital without benefit of a jury or of the Mental Health Commission, even though the person is competent to stand trial, but there must be a report and recommendation by the commission, a jury's verdict if demanded, and a district court order. Williams v. Overholser, Sup't etc. (1958, 259 F. 2d 175, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 18).

3. Construction

Where aunt was of unsound mind, she could not care for herself and her property, niece was interested in her welfare, and suitable committee had been appointed after proceedings in which all relatives took part and to which none objected, the description under this section of the person who may file petition for appointment of committee should be liberally construed. Duvall v. Humphrey (1946, 153 F. 2d 798, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 403).

4. Construction with other laws

Section 21-326 providing for apprehension and detention by police of insane persons found in public places must be read together with other sections of civil insanity statute, and particularly this section and section 21-311 implementing procedure initiated under section 21-326. In the Matter of Dallas O. Williams (1958, 157 F. Supp. 871, affirmed 252 F. 2d 629, 102 U.S. App. D.C. 248).

5. Habeas corpus

Where, after setting aside accused's plea of guilty to charge of public drunkenness, and committing accused to hospital for examination and observation, the municipal court found accused of unsound mind and ordered him confined to another hospital but did not determine whether accused was competent to stand trial, accused would be entitled to release on writ of habeas corpus unless the municipal court determined that he was mentally incompetent to stand trial and ordered him confined on that ground or unless proper lunacy proceedings were instituted. Williams v. Overholser, Sup't etc. (1958, 259 F. 2d 175, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 18).

Even though it appears factually on a habeas corpus hearing that petitioner is insane, if he has been confined under a void statute or a void proceeding, he is entitled to order of discharge so far as his then confinement is concerned. Dooling v. Overholser (1957, 243 F. 2d 825, 100 U.S. App. D.C. 247).

Where person of unsound mind had been committed to hospital under invalid proceeding, habeas corpus proceeding would be remanded to district court for discharge of party from custody unless within five days after entry of order new incompetency proceedings were instituted. Id.

6. Nearest relative available

Under this section authorizing "nearest relative available" to file petition for writ of de lunatico inquirendo and for appointment of committee, the quoted phrase is an elastic term, and is not intended to require an aged relative, who might make himself available, if no one else were available, to bear the burden of starting a proceeding, but it is intended to exclude officious intermeddling. Duvall v. Humphrey (1946, 153 F. 2d 798, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 403).

Niece was "nearest relative available" entitled to file petition for writ of de lunatico inquirendo and for appointment of committee for aunt, where her 81-year-old brother and her 84-year-old sister joined with other relatives in requesting appointment of a committee. Id.

7. Right to counsel

Alleged insane person has a right to be represented by counsel in proceeding to commit him as a person of unsound mind, and if he is not so represented independently the court shall appoint either an attorney or guardian ad litem. Dooling v. Overholser (1957, 243 F. 2d 825, 100 U.S. App. D.C. 247).

Where proceeding was commenced to commit person to hospital as a person of unsound mind, and court appointed counsel for such person and granted her request that counsel be discharged, such person was not represented by counsel or guardian ad litem at proceeding, and her commitment was invalid. Id.

8. Sufficiency of petition

Government's verified petition which failed to allege that person arrested by police was of unsound mind or insane did not comply with this section permitting a commitment proceeding to be commenced by arrest of an alleged insane person and defect in petition was not remedied by two psychiatric reports attached thereto where such reports were unverified and ambiguous in terms employed and conclusions reached. Overholser Supt. etc. v. Williams (1958, 252 F. 2d 629, 102 U.S. App. D.C. 248).

9. Community interest

The community is not without means of protecting itself if at time that a prisoner's sentence ends he is found to be a sexual psychopath, or to be insane or mentally incompetent. Carter v. United States (1960, 283 F. 2d 200, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 405).

The existence of possibilities to protect society from, and to treat, prisoner convicted of sodomy, or other sexual crimes, in the event he is found to be a sexual psychopath, or insane, of unsound mind or otherwise defective during imprisonment or at time his sentence ends, does not relieve bench and bar of responsibility of endeavoring to reach at the earliest possible stage, ideally prior to trial and sentence, the approach to a particular case which appears to be most just and appropriate, having regard to the individual's mental condition, his history, and the possibility of rehabilitating him and restoring him to usefulness in the community. Id.

Upon the filing with the court of a verified petition as hereinabove provided, accompanied by the affidavits of two or more responsible residents of the District of Columbia setting forth that they believe the person therein named to be insane or of unsound mind, the length of time they have known such person, that they believe such person to be incapable of managing his own affairs, and that such person is not fit to be at large or go unrestrained, and that if such person be permitted to remain at liberty the rights of persons and property will be jeopardized or the preservation of public peace imperiled or the commission of crime rendered probable, and that such person is a fit subject for treatment by reason of his or her mental condition, the court, or any judge thereof in vacation, may, in its or his discretion, issue an attachment for the immediate apprehension and detention, for preliminary examination, of such person in Saint Elizabeths Hospital and, unless found by the staff of Saint Elizabeths Hospital to be of sound mind, therein for a period not exceeding thirty days. Any person so apprehended and detained shall be given an examination within five days of his admission into Saint Elizabeths Hospital by the staff of Saint Elizabeths Hospital. The Superintendent of Saint Elizabeths Hospital is hereby authorized to receive and detain such persons, at the expense of the District of Columbia.

If any person while a patient in Gallinger Municipal Hospital being observed for his or her mental condition can not be cared for or treated adequately in said hospital or if such person be in need of treatment which can not be given properly in said hospital, then the superintendent of Gallinger Municipal Hospital may effect the transfer and temporary commitment of such person to Saint Elizabeths Hospital by executing a petition as provided by section 21-310, accompanied by the certificate of the chief psychiatrist of Gallinger Municipal Hospital setting forth that said patient is of unsound mind, can not be cared for or treated adequately in Gallinger Municipal Hospital, should not be allowed to remain at liberty and go unrestrained, and that said patient is a fit subject for treatment in Saint Elizabeths Hospital on account of his mental condition. The superintendent of Saint Elizabeths Hospital is authorized to receive and detain any patient so transferred from Gallinger Municipal Hospital at the expense of the District of Columbia pending his formal commitment or other order of the court.

Persons arrested under the provisions of sections 21-326 to 21-331 shall be detained in Gallinger Municipal Hospital pending the filing of a petition as provided in section 21-310. Such petition shall be filed within forty-eight hours after such person shall have been admitted into Gallinger Municipal Hospital, or, if such forty-eight-hour period shall expire on a Sunday or legal holiday, then not later than noon of the next succeeding day which is not a Sunday or legal holiday. The court, or any judge thereof in vacation, may, upon being satisfied of the sufficiency of the petition, sign an order authorizing the continued detention of said person in Gallinger Municipal Hospital and, unless found by the staff of Gallinger Municipal Hospital to be of sound mind, in Saint Elizabeths Hospital for a period not exceeding thirty days from the time of his apprehension and detention. If such petition be not filed, and such order of court obtained within the aforementioned period, the person shall be discharged forthwith. If said staff shall find that such person is of unsound mind and suitable for treatment by reason of mental illness, the superintendent of said hospital may immediately transfer such person to Saint Elizabeths Hospital, and shall report the fact of such transfer to the Commission. The superintendent of Saint Elizabeths Hospital is hereby authorized to receive and detain persons so transferred, at the expense of the District of Columbia.

If as a result of examination, the staff of Gallinger Municipal Hospital or Saint Elizabeths Hospital shall find that any person detained in Gallinger Municipal Hospital or Saint Elizabeths Hospital pursuant to the provisions of this section is of sound mind, he shall be discharged forthwith by said Gallinger Municipal Hospital or Saint Elizabeths Hospital, and the petition, if any, shall be dismissed.

Any petition filed in the equity court for a writ de lunatico inquirendo or for an order of commitment of any alleged insane person, shall be referred by the court to the Commission for report and recommendation within such time as the court may designate, not exceeding seven days, which time may be extended by the court for good cause shown, and in such event the period of temporary commitment in Saint Elizabeths Hospital may be extended by the court for such additional time as the court shall deem necessary. The Commission shall examine the alleged insane person and any other person, including any suggested by the alleged insane person, his relatives, friends, or representatives, whose testimony may be relevant, competent, and material upon the issue of insanity; and the Commission shall afford opportunity for hearing to any alleged insane person, his relatives, friends, or representatives. At all hearings the alleged insane person shall have the right to be represented by counsel.

The Commission is hereby authorized to conduct its examination and hearings of cases elsewhere than at the offices of said Commission in its discretion, according to the circumstances of the case.

If in the determination of the Commission he be found not to be sane, then it shall be the duty of the Commission to apply to the court for a date for a hearing. In all cases before said hearing, the said Commission shall cause to be served personally upon the patient a written notice of the time and place of final hearing at least five days before the date fixed. Five days' notice of the time and place of the hearing shall in all cases be mailed to or served upon the applicant, but in case the applicant is not the husband, wife, or nearest relative, the notice shall be mailed to or served upon the husband, wife, or nearest relative, if possible. The notice shall contain a statement that if the patient desires to oppose the application for a final order of commitment, he may appear personally or by attorney at the time and place fixed for the hearing. Proof of service shall be made at the hearing. The court may in its discretion appoint an attorney or guardian ad litem to represent the alleged insane person at any hearing before the court, or before the court and jury, and shall allow the attorney or guardian ad litem so appointed a reasonable fee for his services. Such fees may be charged against the estate or property, if any, of the alleged insane person.

If a demand is made for a jury trial, the superintendent of Gallinger Municipal Hospital or Saint Elizabeths Hospital shall see that the patient has been given opportunity to appear personally or by attorney at the hearing and assist him in communicating with his friends, relatives, or attorney. If the superintendent shall certify that in his opinion it would be prejudicial to the health of the patient or unsafe to produce the patient at the inquiry, then such patient shall not be required to be produced.

Proof of service of the required notices shall be made at the hearing. (Aug. 9, 1939, 53 Stat. 1294, ch. 620, § 2; June 30, 1948, 62 Stat. 1195, ch. 774, §§ 1, 2.)

CODIFICATION

As enacted, the opening provision of this section read: "Upon the filing with the court of a verified petition as provided in section 1 of the act approved June 8, 1938." This referred to D.C. Code, 1929 ed., Supp. V, title 16, § 41, which has been superseded by § 1 of ch. 620 of act Aug. 9, 1939, 53 Stat. 1293, which appears in this Code as § 21-310.

AMENDMENT

1948—Act June 30, 1948, amended first paragraph to require persons apprehended to be examined by the staff of Saint Elizabeths Hospital rather than by the Staff of Gallinger Municipal Hospital, and amended fourth paragraph to provide for the release of such person if found to be of sound mind.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Appointment of counsel 1
Construction with other laws 2
Costs and attorney's fees 3
Grounds for commitment 4
Habeas corpus 5
Hearing 6
Interim detention 7
Representation by counsel 8
Sufficiency of petition 9

1. Appointment of counsel

Alleged insane person has a right to be represented by counsel in proceeding to commit him as a person of unsound mind, and if he is not so represented independently the court shall appoint either an attorney or guardian ad litem. Dooling v. Overholser (1957, 243 F. 2d 825, 100 U.S. App. D. C. 247).

Where proceeding was commenced to commit person to hospital as a person of unsound mind, and court appointed counsel for such person and granted her request that counsel be discharged, such person was not represented by counsel or guardian ad litem at proceeding, and her commitment was invalid. Id.

2. Construction with other laws

Section 21-326 providing for apprehension and detention by police of insane persons found in public places must be read together with other sections of civil insanity statute, and particularly this section and section 21-310 implementing procedure initiated under section 21-326. In the Matter of Dallas O. Williams (1958, 157 F. Supp. 871, affirmed 252 F. 2d 629, 102 U. S. App. D. C. 248).

3. Costs and attorney's fees

Petitioner for writ de lunatico inquirendi, who contracted with counsel voluntarily, must bear expense of counsel and taxable costs of proceedings and costs and expense of petitioner's counsel were not chargeable against patient. In re Colohan (1950, 93 F. Supp. 641).

Petitioner for writ de lunatico inquirendi was not required to rely on corporation counsel but could secure counsel of own choice. Id.

4. Grounds for commitment

No District of Columbia statute or inherent equity power permits commitment to institution upon mere showing that man is potentially dangerous to others. In the Matter of Dallas O. Williams (1958, 157 F. Supp. 871, affirmed 252 F. 2d 629, 102 U. S. App. D. C. 248).

5. Habeas corpus

Even though it appears factually on a habeas corpus hearing that petitioner is insane, if he has been confined under a void statute or a void proceeding, he is entitled to order of discharge so far as his then confinement is concerned. Dooling v. Overholser (1957, 243 F. 2d 825, 100 U. S. App. D. C. 247).

Where person of unsound mind had been committed to hospital under invalid proceeding, habeas corpus proceeding would be remanded to district court for discharge of party from custody unless within five days after entry of order new incompetency proceedings were instituted. Id.

6. Hearing

This section providing that when mental health commission has made determination that person is found not to be sane, commission has duty to apply to court for hearing and commission shall cause to be served personally upon patient written notice of time and place of final hearing, hearing for which notice is required is hearing before court rather than hearing before mental health commission. Lafferty v. District of Columbia (1960, 277 F. 2d 348, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 318).

Where patient was not given required statutory notice of court hearing leading to adjudication that he was of unsound mind and he did not learn of decree until he returned to District of Columbia, after an absence, about a year after its date, he was entitled to have decree set aside, and court's denial of a petition which he had filed before he had learned that he had been adjudged of unsound mind and which sought review of mental health commission report and recommendations did not make issues presented on petition for review of decree adjudging him of unsound mind res judicata. Id.

Petitioner's delay of some two and one-half years in instituting proceedings for review of decree adjudging him to have been of unsound mind after he learned of decree which was entered without his having been afforded required statutory notice of hearing did not, under circumstances, constitute an unreasonable delay or a ground for denial of relief. Id.

7. Interim detention

Where police officer had woman, who cut her wrist taken to hospital where she was placed in psychiatric ward, on ground that she had attempted suicide, doctors at hospital were not civilly liable in false imprisonment action for interim detention of woman prior to receipt of court order. Orvis v. Brickman (1952, 196 F. 2d 762, 90 U. S. App. D. C. 266).

8. Representation by counsel

In proceedings before commission on mental health relative to sanity of person, such person must be represented either by an attorney or a guardian ad litem who is an impartial person not otherwise interested in the proceeding; the guardian ad litem need not always be an attorney, he may be a relative or friend selected by the court. Dooling v. Overholser (1957, 243 F. 2d 825, 100 U. S. App. D. C. 247).

Where question was raised whether representation by counsel or guardian ad litem was required in incompetency proceeding before Mental Health Commission and Court of Appeals held the commitment invalid because of absence of representation before both the commission and the court, the ruling as to need for representation before commission was not obiter dictum even if commitment could be found to be invalid for lack of representation in court alone. Id.

9. Sufficiency of petition

Government's verified petition which failed to allege that person arrested by police was of unsound mind or insane did not comply with section 21-310 permitting a commitment proceeding to be commenced by arrest of an alleged insane person and defect in petition was not remedied by two psychiatric reports attached thereto where such reports were unverified and ambiguous in terms employed and conclusions reached. Overholser Supt. etc. v. Williams (1958, 252 F. 2d 629, 102 U. S. App. D. C. 248).

Upon the receipt of the report and recommendation of the commission, a copy shall be served personally upon the alleged insane person, his guardian ad litem, or his attorney, if he has one, together with notice that he has five days within which to demand a jury trial. A demand for hearing by the court, or a demand for jury trial for the purpose of determining the sanity or insanity of the alleged insane person may be made by the said alleged insane person or by anyone in his behalf, or a jury trial may be ordered by the court upon its own motion. If demand be made for a jury trial, or such trial be ordered by the court on its own motion, the case shall be calendared for trial not more than ten days after demand for hearing by the court for a jury trial, unless the time is extended by the court. The commission, or any of the members thereof, shall be competent and compellable witnesses at any trial or hearing of an alleged insane person. In any case in which a commitment at public expense, in whole or in part, is sought, the corporation counsel or one of his assistants shall represent the petitioner unless said petitioner shall be represented by counsel of his or her own choice. (Aug. 9, 1939, 53 Stat. 1296, ch. 620, § 3.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Confinement without trial 1
Costs and attorney's fees 2
Habeas corpus 3
Presumptions 4

1. Confinement without trial

Where petitioner, seeking writ of habeas corpus, was under indictment for an assault but court found that he was of unsound mind and dangerous, his confinement without criminal trial in ward of hospital which resembled a prison did not deprive him of constitutional rights, since confinement was not due to the indictment. Knighton v. Overholser (1945, 145 F. 2d 860, 79 U.S. App. D. C. 294).

2. Costs and attorney's fees

Petitioner for writ de lunatico inquirendi, who contracted with counsel voluntarily, must bear expense of counsel and taxable costs of proceedings and costs and expense of petitioner's counsel were not chargeable against patient. In re Colohan (1950, 93 F. Supp. 641).

3. Habeas corpus

Where question arose regarding whether procedure in lunacy proceedings was proper but order of adjudication and commitment was set aside and procedure thereafter adopted conformed to legal requirements and resulted in order of adjudication of insanity and of commitment, the allegedly insane person was not entitled to writ of habeas corpus. Wrobel v. Overholser (1945, 145 F. 2d 859, 79 U. S. App. D. C. 293, certiorari denied 65 S. Ct. 712, 324 U. S. 854, 89 L. Ed. 1413).

4. Presumptions

Adjudication of insanity, as long as not rescinded, creates rebuttable presumption that mental incapacity of person continues thereafter, and strength of such presumption is affected by character and causes of the mental disturbance, possibility of lucid intervals, and various other considerations. Life Ins. Co. of Virginia v. Herrmann (D. C. Mun. App. 1944, 35 A. 2d 828).

The jury to be used in lunacy inquisitions in those cases where a jury trial shall be demanded or ordered shall be empaneled, upon order of the court, from the jurors in attendance upon other branches of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, who shall perform such services in addition to and as part of their duties in said court. (Aug. 9, 1939, 53 Stat. 1296, ch. 620, § 4; June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 991, ch. 646, § 32(b); May 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 107, ch. 139, § 127.)

CHANGE OF NAME

If no demand be made for a jury trial, the judge holding court shall determine the sanity or insanity of said alleged insane person, but such judge may, in his discretion, require other proofs, in addition to the petition and report of the commission, or such judge may order the temporary commitment of said alleged insane person for observation or treatment for an additional period of not more than thirty days. The judge may, in his discretion, dismiss the petition notwithstanding the recommendation of the commission. If the judge be satisfied that the alleged insane person is of sound mind, he shall forthwith discharge such person and dismiss the petition. (Aug. 9, 1939, 53 Stat. 1296, ch. 620, § 5.)

NOTE TO DECISION

1. In general

The statute as a whole makes clear that a proceeding in equity is contemplated for initial determination of insanity, and not the writ of habeas corpus. Barry v. Hall (1938, 98 F. 2d 222, 68 App. D.C., 350).

If the judge be satisfied that the alleged insane person is insane, or if a jury shall so find, the judge may commit the insane person as he in his discretion shall find to be for the best interests of the public and of the insane person. In case of a temporary commitment, the court may make additional temporary commitments upon further examination by, and recommendation of, the commission.

The judge may commit the insane person to the custody of the Veterans' Administration for care and treatment in a Veterans' Administration facility, if there has been filed with the court or the Commission on Mental Health, acting under the direction of the court, a certificate executed by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, or his duly authorized representative, showing said insane person to be entitled to such care and treatment, and that facilities therefor are available. (Aug. 9, 1939, 53 Stat. 1296, ch. 620, § 6.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Findings of court 1
Habeas corpus 2

1. Findings of court

Appointment of committee was not invalid because of absence of finding that ward was dangerous, unfit to be at large, and in need of treatment, where ward was not arrested and detained pending trial. Duvall v. Humphrey (1946, 153 F. 2d 798, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 403).

2. Habeas corpus

The issue of sanity or insanity cannot be determined on merits on habeas corpus proceeding instituted by person confined in a hospital for insane, but, if petitioner makes a sufficient showing that he was committed improperly, the judge may enter an order providing for discharge of petitioner unless within a reasonable time a proper proceeding is initiated. Overholser v. Treibly (1945, 147 F. 2d 705, 79 U.S. App. D.C. 389, certiorari denied 66 S. Ct. 38, 326 U.S. 730, 90 L. Ed. 434).

In habeas corpus proceeding by petitioner who had been duly committed to hospital for insane pursuant to statutory provisions therefor, the only question before court was whether record raised sufficient doubt as to petitioner's insanity at present time to justify reopening commitment proceeding. Ex parte De Marcos (1946, 65 F. Supp. 231).

The trial court still has the authority which it has always had to order the immediate discharge of a patient if, after a hearing on habeas corpus proceeding, it be of the opinion that the patient is of sound mind. such remedy is expressly reserved to it by § 21-325. Prior cases to the contrary are overruled. Overholser v. Boddie (1950, 184 F. 2d 240, 87 U.S. App. D.C. 186, 21 A.L.R. 2d 999).

Recommendations of the commission must be made by the unanimous recommendation of the three members acting upon the case. If the three members of the commission be unable to agree upon the recommendation to be made in any case, they shall immediately file with the court a report setting forth the fact that they are unable to agree on the case, and in that event the court shall hear and determine the case, unless the alleged insane person, or someone in his behalf, shall demand a jury trial, in which event the case shall be heard and determined by the court and a jury.

If the commission shall agree upon a recommendation, it shall file with the court a report setting forth its findings of fact and conclusions of law and its recommendation based thereon which recommendation shall be in one of the following forms:

(A) That the person is of sound mind and should be discharged forthwith and the petition dismissed.

(B) That the mental condition of the alleged insane person is such that a definite diagnosis can not be made without further study, or that the mental incapacity of said person will probably be of short duration, and that said person should be further detained and committed in Saint Elizabeths Hospital as hereinbefore provided for, or in any other hospital in the District of Columbia as provided in sections 21-326 to 21-331, for further observation or treatment for such period of time as the court may determine, during which said time the commission shall from time to time examine said person and make a recommendation to the court as to the final disposition of the case.

(C) That the person is of unsound mind and (1) should be committed to Saint Elizabeths Hospital, or any other hospital provided by section 21-329, (a) at public expense, or (b) at the expense of those persons who are required by law, or who will agree to pay for the maintenance and treatment of said insane person, or (c) that the relatives of said insane person, mentioned in section 21-321 are able to pay a specified sum per month toward the support and maintenance of said insane person; (2) is harmless and may safely be committed to the care of his relatives or friends (naming them) who are willing to accept the custody, care, and maintenance of said insane person under conditions specified by the commission; (3) should be committed to the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs for care and treatment in a Veterans' Administration facility: Provided, That there shall be filed with the court or commission a certificate executed by said administrator or his duly authorized representative, showing said person is entitled to such care and treatment and that facilities therefor are available. (Aug. 9, 1939, 53 Stat. 1297, ch. 620, § 7.)

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Indigent insane

In contemplation of the law, the public health service is a friend of the indigent insane. Barry v. Hall (1938, 98 F. 2d 222, 68 App. D.C. 350).

If an insane person be found by the commission, subject to the review of the court, not to be a resident of the District of Columbia, he may be committed by the court to Saint Elizabeths Hospital as a District of Columbia patient until such time as his residence shall have been ascertained. Upon the ascertainment of such insane person's residence in some other jurisdiction, he shall be transferred to the state of such residence. The expense of transferring such patient, including the traveling expenses of necessary attendants to insure his safe transfer, shall be borne by the District of Columbia only if the patient be indigent.

Any insane person found by the commission to have been a resident of the District of Columbia for more than one year prior to the filing of the petition, and any person found within the District of Columbia whose residence can not be ascertained, who is not in confinement on a criminal charge, may be committed by the court to, and confined in, said Saint Elizabeths Hospital, or any other hospital in said District, which, in the judgment of the commission of said District, is properly constructed and equipped for the reception and care of such persons, and the official in charge of which, for the time being, is willing to receive such persons.

"Resident of the District of Columbia," as used in this section, means a person who has maintained his principal place of abode in the District of Columbia for more than one year prior to the filing of the petition provided for in section 21-310.

If it appears that a person found to be insane is harmless and his or her relatives or committee of his or her person are willing and able properly to care for such insane person at some place or institution other than Saint Elizabeths Hospital, the judge may order that such insane person be placed in the care and custody of such relatives or such committee upon their entering into an undertaking to provide for such insane person as the court may direct. (Aug. 9, 1939, 53 Stat. 1297, ch. 620, § 8.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

In general 1
Burden of proof 2
Commission's report 3
Evidence 4
Jurisdiction 5
Petition 6
Principal place of abode 7
Procedure 8
Waiver 9

1. In general

This section providing for commitment of an insane person found not to be a resident of the District of Columbia and for transfer to the state of his residence does not purport to confer the right of transfer on persons found to be resident in the District or whose residence cannot be ascertained, and the finding referred to is the one made in the commitment proceedings. Howard v. Overholser (1942, 130 F. 2d 429, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 166).

This section providing for commitment of an insane person found not to be a resident of the District of Columbia and for transfer to the state of his residence does not contemplate that a committed insane person shall be transferred in any case to the state of his residence without regard to its willingness to receive him, and it is intended that the person shall be delivered into the hands of state officials charged with custody of insane residents. Id.

2. Burden of proof

A committed insane person to establish and enforce his right to be transferred to Colorado as the state of his residence was required to show either that Colorado was willing to receive him into its custody or that there was means of enforcing his right to be received as against the state and its officials. Howard v. Overholser (1942, 130 F. 2d 429, 76 U. S. App. D. C. 166).

3. Commission's report

Where petitioner made no demand for a jury trial or a further hearing by the court under this section after Commission on Mental Health adjudged him of unsound mind and ordered his commitment, the District Court, in habeas corpus proceeding brought to effect petitioner's transfer to Colorado, was authorized to act on commission's report and recommendations without more, except to examine them and find them sufficient. Howard v. Overholser (1942, 130 F. 2d 429, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 166).

4. Evidence

In habeas corpus proceeding brought to effect transfer of petitioner, a committed insane person, to Colorado as the state of his residence, petitioner was not entitled to relief in absence of evidence that Colorado was willing to receive him as a legal resident entitled to admission into the custody of Colorado officials having charge of insane persons. Howard v. Overholser (1942, 130 F. 2d 429, 76 U. S. App. D. C. 166).

Where an inmate of National Soldiers' Home in Togus, Maine, shot and killed one of the physicians of the home and was thereafter committed to St. Elizabeths Hospital in the District of Columbia on finding that he was insane, such person was not entitled to be transferred to Maine on ground that he was a citizen and resident of the State of Maine and not a resident of the District of Columbia in absence of proof that State of Maine was willing to receive and care for him, or to be discharged without proper provision for his care and restraint. Williams v. Overholser (1943, 137 F. 2d 545, 78 U.S. App. D.C. 95).

5. Jurisdiction

In habeas corpus proceeding brought to effect transfer of committed insane person to Colorado as the state of his residence under this section, District of Columbia courts had no power or jurisdiction to enforce Colorado's obligation, even if section obligated Colorado to receive person on showing of residence made, where neither Colorado nor its officials were made parties to proceeding. Howard v. Overholser (1942, 130 F. 2d 429, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 166).

6. Petition

Where petition for writ of habeas corpus to effect transfer of petitioner, a committed insane person, to Colorado did not state a cause of action in that respect, petitioner was not prejudiced by inadequacy of hearing conducted by petitioner in his own behalf with regard to the admission of evidence and other action which competent counsel would have taken, except in a procedural sense, and that was not sufficient to require another hearing. Howard v. Overholser (1942, 130 F. 2d 429, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 166).

7. Principal place of abode

The phrase "principal place of abode" as used in this section providing that a resident of the District of Columbia, as used in such section, means a person who has maintained his principal place of abode in the District of Columbia for more than one year prior to filing of petition for commitment, does not require physical presence. District of Columbia v. Stackhouse (1956, 239 F. 2d 62, 99 U. S. App. D. C. 242).

Where defendant, who was committed to a hospital as an insane person, had her residence in the District of Columbia during her childhood, her subsequent confinement in numerous mental institutions did not effect a change in her residence, nor did the fact that she lived in college towns as a student, during which times she returned home for summer vacations, result in the loss of her District of Columbia residence. Id.

8. Procedure

Where a motion to amend findings of fact and a decree of adjudication and commitment as a person of unsound mind was made eight months after entry of such order, relief from part of judgment ruling that defendant was not a resident of the District of Columbia could be granted by court under rule providing for relief from judgment or order by a court, rather than under rule providing that motions to amend findings of fact must be made not later than ten days after entry of judgment. District of Columbia v. Stackhouse (1956, 239 F. 2d 62, 99 U. S. App. D. C. 242).

9. Waiver

Where committed insane person was ably represented on appeal from judgment dismissing habeas corpus petition by counsel who raised no issue concerning sanity and conceded at argument that a hearing on question of sanity could result only in remand to custody, and adequacy of hearing was questioned only in respect to alleged right of transfer of person to Colorado, counsel's action constituted a "waiver" of any right to further hearing on question of sanity. Howard v. Overholser (1942, 130 F. 2d 429, 76 U. S. App. D. C. 166).

The father, mother, husband, wife, and adult children of an insane person, if of sufficient ability, and the committee or guardian of his or her person and estate, if his or her estate is sufficient for the purpose, shall pay the cost to the District of Columbia of his or her maintenance, including treatment in Saint Elizabeths Hospital or in any other hospital to which the insane person may be committed. It shall be the further duty of said commission, to examine under oath, the father, mother, husband, wife, adult children, and committee, if any, of any alleged insane person whenever such relatives live within the District of Columbia, and to ascertain the ability of such relatives or committee, if any, to maintain or contribute toward the maintenance of such alleged insane person: Provided, That in no case shall said relatives or committee be required to pay more than the actual cost to the District of Columbia of maintenance of such alleged insane person.

If any person hereinabove made liable for the maintenance of an insane person shall fail so to provide or pay for such maintenance, the court shall issue to such person a citation to show cause why he should not be adjudged to pay a portion or all of the expenses of maintenance of such patient. The citation shall be served at least ten days before the hearing thereon. If, upon such hearing, it shall appear to the court that the insane person has not sufficient estate out of which his maintenance may properly be fully met and that he has relatives of the degrees hereinabove mentioned who are parties to the proceedings, and who are able to contribute thereto, the court may make an order requiring payment by such relatives of such sum or sums as it may find they are reasonably able to pay and as may be necessary to provide for the maintenance of such insane person. Said order shall require the payment of such sums to the Board of Public Welfare annually, semiannually, or quarterly as the court may direct. It shall be the duty of the board to collect the said sums due under this section, and to turn the same into the treasury of the United States to the credit of the District of Columbia. Any such order may be enforced against any property of the insane person or of the person liable or undertaking to maintain him in the same way as if it were an order for temporary alimony in a divorce case. (Aug. 9, 1939, 53 Stat. 1298, ch. 620, § 9.)

TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS

Board of Public Welfare abolished and functions transferred to Department of Public Health and Department of Public Welfare, see note under § 3-102.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Claim against veterans' committee 1
Construction with other laws 2
Liability for expenses of incompetent 3
Reimbursement 4
Support of dependents 5

1. Claim against veterans' committee

District of Columbia could not recover, out of funds paid by Veterans' Administration to committee of veteran, for payments made to hospital for veteran's maintenance and treatment prior to appointment of committee for veteran. District of Columbia v. Reilly etc. (1957, 249 F. 2d 524, 102 U. S. App. D. C. 9).

2. Construction with other laws

Section 21-319 giving consideration to support of insane person's dependents in fixing amount of payments to be made to hospital caring for such insane person was repealed by sections 21-310 to 21-318, 21-320 to 21-325, which provide in terms for repeal of inconsistent statutes and which do not authorize giving consideration to support of insane person's dependents in fixing payments to be made by committee of insane person's estate to hospital for cost of care. District of Columbia v. Graves (1952, 104 F. Supp. 538).

3. Liability for expenses of incompetent

The question of a husband's liability for the maintenance of an insane wife in a public institution, "when it shall arise in the future, will be settled" under the act of June 8, 1938, ch. 326. Fitzhugh v. District of Columbia (1940, 109 F. 2d 837, 71 App. D.C. 290).

4. Reimbursement

Where insane person was committed to hospital and committee appointed of his person and estate, and committee was ordered to pay certain sum to District of Columbia for hospital care, which sum was less than actual cost because of need of support of insane person's wife, upon insane person's death, estate was liable for portion of cost of care for which District had not been reimbursed, and in rendering judgment for unpaid balance District Court had no authority to consider need of deceased insane person's dependents for support. District of Columbia v. Graves (1952, 104 F. Supp. 538).

Under section 21-310 et seq., providing for commitment of insane person and that committee of such person, if estate is sufficient for purpose, shall pay cost to District of Columbia for maintenance, and that, if it appears that insane person has not sufficient estate out of which his maintenance may "properly" be fully met, then court may order payment by relatives of such sum necessary to provide for maintenance, the word "properly" does not refer to adequacy of estate after making allowance for support of dependents, but refers to general equity power of court to make such orders and decrees for management and preservation of insane person's estate as to court may seem proper, and hence act does not give authority to fix payments by committee at less than full cost of care where funds of estate are adequate. Id.

Where insane person was committed to hospital and committee was appointed of person and estate, and committee was ordered to pay certain sum, less than actual cost, to District of Columbia for hospital care, upon death of insane person, even if estate were inadequate to satisfy entire amount of balance of cost of care, District of Columbia would be entitled to judgment for entire balance and to be paid its pro rata share of proceeds of estate on same basis as any other creditor. Id.

5. Support of dependents

In committing insane person to hospital and appointing committee of his person and estate and in fixing amount of payments to District of Columbia on account of cost of care of insane person to be made out of insane person's estate, there is no authority to consider support of dependents. District of Columbia v. Graves (1952, 104 F. Supp. 538).

Whenever it appears in the case of any insane person whose insanity commenced while he was a resident of the District of Columbia that he is able to defray a portion, but not the whole of the expenses of his support and treatment in Saint Elizabeths Hospital, the board of visitors of the hospital is authorized to inquire into the facts of the case; and if it appears to the board, upon such inquiry, that such insane person has property and no family, or has more property than is required for the support of his family, then, as a condition upon which such insane person, admitted or to be admitted upon the order of the Secretary of the Interior, shall receive or continue to receive the benefits of the hospital, there shall be paid to the superintendent from the income, property, or estate of such insane person such portion of his expenses in the hospital as a majority of the board shall determine to be just and reasonable, under all the circumstances. (R. S. § 4849; July 1, 1916, 39 Stat. 309, ch. 209, § 1.)

CHANGE OF NAME

Act July 1, 1916, changed the name of the Government Hospital for the Insane to Saint Elizabeths Hospital.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

In general 1
Construction 2

1. In general

The effect of act Feb. 23, 1905, 33 Stat. 740, ch. 738, requiring the committee or trustee of an incompetent to reimburse the District for care and expenses up to time of appointment of committee was to prevent the running of the statute of limitations. Fitzhugh v. District of Columbia (1940, 109 F. 2d 837, 71 App. D.C. 290).

2. Construction

This section giving consideration to support of insane person's dependents in fixing amount of payments to be made to hospital caring for such insane person was repealed by sections 21-310 to 21-318, 21-320 to 21-325 which provide in terms for repeal of inconsistent statutes and which do not authorize giving consideration to support of insane person's dependents in fixing payments to be made by committee of insane person's estate to hospital for cost of care. District of Columbia v. Graves (1952, 104 F. Supp. 538).

Any insane person who has been committed to Saint Elizabeths Hospital or any other hospital, and who shall have been released from such hospital as improved, or who shall have been paroled from such hospital (but who shall not have been discharged as cured), and who shall have been absent from the hospital on release or parole for a period of six months or longer, shall have the right to appear before the United States District Court for the District of Columbia for a hearing to determine the sanity and right to restoration to the status of a person of sound mind of said insane person by filing a petition therefor with the court upon a form to be provided by the commission for that purpose. It shall be the duty of the commission to make an examination of the records of Saint Elizabeths Hospital of the insane person as may be necessary to determine such questions, and if necessary have the person examined by the members of the staff of Saint Elizabeths Hospital and to make a report and recommendation to the court. In the event the commission shall find from the records and examination that the said person is of sound mind and shall recommend to the court the restoration of said person to the status of a person of sound mind such recommendation shall be sufficient to authorize the court to enter an order declaring such person to be restored to his or her former legal status as a person of sound mind. In the event the commission shall find such person to be of unsound mind, it shall report that finding to the court. Upon the filing by the commission of a report finding such person to be of unsound mind, the insane person shall have the right to a hearing by the court or by the court and a jury. For the purpose of making the examination and observations required by this section, the commission shall have the right to examine the records and to interrogate the physicians and attendants at Saint Elizabeths Hospital or any other hospital in which such patient shall have been confined, who have had the insane person under their care, and the commission may recommend to the court the temporary recommitment of such person for said purpose. At such trial by the court or by the court and jury, an adjudication shall be made as to whether the person is of sound mind or is still of unsound mind. (Aug. 9, 1939, 53 Stat. 1298, ch. 620, § 10; June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 991, ch. 646, § 32(b); May 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 107, ch. 139, § 127.)

CHANGE OF NAME

Act June 25, 1948, eff. Sept. 1, 1948, as amended by act May 24, 1949, substituted "United States District Court for the District of Columbia" for "District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia."

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Commitment by Secretary of Navy 1 Habeas corpus 2

1. Commitment by Secretary of Navy

Where retired officer in military service had been committed on order of Secretary of Navy to hospital for insane and statutes made no provision for reexamination of person committed on order of Secretary, or for initiation, by the person committed of a proceeding to secure such reexamination, procedure of habeas corpus was available for the latter purpose. Overholser v. Treibly (1945, 147 F. 2d 705, 79 U.S. App. D.C. 389, certiorari denied 66 S. Ct. 38, 326 U.S. 730, 90 L. Ed. 434).

2. Habeas corpus proceedings

Where a petition for writ of habeas corpus has been presented, legally sufficient on its face to start the court's machinery in motion, the judge should appoint either a guardian or counsel to represent the petitioner in the further stages of the proceeding. Overholser v. Treibly (1945, 147 F. 2d 705, 79 U.S. App. D.C. 389, certiorari denied 66 S. Ct. 38, 326 U.S. 730, 90 L. Ed. 434).

The same fees and mileage as are paid in the courts of the United States shall be paid in the case of witnesses subpoenaed under the provisions of sections 21-310 to 21-318, 21-320 to 21-325. (Aug. 9, 1939, 53 Stat. 1299, ch. 620, § 11.)

The court in its discretion may require the petitioner to file an undertaking with surety to be approved by the court in such amount as the court may deem proper, conditioned to save harmless the respondent by reason of costs incurred, including attorneys' fees, if any, and damages suffered by the respondent as a result of any such action. (Aug. 9, 1939, 53 Stat. 1299, ch. 620, § 12.)

All applications and certificates for commitment and confinement of any patient to any hospital in the District of Columbia for the care and the treatment of the insane must be made on forms approved by the commission and furnished by it. (Aug. 9, 1939, 53 Stat. 1299, ch. 620, § 13.)

Any person who executes a verified petition or affidavit as provided in sections 21-310 to 21-318, 21-320 to 21-325, by which he or she secures or attempts to secure the apprehension, detention, or restraint of any other person in the District of Columbia without probable cause for believing such person to be insane or of unsound mind, or any physician who knowingly makes any false certificate or affidavit as to the sanity or insanity of any other person, shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not more than $500 or imprisoned not more than three years, or both. (Aug. 9, 1939, 53 Stat. 1299, ch. 620, § 14.)

Nothing contained in sections 21-310 to 21-318, 21-320 to 21-325 shall deprive the alleged insane person of the benefit of existing remedies to secure his release or to prove his sanity, or of any other legal remedies he may have. (Aug. 9, 1939, 53 Stat. 1299, ch. 620, § 15.)

§ 21-326. Apprehension and detention by police, without warrant, of insane persons found in public places.

Any member of the Metropolitan police of the District of Columbia or any other officer in said District authorized to make arrests is authorized and empowered to apprehend and detain, without warrant, any insane person or person of unsound mind found on any street, avenue, alley, or other public highway, or found in any public building or other public place within the District of Columbia; and it shall be the duty of the policeman or officer so apprehending or detaining any such person to immediately file his affidavit with the major and superintendent of said Metropolitan police that he believes said person to be insane or of unsound mind, incapable of taking care of himself or herself or his or her property, and if permitted to remain at large or to go unrestrained in the District of Columbia the rights of persons and of property will be jeopardized or the preservation of public peace imperiled and the commission of crime rendered probable: Provided, however, That it shall be the duty of the major and superintendent of the said Metropolitan police to forthwith notify the husband or wife or some near relative or friend of the person so apprehended and detained whose address may be known to the said major and superintendent or whose address can by reasonable inquiry be ascertained by him. (Apr. 27, 1904, 33 Stat. 316, ch. 1618, § 1.)

TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS

Chief of police as successor to major and superintendent of Metropolitan police, see note under § 4-103.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Arrest 1
Construction with other laws 2
False imprisonment 3
Grounds for apprehension 4
Petition 5

1. Arrest

A policeman may not make, without the superintendent's order, an arrest which he may not make with such order. Jillson v. Caprio (1950, 181 F. 2d 523, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 168).

2. Construction with other laws

This section providing for apprehension and detention by police of insane persons found in public places must be read together with other sections of civil insanity statute, and particularly sections 21-310 and 21-311 implementing procedure initiated under this section. In the Matter of Dallas O. Williams (1958, 157 F. Supp. 871, affirmed 252 F. 2d 629, 102 U.S. App. D.C. 248).

3. False imprisonment

Where the basis in action for false imprisonment was an arrest made at the request of appellee physician, the arrest was unlawful since such arrests of alleged insane persons have been permitted by Congress in only two sorts of circumstances, both absent here. Jillson v. Caprio (1950, 181 F. 2d 523, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 168).

4. Grounds for apprehension

This section providing emergency procedure for apprehension of persons thought to be insane should not be defeated by over-technical construction, but it does require that arresting officer reasonably believe that person apprehended is insane and incapable of managing his own affairs or that he is a menace to public peace; and such section authorizes only initial arrest and detention. In the Matter of Dallas O. Williams (1958, 157 F. Supp. 871, affirmed 252 F. 2d 629, 102 U.S. App. D.C. 248).

5. Petition

Government's verified petition which failed to allege that person arrested by police was of unsound mind or insane did not comply with this section permitting a commitment proceeding to be commenced by arrest of an alleged insane person and defect in petition was not remedied by two psychiatric reports attached thereto where such reports were unverified and ambiguous in terms employed and conclusions reached. Overholser Supt. etc. v. Williams (1958, 252 F. 2d 629, 102 U.S. App. D.C. 248).

Under no statute is court authorized to commit any person for mental examination on petition which fails to state facts upon which an allegation of present insanity is based. In the Matter of Dallas O. Williams (1958, 157 F. Supp. 871, affirmed 252 F. 2d 629, 102 U.S. App. D.C. 248).

The major and superintendent of said Metropolitan police is authorized to order the apprehension and detention, without warrant, of any indigent person alleged to be insane or of unsound mind or any alleged insane person of homicidal or otherwise dangerous tendencies found elsewhere in the District of Columbia than in the places mentioned in section 21-326 whenever two or more responsible residents of the District of Columbia shall make and file affidavits with said major and superintendent of the Metropolitan police setting forth that they believe the person therein named to be insane or of unsound mind, the length of time they have known such person, that they believe such person to be incapable of managing his or her own affairs, and that such person is not fit to be at large or to go unrestrained, and if such person is permitted to remain at liberty in the District of Columbia the rights of persons and of property will be jeopardized or the preservation of public peace imperiled and the commission of crime rendered probable, and that such person is a fit subject for treatment on account of his or her mental condition: Provided, however, That before the major and superintendent of the said Metropolitan police shall order the apprehension and detention of any person upon the affidavits of the aforesaid residents or in case of arrest as provided in section 21-326, he shall, in addition thereto, require the certificate of at least two physicians who shall certify that they have examined the person alleged to be insane or of unsound mind, and that such person should not be allowed to remain at liberty and go unrestrained, and that such person is a fit subject for treatment on account of his or her mental condition. (Apr. 27, 1904, 33 Stat. 317, ch. 1618, § 2.)

Whenever any person residing in said District, and owning any estate, real or personal, situate therein, is unfit from the habitual use of intoxicating liquors, or from the habitual use of opium, cocaine, or any similar substance, or any compound or derivative thereof, to properly manage or control the same, the equity court, on the petition of any creditor or relative of such person, or if there be no creditor or relative, upon the petition of any person living in said District, and upon summons being regularly served upon such person so alleged to be unfit to manage or control his property as aforesaid, commanding him to appear and answer such petition, may order a jury to be summoned to ascertain whether such person be an habitual drunkard or addicted to the habitual use of opium, cocaine, or any similar substance or any compound or derivative thereof and unfit from any of these causes to manage and control his property, and if the jury shall find that such person is an habitual drunkard or an habitual user of opium, cocaine, or any similar substance or any compound or derivative thereof and unfit to manage or control his property, such finding, when confirmed by the court, shall be entered of record in said cause, and it shall be the duty of the court thereupon to appoint some fit person to be committee of the person so declared unfit to manage or control his property as aforesaid.

Such committee before entering upon the discharge of his duties shall execute a bond, with surety, to be approved by the said court or one of the judges thereof, to the United States in a penalty equal to the amount of the personal property and the yearly rents to be derived from the real estate of such person, conditioned for the faithful performance of his duties as such committee; and he shall have control of the said estate, real and personal, with power to collect all debts due said drunkard, and to adjust and settle all accounts owing by him, and to sue and be sued in his representative capacity. He shall apply the annual income of the estate of such habitual drunkard to the support of said person, and the maintenance of his family and education of his children; and shall in all other respects perform the same duties and have the same rights as pertain to committees of lunatics and idiots.

When any person for whom a committee has been appointed under the provisions of this section shall become competent to manage his property on account of reformation in his habits, he may apply to said court to have said committee discharged and the care and control of his property restored to him; and if it shall appear by the verdict of a jury summoned therefor, or by affidavits, or other evidence to the satisfaction of the court, that said applicant is a fit person to have the care or control of his property, an order shall be entered restoring such person to all the rights and privileges enjoyed before said committee was appointed. And as to the property of any person for whom a committee has been so appointed the court shall have the same powers that are herein given to it in respect of the property of infants. (June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 524, ch. 1329, § 115f; June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 991, ch. 646, § 32(a); May 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 107, ch. 139, § 127.)

CODIFICATION

"Judge" was substituted for "justice" to conform to the provisions of act June 25, 1948, as amended by act May 24, 1949.

Exemption from military service, see § 39-101.

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Unfitness to manage property

Finding of unfitness to manage property in a proceeding under this section is conclusive of condition on date of rendition; "it is not so as of a date prior thereto, but at the same time it has the tendency to raise some inference that the helpless condition must have existed for some space of time." Knott v. Giles (27 App. D. C. 581).

21-503. Powers and duties of conservator.

21-504. Application for discharge—Powers of court.

21-505. Appointment of temporary conservator.

21-506. Personal welfare of person under conservatorship—Responsibility.

21-507. Lis pendens.

If an adult person residing in or having property in the District of Columbia is unable, by reason of advanced age, mental weakness (not amounting to unsoundness of mind), or physical incapacity properly to care for his property, the United States District Court for the District of Columbia may, upon his petition or the sworn petition of one or more of his relatives or any other person or persons, appoint some fit person to be conservator of his property. (Oct. 24, 1951, 65 Stat. 608, ch. 545, § 1.)

Upon the filing of such petition, the court shall fix a time and place for a hearing thereon; and shall cause at least fourteen days' notice thereof to be given to the person for whom a conservator is sought to be appointed, if he is not the petitioner, and to such other persons as the court shall direct. The petition shall include, among other things—

(1) the reasons for the appointment of a conservator;

(2) the name and address of the person for whom the conservator is sought;

(3) the date and place of his birth, if known; and

(4) the names and addresses of the nearest known heirs at law, or the next of kin, if any.

The court in its discretion may appoint some disinterested person to act as guardian ad litem in any proceeding hereunder. Upon a finding that the person for whom the conservator is sought is incapable of caring for his property, the court shall appoint a conservator who shall have the charge and management of the property of such person subject to the direction of the court. (Oct. 24, 1951, 65 Stat. 608, ch. 545, § 2.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Appointment of guardian 1
Selection of private counsel 2

1. Appointment of guardian

Under this section providing for appointment of a guardian ad litem in a proceeding to have a conservator appointed, selection and supervision of guardian ad litem are matters within sound discretion of trial court. Mazza v. Pechacek (1956, 233 F. 2d 666, 98 U.S. App. D.C. 175).

2. Selection of private counsel

Person for whose estate appointment of a conservator is sought may select private counsel of his own choice to advocate his position in opposition to appointment of a conservator. Mazza v. Pechacek (1956, 233 F. 2d 666, 98 U.S. App. D.C. 175).

Such conservator before entering upon the discharge of his duties shall execute an undertaking with surety to be approved by the court in such maximum amount as the court may order, conditioned on the faithful performance of his duties as such conservator; and he shall have control of the estate, real and personal, of the person for whom he has been appointed conservator, with power to collect all debts due such person, and upon authority of the court to adjust and settle all accounts owing by him, and to sue and be sued in his representative capacity. He shall apply such part of the annual income and such part of the principal of the estate of such person as the court may authorize to the support of such person and the maintenance and education of his family and children; and shall in all other respects perform the same duties and have the same rights and powers with respect to the property of such person as have guardians of the estates of infants. (Oct. 24, 1951, 65 Stat. 608, ch. 545, § 3.)

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Compensation

In view of facts that duties of conservator and guardian are basically the same, and that this chapter, providing for appointment of conservators is silent as to compensation of conservators and merely provides that conservators shall have same rights and powers as guardians and that court shall have the same powers with respect to property of any person for whom conservator has been appointed as it has with respect to property of infants under guardianships, compensation of conservator should be fixed under section 21-126 limiting compensation of guardians to fixed percentage of amounts actually collected if and when disbursed. In re Seale (1954, 118 F. Supp. 273).

When any person for whom a conservator has been appointed under the provisions of this chapter shall become competent to manage his property, he may apply to such court to have such conservator discharged and to be restored to the care and control of his property. If the court finds him to be competent, an order shall be entered restoring the care and control of his property to such person. The court shall have the same powers with respect to the property of any person for whom a conservator has been appointed as it has with respect to the property of infants under guardianships. (Oct. 24, 1951, 65 Stat. 608, ch. 545, § 4.)

Upon filing of a petition as provided by this chapter the court may, with or without notice or hearing, appoint a temporary conservator of the estate of any person hereunder, if it deems such action necessary for the protection of such estate, subject to the provisions for an undertaking contained in section 21-503. Such temporary conservator shall serve only until such time as a permanent conservator can be appointed or until sooner discharged. (Oct. 24, 1951, 65 Stat. 608, ch. 545, § 5.)

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Compensation of temporary conservator

Compensation of temporary conservator would not be determined under section 21-126 fixing compensation of guardian but would be determined by considering the character of services rendered, the size of the estate, and the compensation awarded guardian ad litem and attorney for the guardian. In re Searle (1954, 118 F. Supp. 273).

The court, in its discretion, may at any time order that the conservator or some other person shall be responsible for the personal welfare of the person whose property is under conservatorship. In such event the conservator or such other person, subject to the direction and control of the Civil Division of the court, shall have the same powers and duties with respect to the personal welfare of the said person as have the guardians of the persons of infants under guardianships. (Oct. 24, 1951, 65 Stat. 609, ch. 545, § 6.)

Lis pendens: Upon the filing of a petition under this chapter, a certified copy of such petition may be filed for record in the office of the Recorder of Deeds of the District of Columbia. If a conservator be appointed on such petition, all contracts, except for necessities, and all transfers of real and personal property made by the ward after such filing and before the termination of the conservatorship shall be void. (Oct. 24, 1951, 65 Stat. 609, ch. 545, § 7.)

Chapter 1.—GENERAL PROVISIONS

Sec.
22-101. "Writing" and "paper" defined.
22-102. "Anything of value" defined.
22-103. Attempts to commit crime.
22-104. Second conviction.
22-105. Persons advising, inciting, or conniving at criminal offense to be charged as principals.
22-106. Accessories after the fact.
22-107. Punishment for offenses not covered by provisions of code.
22-108. Offenses committed beyond District of Columbia.
22-109. Prosecutions.

Except where such a construction would be unreasonable, the words "writing" and "paper," wherever mentioned in this title, are to be taken to include instruments wholly in writing or wholly printed, or partly printed and partly in writing. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1336, ch. 854, § 904.)

The words "anything of value," wherever they occur in this title, shall be held to include not only things possessing intrinsic value, but bank notes and other forms of paper money, and commercial paper and other writings which represent value. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1336, ch. 854, § 905.)

Whoever shall attempt to commit any crime, which attempt is not otherwise made punishable by this title, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars or by imprisonment for not more than one year, or both. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1337, ch. 854, § 906.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

In general 1
Assault 2
False pretenses 3
Prostitution 4

1. In general

Mere preparation is not an attempt, but preparation may progress to the point of attempt, and question whether it has is one of degree which can be resolved only on basis of facts of each case. Sellers Jr. v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1957, 131 A. 2d 300).

2. Assault

One who assaults a female under 16 years of age, with intent to carnally know her, is punishable under 1901 Code, § 803 (§ 22-501) and not 1901 Code, § 906 (§ 22-103). Sanselo v. United States (44 App. D. C. 508).

3. False pretenses

In prosecution for attempting by false pretenses to obtain money from an insurance company on a fraudulent claim for stolen furs evidence of defendants' guilt was sufficient for the jury. Cooper and Williams v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1956, 123 A. 2d 918).

4. Prostitution

Where defendant, upon obtaining affirmative reply to his question whether police officers were looking for girls, inquired what type they wanted, priced the girls at $10 each, and revealed, in answer to question put by one officer, that defendant's fee was $2, fact that defendant's actions never progressed beyond stage of conversation and that no money was received was not fatal to a conviction for an attempt to receive money for arranging for a female to have sexual intercourse, and, had the money passed, the principal crime itself would have been consummated. Sellers Jr. v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 131 A. 2d 300).

Every person upon his second conviction of any criminal offense punishable by fine or imprisonment or both may be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding fifty per centum greater, and to suffer imprisonment for a period not more than one half longer than the maximum fine and imprisonment for the first offense. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1337, ch. 854, § 907.)

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Attack on former indictment

When defendant appeared and pleaded to an information for petit larceny, and was tried in the police court without objection, he admits the validity of the information, and, if convicted, can not afterwards, when indicted for petit larceny as a second offense, deny the legal sufficiency of the information as not being sworn to, or claim that his first arrest was illegal. Latney v. United States (18 App. D. C. 265).

In prosecutions for any criminal offense all persons advising, inciting, or conniving at the offense, or aiding or abetting the principal offender, shall be charged as principals and not as accessories, the intent of this section being that as to all accessories before the fact the law heretofore applicable in cases of misdemeanor only shall apply to all crimes, whatever the punishment may be. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1337, ch. 854, § 908.)

1. Accessory before the fact

Under this section a person shown to be an accessory before the fact is chargeable and criminally responsible as a principal. Williams v. United States (1925, 4 F. 2d 432, 55 App. D.C. 239).

In prosecution of doctor and his wife for attempted bribery of witness in abortion case against the doctor, where there was sufficient evidence to justify the jury's conclusion that doctor was an accessory before the fact to the attempt at bribery by his wife, he was properly found guilty as a principal. Ladrey v. U.S. (1946, 155 F. 2d 417, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 127, certiorari denied 67 S. Ct. 68, 329 U.S. 723, 91 L. Ed. 627).

2. Accomplice

In cases of carnal knowledge, the prosecutrix is not an accomplice of the defendant. "An accomplice is one who is associated with another, or others, in the commission of a crime. Liability to indictment, under ordinary conditions, is a reasonable test of the legal relation of the party to the crime and its perpetrator." Yeager v. United States (16 App. D.C. 356, certiorari denied 20 S. Ct. 1031, 178 U.S. 615, 44 L. Ed. 1217).

Woman upon whom a miscarriage is produced in violation of 1901 Code, § 809 (§ 22-201), is not an accomplice of the person who produces it. Thompson v. United States (30 App. D.C. 352, 12 Ann. Cas. 1004).

"Persons engaged in wagering contests are not accomplices." Paylor v. United States (42 App. D.C. 428, LRA 1915D, 682, certiorari denied 35 S. Ct. 209, 235 U.S. 704, 59 L. Ed. 434).

The giver of a bribe is an accomplice of the person bribed. Egan v. United States (1923, 287 F. 958, 52 App. D.C. 384).

"Anyone knowingly and voluntarily co-operating with, aiding, assisting, advising, or encouraging another in the commission of a crime is an accomplice; and this is true, regardless of the degree of his guilt." Egan v. United States (1923, 287 F. 958, 52 App. D.C. 384). See, also, Tomlinson v. United States (1935, 93 F. 2d 652, 68 App. D.C. 106, 114 ALR 1315, certiorari denied 58 S. Ct. 645, 303 U.S. 646, 82 L. Ed. 1102).

3. Aid and abet

One aiding and abetting unauthorized use of automobile stands in same shoes as principal offender. Allen v. United States (1958, 257 F. 2d 188, 103 U.S. App. D.C. 184).

Defendant who aided and abetted the taking of an automobile and other property within the District of Columbia was liable as a principal. Williams v. United States (1954, 215 F. 2d 35, 94 U. S. App. D. C. 219).

Without determining whether each of defendants was then displaying a placard in front of embassy, all are guilty under provisions of the local law making it an offense to aid and abet in a violation of a law. Frend v. United States (1939, 100 F. 2d 691, 69 App. D.C. 281, certiorari denied 59 S. Ct. 488, 306 U.S. 640, 83 L. Ed. 1040).

Public utilities commission regulation, forbidding owner or operator of vehicle for hire to authorize any person to operate such vehicle unless such person possessed a valid character license, was directed only to owners and operators who permitted unlicensed persons to drive; and defendant, who had an arrangement with corporation to rent taxicabs or to provide drivers but did not himself operate taxicabs and had no proprietary interest in corporation or its vehicles, could not properly be convicted under statute, where he was not accused of aiding and abetting corporation, and evidence did not comport with that of a case tried on theory of aiding and abetting. Sellers v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1958, 143 A. 2d 96).

Although an offense may be so defined by statute or regulation that it can only be committed by members of a certain class, one outside the class may, by aiding or abetting another who is within the scope of the definition, render himself criminally liable for the offense. Jack Berman Inc., et al. v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1957, 132 A. 2d 147).

Under statute, although one may not be the principal actor, he may be charged as a principal under the same information in conjunction with principal offender for acts of aiding and abetting. Id.

The District of Columbia vehicle title and registration regulations and the commissioners' order concerning automobile conditional sales contracts were applicable only to licensed automobile dealers, and unlicensed dealer, even though he aided and abetted a licensed dealer, could not be convicted for violations of regulations and order on the sole basis that he was a dealer under their purview. Id.

4. Charged as principal

"One who procures, commands, advises, instigates, or incites the commission of an offense, though not personally present at its commission, is, by the common law, an accessory before the fact. * * * The section of the code above quoted (§ 22-105) makes all such persons principals. And it is not essential that any specific time or mode of committing the offense shall have been advised or commanded, or, if so, that it shall have been committed in the particular way instigated. * * * Nor is it necessary that there shall have been any direct communication between the actual perpetrator and the accessory, who, under the code, is now a principal." Mazey v. United States (30 App. D. C. 63).

Indictment charging that A, B, and C made an assault on X with a brick held in the hand of B is not defective as charging A and C with an impossible act. "The defendants were charged as principals. They were acting together and the act of one was the act of each. The question is set at rest by section 908 of the code (this section)." Polen v. United States (41 App. D. C. 4).

In an indictment charging defendants with engaging in unlawful prize fight, for which appellant charged an admission fee, the appellant was rightly indicted as a principal. Dane v. United States (1927, 18 F. 2d 811, 57 App. D.C. 161, certiorari denied 48 S. Ct. 35, 275 U.S. 538, 72 L. Ed. 413).

One who procures, commands, advises, instigates or incites the commission of an offense, though not personally present at its commission is by the common law an accessory before the fact, and by this section all such persons are made principals. Ladrey v. U.S. (1946, 155 F. 2d 417, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 127, certiorari denied 67 S. Ct. 68, 329 U.S. 723, 91 L. Ed. 627).

Where tenant of premises, wherein gaming tables were kept, was an incorporated club, but there was evidence that defendants took part in carrying on its gambling activities, defendants were responsible as principals. Warde v. U.S. (1947, 158 F. 2d 651, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 355).

5. Design or plan

In prosecution of Puerto Rican defendant, whose companion shot and killed guard in front of dwelling of President of the United States, for first-degree murder, wherein defendant interposed defense that he and companion had no intent to kill anyone but merely wished to create an incident in order to bring to the attention of the American people conditions in Puerto Rico, jury, in determining whether the killing by defendant's companion was within design or plan of defendant and his companion, was entitled to consider whether it was a natural and probable result of the acts which defendant and his companion concerted to perform. Collazo v. United States (1952, 196 F. 2d 573, 90 U. S. App. D. C. 241, certiorari denied 72 S. Ct. 1065, 343 U. S. 968, 96 L. Ed. 1364).

6. Instructions

In action against two defendants for murder a requested instruction was properly refused which stated that "if no force of arms was contemplated, then defendant was not liable for the consequences of the shot by the codefendant," for the testimony and instruction must show that before the crime has been done he honestly and in good faith withdraws and tries to get away and does not take any part in the offense. Marcus v. United States (1937, 86 F. 2d 854, 66 App. D.C. 298).

Fact that there was evidence that one of the three defendants jointly indicted on charge of murder in perpetration of robbery threw away the gun and bullets after the murder did not require an instruction that jury could find such defendant guilty as accessory after the fact, where such defendant's testimony and other circumstances stamped him as an accessory before the fact and therefore guilty as a principal. Hall v. U.S. (1948, 168 F. 2d 161, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 166, 4 A.L.R. 2d 1193, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 1509, 334 U.S. 853, 92 L. Ed. 1775, rehearing denied 69 S. Ct. 9, 335 U.S. 839, 93 L. Ed. 391).

Defendants were not entitled to complain that the trial court erroneously failed to tell the jury that a defendant was an accomplice rather than a principal where the trial judge gave instructions which were full and correct and reflected the statutory provision that all who aid or abet in the commission of a crime are charged as principals. Cooper and Williams v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1956, 123 A. 2d 918).

7. Intent

In prosecution of Puerto Rican defendant, whose companion shot and killed guard in front of dwelling of President of the United States, for first-degree murder, wherein defendant interposed defense that he and companion had no intent to kill anyone but merely wished to create an incident in order to bring to the attention of the American people conditions in Puerto Rico, defendant was properly allowed to testify as to his own intent. Collazo v. United States (1952, 196 F. 2d 573, 90 U. S. App. D. C. 241, certiorari denied 72 S. Ct. 1065, 343 U. S. 968, 96 L. Ed. 1364).

8. Lender of automobile

"If the owner of a dangerous instrumentality like an automobile knowingly puts that instrumentality in the immediate control of a careless and reckless driver, sits by his side, and permits him without protest so carelessly and negligently to operate the car as to cause the death of another, he is as much responsible as the man at the wheel." Story v. United States (1927, 16 F. 2d 342, 57 App. D.C. 3, 53 A.L.R. 246, certiorari denied 47 S. Ct. 576, 274 U.S. 739, 71 L. Ed. 1318).

9. Participation

Evidence was sufficient to establish defendant's guilty participation in crime of housebreaking and larceny. Lanham v. United States (1951, 185 F. 2d 435, 87 U. S. App. D. C. 357).

10. Presence at commission

When defendant was not present when the actual conversion took place, he was a mere artificial principal and not an actual one, that is, he was subject to the same punishment as though he actually had assisted in the final act of larceny; but that does not prevent his prosecution for the distinct offense of receiving stolen goods. Weisberg v. United States (1919, 258 F. 284, 49 App. D.C. 28).

11. Testimony of accomplice

There may be a conviction on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice, "provided the jury is admonished by the court that the testimony of an accomplice 'ought to be received with suspicion, and with the very greatest care and caution.'" Egan v. United States (1923, 287 F. 958, 52 App. D.C. 384).

Whoever shall be convicted of being an accessory after the fact to any crime punishable by death shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than twenty years. Whoever shall be convicted of being accessory after the fact to any crime punishable by imprisonment shall be punished by a fine or imprisonment, or both, as the case may be, not more than one-half the maximum fine or imprisonment, or both, to which the principal offender may be subjected. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1337, ch. 854, § 909.)

Whoever shall be convicted of any criminal offense not covered by the provisions of any section of this code, or of any general law of the United States not locally inapplicable in the District of Columbia, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars or by imprisonment for not more than five years, or both. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1337, ch. 854, § 910.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

In general 1
Conspiracy 2
Disorderly house 3
Negligent escape 4

1. In general

"This section obviously was enacted to cover offenses not embraced in any other section of the District Code or of any general law of the United States not locally inapplicable. It was enacted out of abundant caution, and to cover any offense for which no other provision had been made. * * * A prosecution under this section, when the facts show that the offense is covered by some specific statute, is clearly unauthorized. In other words, this section was intended to supplement, and not supersede or modify, specific statutory provisions." Fletcher v. United States (42 App. D.C. 53, certiorari denied 35 S. Ct. 283, 235 U.S. 706, 59 L. Ed. 434).

2. Conspiracy

Defendant convicted of common-law conspiracy was properly sentenced under this section, for no overt act being charged, the indictment was not under § 37 of the federal penal code, section 371 of title 18, U.S. Code, and the rule that there are no common-law offenses against the United States is not applicable in the District of Columbia. Harrison v. Moyer (D.C. Ga. 1915, 224 F. 224).

3. Disorderly house

Offense of keeping a disorderly house being punishable under this section of the Code by imprisonment, its prosecution is exclusively within jurisdiction of the District Court, and a conviction therefor in the police court is void. Palmer v. Lenovitz (35 App. D. C. 303).

4. Negligent escape

Under this section prescribing fine not exceeding $1,000 or imprisonment for not more than five years or both as punishment for any offense not specifically covered by statute, conviction of negligent escape, punishment for which is not specifically prescribed, invokes the punishment of a felony, although it was apparently classified as a misdemeanor at common law. U.S. v. Davis (1948, 167 F. 2d 228, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 99, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 1501, 334 U.S. 849, 92 L. Ed. 1772).

Any person who by the commission outside of the District of Columbia of any act which, if committed within the District of Columbia, would be a criminal offense under the laws of said District, thereby obtains any property or other thing of value, and is afterwards found with any such property or other such thing of value in his possession in said District, or who brings any such property or other such thing of value into said District, shall, upon conviction, be punished in the same manner as if said act had been committed wholly within said District. (Mar. 3, 1901, ch. 854, § 836a, as added Dec. 21, 1911, 37 Stat. 45, ch. 2.)

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Stolen goods

District Court for the District of Columbia has jurisdiction of case involving conspiracy to bring stolen stock into the District, as such court is a District Court of the United States. Arnstein v. United States (1924, 296 F. 946, 54 App. D.C. 199, certiorari denied 44 S. Ct. 454, 264 U.S. 595, 68 L. Ed. 867).

All prosecutions for violations of section 22-1121 or any of the provisions of any of the laws or ordinances provided for by this Act shall be conducted in the name of and for the benefit of the District of Columbia, and in the same manner as provided by law for the prosecution of offenses against the laws and ordinances of the said District. Any person convicted of any violation of section 22-1121 or any of the provisions of this Act, and who shall fail to pay the fine or penalty imposed, or to give security where the same is required, shall be committed to the workhouse of the District of Columbia for a term not exceeding six months for each and every offense. The second sentence of this section shall not apply with respect to any violation of section 22-1112 (b). (July 29, 1892, 27 Stat. 325, ch. 320, § 18; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 93, 98, ch. 159, §§ 202 (a) (2), 211 (b).)

Chapter 2.—ABORTION

Sec.

Whoever, by means of any instrument, medicine, drug or other means whatever, procures or produces, or attempts to procure or produce an abortion or miscarriage on any woman, unless the same were done as necessary for the preservation of the mother's life or health and under the direction of a competent licensed practitioner of medicine, shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not less than one year or not more than ten years; or if the death of the mother results therefrom, the person procuring or producing, or attempting to procure or produce the abortion or miscarriage shall be guilty of second degree murder. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1322, ch. 854, § 809; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 93, ch. 159, § 203.)

AMENDMENT

1953—Act June 29, 1953, provided for a penalty of imprisonment for from one to ten years in lieu of the previous provision of "not more than five years" and that in the event of death, the person procuring the abortion would be guilty of second degree murder whereas the previous provision was for imprisonment of from three to twenty years.

Attempt 1
Burden of proof 2
Contempt 3
Evidence 4
Indictment 5
Instructions 6
License, revocation of 7
Prejudicial error 8
Sentence 9
Woman not accomplice 10

1. Attempt

Crime as denounced by this section and charged by the indictment does not necessarily contemplate an actual miscarriage by the woman, but is complete when an attempt to procure a miscarriage by such means is made, regardless of whether it results in an actual miscarriage of the pregnant woman or not. Crichton v. United States (1937, 92 F. 2d 224, 67 App. D.C. 300, certiorari denied 58 S. Ct. 22, 302 U.S. 707, 82 L. Ed. 542).

2. Burden of proof

In abortion prosecution brought under this section and containing exception in case abortion is performed to preserve life or health, the burden of proving that act was justified on therapeutic grounds was on defendants and the prosecution was not required as part of its case to negative application of the exception. Williams v. U.S. (1943, 138 F. 2d 81, 78 U.S. App. D.C. 147, 153 A.L.R. 1213).

3. Contempt

Where trial judge in abortion prosecution permitted himself to become personally embroiled with defense counsel throughout trial and made statement to jury indicating his hostility toward counsel, trial judge, instead of finding counsel guilty of criminal contempt and imposing punishment, should have invited the Chief Judge of the District Court to assign another judge to sit in hearing of charge against counsel. Offutt v. United States (1954, 75 S. Ct. 11, 348 U. S. 11, 99 L. Ed. 11).

4. Evidence

In abortion prosecution of physician, wherein physician admitted treating complaining witness at time and place alleged by her and in manner described by her, but claimed that the treatment was not designed to cause an abortion, trial court properly permitted introduction of the testimony of two other women that physician agreed to and did perform an abortion on each in substantially the same manner as described by the complaining witness about the same time as the alleged abortion testified to by the complaining witness. Harper v. United States (1956, 239 F. 2d 945, 99 U. S. App. D. C. 324).

It was not error to admit evidence concerning three treatments by defendant when only one was charged in the indictment, as the three treatments, taken together, and their joint result, constituted the crime with which the defendant was charged. Harrod v. United States (1929, 29 F. 2d 454, 58 App. D.C. 254).

Evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction. Harrod v. United States (1929, 29 F. 2d 454, 58 App. D.C. 254). See, also, Hart v. United States (1939, 105 F. 2d 792, 70 App. D.C. 269).

Evidence supported conviction of criminal abortion as against defendant's claim that there was no evidence that the crime had been committed in the District of Columbia. Miller v. U.S. (1948, 169 F. 2d 967, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 367).

5. Indictment

The preservation of life or health provisions in this section forbidding the prescribing or administering of medicine, drug or other substance or use of instrument to procure miscarriage unless when necessary to preserve woman's life or health and under direction of competent licensed medical practitioner are intended to furnish the defense an opportunity for justification and are not part of description of offense required to be alleged or proved by prosecution. Peckham v. United States (1954, 210 F. 2d 693, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 136).

6. Instructions

In prosecution for using instruments upon and administering drugs to named woman, then pregnant, with intent to procure her miscarriage, charge of court that it was immaterial whether or not woman was pregnant, if at time defendant believed she was pregnant, was not erroneous. Peckham v. United States (1955, 226 F. 2d 34, 96 U.S. App. D.C. 312, certiorari denied 76 S. Ct. 195, 350 U.S. 912, 100 L. Ed. 800, rehearing denied 76 S. Ct. 341, 350 U.S. 955, 100 L. Ed. 831).

Instruction on necessity of finding guilt beyond reasonable doubt and instruction requiring government to establish that defendant prescribed or administered a medicine, drug or other substance or used on the woman some instrument or means, that she was pregnant at the time and that defendant did the act with intent to procure a miscarriage adequately defined all essential elements of crime of abortion and adequately instructed jury as to necessity of proof beyond reasonable doubt that complaining witness was pregnant and that defendant did some act or administered some treatment or drug with intent to procure an abortion. Peckham v. United States (1954, 210 F. 2d 693, 93 U. S. App. D. C. 136).

In prosecution for abortion in May 1951, and in January 1952, instruction that witness who testified that he had assisted in arranging and furthering the first alleged abortion must be deemed an accomplice and that his testimony should be received with care and scrutinized with caution was not erroneous as carrying inference that defendant was guilty. Id.

Fact that disproportionate amount of charge was devoted to outlining Government's side of case in connection with second count of indictment alleging abortion as to which the defense won acquittal did not require reversal of conviction on first count alleging abortion on different date where defense of such first count consisted almost entirely of case as outlined in the charge. Id.

7. License, revocation of

District of Columbia Code provision authorizing revocation of license of person convicted in United States District Court for the District of Columbia of any felony, without further hearing or procedure, provides an additional remedy for revocation of license and did not preclude resort to action in equity by Commission on Licensure to Practice the Healing Art for revocation of license under statute authorizing same in case of misconduct. Ladrey v. Commission on Licensure, etc. (1958, 261 F. 2d 68, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 239, certiorari denied 79 S. Ct. 288, 358 U.S. 920, 3 L. Ed. 2d 239, rehearing denied 79 S. St. 351, 358 U.S. 948, 3 L. Ed. 2d 353).

Under District of Columbia Code permitting revocation of license because of misconduct after institution of action in United States District Court for the District of Columbia sitting as a court of equity, where complaint charged in words of criminal statute that physician had performed an abortion physician could not contend that the word "misconduct" was too vague and indefinite to meet requirements of due process. Id.

Under statute authorizing District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia sitting as a court of equity to suspend license upon evidence showing that licentiate has been guilty of misconduct, licentiate has available to him full protection of rules and "misconduct" as a ground for suspension or revocation is not left as a matter of opinion but is susceptible to complete exposition under rules and requires proof as a matter of fact accordingly. Id.

8. Prejudicial error

In prosecution for abortion, excessive injection of trial judge into examination of witnesses and judge's numerous comments to defense counsel, indicating at times hostility, though under provocation, demonstrated a bias and lack of impartiality which may well have influenced the jury and required reversal of conviction. Peckham v. United States (1954, 210 F. 2d 693, 93 U. S. App. D. C. 136).

In prosecution for abortion on two counts, refusal to allow defense counsel to examine whole file of hospital records of doctor who examined prosecuting witness at hospital and who used a part of file to refresh his recollection and who expressed opinion as to induced abortion relating only to second count of which defendant was acquitted was not prejudicial error. Id.

9. Sentence

Where defendant was indicted on two charges and pled guilty to both, and the court inadvertently pronounced the sentences to run concurrently, the court had power to amend the sentences to run consecutively where defendant was still in the custody of the officers of the court. Rowley v. Welch (1940, 114 F. 2d 499, 72 App. D.C. 351).

10. Woman not accomplice

"This section applies to the person or persons committing the act which produces the miscarriage, and not to the person upon whom it is committed, notwithstanding it may be done with her knowledge and consent. Not being liable to indictment thereunder, she is not an accomplice in the legal sense." Marey v. United States (30 App. D.C. 63). See, also, Thompson v. United States (30 App. D.C. 352, 12 Ann. Cas. 1004).

Chapter 3.—ADULTERY

Sec.

22-301. Definition and penalty.

Whoever commits adultery in the District shall, on conviction thereof, be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both; and when the act is committed between a married woman and a man who is unmarried both parties to such act shall be deemed guilty of adultery; and when such act is committed between a married man and a woman who is unmarried, the man only shall be deemed guilty of adultery. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1332, ch. 854, § 874.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Credibility of testimony 1
 Indictment 2
 Law governing 3
 Proof 4
 Unmarried woman 5

1. Credibility of testimony

Where two women who later became witnesses for prosecution first told police sergeant they knew nothing about the case and gave unsworn statements to that effect but later each gave a second statement in which full story was told, after which sergeant destroyed first statements in belief that they had become valueless, officer's act in destroying first statement did not afford basis for instruction that jury might disregard all or any portion of officer's testimony. Miller v. U.S. (1948, 169 F. 2d 967, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 367).

Where two women who testified as witnesses for prosecution did not admit having falsified as to any issue but merely stated that they had first refrained from giving any information because they did not want to become publicly involved in a scandalous situation, defendant was not entitled to an instruction requiring jury to give careful scrutiny to testimony of the two women on ground that they had admitted swearing falsely. Id.

2. Indictment

Two charges of adultery with the same person may be joined under R.S. § 1024, now covered by Fed. Rules Cr. Proc. rules 8, 13, 14, U.S. Code, title 18, Appendix. Kleindienst v. United States (48 App. D. C. 190).

3. Law governing

One convicted of adultery should be sentenced under this section and not under section 316 of the Penal Code (U.S.C., title 18, former § 516). Kleindienst v. United States (48 App. D.C. 190).

On an indictment for adultery, which under the District Code is a misdemeanor and under the Federal Penal Code a felony, the accused on his conviction should be sentenced under the former and not the latter. O'Brien v. United States (1938, 99 F. 2d 368, 69 App. D.C. 135, certiorari denied 59 S. Ct. 95, 305 U.S. 562, 83 L. Ed. 354).

4. Proof

When indictment charges two specific acts of adultery, and the proof shows "repeated offenses of adultery" extending over a period of more than a year, it is error to refuse to require the government to specify, at the close of its case, the specific acts for which the government asks a conviction. Kleindienst v. United States (48 App. D. C. 190).

5. Unmarried woman

If committed by her while unmarried, the act would not have been indictable; but such act would have been indictable if committed by her while married. O'Neil v. O'Neil (1924, 299 F. 914, 55 App. D.C. 40).

- 22-403. Malicious burning, destruction or injury of another's movable property.

Whoever shall maliciously burn or attempt to burn any dwelling, or house, barn, or stable adjoining thereto, or any store, barn, or outhouse, or any shop, office, stable, store, warehouse, or any other building, or any steamboat, vessel, canal boat, or other watercraft, or any railroad car, the property, in whole or in part, of another person, or any church, meetinghouse, schoolhouse, or any of the public buildings in the District, belonging to the United States or to the District of Columbia, shall suffer imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than ten years. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1323, ch. 854, § 820.)

1. Evidence

In arson and murder prosecution, evidence was sufficient to establish that victim's death had been caused by the fire in house in which her body was found. Green v. United States (1955, 218 F. 2d 856, 95 U.S. App. D.C. 45).

Evidence sustained conviction for arson committed by malicious burning of building of another. Lichtenwalter v. United States (1951, 190 F. 2d 36, 89 U. S. App. D. C. 187).

2. Indictment

Counts are properly joined in the same indictment which charge defendant with setting fire to his own property and with attempt to burn another person's property. Posey v. United States (26 App. D. C. 302).

4. Review

Errors in trial of charge of arson require reversal. Parlton v. United States (1896, 75 F. 2d 772, 64 App. D.C. 169).

3. Part owner

One burning a dwelling-house occupied in part by him and in part by another, with intent to defraud an insurance company, is guilty of arson. Posey v. United States (26 App. D. C. 302).

5. Tenant

"It is not to be presumed that Congress intended to exempt from liability a tenant who should maliciously burn, or attempt to burn, a building belonging to another, though temporarily occupied by him." Posey v. United States (26 App. D. C. 302).

Whoever maliciously burns or sets fire to any dwelling, shop, barn, stable, store, or warehouse or other building, or any steamboat, vessel, canal boat, or other watercraft, or any goods, wares, or merchandise, the same being his own property, in whole or in part, with intent to defraud or injure any other person, shall be imprisoned for not more than fifteen years. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1323, ch. 854, § 821.)

Whoever maliciously injures or destroys, or attempts to injure or destroy, by fire or otherwise, any movable property not his own, of the value of $50 or more, shall be imprisoned for not less than one year and not more than ten years, and if the value of the property be less than $50 by a fine not exceeding $200 or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1327, ch. 854, § 848; Aug. 12, 1937, 50 Stat. 629, ch. 599.)

AMENDMENT

1937—Act Aug. 12, 1937, substituted $50 for $35 in two instances.

1. Evidence—Admissibility

In prosecution for malicious burning of another's property, record sustained trial court's ruling that defendant had failed to prove unnecessary delay in presentment to committing magistrate or that unnecessary delay had induced confession, and confession was properly admitted. Gladys M. Tillotson v. United States (1956, 231 F. 2d 736, 97 U. S. App. D. C. 402, certiorari denied 76 S. Ct. 1055, 351 U. S. 989, 100 L. Ed. 1502).

2. — Sufficiency of Evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction for house-breaking, larceny and destroying movable property. Braddy v. United States (1955, 225 F. 2d 551, 96 U. S. App. D. C. 251).

3. Indictment

Quaere: Whether prosecution can be in the name of the District of Columbia, if value of property is more than $35, not decided by appellate court, but it did say, it is very doubtful under Code of 1929, title 6, § 351 (§ 23-101) which provides that prosecutions of "all penal regulations, where the maximum punishment is a fine only or imprisonment not exceeding one year, shall be conducted in the name of the District of Columbia, and by the city solicitor or his assistants." Nation v. District of Columbia (34 App. D.C. 453, 26 L.R.A., N.S., 996).

Indictment or information must allege value of property injured. Id.

4. Prejudicial error

In prosecution for housebreaking, larceny and destruction of property, wherein one defendant was permitted to change his plea in open court and in presence of jury and was asked by trial judge whether he admitted committing offense and replied that he did admit being with "them," there was error which, in view of circumstantial and inconclusive nature of evidence, would require reversal of another defendant's conviction. Gaynor v. United States (1957, 247 F. 2d 583, 101 U. S. App. D. C. 177).

5. Supersedeance

Insofar as § 22-3112 may have applied to movable property, it has been superseded by this section. Nation v. District of Columbia (34 App. D.C. 453, 26 L.R.A., N.S., 996).

Whoever shall maliciously burn or set fire to any fences, woods, stacks of hay, grain, or straw, or growing crops, the property, in whole or in part, of another, shall be imprisoned for not more than thirty days or be fined not more than five hundred dollars, or both. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1323, ch. 854, § 822.)

Chapter 5.—ASSAULT — MAYHEM — THREAT OF BODILY HARM

Sec.

- 22-501. Assault with intent to kill, rob, rape, or poison.
- 22-502. Assault with intent to commit mayhem or with dangerous weapon.
- 22-503. Assault with intent to commit any other offense.
- 22-504. Assault or threatened assault in a menacing manner.
- 22-505. Assault on member of police force.
- 22-506. Mayhem or maliciously disfiguring.
- 22-507. Threats to do bodily harm.

Every person convicted of any assault with intent to kill or to commit rape, or to commit robbery, or mingling poison with food, drink, or medicine with intent to kill, or wilfully poisoning any well, spring, or cistern of water, shall be sentenced to imprisonment for not more than fifteen years. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1321, ch. 854, § 803.)

1. Assistance of counsel

Where defendant charged with assault of an indecent character on young lady in theatre was arrested at 12:15 a. m., on May 27, his counsel was retained for him at 10:20 that morning, counsel had no opportunity to consult with defendant, investigate charge, or otherwise prepare for trial and case was called for trial at 10:30, defendant was deprived of his right to effective assistance of counsel. Creed v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1959, 156 A. 2d 676).

2. Evidence—Admissibility

In prosecution for assault on a girl three years and eight months of age, the mother's testimony repeating the child's story to mother more than three hours after the alleged occurrence was hearsay and was not within doctrine of spontaneous statements. Brown v. U.S. (1946, 152 F. 2d 138, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 270).

In prosecution for assault on a girl three years and eight months of age, testimony of police officers regarding what the child had said a day or two after the alleged assault and an officer's belief as to what defendant had done was inadmissible. Id.

3. — Sufficiency

In prosecution for assault with intent to commit robbery, evidence on issue of defendant's sanity at time of commission of crime was sufficient to support conviction. Jordan v. United States (1955, 217 F. 2d 670, 95 U. S. App. D. C. 27).

The evidence must show beyond reasonable doubt an assault, an intent to have carnal knowledge of a female, and a purpose to carry out the intent with force and against the will of the female, to make out a case of "assault with intent to commit rape". Robinson v. U.S. (1943, 136 F. 2d 283, 78 U.S. App. D.C. 63).

In prosecution for assault with intent to commit rape, evidence was sufficient for jury. Id.

To make out a case of "assault with intent to commit rape," the evidence must show beyond a reasonable doubt an assault, and an intent to have carnal knowledge of the female and a purpose to carry into effect the intent with force and against the consent of the female. Hammond v. U.S. (1942, 127 F. 2d 752, 75 U.S. App. D.C. 397).

Evidence that defendant went to the home of his mother-in-law, with whom his wife and baby were living, went to the bedroom of his 17-year-old sister-in-law, pulled off the covers and touched her private parts with his hand, that she awakened and screamed, and that defendant ran from the house was insufficient to sustain conviction for "assault with intent to commit rape." Id.

4. Indictment

In an indictment for assault with intent to kill "it is not required that in the indictment it should be alleged and set forth with what means or instrument the killing was attempted to be perpetrated." Davis v. United States (16 App. D. C. 442). Otherwise, if attempt was by poisoning or drowning. Coratola v. United States (24 App. D. C. 229).

5. Insanity

A general verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity carried with it a finding that, except for the question as to his sanity, defendant was guilty as charged. Rucker

v. United States (C.A.D.C. 1960, 280 F. 2d 623).

In prosecution for assault with intent to kill and possession of a rifle with intent to use it unlawfully against another, where the court found the defendant not guilty by reason of insanity and it did not appear that defendant actually understood and acquiesced that the question of his guilt was being tried in that it did not appear that he understood and acquiesced in what was being accomplished without witnesses or evidence and he protested promptly a few days after the verdict, the defendant was entitled to a new trial. Id.

Post-conviction change in standards with regard to defense of insanity did not entitle person tried and convicted under previous standard to reversal. Jordan v. United States (1955, 217 F. 2d 670, 95 U. S. App. D. C. 27).

6. Instructions

Where defendant was charged with offense of assault upon female child with intent to commit carnal knowledge, trial court properly instructed jury that if it found defendant not guilty on count as charged, jury should then consider lesser included offense of taking improper and indecent liberties with a child. Younger Jr. v. United States (1959, 263 F. 2d 735, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 51).

Crimes of a revolting nature, especially where victim is a young child, arouse a strong feeling of disgust and hostility toward an accused, requiring court to exercise utmost care in giving its instructions to the end that justice may not miscarry. Brown v. U. S. (D. C. Mun. App. 1945, 40 A. 2d 832).

7. Intent to rape

An assault with intent to commit carnal knowledge on a child is certainly the taking of indecent liberties with a child, but with intent of going beyond the liberties referred to in statute, and intent to commit carnal knowledge is to take indecent liberties plus an intent much more vicious, violent or aggravated. Younger Jr. v. United States (1959, 263 F. 2d 735, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 51).

Assault on a female under the age of 16 years, with intent to carnally know her, is punishable under this section as an assault with intent to rape. Sanselo v. United States (44 App. D. C. 508).

8. Presumptions

In prosecution for assault with intent to commit rape a legal presumption exists that defendant was innocent until proved guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. Hammond v. U.S. (1942, 127 F. 2d 752, 75 U.S. App. D.C. 397).

9. Review

The rule in criminal as in civil cases is that a basis for an assignment of error must be laid in the trial court, but the court will sometimes in the exercise of a sound discretion notice error in a criminal case where the question was not properly raised at the trial. Miller v. United States (1927, 19 F. 2d 702, 57 App. D.C. 228).

10. Sentence

Defendant's motion, filed before expiration of minimum time of indeterminate sentence imposed by District Court on his conviction of rape, to correct later indeterminate sentence on his subsequent unrelated conviction of assault with intent to rape, will not be dismissed by Court of Appeals as premature, thereby relegating defendant to refile identical motion in District Court, in view of statute and criminal procedure rule authorizing motion attacking sentence and correction of illegal sentence at any time. Hollaway v. United States (1951, 191 F. 2d 504, 89 U.S. App. D. C. 332).

11. Submission or resistance

An assault may be committed upon a child irrespective of whether there is submission or resistance thereto. Beausoliel v. United States (1940, 107 F. 2d 292, 71 App. D.C. 111).

§ 22-502. Assault with intent to commit mayhem or with dangerous weapon

Every person convicted of an assault with intent to commit mayhem, or of an assault with a dangerous weapon, shall be sentenced to imprisonment for not more than ten years. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1321, ch. 854, § 804.)

Sentences 8

1. Argument of counsel

In prosecution for assault with a dangerous weapon, district attorney's argument to jury that "from the testimony of the doctor, the wound was a serious one and if it had been an inch lower the defendant might be here for murder" was permissible on question whether the weapon, a razor blade, was a dangerous one and whether it was likely to produce death or great bodily harm. Josev v. U.S. (1943, 135 F. 2d 809, 77 U.S. App. D.C. 321).

2. Dangerous weapon

Lye is a "dangerous weapon" within meaning of this section. Tatum v. United States (1940, 110 F. 2d 555, 7 App. D.C. 393).

3. Evidence

In prosecution for assault with a dangerous weapon, permitting district attorney to cross-examine defendant as to why defendant didn't run into house to avoid trouble if she believed complaining witness was going to do defendant some harm was proper, since the cross-examination was calculated to search for nature of defendant's belief and was proper to determine whether defendant went further than she was justified in doing. Josev v. U.S. (1943, 135 F. 2d 809, 77 U.S. App. D.C. 321).

4. Injury suffered

Threat or danger of physical suffering or injury in the ordinary sense is not necessary; the injury suffered by the innocent victim may be the fear, shame, humiliation, and mental anguish caused by the assault, neither is it necessary that such a victim should be aware of the nature of the act or of the danger. Beausoliel v. United States (1940, 107 F. 2d 292, 71 App. D.C. 111).

5. Instructions

In trial for assault with dangerous weapon, District Court is not required by criminal procedure rule to instruct jury that they may find defendant guilty of lesser offense of simple assault and should not so instruct them, in absence of evidence justifying conviction of simple assault. MacIllrath v. United States (1951, 188 F. 2d 1009, 88 U.S. App. D.C. 270).

In prosecution for assaults on three persons with deadly weapon, evidence that defendant shot one of such persons with a pistol and then clubbed the others on their heads therewith, causing serious injuries, established assaults with dangerous weapon and did not justify instruction on simple assault. Id.

In prosecution for assault with a dangerous weapon, requested instruction that if defendant had reasonable grounds to believe that complaining witness was about to inflict violence on her and was coming at her with a knife in a menacing manner, defendant was justified in defending herself and didn't have to retreat was fatally defective and was properly refused. Josev v. U.S. (1943, 135 F. 2d 809, 77 U.S. App. D.C. 321).

6. Legislative intent

Acquittal by defendant of assault with a dangerous weapon, did not require his acquittal on companion charge of carrying a pistol which he used to defend himself on ground that such acquittal demonstrated conclusively that defendant was carrying pistol for a lawful purpose notwithstanding defendant was exposed to a serious current threat by victim, that he did not have time to get a license and that he made a serious attempt to secure police protection, in light of the history of antiweapon legislation evidencing the clearest intent to drastically tighten ban on carrying dangerous weapons. Cooke v. United States (1960, 275 F. 2d 887, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 223).

7. Review

An assignment of error in failing to instruct jury on simple assault in prosecution for assaults with dangerous weapon comes too late on appeal from district court's judgment, in absence of request during trial for such instruction. Mac Illrath v. United States (1951, 188 F. 2d 1009, '88 U. S. App. D. C. 270).

8. Sentences

Consecutive penitentiary sentences on four counts, and concurrent sentence on fifth count do not violate the Indeterminate Sentence law. United States ex rel. Bracey v. Hill (C.C.A. 3, 1935, 77 F. 2d 970).

As maximum sentence imposed on each count was ten years and as none exceeded the maximum of ten years fixed by the statute, and as the minimum sentence on each count was two years and none exceeded one-fifth of the maximum of ten years fixed by the statute, the sentences are, therefore, in accord with the Indeterminate Sentence and Parole Act. Bracey v. Zerbst (C.C.A. 10, 1938, 93 F. 2d 8).

Whoever assaults another with intent to commit any other offense which may be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary shall be imprisoned not more than five years. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1322, ch. 854, § 805.)

Sentences 6

1. Burden of proof

In prosecution for unlawfully assaulting 15-year-old girl, burden was on the government to prove not only the touching, but that such touching was unlawful, or, in other words that the touching was not accidental or innocent. Davenport v. U. S. (D. C. Mun. App. 1948, 60 A. 2d 226).

2. Evidence

In prosecution for assault of an indecent nature on a ten-year-old boy, evidence of what occurred between boy and defendant in defendant's apartment on date preceding and day after date charged in the information was admissible as an exception to general rule. Posey v. U. S. (D. C. Mun. App. 1945, 41 A. 2d 300).

In prosecution for assault of an indecent nature on a ten-year-old boy, where record showed that what transpired between defendant and the boy on three consecutive days in defendant's apartment was so closely connected as to constitute composite parts of a single picture, evidence of what occurred on day preceding and day after the date charged in the information was relevant even though it revealed separate offenses on those days. Id.

3. Force

Application of force, or threat of application thereof, in an assault may be made indirectly as well as directly. Beausoliel v. United States (1940, 107 F. 2d 292, 71 App. D.C. 111).

4. Indictment

"It is not necessary to the charge of a joint assault by several persons that they be specifically charged as acting 'together and with each other.'" Polen v. United States (41 App. D. C. 4).

5. Instructions

In prosecution for assaulting a 15-year-old girl, defendant was entitled to an instruction that, if jury had any reasonable doubt about any material point or question in the case, they must resolve such doubt in favor of defendant, and an instruction that, if jury had any reasonable doubt finally after considering evidence both for and against defendant as to defendant's guilt, jury must bring verdict of not guilty, was error. Davenport v. U. S. (D. C. Mun. App. 1948, 60 A. 2d 226).

6. Sentences

When sentences imposed were ten years and eight years, respectively, on the first two indictments, and five years on the assault charge, the sentences to run consecutively in the order named, but since the first sentence of ten years had not expired, the application for habeas corpus was premature, as validity of other two sentences was not properly raised. Johnson v. Aderhold (C.C.A. 5 1934, 73 F. 2d 102).

Whoever unlawfully assaults, or threatens another in a menacing manner, shall be fined not more than five hundred dollars or be imprisoned not more than twelve months, or both. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1322, ch. 854, § 806.)

1. Arresting officer's liability

If the officer has reason to believe that the person he is about to arrest is a desperate character and acts accordingly, the officer is not to be convicted of assault because it subsequently develops that he was mistaken. Barrett v. United States (1933, 64 F. 2d 148, 62 App. D.C. 25).

2. Common law

The assault contemplated by this section providing that whoever unlawfully assaults or threatens another in a menacing manner shall be fined or imprisoned is common law assault. Guarro v. United States (1956, 237 F. 2d 578, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 97).

"Assault" at common law is an attempt with force or violence to do a corporal injury to another; and may consist of any act tending to such corporal injury, accompanied with such circumstances as denote at time an intention, coupled with present ability, of using actual violence against person. Id.

3. Consent

Unless there is consent, a sexual touching is sufficiently offensive to constitute an assault. Guarro v. United States (1956, 237 F. 2d 578, 99 U.S. App. D. C. 97).

Even assuming that defendant might both deny offense of indecent assault on member of morals squad of police department and rely on apparent consent, evidence did not require finding as a matter of law that there had been apparent consent on part of police officer. Day v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1959, 148 A. 2d 463).

A case of assault by a man touching another man's genital organ with invitation to homosexual act can be made out only by proof that complaining witness did not consent. McDermett v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1953, 98 A. 2d 287).

A police officer, by his own insidious conduct in patiently and cleverly encouraging and setting stage for furtive homosexual gesture by another man, charged with assault, placed himself in position of consenting to touching of his genital organ by such man, with invitation to homosexual act, and should not be heard to say, as prosecuting witness, that he was assaulted by accused. Id.

4. Counsel, right to

Though due process does not absolutely require appointment of counsel in all cases where person is deprived of his liberty because of unsound mind, where person charged with criminal offense of assault was subjected to lunacy inquisition prior to trial, due process required that defendant be represented by counsel in spite of ostensible waiver of that right or privilege. Evans v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 83 A. 2d 876).

Where appellant was asked if he wished counsel and each time he stated he did not and was advised of the seriousness of the charge against him but steadfastly retained his position that counsel was not desired, he was not deprived of his constitutional right, since in the exercise of a free and intelligent choice and with the considered approval of the court, a defendant may competently and intelligently waive the right to counsel. Humphries v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1949, 68 A. 2d 803).

5. Defenses

Fact that police officer specifically denied being hurt, embarrassed or humiliated by alleged touching of his private parts did not negative assault. Guarro v. United States (1956, 237 F. 2d 578, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 97).

Even though defendant, who was charged with making threats in a menacing manner and with unlawfully possessing an automatic pistol, had been discharged from hospital as having recovered from a mental disorder less than two months before date of alleged crimes, usual presumption of defendant's sanity, under District of Columbia law, existed at the time of trial. Williams v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1954, 104 A. 2d 828).

Where 13-year-old boy committed an indecent act upon a girl 4 years and 8 months old, act clearly constituted an assault, since child's acquiescence or submission was immaterial. In re Lewis (D. C. Mun. App. 1952, 88 A. 2d 582).

6. Evidence—Admissibility

In assault prosecution of defendant, evidence of an offense of sexual nature was admissible and a proper basis for conviction. Guarro v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1955, 116 A. 2d 408).

In assault prosecution of defendant who allegedly approached prosecution witness and placed his hand on witness' privates and squeezed them, the sexual nature of the alleged assault rendered admissible testimony by prosecution witness, who was an officer assigned to morals division of police department, that defendant had, after his arrest, admitted to officer the prior commission of acts of sodomy. Dyson v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1953, 97 A. 2d 135).

In prosecution for assault, where government witness admitted on cross-examination that she had waited two weeks after the incident before reporting it to police, testimony on redirect examination that she had not intended to report the incident but later saw defendant commit a similar assault upon another woman and then reported her experience to the police was competent to rebut the issue of delay raised by defendant. Stitely v. U. S. (D. C. Mun. App. 1948, 61 A. 2d 491).

7. — Arresting officer, testimony of Great caution should be applied in considering testimony of arresting officer in cases where alleged assault is nonviolent sexual touching which by its nature left no traces and to which there were no other witnesses. Guarro v. United States (1956, 237 F. 2d 578, 99 U. S. App. D. C. 97).

8. — Burden or proof

In prosecution for assault of a homosexual nature upon a child, child's accusation against defendant must be treated with great caution and government's proof must be of the most convincing kind. Konvalinka v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1960, 162 A. 2d 778).

In assault prosecution, it was incumbent upon Government to show that the act of the defendant was not accidental and that he had necessary criminal intent.

Dyson v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1953, 97 A. 2d 135).

9. — Corroboration

Testimony of complaining witness in prosecution for assault need not be corroborated. Ingram v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1955, 110 A. 2d 693).

Where testimony of certain witnesses would have been merely cumulative if they had been produced, defendants were not entitled to an adverse witness charge. Id.

10. — Sufficiency

Before use of assault statute to cover conduct that appears to fall within bounds of misdemeanor statutes can be countenanced court must be certain that elements of assault had been established. Guarro v. United States (1956, 237 F. 2d 578, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 97).

Evidence in support of claimed nonviolent sexual touching was not sufficient to support conviction under general assault statute. Id.

Evidence sustained conviction for assault. Hensley v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1959, 155 A. 2d 77).

Evidence did not sustain conviction for indecent assault upon a police officer. Thomas v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 129 A. 2d 852).

Evidence sustained conviction for assault. Goodman v. United States of America (D. C. Mun. App. 1955, 118 A. 2d 517).

11. Force

Application of force, or threat of application thereof, in an assault may be made indirectly as well as directly. Beausoliel v. United States (1940, 107 F. 2d 292, 71 App. D.C. 111).

12. Homosexual overture

A prosecution for assault may be sustained under this section for homosexual overture. Alleyne Anderson v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1955, 117 A. 2d 456).

Assault conviction, predicated upon homosexual overture, was sustained. Id.

13. Indictment

Where defendant was charged with committing "indecent assault" upon girl 4 years and 8 months old and laws in jurisdiction made an unlawful assault a misdemeanor and did not use term "indecent assault", addition of word "indecent" to charge could be treated as surplusage and neither added to nor detracted from the charge. In re Lewis (D. C. Mun. App. 1952, 88 A. 2d 582).

14. Injury suffered

Threat or danger of physical suffering in the ordinary sense is not necessary; the injury suffered by the innocent victim may be the fear, shame, humiliation, and mental anguish caused by the assault. Beausoliel v. United States (1940, 107 F. 2d 292, 71 App. D.C. 111).

15. Instructions

In prosecution for an assault committed upon a woman in a street car, where woman involved explained her delay in complaining to police by stating that she had not intended to complain until she saw defendant commit the same act upon another woman two weeks later, defendant was entitled, upon a timely request, to have jury instructed that testimony in explanation of delay was to be considered only in respect to delay in making complaint and not as evidence that offense charged was committed but where he failed to do so, no complaint could be made. Stitely v. U. S. (D. C. Mun. App. 1948, 61 A. 2d 491).

16. Motion of acquittal

In assault prosecution, defendant, by offering evidence subsequent to denial of motion of acquittal, waived his rights regarding that motion. Ernesto Guarro v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1955, 116 A. 2d 408).

17. Official conduct

Where plainclothes police officer was member of morals squad, conduct of officer just before alleged sexual assault was of crucial significance bearing on criminal responsibility of assailant. Guarro v. United States (1956, 237 F. 2d 578, 99 U. S. App. D. C. 97).

18. Reversible error

In prosecution for simple assault where defendant, a policeman, testified concerning incidents of his patrol, and where government cross-examined and brought on rebuttal evidence of other assaults under the theory of impeachment, and where upon appeal that theory was abandoned and that of identification substituted and both theories were of tenuous application upon the facts, thus affording the trial court no opportunity to rule upon admissibility under the new theory nor to give proper limiting instruction under it, there was reversible error. Martin v. U.S. (1942, 127 F. 2d 865, 75 U.S. App. D.C. 399).

In simple assault prosecution, arresting officer's testimony, in response to question whether defendant had denied the assault, that denial took place in presence of defendant's parol officer constituted reversible error, and, when officer volunteered such information, court should have cautioned him and instructed jury to disregard the information or should have granted defendant's motion for mistrial. Yeldell v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1959, 153 A. 2d 637).

Where in a prosecution for assault, defendant's counsel was deprived of the opportunity of examining defendant again on redirect examination and of the opportunity to call additional defense witnesses who had been sworn at the beginning of the trial, it constitutes reversible error, notwithstanding the absence of objection and exception taken at the trial court. Varrella v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1949, 64 A. 2d 310).

19. Review

Defendant convicted of indecent assault had a right of appeal notwithstanding that imposition of sentence was suspended and that defendant was required to give his personal recognizance or bond not to repeat the offense. Thomas v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 129 A. 2d 852).

Defendant who was convicted of indecent assault and whose sentence was suspended with requirement that defendant give his personal recognizance or bond not to repeat the offense could appeal as a matter of right rather than by application for appeal, notwithstanding statute providing that where penalty imposed is less than $50 review shall be by application. Id.

Party seeking review of alleged erroneous instructions cannot raise objection for the first time on appeal. James Hale v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1955, 114 A. 2d 74).

In prosecution wherein defendant was convicted of assault, there was no plain error in court's instructions to the jury which would enable defendant to raise error on appeal for the first time. Id.

(a) Whoever without justifiable and excusable cause, assaults, resists, opposes, impedes, intimidates, or interferes with any officer or member of any police force operating in the District of Columbia while engaged in or on account of the performance of his official duties, shall be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned not more than five years or both.

(b) Whoever in the commission of any such acts uses a deadly or dangerous weapon shall be imprisoned not more than ten years. (R. S., D. C., § 432; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 95, ch. 159, § 205.)

AMENDMENT

1953—Act June 29, 1953, increased the penalty for violation of the section from a fine of $500 or imprisonment for 2 years to a fine of $5,000 or imprisonment for 5 years or both, and a maximum of 10 years imprisonment if a dangerous weapon is used.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Assistance of counsel 1
Instructions 2

1. Assistance of counsel

In prosecution for assault with a deadly weapon upon a member of the police department, under the circumstances, failure of defendant's counsel in the trial court to pursue his attempt to impeach a government witness did not constitute ineffective assistance of counsel, nor, under the circumstances, did trial court err in permitting introduction of evidence on the doctrine of flight or in giving an erroneous instruction thereon. Tolliver v. United States (1959, 273 F. 2d 523, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 398).

2. Instructions

In prosecution for assaulting police officer, requested instruction as to defendant's right to resist unlawful arrest and use such force as was at his command and necessary to prevent such arrest was properly refused as being too broad and inapplicable to issues of case. Abrams v. United States (1956, 237 F. 2d 42, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 46, certiorari denied 77 S. Ct. 575, 352 U.S. 1018, 1 L. Ed. 2d 554).

Every person convicted of mayhem or of maliciously disfiguring another shall be imprisoned for not more than ten years. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1322, ch. 854, § 807.)

CROSS REFERENCE

Possession of firearm, additional penalty, see §§ 22-3201, 22-3202.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

1. Intent

So long as an act of mayhem is done maliciously and willfully, a specific intent is not necessary to constitute the crime, since the common-law definition, which is applicable, does not include a specific intention. Brown v. United States (1949, 171 F. 2d 832, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 222).

If an assault be so malicious and willful as to result in the loss of an eye, leg, or arm, it is immaterial to the gravity of the offense of mayhem that the assailant had no specific intention of depriving his victim of the eye, leg, or arm. Id.

Indictment and proof were not insufficient in prosecution for mayhem because a specific intent to maim and disfigure the complainant was neither alleged nor proved, since specific intent was not necessary to constitute mayhem. Id.

A person convicted of threats to do bodily harm shall be sentenced to imprisonment not exceeding six months or a fine not exceeding $500, or both, and, in addition thereto or in lieu thereof, may be required to give bond to keep the peace for a period not exceeding one year. (July 16, 1912, 37 Stat. 193, ch. 235, § 2; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 98, ch. 159, § 212.)

CODIFICATION

Section is comprised of part of section 2 of act July 16, 1912. Remainder of section 2 is classified to section 11-605.

AMENDMENT

1953—Act June 29, 1953, substituted provisions for imprisonment not exceeding six months or fine not exceeding $500 or both and requirement of a bond to keep the peace for one year for former requirement of a peace bond not to exceed six months or, in default of bond, for imprisonment not exceeding six months.

Chapter 6.—BIGAMY

Sec.
22-601 Definition and penalty.

Whoever, having a husband or wife living, marries another shall be deemed guilty of bigamy, and on conviction thereof shall suffer imprisonment for not less than two nor more than seven years: Provided,

That this section shall not apply to any person whose husband or wife has been continually absent for five successive years next before such marriage without being known to such person to be living within that time, or whose marriage to said living husband or wife shall have been dissolved by a valid decree of a competent court, or shall have been pronounced void by a valid decree of a competent court on the ground of the nullity of the marriage contract. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1331, ch. 854, § 870.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Conclusions of defendant 1
Evidence 2
Instructions 3
Plea of guilty 4

1. Conclusions of defendant

There must be some honest and effective effort made to ascertain truth before it can be claimed that conclusion of defendant, charged with bigamy, that first wife had obtained divorce had been reached in good faith. Alexander v. U.S. (1943, 136 F. 2d 783, 78 U.S. App. D.C. 34).

2. Evidence

Testimony of police officer in bigamy prosecution concerning admissions made to him by defendant was admissible although defendant was not advised that anything he said might be used against him and that he need not make a statement. Matz v. U.S. (1947, 158 F. 2d 190, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 326).

In prosecution for bigamy, court did not err in compelling the second wife to testify where the certificate of the prior marriage was in evidence, together with testimony as to defendant's admissions directed toward that certificate, and other testimony that defendant and first wife had lived together as husband and wife. Id.

3. Instructions

Where defendant, charged with bigamy, testified that he received letter stating that first wife had obtained divorce, but defendant made no effort to ascertain true facts, refusing instruction that defendant must be acquitted if he believed at time of second marriage that his first wife had procured a divorce and giving instruction that if jury believed beyond reasonable doubt that at time of second marriage first wife was living and that marriage had not been dissolved by valid decree jury should find defendant guilty was not prejudicial error. Alexander v. U.S. (1943, 136 F. 2d 783, 78 U.S. App. D.C. 34).

4. Plea of guilty

The fact that defendant entered a plea of guilty to charge of bigamy without advice of counsel and that not until some time later in the day was counsel, at his request, appointed for him, was not fatal under circumstances. Alexander v. U.S. (1943, 136 F. 2d 783, 78 U.S. App. D.C. 34).

Chapter 7.—BRIBERY—OBSTRUCTING JUSTICE

Sec.

22-701. Definition and penalty.

22-702. Offering or receiving money, property, or valuable consideration to procure office or promotion from District of Columbia Commissioners.

22-703. Obstructing justice.

Whoever promises, offers, or gives, or causes or procures to be promised, offered, or given, any money or other thing of value, or makes or tenders any contract, undertaking, obligation, credit, or security for the payment of money, or for the delivery or conveyance of anything of value, to any executive, judicial, or other officer, or to any person acting in any official function, or to any juror or witness, with intent to influence the decision, action, verdict, or evidence of any such person on any question, matter, cause, or proceeding or with intent to influence him to commit or aid in committing, or to collude in or allow any fraud, or make any opportunity for the commission of any fraud, shall be fined not more than five hundred dollars, or be imprisoned not more than three years, or both. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1330, ch. 854, § 861.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Accessory before the fact 1
Admissibility of evidence 2
Counsel, right to 3
Indictment 4
Jail guard 5
Official act 6

1. Accessory before the fact

In prosecution of doctor and his wife for attempted bribery of witness in abortion case against the doctor, where there was sufficient evidence to justify the jury's conclusion that doctor was an accessory before the fact to the attempt at bribery by his wife, he was properly found guilty as a principal. Ladrey v. U.S. (1946, 155 F. 2d 417, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 127, certiorari denied 67 S. Ct. 68, 329 U.S. 723, 91 L. Ed. 627).

2. Admissibility of evidence

In prosecution for attempted bribery of witness in abortion case, admission of evidence tending to show that witness was a material witness in the abortion case, consisting of her testimony that she was the person upon whom the operation had been performed, and statement showing the nature of the operation was proper. Ladrey v. U.S. (1946, 155 F. 2d 417, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 127, certiorari denied 67 S. Ct. 68, 329 U.S. 723, 91 L. Ed. 627).

In prosecution of doctor and his wife for attempted bribery of witness in abortion case against the doctor, where facts, other than the statements and acts of wife, were shown from which it could be concluded that a conspiracy between doctor and his wife in fact existed, the evidence of witness and police sergeant concerning the declarations of wife, including the offer of the bribe, was admissible against the doctor, though the declarations were made out of the doctor's presence. Id.

3. Counsel, right to

Under Constitution's prohibition against unreasonable searches, and its guaranties of due process of law and effective representation by counsel, government agent's intrusion upon conferences between accused and his counsel invalidated conviction under federal "obstruction of justice" statute and District of Columbia bribery statute. Caldwell v. United States (1953, 205 F. 2d 879, 92 U.S. App. D.C. 355).

4. Indictment

Although the act of asking, accepting, or receiving, in violation of § 117 of the Criminal Code (section 202 of title 18, U.S. Code) may each constitute a separate offense, it is not duplicious to charge them all in a single count. Egan v. United States (1923, 287 F. 958, 52 App. D.C. 384).

In prosecution of doctor and his wife for attempted bribery of witness in abortion case against the doctor, evidence that doctor took his wife to a point near the scene of her attempt at bribery, that after her arrest he was found with his automobile parked at a nearby corner, that he made a statement so incredible as to be prima facie false, as well as conflicting statements, together with fact that doctor had a strong motive to eliminate the witness, tended to show a secret combination or conspiracy between doctor and his wife, notwithstanding that indictment did not specifically charge that they had conspired. Ladrey v. U.S. (1946, 155 F. 2d 417, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 127, certiorari denied 67 S. Ct. 68, 329 U.S. 723, 91 L. Ed. 627).

5. Jail guard

Affirmance of conviction of bribery of jail guard to falsify records to establish alibi. Siegal v. United States (1933, 61 F. 2d 923, 61 App. D.C. 282, certiorari denied 53 S. Ct. 386, 288 U.S. 602, 77 L. Ed. 978).

Defendant was a person acting in an official function, exercising by delegation a part of the official authority possessed by the superintendent of the jail and if he had corruptly accepted the money, he would have been guilty of accepting a bribe to influence his official conduct. Id.

6. Official act

"There can be no bribery of any official to do a particular act, unless the law requires or imposes upon him the duty of acting." Thomson v. United States (37 App. D.C. 461). See, also, Benson v. United States (27 App. D.C. 331).

Every person who directly or indirectly takes, receives, or agrees to receive any money, property, or other valuable consideration whatever from any person for giving, procuring, or aiding to give or procure any office, place, or promotion in office from the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, or from any officer under them, and every person who, directly or indirectly, offers to give, or gives any money, property, or other valuable consideration whatever for the procuring or aiding to procure any such office, place, or promotion in office shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof in the municipal court shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars or imprisonment in the jail for not more than twelve months, or both, in the discretion of the court. (July 1, 1902, 32 Stat. 591, ch. 1352; Apr. 1, 1942, 56 Stat. 190, ch. 207, § 1.)

CONSOLIDATION OF POLICE COURT AND MUNICIPAL COURT

"Municipal court" was substituted for "police court" to conform to act Apr. 1, 1942, which consolidated the Police Court and the Municipal Court. See section 11-751.

Whoever corruptly, by threats or force, endeavors to influence, intimidate, or impede any juror, witness, or officer in any court in the District in the discharge of his duties, or, by threats or force, in any other way obstructs or impedes or endeavors to obstruct or impede the due administration of justice therein, shall be fined not more than two hundred dollars or imprisoned not more than three years, or both. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1330, ch. 854, § 862.)

Whosoever corruptly, directly or indirectly, gives any money, or other bribe, present, reward, promise, contract, obligation, or security for the payment of any money, present, reward, or thing of value to any ministerial, administrative, executive, or judicial officer of the District of Columbia or any employee or other person acting in any capacity for the District of Columbia, or any agency thereof, either before or after he is qualified, with intent to influence his action on any matter which is then pending, or may by law come or be brought before him in his official capacity, or to cause him to execute any of the powers in him vested, or to perform any duties of him required, with partiality or favor, or otherwise than is required by law, or in consideration that such officer being authorized in the line of his duty to contract for any advertising or for the furnishing of any labor or material, shall directly or indirectly arrange to receive or shall receive, or shall withhold from the parties so contracted with, any portion of the contract price, whether that price be fixed by law or by agreement, or in consideration that such officer has nominated or appointed any person to any office or exercised any power in him vested, or performed any duty of him required, with partiality or favor, or otherwise contrary to law; and whosoever, being such an officer, shall receive any such money, bribe, present, or reward, promise, contract, obligation, or security, with intent or for the purpose or consideration aforesaid shall be deemed guilty of bribery and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by imprisonment for a term not less than six months nor more than five years.

Whosoever corrupts or attempts, directly or indirectly, to corrupt any special master, auditor, juror, arbitrator, umpire, or referee, by giving, offering, or promising any gift or gratuity whatever, with intent to bias the opinion, or influence the decision of such officer, in relation to any matter pending in the court, or before an inquest, or for the decision of which such arbitrator, umpire, or referee has been chosen or appointed, and every official who receives, or offers or agrees to receive, a bribe in any of the cases above mentioned shall be guilty of bribery and upon conviction thereof shall be punished as hereinbefore provided. (Feb. 26, 1936, 49 Stat. 1143, ch. 87.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Evidence 1
Indictment 2
Joint trial of separate charges 3
Pre-trial inspection 4
Reversible error 5
Sentence 7
Separate trial 6
Variance 8

1. Evidence

In prosecution for conspiracy to bribe police officer and also for bribery itself to influence officer in enforcement of gambling laws, even if recordings of conversations between police officer who was subject of bribery, and defendants, were intercepted and recorded, and were introduced in evidence in violation of Federal Communications Act section, such question would not be reached in instant prosecution as instant use made of recordings was for refreshing recollection of police officer before giving his own testimony of the recorded conversations. Monroe v. United States (1956, 234 F. 2d 49, 98 U. S. App. D. C. 228, certiorari denied 77 S. Ct. 94, 352 U. S. 873, 1 L. Ed. 2d 76, rehearing denied 77 S. Ct. 219, 352 U. S. 937, 1 L. Ed. 2d 170, rehearing denied 78 S. Ct. 114, 355 U. S. 875, 2 L. Ed. 2d 79).

In prosecution for conspiracy to bribe police officer and also for bribery itself to influence officer in enforcement of gambling laws, recordings of conversations between police officer and defendants were admissible in evidence, where police officer testified as to operation of recording device, his method of operating such device, accuracy of the recordings, and identities of persons speaking. Id.

In prosecution for conspiracy to bribe police officer and also for bribery itself, to influence officer in enforcement of gambling laws, contention that recordings of conversations between police officer, who was subject of the conspiracy and bribery, and defendants were illegally intercepted and used in preparation of Government's trial was without merit where police officer himself made the recordings and transmitted the same information legally to other police officers to be utilized in preparation for trial of defendants. Id.

2. Indictment

Where defendants made motion before trial attacking indictment charging them with conspiracy to bribe police officer and also for bribery itself on ground of alleged misjoinder of substantive charges, such motion went to validity of indictment and not to question of advisability of separate trials. Monroe et al. v. United States (1956, 234 F. 2d 49, 98 U. S. App. D. C. 228, certiorari denied 77 S. Ct. 94, 352 U. S. 873, 1 L. Ed. 2d 76, rehearing denied 77 S. Ct. 219, 352 U. S. 937, 1 L. Ed. 2d 170, rehearing denied 78 S. Ct. 114, 355 U. S. 875, 2 L. Ed. 2d 79).

Where offenses of conspiracy to bribe and bribery charged in indictment were of the same or similar character, and defendants charged with such crimes were alleged to have participated in same conspiracy, joinder of offenses and defendants in the indictment was permissible under Federal Criminal Procedure Rule. Id.

3. Joint trial of separate charges

In prosecution for conspiracy to bribe police officer and also for bribery to influence officer in enforcement of gambling laws, defendants, who were convicted on only part of the substantive counts, and who were not involved in the conspiracy, were not prejudiced by trial of the conspiracy charge and bribery charges together, in view of the different number of convictions entered against the different defendants indicating that the jury was selective and was returning verdicts only upon basis of evidence relevant to each count and each defendant and also where court charged in considerable detail as to the separate substantive counts. Monroe v. United States (1956, 234 F. 2d 49, 98 U. S. App. D. C. 228, certiorari denied 77 S. Ct. 94, 352 U. S. 873, 1 L. Ed. 2d 76, rehearing denied 77 S. Ct. 219, 352 U. S. 937, 1 L. Ed. 2d 170, rehearing denied 78 S. Ct. 114, 355 U. S. 875, 2 L. Ed. 2d 79).

4. Pre-trial inspection

Under Federal Criminal Procedure Rule providing for pre-trial inspection of books, papers, documents or other objects designated in a subpoena, trial court was well within its discretion in declining to order inspection of original recordings of conversations between police officer and defendants, who were charged with conspiracy to bribe and bribery of police officer, where original recordings were too fragile to be used for discovery playing and where an affidavit was filed in which the accuracy of reproduction from the originals were certified and truth of affidavit was not brought into question. Monroe v. United States (1956, 234 F. 2d 49, 98 U. S. App. D. C. 228, certiorari denied 77 S. Ct. 94, 352 U. S. 873, 1 L. Ed. 2d 76, rehearing denied 77 S. Ct. 219, 352 U. S. 937, 1 L. Ed. 2d 170, rehearing denied 78 S. Ct. 114, 355 U. S. 875, 2 L. Ed. 2d 79).

5. Reversible error

In prosecution for conspiracy to bribe police officer and also for bribery itself to influence officer in enforcement of gambling laws, refusal of trial court to grant defendants' request to make stenographic transcripts of recordings between police officers and defendants or to be furnished copies of transcripts by Government was not reversible error, where defendants were given opportunity to hear recordings and where parts of recordings admitted in evidence were played out of presence of jury with defendant's counsel present. Monroe v. United States (1956, 234 F. 2d 49, 98 U. S. App. D. C. 228, certiorari denied 77 S. Ct. 94, 352 U. S. 873, 1 L. Ed. 2d 76, rehearing denied 77 S. Ct. 219, 352 U. S. 937, 1 L. Ed. 2d 170, rehearing denied 78 S. Ct. 114, 355 U. S. 875, 2 L. Ed. 2d 79).

6. Separate trial

If defendants, who were charged with conspiracy to bribe police officer and also for bribery to influence officer in enforcement of gambling laws, wished to be tried separately on those charges, request for separate trial on such charges should have been made in the trial court by motion under Federal Criminal Procedure Rule providing for such relief. Monroe v. United States (1956, 234 F. 2d 49, 98 U. S. App. D. C. 228, certiorari denied 77 S. Ct. 94, 352 U. S. 873, 1 L. Ed. 2d 76, rehearing denied 77 S. Ct. 219, 352 U. S. 937, 1 L. Ed. 2d 170, rehearing denied 78 S. Ct. 114, 355 U. S. 875, 2 L. Ed. 2d 79).

Under Federal Criminal Procedure Rule providing for severance of offenses or defendants in event of prejudice as result of such joinder, defendants, who were only ones convicted in prosecution for conspiracy with other defendants, if they had requested separation of the substantive counts from the conspiracy count, would not have been prejudiced by refusal of trial court to grant motion, where evidence of their participation in conspiracy was complete and included other defendants on trial for substantive counts. Id.

7. Sentence

Where defendant was convicted on count of conspiracy to bribe police officer, and also was convicted on intimately related bribery counts, and sentence under conspiracy count was for longer time than his concurrent sentence for bribery, conspiracy and bribery charges would be affirmed if no reversible error impaired conspiracy conviction. Monroe v. United States (1956, 234 F. 2d 49, 98 U. S. App. D. C. 228, certiorari denied 77 S. Ct. 94, 352 U. S. 873, 1 L. Ed. 2d 76, rehearing denied 77 S. Ct. 219, 352 U. S. 937, 1 L. Ed. 2d 170, rehearing denied 78 S. Ct. 114, 355 U. S. 875, 2 L. Ed. 2d 79).

8. Variance

If alleged variance existed between count of indictment which charged one conspiracy of all the defendants to bribe police officer, and evidence which allegedly showed several conspiracies, such variance was not reversible error in regard to convictions of two of the defendants on the conspiracy count, where conspiracy of the two convicted embraced the other defendants in the plan, thus preventing surprise, and also in view of fact that the defendants would not be prejudiced by the variance in defending on ground of present conviction in event of attempted second prosecution for same offense, as resort could be had by defendants to record of evidence or even to parol evidence if necessary. Monroe v. United States (1956, 234 F. 2d 49, 98 U. S. App. D. C. 228, certiorari denied 77 S. Ct. 94, 352 U. S. 873, 1 L. Ed. 2d 76, rehearing denied 77 S. Ct. 219, 352 U. S. 937, 1 L. Ed. 2d 170, rehearing denied 78 S. Ct. 114, 355 U. S. 875, 2 L. Ed. 2d 79).

Whoever overdrives, overloads, drives when overloaded, overworks, tortures, torments, deprives of necessary sustenance, cruelly beats, mutilates, or cruelly kills, or causes or procures to be so overdriven, overloaded, driven when overloaded, overworked, tortured, tormented, deprived of necessary sustenance, cruelly beaten, mutilated, or cruelly killed any animal, and whoever, having the charge or custody of any animal, either as owner or otherwise, inflicts unnecessary cruelty upon the same, or unnecessarily fails to provide the same with proper food, drink, shelter, or protection from the weather, shall for every such offense be punished by imprisonment in jail not exceeding one year, or by fine not exceeding two hundred and fifty dollars, or by both such fine and imprisonment. (Leg. Assem., Aug. 23, 1871, p. 135, ch. 106, § 1.)

Every owner, possessor, or person having the charge or custody of any animal, who cruelly drives or works the same when unfit for labor, or cruelly abandons the same, or who carries the same, or causes the same to be carried, in or upon any vehicle, or otherwise, in an unnecessarily cruel or inhuman manner, or knowingly and wilfully authorizes or permits the same to be subjected to unnecessary torture, suffering, or cruelty of any kind, shall be punished for every such offense in the manner provided in section 22-801. (Leg. Assem., Aug. 23, 1871, p. 135, ch. 106, § 2.)

§ 22-803. Transportation of animals by railroad companies—Rest—Water—Feeding by railroad company—Cost—Penalty.

No railroad company, in the carrying or transportation of animals, shall permit the same to be confined in cars for a longer period than twenty-four hours, without unloading the same, for rest, water, and feeding, for a period of at least five consecutive hours, unless prevented from so unloading by storm or other accidental causes. In estimating such confinement the time during which such animals have been confined without such rest on connecting roads from which they are received shall be included; it being the intent of this section to prohibit their continuous confinement beyond the period of twenty-four hours, except upon contingencies hereinbefore stated. Animals so unloaded shall be properly fed, watered, and sheltered during such rest by the owner or person having the custody thereof, or in case of his default in so doing, then by the railroad company transporting the same, at the expense of said owner or persons in custody thereof. And said company shall, in such case, have a lien upon such animals for food, care, and custody furnished, and shall not be liable for any detention of such animals authorized by this section. Any company, owner, or custodian of such animals who fails to comply with the provisions of this section shall, for each and every such offense, be liable for and forfeit and pay a penalty of not less than one or more than five hundred dollars: Provided, however, That when animals shall be carried in cars in which they can and do have proper food, water, space, and opportunity for rest, the foregoing provisions in regard to their being unloaded shall not apply. (Leg. Assem., Aug. 23, 1871, p. 135, ch. 106, § 3.)

CODIFICATION

This section is probably superseded in part by U.S. Code title 45, §§ 71—74.

Any person found violating the laws in relation to cruelty to animals may be arrested and held without a warrant, in the manner provided by section 32-205, and the person making an arrest, with or without a warrant, shall use reasonable diligence to give notice thereof to the owner of animals found in the charge or custody of the person arrested, and shall properly care and provide for such animals until the owner thereof shall take charge of the same: Provided, The owner shall take charge of the same within twenty days from the date of said notice. And the person making such arrest shall have a lien on said animals for the expense of such care and provisions. (Leg. Assem., Aug. 23, 1871, p. 136, ch. 106, § 4.)

CODIFICATION

Section 32-205 is section 5 of the "Charter of the Association for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, granted by an Act of Congress, approved June 21, 1870 (16 Stat. 158, ch. 135)." The quoted words are contained in the original text of this section.

When complaint is made by any member of the Washington Humane Society on oath or affirmation, to any magistrate authorized to issue warrants in criminal cases, that the complainant believes, and has reasonable cause to believe, that the laws in relation to cruelty to animals have been or are being violated in any particular building or place, such magistrate, if satisfied that there is reasonable cause for such belief, shall issue a search warrant, authorizing any marshal, deputy marshal, police officer, or any member of the Washington Humane Society to search such building or place. (Leg. Assem., Aug. 23, 1871, p. 136, ch. 106, § 5; Feb. 13, 1885, 23 Stat. 302, ch. 58, § 1; Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1195, ch. 854, § 41.)

AMENDMENT

1901—Act Mar. 3, 1901, abolished the office of constable, and required all process issued by a justice of the peace to be served by the United States marshal for the District of Columbia, or, if he is disqualified, by the coroner.

It shall be the duty of all marshals, deputy marshals, police officers, or any member of the Washington Humane Society, to prosecute all violations of the provisions of sections 22-801 to 22-809 and sections 22-811, 22-813, and 22-814, which shall come to their notice or knowledge, and fines and forfeitures collected upon or resulting from the complaint or information of any member of the Washington Humane Society under sections 22-801 to 22-809 and sections 22-811, 22-813, and 22-814 shall inure and be paid over to said association, in aid of the benevolent objects for which it was incorporated. (Leg. Assem., Aug. 23, 1871, p. 137, ch. 106, § 6; Feb. 13, 1885, 23 Stat. 302, ch. 58, § 1; Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1195, ch. 854, § 41.)

Any person who shall impound, or cause to be impounded in any pound, any creature, shall supply the same, during such confinement, with a sufficient quantity of good and wholesome food and water; and in default thereof shall, upon conviction, be punished for every such offense in the same manner provided in section 22-801. (Leg. Assem., Aug. 23, 1871, p. 137, ch. 106, § 7.)

In case any creature shall be at any time impounded as aforesaid, and shall continue to be without necessary food and water for more than twelve successive hours, it shall be lawful for any officer of the Washington Humane Society, from time to time, and as often as it shall be necessary, to enter into and upon any pound in which such creature shall be so confined, and supply it with necessary food and water so long as it shall remain so confined; such person shall not be liable to any action for such entry, and the reasonable cost for such food and water may be collected of the owner of such creature, and the said creature shall not be exempt from levy and sale upon execution issued upon a judgment thereof. (Leg. Assem., Aug. 23, 1871, p. 137, ch. 106, § 8; Feb. 13, 1885, 23 Stat. 302, ch. 58, § 1.)

§ 22-809. Keeping or using place for purpose of fighting or baiting of fowls or animals—Arrest without warrant.

Any person or persons who shall keep or use, or in any way be connected with or interested in the management of, or shall receive money for the admission of any person to any place kept or used for the purpose of fighting or baiting of fowls or animals, may be arrested without a warrant, as provided in section 32-205, and for every such offense be punished in the same manner provided in section 22-801. (Leg. Assem., Aug. 23, 1871, p. 137, ch. 106, § 9.)

Any person who sets on foot, instigates, promotes, carries on, or does any act, as assistant, umpire, or principal, or attends or in any way engages in the furtherance of any fight between cocks, fowls, or other birds, or dogs, bulls, bears, or other animals, premeditated by any persons owning or having custody of such birds or animals, is guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of not more than two hundred and fifty dollars or by imprisonment in jail not more than one year, or both. (June 25, 1892, 27 Stat. 61, ch. 135, § 6.)

If any maimed, sick, infirm, or disabled animal shall fail to receive proper food or shelter from said owner or person in charge of the same for more than five consecutive hours, such person shall, for every such offense, be punished in the same manner provided in section 22-801. (Leg. Assem., Aug. 23, 1871, p. 138, ch. 106, § 10; June 25, 1892, 27 Stat. 60, ch. 135, § 4.)

§ 22-812. Abandonment of maimed or diseased animal—Destruction of diseased animals—Disposition of animal or vehicle on arrest of driver—Scientific experiments.

A person being the owner or possessor or having charge or custody of a maimed, diseased, disabled, or infirm animal who abandons such animal, or leaves it to lie in the street or road, or public place, more than three hours after he receives notice that it is left disabled, is guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of not less than ten dollars nor more than two hundred and fifty dollars, or by imprisonment in jail not more than one year, or both. Any agent or officer of the Washington Humane Society may lawfully destroy, or cause to be destroyed, any animal found abandoned and not properly cared for, appearing, in the judgment of two reputable citizens called by him to view the same in his presence, to be glandered, injured, or diseased past recovery for any useful purpose. When any person arrested is, at the time of such arrest, in charge of any animal, or of any vehicle drawn by any animal, or containing any animal, any agent of said society may take charge of such animal and such vehicle and its contents and deposit the same in a place of safe custody or deliver the same into the possession of the police authorities, who shall assume the custody thereof; and all necessary expenses incurred in taking charge of such property shall be a lien thereon.

Nothing contained in sections 22-801 to 22-809, inclusive, and sections 22-811, 22-1109 shall be construed to prohibit or interfere with any properly conducted scientific experiments or investigations, which experiments shall be performed only under the authority of the faculty of some regularly incorporated medical college, university, or scientific society. (Leg. Assem., Aug. 23, 1871, p. 138, ch. 106, § 11; June 25, 1892, 27 Stat. 60, ch. 135, § 4.)

In sections 22-801 to 22-809, inclusive, and section 22-811, the word "animals" or "animal" shall be held to include all living and sentient creatures (human beings excepted), and the words "owner," "persons," and "whoever" shall be held to include corporations and incorporated companies as well as individuals. (Leg. Assem., Aug. 23, 1871, p. 138, ch. 106, § 12; June 25, 1892, 27 Stat. 60, ch. 135, § 3.)

Whoever cuts the solid part of the tail of any horse in the operation known as docking, and whoever shall cause the same to be done or assist in doing such cutting (unless the same is proved to be of benefit to the horse), shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by imprisonment in the Washington Asylum and Jail not exceeding one year or fine of not less than one hundred nor more than two hundred and fifty dollars. (June 25, 1892, 27 Stat. 61, ch. 135, § 5; Mar. 2, 1911, 36 Stat. 1003, ch. 192.)

CONSOLIDATION OF JAIL AND WASHINGTON ASYLUM

"Washington Asylum and Jail" was substituted for "jail" to conform to act Mar. 2, 1911, which combined the jail of the District of Columbia and the Washington Asylum. See section 24-407.

Any person who shall torture, cruelly beat, abuse, or otherwise wilfully maltreat any child under the age of eighteen years; or any person, having the custody and possession of a child under the age of fourteen years, who shall expose, or aid and abet in exposing, such child in any highway, street, field, house, outhouse, or other place, with intent to abandon it; or any person, having in his custody or control a child under the age of fourteen years, who shall in any way dispose of it with a view to its being employed as an acrobat, or a gymnast, or a contortionist, or a circus rider, or a rope-walker, or in any exhibition of like dangerous character, or as a beggar, or mendicant, or pauper, or street singer, or street musician; or any person who shall take, receive, hire, employ, use, exhibit, or have in custody any child of the age last named for any of the purposes last enumerated, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, when convicted thereof, shall be subject to punishment by a fine of not more than two hundred and fifty dollars, or by imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, or both. NOTES TO DECISIONS

Child as agency for commission of crime 2
Common law 3
Instructions 4
Privileged communication 5

1. In general

This section making it a crime to torture, cruelly beat, abuse, or otherwise willfully maltreat a child calls for something worse than good intentions coupled with bad judgment. Mullen v. United States (1959, 263 F. 2d 275, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 25).

2. Child as agency for commission of crime

One may be guilty of a crime where the prohibited act is committed through the agency of mechanical or chemical means, as by instruments, poison or powder, or by an animal, a child, or other innocent agent acting under the direction and compulsion of the accused. Beausoliel v. United States (1940, 107 F. 2d 292, 71 App. D.C. 111).

3. Common law

Offense prescribed while not expressed in terms of assault, comes within the common-law concept of that offense. Beausoliel v. United States (1940, 107 F. 2d 292, 71 App. D.C. 111).

4. Instructions

In prosecution of mother, who left her children chained in her home while she was absent, under this section making it a crime to torture, cruelly beat, abuse, or otherwise willfully maltreat a child, instruction that jury should decide whether mother was acting reasonably under the circumstances or whether her action was unreasonable and dangerous was reversibly erroneous because of omission of requirement of an evil state of mind. Mullen v. United States (1959, 263 F. 2d 275, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 25).

5. Privileged communication

Admission of defendant to Lutheran minister that she had chained her children after he had urged her to confess her sins, was a "privileged communication" and testimony thereof by minister was inadmissible in prosecution under this section making it a crime to torture, cruelly beat, abuse, or otherwise willfully maltreat a child. Mullen v. United States (1959, 263 F. 2d 275, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 25).

Any person within the District of Columbia, of sufficient financial ability, who shall refuse or neglect to provide for any child under the age of fourteen years, of which he or she shall be the parent or guardian, such food, clothing, and shelter as will prevent the suffering and secure the safety of such child, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be subject to punishment by a fine of not more than one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the workhouse of the District of Columbia for not more than three months, or both such fine and imprisonment. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1095, ch. 847, § 4.)

CODIFICATION

This section may have been partly superseded by sections 22-903 to 22-906.

Any person in the District of Columbia who shall, without just cause, desert or wilfully neglect or refuse to provide for the support and maintenance of his wife in destitute or necessitous circumstances, or any person who shall, without just excuse, desert or wilfully neglect or refuse to provide for the support and maintenance of his or her minor children under the age of sixteen years in destitute or necessitous circumstances, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than $500 or by imprisonment in the workhouse of the District of Columbia for not more than twelve months, or by both such fine and imprisonment; and should a fine be imposed it may be directed by the court to be paid in whole or in part to the wife or to the guardian or custodian of the minor child or children: Provided, That before the trial, with the consent of the defendant, or after conviction, instead of imposing the punishment hereinbefore provided, or in addition thereto, the court in its discretion, having regard to the circumstances and to the financial ability or earning capacity of the defendant, shall have the power to make an order, which shall be subject to change by it from time to time as circumstances may require, directing the defendant to pay a certain sum weekly for the space of one year to the wife, or to the guardian or custodian of the minor child or children, or to an organization or individual approved by the court as trustee, and to release the defendant from custody on probation for the space of one year upon his or her entering into a recognizance, with or without sureties, in such sum as the court may direct. The condition of the recognizance shall be such that if the defendant shall make his or her personal appearance in court whenever ordered to do so within the year, and shall further comply with the terms of the order and of any subsequent modification thereof, then the recognizance shall be void, otherwise of full force and effect.

If the court be satisfied by information and due proof, under oath, that at any time during the year the defendant has violated the terms of such order, it may forthwith proceed with the trial of the defendant under the original charge, or sentence him under the original conviction, or enforce the original sentence, as the case may be. In case of forfeiture of a recognizance and enforcement thereof by execution, the sum recovered may, in the discretion of the court, be paid in whole or in part to the wife, or to the guardian or custodian of the minor child or children. The juvenile court is hereby given concurrent jurisdiction with the United States District Court for the District of Columbia in all cases arising under this section. (Mar. 23, 1906, 34 Stat. 86, ch. 1131, § 1; June 10, 1926, 44 Stat. 716, ch. 528; June 25, 1936, 49 Stat. 1921, ch. 804; June 25, 1948, 62 Stat.

AMENDMENT

1926—Act June 10, 1926, deleted the words "at hard labor" following the words "workhouse of the District of Columbia."

CHANGE OF NAME

Act June 25, 1936, substituted "District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia" for "Supreme Court of the District of Columbia."

Act June 25, 1948, eff. Sept. 1, 1948, as amended by act May 24, 1949, substituted "United States District Court for the District of Columbia" for "District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia."

1. Constitutionality

The provisions for punishment under the act not being severable, the act is unconstitutional. United States v. Moreland (1922, 42 S. Ct. 368, 258 U.S. 433, 66 L. Ed. 700, 24 A.L.R. 992).

2. — Counsel, right to

Where petitioner was convicted in the juvenile court upon a plea of guilty of refusing to provide for the support of his minor child, and at the time of his arraignment he was not told that he was waiving his right to counsel and was not represented by counsel and was not advised of his "right to counsel," he did not under these circumstances "waive" his right to counsel; therefore his constitutional rights to the assistance of counsel were violated with consequent loss of jurisdiction in the juvenile court to convict and sentence him, and he was entitled to discharge on writ of habeas corpus. Evans v. Rives (1942, 126 F. 2d 633, 75 U.S. App. D.C. 242).

3. — Double jeopardy

Prisoner sentenced on defective information charging nonsupport was placed in jeopardy and subsequent filing of new information, based on alleged nonsupport during same period, and sentence thereunder was barred. Burke v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1954, 103 A. 2d 348).

4. Domicile

Under this statute a husband domiciled in another state is not chargeable under this act with refusal to support child. United States ex rel. Smith v. Mathues (D.C. Pa. 1923, 284 F. 368).

In proceeding against person indicted under this statute, and who is found in another district, technical objections to indictment are for the court where the indictment is lodged. In re Parker (D.C. Cal. 1924, 299 F. 1006, affirmed 3 F. 2d 903, certiorari denied 45 S. Ct. 513, 268 U.S. 694, 69 L. Ed. 1161).

Person indicted under this statute may be removed from another district, since a violation of the act is in fact a crime against the United States. Parker v. United States (C.C.A. 9, 1925, 3 F. 2d 903, certiorari denied 45 S. Ct. 513, 268 U.S. 694, 69 L. Ed. 1161).

Where husband was not in the District of Columbia at time he allegedly failed to support his children, as charged in indictment, he did not violate this section, and court would deny petition for husband's removal to the District. U.S. v. Johnson (D.C. Or. 1946, 63 F. Supp. 615).

A resident of the District of Columbia who had not failed to provide support for wife while within the District, and who left the District for Oregon where he was employed for about two years until he first failed to furnish support, did not violate this section. Id.

5. Information

Information charging husband with nonsupport of wife and minor children but omitting word "wilfully" was fatally defective. Burke v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1954, 103 A. 2d 347).

Information charging defendant with nonsupport of wife and minor children but omitting word "wilfully" was defective, but not void, and hence could not have served as basis for application for writ of habeas corpus. Id.

Information charging that parent had neglected to provide for support and maintenance of child was fatally defective to charge statutory crime of wilful neglect of children because it failed to charge that neglect was wilful. Seidenberg v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1953, 97 A. 2d 463).

6. Jurisdiction

Since the jurisdiction conferred upon the juvenile court for the District of Columbia relates only to cases involving children arising under § 11-902 et seq., the juvenile court exceeded its jurisdiction in attempting to hold defendant for nonsupport of his wife only; the welfare of no children being involved. Ex parte Wilson (1940, 79 F. Supp. 816).

In cases involving nonsupport of wife and minor children, the jurisdiction of the Juvenile Court of the District of Columbia is concurrent with that of the District Court. Burke v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1954, 103 A. 2d 347).

7. Nonresident

Where indictment did not describe the accused as a "person in the District of Columbia," and evidence showed he was not a resident of District of Columbia, denial of a motion for warrant of removal to District of Columbia was proper. United States ex rel. Smith v. Mathues (D.C. Pa. 1923, 284 F. 368).

8. Presentment or indictment

Fact that prisoner receives maximum sentence under this statute, without having been presented or indicted by grand jury, does not of itself render said sentences void. United States v. Moreland (1922, 42 S. Ct. 368, 258 U.S. 433, 66 L. Ed. 700, 24 A. L. R. 992).

9. Sentence

The test of infamy is not the sentence imposed but rather that which may be imposed under the statute. United States v. Moreland (1922, 42 S. Ct. 368, 258 U.S. 433, 66 L. Ed. 700, 24 A. L. R. 992).

Court has no jurisdiction to impose a sentence involving hard labor where there has been no indictment or presentment by a grand jury. Moreland v. United States (1922, 276 F. 640, 51 App. D. C. 118, affirmed 42 S. Ct. 368, 258 U.S. 433, 66 L. Ed. 700, 24 A. L. R. 992).

10. Separate offenses

This section making it misdemeanor for husband to wilfully neglect or refuse to provide for destitute wife or for any person to desert and wilfully neglect to support minor children under sixteen years of age, by use of disjunctive "or" makes two crimes, one by husband against his wife and the other by any person against his or her minor child, and one may be convicted for both nonsupport of wife and minor children thereunder as separate crimes. Burke v. United States (1956, 239 F. 2d 50, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 230).

11. Support payments

Where defendant, found guilty of failing to support his minor child, had agreed with his separated wife to submit their contentions as to amount to be paid for child support to the Juvenile Court for determination, order, made upon the basis of evidence of defendant's salary and expenses, that he pay $10 a week out of a $192 net monthly income for child support, did not appear unreasonable and was not an abuse of discretion. Mack v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1953, 93 A. 2d 567).

12. Witness

Wife is competent witness in proceedings for removal under R.S. § 1014. Parker v. United States (C.C.A. 9, 1925, 3 F. 2d 903, certiorari denied 45 S. Ct. 513, 268 U.S. 694, 69 L. Ed. 1161).

No other evidence shall be required to prove marriage of such husband and wife, or that such person is the lawful father or mother of such child or children, than is or shall be required to prove such facts in a civil action. In all prosecutions under sections 22-903 to 22-905, any provisions of law in force on March 23, 1906, prohibiting the disclosure of confidential communications between husband and wife shall not apply, and both husband and wife shall be competent and compellable witnesses to testify to any and all relevant matters, including the fact of such marriage and the parentage of such child or children. Proof of the desertion of such wife, child, or children in destitute or necessitous circumstances, or of neglect to furnish such wife, child, or children necessary and proper food, clothing, or shelter is prima facie evidence that such desertion or neglect is wilful. (Mar. 23, 1906, 34 Stat. 87, ch. 1131, § 2.)

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Witness

State rule as to competency of witnesses does not apply in view of this section. In re Parker (D.C. Cal. 1924, 299 F. 1006, affirmed 3 F. 2d 903, certiorari denied 45 S. Ct. 513, 268 U.S. 694, 69 L. Ed. 1161).

It shall be the duty of the superintendent in charge of the workhouse of the District of Columbia in which any person is confined on account of a sentence under sections 22-903 to 22-905 to pay, out of any funds available, over to the wife, or to the guardian or custodian of his or her minor child or children, or to an organization or individual approved by the court as trustee, at the end of each week, for the support of such wife, child, or children, a sum equal to 50 cents for each day of the sentence served by said person so confined. (Mar. 23, 1906, 34 Stat. 87, ch. 1131, § 3; June 10, 1926, 44 Stat. 716, ch. 528.)

AMENDMENT

1926—Act June 10, 1926, substituted "each day of the sentence served" for "each day's hard labor performed."

§ 22-906. Collections by clerk of court to be deposited with collector of taxes and covered into Treasury.

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Jurisdiction

The offense here denounced does not fall within the category of those offenses defined as within the admiralty and maritime jurisdiction of the United States, and a single act committed between an unmarried man and an unmarried woman, aboard a ship en route to a foreign country, does not bring such act within the punishment of the courts of the United States. Ex parte Isojoki (D.C. Cal. 1915, 222 F. 151).

NOTES TO DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAWApplicability 1
Indictment 2*1. Applicability

Former sections 22-1105 and 22-1106 were applicable to the District of Columbia. Dane v. United States (1927, 18 F. 2d 811, 57 App. D. C. 161, certiorari denied 48 S. Ct. 35, 275 U. S. 538, 72 L. Ed. 413).

2. Indictment

Indictment charging promoter of fight between other with "engaging" in fight was not insufficient. Dane v. United States (1927, 18 F. 2d 811, 57 App. D. C. 161, certiorari denied 48 S. Ct. 35, 275 U. S. 538, 72 L. Ed. 413).

Acquittal of fighters was not inconsistent with conviction of promoter. Id.

It shall not be lawful for any person or persons within the District of Columbia to congregate and assemble in any street, avenue, alley, road, or highway, or in or around any public building or inclosure, or any park or reservation, or at the entrance of any private building or inclosure, and engage in loud and boisterous talking or other disorderly conduct, or to insult or make rude or obscene gestures or comments or observations on persons passing by, or in their hearing, or to crowd, obstruct, or incommode, the free use of any such street, avenue, alley, road, highway, or any of the foot pavements thereof, or the free entrance into any public or private building or inclosure; it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to curse, swear, or make use of any profane language or indecent or obscene words, or engage in any disorderly conduct in any street, avenue, alley, road, highway, public park or inclosure, public building, church, or assembly room, or in any other public place, or in any place wherefrom the same may be heard in any street, avenue, alley, road, highway, public park or inclosure, or other building, or in any premises other than those where the offense was committed, under a penalty of not more than $250 or imprisonment for not more than ninety days, or both for each and every such offense. (July 29, 1892, 27 Stat. 323, ch. 320, § 6; July 8, 1898, 30 Stat. 723, ch. 638; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 97, ch. 159, § 210.)

AMENDMENTS

1953—Act June 29, 1953, substituted "$250 or imprisonment for not more than ninety days, or both" for "twenty-five dollars."

1898—Act July 8, 1898, amended section generally. Prior to the amendment the section read: "It shall not be lawful for any person or persons within the District of Columbia to congregate and assemble at the corners of any of the streets or avenues, or in any street, avenue, or alley, road, or highway, or on the foot pavements or flag footways of any street or avenue, or at the entrance or on the steps, cellar doors, porches, or porticos of any public or private building or office, or at the entrance of any public or private building or office, or at the entrance, or in, on, or around any of the inclosures of the Capitol, Executive Mansion, public squares, District buildings, Judiciary Square, or at the entrance of any church, schoolhouse, theater, or any assembly room, or in or around the same, or any other public or private inclosure within the said District, and be engaged in loud or boisterous talking, or to insult or make rude or obscene comments or remarks or observations on persons passing by the same, or in their hearing, or to so crowd, obstruct, or incommode the said foot pavement or flag footway, or the entrance into or out of any such church, public or private dwelling, city hall, Executive Mansion, Capitol, or such public inclosure, square or alley, highway or road, as to prevent the free and uninterrupted passage thereof, under a penalty of not more than twenty-five dollars for each and every such offense."

NOTES TO DECISIONSEvidence 1
Matters considered 2
Presence of other persons 3
Public place 4*1. Evidence

Evidence that taxicab driver made certain suggestions to female passenger and repeated the suggestions both en route and on reaching their destination justified finding that such remarks were "indecent" and "obscene" within this section. Morris v. District of Columbia (1943, 31 A. 2d 652).

2. Matters considered

In determining whether defendant's remarks were within prohibition of this section, the trial judge was entitled to consider all surrounding circumstances, time of occurrence and manner in which it occurred, repetition of the remarks, as well as lack of previous acquaintance. Morris v. District of Columbia (1943, 31 A. 2d 652).

3. Presence of other persons

Under this section making it unlawful for any person to use indecent or obscene language in any public place, the presence of others than offender and person addressed is not necessary to complete the offense. Morris v. District of Columbia (1943, 31 A. 2d 652).

4. Public place

A public vehicle, such as a taxicab, plying its business on a public street, is a "public place" within this section making it unlawful for any person to use indecent or obscene words in any public place. Morris v. District of Columbia (1943, 31 A. 2d 652).

It shall not be lawful for any person or persons to play the game of football, or any other game with a ball, in any of the streets, avenues, or alleys in the city of Washington; nor shall it be lawful for any person or persons to play the game of bandy, shindy, or any other game by which a ball, stone, or other substance is struck or propelled by any stick, cane, or other substance in any street, avenue, or alley in the city of Washington, under a penalty of not more than five dollars for each and every such offense. (July 29, 1892, 27 Stat. 325, ch. 320, § 17; Feb. 11, 1895, 28 Stat. 650, ch. 79.)

AMENDMENT

1895—Act Feb. 11, 1895, substituted "city of Washington" for "cities of Washington and Georgetown" in two instances.

NOTE TO DECISION1. Civil liability of parent

In absence of evidence that either of two minor boys had previously played with a football on sidewalk in violation of this section or that their conduct had been such that their parents, with closer supervision, would have been aware that boys were engaging in conduct which was unlawful or which might inflict injury upon others, parents of boys were not chargeable with liability for injuries sustained by pedestrian with whom one of the boys collided while attempting to catch football. Bateman v. Crim (D. C. Mun. App. 1943, 34 A. 2d 257).

It shall not be lawful for any person or persons within the District of Columbia to throw any stone or other missile in any street, avenue, alley, road, or highway, or open space, or public square, or inclosure, or to throw any stone or other missile from any place into any street, avenue, road, or highway, alley, open space, public square, or inclosure, under a penalty of not more than five dollars for every such offense. It shall not be lawful for any person or persons to entice, induce, urge, or cause any dogs to engage in a fight in any street, alley, road, or highway, open space, or public square in the District of Columbia, or to urge, entice, or cause such dogs to continue or prolong such fight, under a penalty of not more than five dollars for each and every offense; and any person or persons who shall induce or cause any animal of the dog kind to run after, bark at, frighten, or bite any person, horse, or horses, cows, cattle of any kind, or other animals lawfully passing along or standing in or on any street, avenue, road, or highway, or alley in the District of Columbia, shall forfeit and pay for such offense a sum not exceeding five dollars. § 22-1111. Penalty for allowing fierce and dangerous dogs to go at large.

If any owner or possessor of a fierce or dangerous dog shall permit the same to go at large, knowing said dog to be fierce or dangerous, to the danger or annoyance of the inhabitants, he shall upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine not exceeding twenty dollars; and if such animal shall attack or bite any person, the owner or possessor thereof shall, on conviction, be punished by a fine not exceeding fifty dollars, and in addition to such punishment the court shall adjudge and order that such animal be forthwith delivered to the poundmaster, and said poundmaster is hereby authorized and directed to kill such animal so delivered to him.

If any owner or possessor of a female dog shall permit her to go at large in the District of Columbia while in heat he shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine not exceeding twenty dollars. (June 19, 1878, 20 Stat. 174, ch. 323, § 9; June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 547, ch. 1332.)

AMENDMENT

NOTE TO DECISION1. Knowledge of owner

Amendment of 1902 did not modify judicial interpretation of earlier act that owner was not liable for conduct of dog unless he had or was charged with knowledge of its vicious propensities. Bardwell v. Petty (1923, 286 F. 772, 52 App. D. C. 310).

(a) It shall not be lawful for any person or persons to make any obscene or indecent exposure of his or her person, or to make any lewd, obscene, or indecent sexual proposal, or to commit any other lewd, obscene, or indecent act in the District of Columbia, under penalty of not more than $300 fine, or imprisonment of not more than ninety days, or both, for each and every such offense.

AMENDMENTS

1953—Subsec. (a) amended by act June 29, 1953, to eliminate "or their persons in any street, avenue, alley, road or highway, open space, public square, or other public place or inclosure, in the District of Columbia, or to make any such obscene or indecent exposure of person in any dwelling or other building or other place wherefrom the same may be seen in any street, avenue, alley, road or highway, open space, public square, or public or private building or inclosure" following "exposure of his or her person", to insert "or to make any lewd, obscene, or indecent sexual proposal, or to commit any other lewd, obscene, or indecent act in the District of Columbia", and to increase the fine from $250 to $300.

1. Acts committed in privacy

Under this section making it unlawful for any person to make any lewd, obscene or indecent sexual proposal, or to commit any other lewd, obscene or indecent act in the District of Columbia, an open or public act in common-law sense is no longer required, but this section is not designed or intended to apply to an act committed in privacy or presence of a single, consenting person. Rittenour v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1960, 163 A. 2d 558).

2. Elements of assault

Before use of assault statute to cover conduct that appears to fall within bounds of misdemeanor statutes can be countenanced court must be certain that elements of assault had been established. Guarro v. United States (1956, 237 F. 2d 578, 99 U. S. App. D. C. 97).

3. Entrapment

Where police officer made phone call to defendant and went to defendant's house in order to investigate a suspected homosexual and in order to confirm the suspicion led suspect to believe officer would not resist homosexual advances and then arrested him, defendant was entrapped. Rittenour v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1960, 163 A. 2d 558).

4. Evidence

Evidence was insufficient to sustain convictions for committing a lewd, obscene, or indecent act. Caul and Coggins v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1960, 164 A. 2d 350).

Evidence sustained conviction of committing a lewd, obscene, or indecent act. McGhee v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1957, 137 A. 2d 721).

5. — Corroboration

Testimony of complaining witness in prosecution for committing a lewd, obscene or indecent act, which was corroborated by her companion except for the actual identification of defendant, was sufficiently corroborated to secure conviction. McGhee v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 137 A. 2d 721).

Evidence showed sufficient corroboration of the circumstances to sustain conviction for making an indecent sexual proposal. Howard v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 132 A. 2d 150).

6. — Testimony of arresting officer

Great caution should be applied in considering testimony of arresting officer in cases where alleged assault is nonviolent sexual touching which by its nature left no traces and to which there were no other witnesses. Guarro v. United States (1956, 237 F. 2d 578, 99 U. S. App. D. C. 97).

7. Homosexuality

Homosexuality is not a crime. Rittenour v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1960, 163 A. 2d 558).

8. Intent

A criminal intent must be shown in prosecution for indecent exposure before conviction can be upheld, and though exposure must be intentional and not accidental, the intent required is only a general one and need not be directed toward any specific person or persons. Peyton v. D.C. (D.C. Mun. App. 1953, 100 A. 2d 36).

An exposure becomes indecent when defendant exposes himself at such a time and place where as a reasonable man he knows or should know his act will be open to observation by others. Id.

9. Resentencing

Where prosecution was under one subsection of statute, the wording of which was followed by the information, but upon conviction sentence was imposed under another subsection of statute which provided for stiffer penalties, and evidence sustained conviction, case would be remanded with instructions to vacate existing sentence and to resentence defendant in accordance with subsection of statute under which he was prosecuted. Howard v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1957 132 A. 2d 150).

It shall not be lawful for any person or persons within the limits of the District of Columbia to kindle or set on fire, or be present, aiding, consenting, or causing it to be done, in any street, avenue, road, or highway, alley, open ground, or lot, any box, barrel, straw, shavings, or other combustible, between the setting and rising of the sun; and, any person offending against the provisions of this section shall on conviction thereof, forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding ten dollars for each and every offense. (July 29, 1892, 27 Stat. 325, ch. 320, § 14.)

CROSS REFERENCE

Prosecutions, see § 22-109.

It shall not be lawful for any person or persons to molest or disturb any congregation engaged in any religious exercise or proceedings in any church or place of worship in the District of Columbia; and it shall be lawful for any of the authorities of said churches to arrest or cause to be arrested any person or persons so offending, and take him, her, or them to the nearest police station, to be there held for trial; and any person or persons violating the provisions of this section shall forfeit and pay a fine of not more than one hundred dollars for every such offense. (July 29, 1892, 27 Stat. 324, ch. 320, § 11.)

CROSS REFERENCE

Prosecutions, see § 22-109.

It shall be unlawful to display any flag, banner, placard, or device designed or adapted to intimidate, coerce, or bring into public odium any foreign government, party, or organization, or any officer or officers thereof, or to bring into public disrepute political, social, or economic acts, views, or purposes of any foreign government, party, or organization, or to intimidate, coerce, harass, or bring into public disrepute any officer or officers or diplomatic or consular representatives of any foreign government, or to interfere with the free and safe pursuit of the duties of any diplomatic or consular representatives of any foreign government, within five hundred feet of any building or premises within the District of Columbia used or occupied by any foreign government or its representative or representatives as an embassy, legation, consulate, or for other official purposes, except by, and in accordance with, a permit issued by the superintendent of police of the said District; or to congregate within five hundred feet of any such building or premises, and refuse to disperse after having been ordered so to do by the police authorities of the said District. (Feb. 15, 1938, 52 Stat. 30, ch. 29, § 1.)

TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS

Chief of Police as successor to Major and Superintendent of Police, see note under section 4-103.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Constitutionality 1 Offenses 2

1. Constitutionality

Congress, in executing power to define and punish offenses against foreign nations, was authorized to prohibit the display, within 500 feet of an embassy, legation, or consulate in District of Columbia, of any flag, banner, placard, or device designed to bring any foreign government into public odium, or to harass any diplomatic or consular representatives. Frend v. U. S. (1939, 100 F. 2d 691, 69 App. D. C. 281, certiorari denied 59 S. Ct. 488, 306 U. S. 640, 83 L. Ed. 1040).

The power of Congress to define and punish offenses against law of nations and to exercise police power of a state in District of Columbia authorized it, in seeking to protect foreign embassies from disturbances, to determine how and to whom it would distribute authority to make detailed regulations, and to delegate that power to superintendent of police of District. Id.

This section did not violate due process clause of Constitution. Id.

This section did not constitute an invalid delegation of authority to superintendent of police to grant permit without establishment of any standard or guide to govern granting of permit. Id.

This section did not violate constitutional provision relating to free speech and free assemblage since no restriction was placed upon speech or assembly except to extent that they might constitute offensive public demonstrations immediately adjacent to buildings used for official purposes by foreign government. Id.

2. Offenses

Where defendants were part of a congregation of people who paraded in streets in front of Austrian or German embassy with banners or placards pursuant to plan to bring German government into contempt, defendants, under provisions of local law making it an offense to aid and abet in violation of the law, were guilty of violation of this section, regardless of whether each of defendants was then displaying one of placards. Frend v. U. S. (1939, 100 F. 2d 691, 69 App. D. C. 281, certiorari denied 59 S. Ct. 488, 306 U. S. 640, 83 L. Ed. 1040).

§ 22-1116. Penalties for interference with foreign diplomatic and consular offices, officers, and property.

The municipal court for the District of Columbia shall have jurisdiction of offenses committed in violation of section 22-1115, and any person convicted of violating any of the provisions of said section shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $100 or by imprisonment not exceeding sixty days, or both: Provided, however, That nothing contained in said section shall be construed to prohibit picketing, as a result of bona fide labor disputes regarding the alteration, repair, or construction of either buildings or premises occupied, for business purposes, wholly or in part, by representatives of foreign governments. (Feb. 15, 1938, 52 Stat. 30, ch. 29, § 2; Apr. 1, 1942, 56 Stat. 190, ch. 207, § 1.)

CONSOLIDATION OF POLICE COURT AND MUNICIPAL COURT

"Municipal court for the District of Columbia" was substituted for "police court of the District of Columbia" to conform to act Apr. 1, 1942, which consolidated the police court and the municipal court. See section 11-751.

It shall not be lawful for any person or persons to set up or fly any kite, or set up or fly any fire balloon or parachute in or upon or over any street, avenue, alley, open space, public enclosure, or square within the limits of the city of Washington, under a penalty of not more than ten dollars for each and every such offense. (July 29, 1892, 27 Stat. 322, ch. 320, § 4; Feb. 11, 1895, 28 Stat. 650, ch. 79.)

AMENDMENT

1895—Act Feb. 11, 1895, substituted "city of Washington" for "cities of Washington and Georgetown."

CROSS REFERENCE

§ 22-1118. Driving or riding on footways in public grounds.

If any person shall drive or lead any horse, mule, or other animal, or any cart, wagon, or other carriage whatever on any of the paved or graveled footways in and on any of the public grounds belonging to the United States within the District of Columbia, or shall ride thereon, except at the intersection of streets, alleys, and avenues, each and every such offender shall forfeit and pay for each offense a sum not less than one nor more than five dollars. (July 29, 1892, 27 Stat. 325, ch. 320, § 16.)

CROSS REFERENCE

Prosecutions, see § 22-109.

It shall be unlawful for any person or persons to wilfully or knowingly give a false alarm of fire within the District of Columbia, and any person or persons violating the provisions of this section shall, upon conviction, be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars or by imprisonment for not more than six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment. Prosecutions for violation of the provisions of this section shall be on information filed in the municipal court by the corporation counsel of the District of Columbia or by any of his assistants. (June 8, 1906, 34 Stat. 220, ch. 3055; Apr. 1, 1942, 56 Stat. 190, ch. 207, § 1.)

CONSOLIDATION OF POLICE COURT AND MUNICIPAL COURT

"Municipal court" was substituted for "police court" to conform to act Apr. 1, 1942, which consolidated the police court and the municipal court. See section 11-751.

No person shall sell, give, or furnish any cigar, cigarette, or tobacco in any of its forms to any minor under sixteen years of age; and for each and every violation of this section the offender shall, on conviction, be fined not less than two dollars nor more than ten dollars or be imprisoned for not less than five days nor more than twenty days. (Feb. 7, 1891, 26 Stat. 736, ch. 117.)

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Reversal

Where a majority of the court did not agree on a specific ground for reversing judgment, conviction of storekeeper for selling cigarettes to minor under 16 years of age was reversed. Campbell v. District of Columbia (1943, 32 A. 2d 394).

Whoever, with intent to provoke a breach of the peace, or under circumstances such that a breach of the peace may be occasioned thereby—

(1) acts in such a manner as to annoy, disturb, interfere with, obstruct, or be offensive to others;

(2) congregates with others on a public street and refuses to move on when ordered by the police;

(3) shouts or makes a noise either outside or inside a building during the nighttime to the annoyance or disturbance of any considerable number of persons;

(4) interferes with any person in any place by jostling against such person or unnecessarily crowding him or by placing a hand in the proximity of such person's pocketbook, or handbag; or

(5) causes a disturbance in any streetcar, railroad car, omnibus, or other public conveyance, by running through it, climbing through windows or upon the seats, or otherwise annoying passengers or employees, shall be fined not more than $250 or imprisoned not more than ninety days, or both. (June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 98, ch. 159, § 211a.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Construction 1
Indictment 2

1. Construction

This section penalizing acts intended to provoke or likely to occasion breach of peace is penal and must be strictly construed. Carey v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1954, 102 A. 2d 314).

Peeping in window of occupied, lighted apartment at 1:30 in the morning constituted "disorderly conduct" within breach of peace statute penalizing action tending to "disturb" or be "offensive" to others. Id.

2. Indictment

An information alleging that defendant "did then and there engage in disorderly conduct, to wit: was then and there a peeping Tom" was sufficient. Carey v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1954, 102 A. 2d 314).

Whoever, being charged with the collection, receipt, safe-keeping, transfer, or disbursement of public money or other property or effects belonging or payable to the District of Columbia or in the custody of the same, fraudulently converts to his own use, or to the use of any other person, body corporate, or association whatever, or uses, by way of investment, in any kind of security, stock, loan, property, or in any other manner or form loans, with or without interest, to any company, corporation, association, or individual, excepting by depositing in bank to said party's own credit, in the usual course of business, any public money, funds, property, bonds, securities, assets, or effects received, controlled, or held by him for safe-keeping or for any other purpose, shall forfeit all right, by way of commissions or compensation, to any part of the said money or other property and shall be deemed guilty of embezzlement of the whole of the money or other property thus converted, used, invested, loaned, deposited, or paid out, and shall be imprisoned for not more than twenty years and fined in a sum not exceeding double the value of the money or property embezzled. 1. Agency

An agent who converts funds delivered to him on the false representation that they are needed in the principal's business is guilty of embezzlement. Woodward v. United States (38 App. D. C. 323).

"It is immaterial whether he receives possession of the property from a third person or from his master; for in either case the property is under his care, and if he converts it he is guilty of embezzlement." Henry v. United States (1921, 273 F. 330, 50 App. D.C. 366, certiorari denied 42 S. Ct. 51, 257 U.S. 640, 66 L. Ed. 411).

Preexisting agency was not necessary. "If the agency came into existence contemporaneously with the delivery of the certificates, that would be enough." Id.

2. Attorney

Assignment of claim to an attorney for the purpose of collection, and to cover his fee for collection does not create the relation of debtor and creditor, so as to defeat a charge of embezzlement. Patterson v. United States (39 App. D.C. 84, certiorari denied 33 S. Ct. 114, 226 U.S. 609, 57 L. Ed. 380).

3. Broker

Broker who converts stock certificates delivered to him for sale is guilty of embezzlement. Henry v. United States (1921, 273 F. 330, 50 App. D.C. 366, certiorari denied 42 S. Ct. 51, 257 U.S. 640, 66 L. Ed. 411).

4. Classes of acts

This section "describes two classes of acts, either one of which constitutes embezzlement: The first being the wrongful conversion to his own use, by the accused, of property which has come into his possession by virtue of his employment, and the second being the fraudulent taking, making way with, or secreting with intent to convert, such property to his own use." Gassenheimer v. United States (26 App. D. C. 432).

Offense of embezzlement is single, which the statute says may be committed by either of two methods or ways, count which charges that the embezzlement was committed by means of both methods is not bad for duplicity and proof of either means in the commission of the offense will sustain a conviction. O'Brien v. United States (27 App. D.C. 263).

5. Definition

"Generally speaking, it (embezzlement) may be defined as the fraudulent conversion of another's property by one to whom it has been intrusted, with the intent of depriving the owner thereof." Ambrose v. United States (45 App. D.C. 112).

6. Demand as necessary

In embezzlement prosecution, the test as to necessity for demand is not whether the funds were acquired voluntarily, but rather, whether there is either a fixed time for accounting, at which time accused defaulted, or some other convincing proof to uphold the charge of wrongful conversion. Dobbins v. U.S. (1946, 157 F. 2d 257, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 218, certiorari denied 67 S. Ct. 99, 329 U.S. 734, 91 L. Ed. 634).

Where funds are voluntarily turned over to accused, a demand and refusal to pay over may be strong evidence going to make out crime of embezzlement, but such a showing is not fundamentally necessary where there is other convincing proof to support conviction for embezzlement. Id.

7. Directed verdict

Where indictment sufficiently charged embezzlement and opening statement on behalf of Government set out in considerable detail nature of evidence on which prosecution would rely, prosecutor's failure to state that Government would prove a "wrongful conversion" or "fraudulent taking" did not entitle defendant to a directed verdict at close of Government's opening statement. Dobbins v. U.S. (1946, 157 F. 2d 257, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 218, certiorari denied 67 S. Ct. 99, 329 U.S. 734, 91 L. Ed. 634).

8. Election of offenses

Where indictment charged embezzlement, false pretense, and larceny after trust, any confusion which might have existed as a result of the prosecution being allowed to put in its case before making an election was dispelled by election at end of Government's case and by instructions to jury. Dobbins v. U.S. (1946, 157 F. 2d 257, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 218, certiorari denied 67 S. Ct. 99, 329 U.S. 734, 91 L. Ed. 634).

Where indictment charged embezzlement, false pretense, and larceny after trust, defendant's motion that Government be required to elect to place its case on one of the three crimes charged before putting in evidence was addressed to discretion of trial court and its denial of motion was not an abuse of discretion. Id.

9. Evidence—Admissibility

Defendant's reputation for honesty and integrity is admissible. Masters v. United States (42 App. D.C. 350, Ann. Cas. 1916A, 1243).

It is competent for the government to prove the financial condition of the guardian at or immediately prior to an alleged offense, but evidence of other similar offenses is inadmissible unless there is some connection between the acts shown and one which accused is charged. Ambrose v. United States (45 App. D. C. 112).

The fact that defendant hypothecated stock and received $4,000 therefor is not proof that the stock was worth more than $35. Henry v. United States (1920, 263 F. 459, 49 App. D.C. 207).

Actual value of stock may be proved by the testimony of persons familiar with the affairs of the company, its assets, and the dividend-earning capacity of the stock, and by individual sales of stock at or near the date when the conversion occurred and actual value thus established furnishes a proper basis upon which the jury may make a finding. Id.

"Evidence of an intent at the time of the conversion to restore the embezzled money is not admissible. Henry v. United States (1921, 273 F. 330, 50 App. D.C. 366, certiorari denied 42 S. Ct. 51, 257 U.S. 640, 66 L. Ed. 411).

In prosecution for embezzlement, evidence that unpaid bills were found in defendant's possession 38 days after alleged commission of offense was admissible, and its weight regarding defendant's financial condition at time of the offense was for jury. Lee v. U. S. (D. C. Mun. App. 1945, 40 A. 2d 250).

10. — Parol evidence

In embezzlement prosecution against building contractor who received a $3,500 down payment from prosecuting witness who desired to have a house built on a vacant lot which the prosecuting witness did not own, parol evidence was admissible to show that, despite terms of written contract reciting that contractor was to construct the house for prosecuting witness and that prosecuting witness had made an advance payment of $3,500, the contractor had orally agreed to purchase the lot for prosecuting witness and that pursuant to such agreement the prosecuting witness had made a $3,500 down payment on lot and that prosecuting witness mistakenly believed that the written contract embodied the purchase of the lot as well as the construction of the house and that the $3,500 was delivered to contractor as agent to purchase lot for prosecuting witness and that contractor knew that prosecuting witness entertained such mistaken belief. Gibson v. United States (1959, 268 F. 2d 586, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 10).

11. — Sufficiency

Evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction for embezzlement. Dobbins v. United States (1946, 157 F. 2d 257, 81 U. S. App. D. C. 218, certiorari denied 67 S. Ct. 99, 329 U.S. 734, 91 L. Ed. 634).

Evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction of secretary-treasurer of firemen's relief association for embezzlement of death benefits due fireman's widow. United

12. False pretenses

Indictment charging that accused had procured a check from woman to invest money with him upon false representation that he had contract with third party, and when such relationship was that of borrower and lender and not principal and agent it sufficiently charged the crime of obtaining value by false pretenses and not embezzlement. Davis v. United States (37 App. D. C. 126).

13. Financial condition

In embezzlement prosecution, the prosecution may show defendant's straitened financial condition only at or immediately prior to the commission of the offense. Lee v. U.S. (D.C. Mun. App. 1945, 40 A. 2d 250).

Admission of testimony regarding defendant's financial condition reasonably related to dates charged in embezzlement indictment was not error. Dobbins v. U. S. (1946, 157 2d 257, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 218, certiorari denied 67 S. Ct. 99, 329 U.S. 734, 91 L. Ed. 634).

Evidence by defendant of his financial standing is incompetent. Masters v. United States (42 App. D.C. 350, Ann. Cas. 1916A, 1243).

14. Forgery

An employee, who, without authority, indorses his employer's name on a check payable to the latter's order, and cashes it, is guilty of forgery and not embezzlement. Dowling v. United States (41 App. D. C. 11).

When defendant acted as bookkeeper, salesman, and collector and was authorized to indorse the name of the company on the checks, he was guilty of forgery and not embezzlement when he indorsed his own name and appropriated the money. Yeager v. United States (1929, 32 F. 2d 402, 59 App. D.C. 11).

15. Indictment

It is not necessary to allege the "particular way or means by which the conversion was effected." Gassenheimer v. United States (26 App. D. C. 432).

A general verdict of guilty on an indictment charging embezzlement and false pretenses will be set aside as inconsistent. Davis v. United States (37 App. D. C. 126).

In an indictment for wrongful conversion, it is not necessary to allege an intent to defraud. Patterson v. United States (39 App. D.C. 84, certiorari denied 33 S. Ct. 114, 226 U.S. 609, 57 L. Ed. 380).

"The stealing or conversion of property belonging to different persons at the same time and place constitutes but a single offense and should be prosecuted as such." Henry v. United States (1920, 263 F. 459, 49 App. D.C. 207).

Under this section which describes two classes of acts, either one of which constitutes embezzlement, an indictment charging the commission of both of such acts is not bad for duplicity, and a conviction is warranted upon proof of the commission of either of the acts. Turner v. United States (1927, 16 F. 2d 535, 57 App. D.C. 39).

16. Instruction

Where, in prosecution for embezzlement, grand larceny, forgery, and uttering in connection with payment of death benefits to firemen's widows by defendant as officer of firemen's relief association, there was no question as to what specific sum of money was involved, defendant had sufficient information to make his defense, and there was not chance of double jeopardy, and, therefore, any variance in proof of ownership under instruction that, although money was alleged to be association's, it would not be fatal to conviction if money was found to be payee's, was not prejudicial. United States v. Daigle (1957, 149 F. Supp. 409, affirmed 248 F. 2d 608, 101 U.S. App. D.C. 286, certiorari denied 78 S. Ct. 344, 355 U.S. 913, 2 L. Ed. 2d 274).

17. Intent

To wrongfully convert money is an act in its nature evil, and the statement of the act itself imports the evil intent. O'Brien v. United States (27 App. D.C. 263).

An agent converting funds of his principal delivered to him in the District of Columbia cannot be convicted of embezzlement if he formed the intent to convert outside of the District. Woodward v. United States (38 App. D.C. 323).

"The principle is that where a statute prohibits an act under certain circumstances, and a person commits the act not under a mistake of fact, a criminal intention is conclusively presumed." Patterson v. United States (39 App. D.C. 84, certiorari denied 33 S. Ct. 114, 226 U.S. 609, 57 L. Ed. 380).

"Before there can be a conversion of the property of another there must be an intent on the part of the doer of the act to convert the property to his own use without the consent of the owner. But a wrongful conversion implies a conversion by the doer of the act without color of right, and with the evil intent of converting the property to his own use. The intent to wrongfully convert the property of another implies more than the intent to merely convert. It implies a mind at fault, an evil mind, capable of intentionally committing the offense here defined by the statute." Fulton v. United States (45 App. D.C. 27). See, also, Masters v. United States (42 App. D.C. 350, Ann. Cas. 1916A, 1243).

18. Larceny

Principal difference between larceny and embezzlement lies in the manner in which possession of the property is acquired; in larceny there is a trespass, accompanied by an intent to steal, while in embezzlement there is a fraudulent conversion of property the possession of which was lawfully acquired; in either case, except under special statutes, evil intent must be shown. Ambrose v. United States (45 App. D. C. 112).

To sustain a conviction of grand larceny "it must be alleged and proved that the value of the property embezzled is over $35.00." Henry v. United States (1920, 263 F. 459, 49 App. D.C. 207).

Bookkeeper of hotel is mere employee and when he absconded with envelopes it constituted larceny, and not embezzlement. Chanock v. United States (1920, 267 F. 612, 50 App. D.C. 54, 11 A.L.R. 799).

19. Production of statements and reports

Reports, which were made by agent of Federal Bureau of Investigation on basis of notes of interviews with another witness, who had also testified for prosecution, and which were prepared from 10 days to a month and a half after interviews and were summaries and not verbatim notes of interviews, were not statements required to be produced under statute concerning production of statements and reports of witnesses, and refusal of court to order their production for use of defense in a prosecution for alleged mishandling of funds of Federal Credit Union at Naval Air Station was not error. Borges v. United States (1959, 270 F. 2d 332, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 139).

20. Promissory note

A promissory note may be the subject of embezzlement. Reeves v. United States (1927, 15 F. 2d 734, 56 App. D.C. 376).

21. Railroad conductor

A railroad conductor who collects and subsequently sells tickets is guilty of embezzlement. Gassenheimer v. United States (26 App. D. C. 432).

22. Repayment

Where there has been wrongful conversion, repayment will not serve to clear defendant of charge of embezzlement. Dobbins v. U.S. (1946, 157 F. 2d 257, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 218, certiorari denied 67 S. Ct. 99, 329 U.S. 734, 91 L. Ed. 634).

23. Review

Where defendant was convicted under two counts of two consolidated indictments charging embezzlement and two counts charging obtaining money by false pretenses and sentences on false pretenses counts were each less than sentences imposed on embezzlement counts and were concurrent therewith and the convictions on the embezzlement counts were sustained, defendant's contentions regarding the convictions on the false pretenses counts would not be examined by Court of Appeals. Gibson v. United States (1959, 268 F. 2d 586, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 10).

24. "Under his care"

Phrase "under his care" will cover property merely in his custody, and therefore, under such a statute, it is immaterial whether he receives possession of the property from a third person or from his master; for in either case the property is under his care and if he converts it he is guilty of embezzlement. Henry v. United States (1921, 273 F. 330, 50 App. D.C. 366, certiorari denied 42 S. Ct. 51, 257 U.S. 640, 66 L. Ed. 411).

25. Verdict

Where court instructed jury that if it should find defendant guilty of embezzlement as to either transaction, it would have to return a verdict of not guilty as to the companion larceny count, but jury found defendant guilty of both embezzlement and larceny as to the same transaction, District Court had right to direct verdict of acquittal on larceny count, and defendant was not prejudiced by any alleged "choice of verdicts" since penalty for embezzlement was less than that for larceny. United States v. Daigle (1957, 149 F. Supp. 409, affirmed 248 F. 2d 608, 101 U.S. App. D.C. 286, certiorari denied 78 S. Ct. 344, 355 U.S. 913, 2 L. Ed. 2d 274).

26. Wrongful conversion

Prosecution must demonstrate beyond reasonable doubt that there was a wrongful conversion by defendant to establish crime of embezzlement, and a mere conversion will not suffice. Dobbins v. U.S. (1946, 157 F. 2d. 257, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 218, certiorari denied 67 S. Ct. 99, 329 U.S. 734, 91 L. Ed. 634).

Every embezzlement of any evidence of debt negotiable by delivery only, actually executed by the master or employer of any such clerk, attorney, agent, officer, or servant, but not delivered or issued as a valid instrument, shall be deemed an offense within the meaning of section 22-1202. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1325, ch. 854, § 835.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

1. In general

There was no error in overruling the motion in arrest of judgment which contended that the indictment did not allege that the railroad tickets therein described or any one of them was embezzled in any manner described in this section. Gassenheimer v. United States (26 App. D.C. 432).

Every person who shall buy or in any way receive anything of value, knowing the same to have been embezzled, taken, or secreted contrary to the provisions of sections 22-1201 to 22-1203, shall be punished in the same manner and to the same extent as prescribed in said sections, respectively. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1325, ch. 854, § 836.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Property embezzled 1
Sufficiency of proof 2

1. Property embezzled

Quaere. Whether this section embraces "the receipt of property that may have been embezzled in another jurisdiction, as embezzlement is defined in our Code, or is limited to that which may have been embezzled in the District of Columbia." Gassenheimer v. United States (26 App. D. C. 432).

2. Sufficiency of proof

"To convict the defendant, it was necessary to prove first, that the property had been embezzled by Barnes in the District of Columbia * * * and second, that the defendant had bought, or in any way received, it from Barnes, 'knowing the same to have been embezzled, etc.,' as provided in section 836" (this section). Gassenheimer v. United States (26 App. D. C. 432).

Any person intrusted with anything of value, to be carried for hire, or being an innkeeper and intrusted by his guest with anything of value for safe-keeping, who fraudulently converts the same to his own use, shall be deemed guilty of embezzlement and punished as provided in section 22-1202. Innkeeper and guest 2

1. Innkeeper

Bookkeeper and clerk in hotel is not an "innkeeper" as defined in this section. Chanock v. United States (1920, 267 F. 612, 50 App. D.C. 54, 11 A.L.R. 799).

2. Innkeeper and guest

One who is merely a customer at a bar, restaurant, barbershop, or newsstand operated by hotel does not thereby establish relationship of "innkeeper and guest". Wallace v. Shoreham Hotel Corp. (D. C. Mun. App. 1946, 49 A. 2d 81).

Any warehouseman, factor, storage, forwarding, or commission merchant, or his clerk, agent, or employee, who, with intent to defraud the owner thereof, sells, disposes of, or applies or converts to his own use any property intrusted or consigned to him, or the proceeds or profits of any sale of such property, shall be deemed guilty of embezzlement, and shall suffer imprisonment for not more than ten years. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1325, ch. 854, § 838.)

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Factor or commission merchant

One who receives and takes possession of produce as the agent of the owner to sell for them is a factor or commission merchant within the meaning of this section, and this is so, although defendant had no store and was engaged in the brokerage business. Green v. United States (25 App. D.C. 549).

Whoever shall be guilty of any offense defined in sections 22-1202 to 22-1206, shall, where the thing, evidence of debt, property, proceeds, or profits be of the value of less than $100, be punished by imprisonment for not more than one year or a fine of not more than $200 or both. (Mar. 3, 1901, ch. 854, § 851a, as added Mar. 3, 1913, 37 Stat. 727, ch. 107, and amended Aug. 12, 1937, 50 Stat. 629, ch. 599; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 99, ch. 159, § 215(f).)

AMENDMENTS

1953—Act June 29, 1953, increased the valuation of the subject matter of embezzlement from $50 to $100.

1937—Act Aug. 12, 1937, increased the valuation of the subject matter of embezzlement by substituting "value of less than $50" for "value of not more than thirty-five dollars," and decreased the fine by substituting "$200" for "five hundred dollars,".

§ 22-1208. Conversion by commission merchant, consignee, person selling goods on commission, and auctioneers.

If any factor, commission merchant, consignee, or any person selling goods on commission, or the agent, clerk, or servant of such person, shall convert to his own use in the District of Columbia any provisions, fruits, flour, meat, butter, cheese, or any other goods, merchandise, or property, or the proceeds of the same, and shall fail to pay over the avails or proceeds, less his proper charges, within five days after receiving the money or its equivalent from the purchaser or purchasers of said goods or produce, and after demand made therefor by the person entitled to receive the same, or his or her duly-authorized agent, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon information and conviction in the municipal court for the District of Columbia shall be fined not more than one thousand dollars or be imprisoned not exceeding six months, or both, in the discretion of the court. The provisions of this section shall be applicable to all licensed auctioneers, their agents and employees. (Mar. 21, 1892, 27 Stat. 10, ch. 19; July 1, 1902, 32 Stat. 623, ch. 1352, § 7, par. 8; Apr. 1, 1942, 56 Stat. 190, ch. 207, § 1.)

AMENDMENT

1902—Act July 1, 1902, provided that section should be applicable to licensed auctioneers, their agents and employees.

CONSOLIDATION OF POLICE COURT AND MUNICIPAL COURT

"Municipal court for the District of Columbia" was substituted for "police court of the District of Columbia" to conform to act Apr. 1, 1942, which consolidated the police court and the municipal court. See section 11-751.

or value of the money or other property so coming into his possession and converted or appropriated to his own use, and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding ten years, or both. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1326, ch. 854, § 841.)

Commingleing 1
Evidence 2
Indictment 3
Intent to defraud 4
Receiver 5
Sentence 6

1. Commingleing

Mere commingleing of trust funds with personal funds "affords no sufficient basis for a presumption of evil intent." Ambrose v United States (45 App. D. C. 112)

2. Evidence

In proving intent "it is competent for the government to prove the financial condition of the accused at or immediately prior to the alleged offense." Ambrose v. United States (45 App. D.C. 112).

Evidence of similar offenses is admissible to show a course of conduct or a general scheme, but there must be some possible connection between the acts shown and the one on account of which the defendant is being tried Id.

3. Indictment

Indictment is sufficient which charges with precision and certainty that the defendant was appointed a receiver by order of court; that by virtue of said appointment he came into possession of a certain sum of money, alleged to be the property of the association and that on a certain date, he unlawfully and fraudulently converted and appropriated the same to his own use, and did then and there embezzle the same. Fields v. United States (27 App. D. C. 433, certiorari denied 27 S. Ct. 543, 205 U.S. 292, 51 L. Ed. 807).

4. Intent to defraud

"Intent to defraud is an essential element of the crime denounced by section 841 (this section)." Ambrose v. United States (45 App. D. C. 112).

5. Receivers

This section "comprehends property that may have passed into the defendant's possession as receiver before the time that it went into effect, when embezzled thereafter." Fields v. United States (27 App. D.C. 433, certiorari denied 27 S. Ct. 543, 205 U.S. 292, 51 L. Ed. 807).

6. Sentence

A sentence under this section containing the words "at labor" will be modified by striking out such words as surplusage. Fields v. United States (27 App. D. C. 433, certiorari denied 27 S. Ct. 543, 205 U.S. 292, 51 L. Ed. 807).

The taking and carrying away of the property of another in the District of Columbia without right to do so shall be a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine not to exceed one hundred dollars, or imprisonment for a term not to exceed six months, or both. (July 8, 1893, 30 Stat. 724, ch. 638; Apr. 21, 1906, 34 Stat. 127, ch. 1647.)

AMENDMENT

1906—Act Apr. 21, 1906, increased the limit for imposition of fines from forty to one hundred dollars and provided for punishment by imprisonment or both fine and imprisonment.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Amendments 1
Counsel, conduct of 2
Evidence 3
Thief 4

1. Amendments

In prosecution for taking property without right, amendment of petition, at prosecution's request, to conform to proof that taking occurred at 11:30 p. m., instead of 11:30 a. m., as originally charged, was not error. In re Davis (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 83 A. 2d 590).

2. Counsel, conduct of

In prosecution from taking property without right, denial of defendant's motion for mistrial on ground of prejudice to him by government counsel's request in jury's presence for short recess because articles taken were in complaining witness' automobile outside court-house and defendant's counsel had refused to waive their physical presence in court room, was not error. In re Davis (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 83 A. 2d 590).

3. Evidence

While juvenile courts are not bound by technical rules of evidence, police officer's testimony, on trial of minor for taking property without right, that defendant told witness that articles taken were on porch of defendant's home, and that witness then dispatched thereto another officer, who returned with articles, was insufficient, aside from defendant's confession, to establish his guilt. In re Davis (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 83 A. 2d 590).

4. Thief

"Thief" is used generically in vagrancy statute and may be defined as one who takes property of another without knowledge or consent of latter; and a conviction under this section making it a misdemeanor to take and carry away property of another without right to do so rendered convict a "known thief" for purposes of vagrancy statute. Harris v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 132 A. 2d 152).

Chapter 13.—FALSE PRETENSES—FALSE PERSONATION

Sec.

- 22-1301. False pretenses.
- 22-1302. Recordation of deed, contract, or conveyance with intent to extort money.
- 22-1303. False personation before court, officers, notaries.
- 22-1304. Falsely impersonating public officer or minister.
- 22-1305. False personation of inspector of departments of District of Columbia.
- 22-1306. False personation of police officer.
- 22-1307. Wearing or using insignia of certain organizations.
- 22-1308. False certificate of acknowledgment.

Whoever, by any false pretense, with intent to defraud, obtains from any person anything of value, or procures the execution and delivery of any instrument of writing or conveyance of real or personal property, or the signature of any person, as maker, indorser, or guarantor, to or upon any bond, bill, receipt, promissory note, draft, or check, or any other evidence of indebtedness, and whoever fraudulently sells, barter, or disposes of any bond, bill, receipt, promissory note, draft, or check, or other evidence of indebtedness, for value, knowing the same to be worthless, or knowing the signature of the maker, indorser, or guarantor thereof to have been obtained by any false pretense, shall, if the value of the property or the sum or value of the money or property so obtained, procured, sold, bartered, or disposed of is $100 or upward, be imprisoned not less than one year nor more than three years; or, if less than that sum, shall be fined not more than $200 or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both. Any person who obtains any lodging, food, or accommodation at an inn, boarding-house, or lodging-house, without paying therefor, with intent to defraud the proprietor or manager thereof, or who obtains credit at such an inn, boarding-house, or lodging-house by the use of any false pretense, or who, after obtaining credit or accommodation at such an inn, boarding-house, or lodging-house, absconds or surreptitiously removes his baggage therefrom without paying for his food, accommodation, or lodging, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof in the municipal court for the District of Columbia be fined not more than $100 or imprisoned not more than six months, or both, in the discretion of said court. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1326, ch. 854, § 842; June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 535, ch. 1329; Aug. 12, 1937, 50 Stat. 628, ch. 599; Apr. 1, 1942, 56 Stat. 190, ch. 207, § 1; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 99, ch. 159, § 215(e).)

AMENDMENTS

1953—Act June 29, 1953, increased the valuation from $50 to $100.

1937—Act Aug. 12, 1937, increased the valuation from $35 to $50.

1902—Act June 30, 1902, increased the penalty from six months to one year when the value of the subject matter obtained by false pretenses was less than thirty-five dollars.

CONSOLIDATION OF POLICE COURT AND MUNICIPAL COURT

"Municipal court for the District of Columbia" was substituted for "police court of the District of Columbia" to conform to act Apr. 1, 1942, which consolidated the police court and the municipal court. See section 11-751.

1. In general

"The elements of the offense are a false pretense or false representation by the defendant or some one acting for and instigated by him, knowledge by the defendant as to the falsity, reliance on the pretense or representation by the person defrauded, intent to defraud, and an actual defrauding." Robinson v. United States (42 App. D. C. 186).

2. Amendment

This section was intended to repeal those provisions of existing acts requiring the imposition of a definite, as distinguished from an indeterminate, sentence, and possibly also to effect pro tanto repeal of the minimum penalty provisions of such existing acts as themselves stipulate a minimum penalty in excess of one-fifth of a stipulated maximum penalty. Anderson v. Rives (1936, 85 F. 2d 673, 66 App. D.C. 174).

3. Anything of value

A promissory note is a thing of value within the meaning of the statute; it is not necessary that false pretense should be the sole inducement for parting with the property; it is sufficient "if it had a preponderating influence sufficient to turn the scale, although other considerations operated upon the mind of the party." Partridge v. United States (39 App. D. C. 571, Ann. Cas. 1917D, 622).

This section made the obtaining of anything of value by means of false pretenses a crime. Biddle v. United States (1908, 156 F. 759, 84 C.C.A. 415).

4. Chattel mortgage

In determining whether, under District of Columbia law, defendants had committed an offense by violating code provision that whoever by any false pretense, with intent to defraud, obtains from any person anything of value is guilty, fact, if true, that chattel mortgage to two television sets, which were purchased after defendant made misrepresentation as to indebtedness on automobile given as security for the purchase, would have to be construed as conditional sales contract, which would preclude defendant from having received title to them, was irrelevant. Nelson v. United States (1956, 227 F. 2d 21, 97 U.S. App. D.C. 6, 53 A.L.R. 2d 1206, certiorari denied 76 S. Ct. 700, 351 U.S. 910, 100 L. Ed. 1445).

5. Continuance

In prosecution for obtaining money by false pretenses through cashing of checks which issuer had no reason to suppose would be honored, where at time of entry of plea of not guilty New York attorney filed affidavit that he would represent defendant, but on date of trial local counsel for defendant requested a continuance for reasonable time on ground New York attorney was engaged in another trial, it could not be said that under circumstances trial judge had abused his discretion in refusing continuance and requiring local attorney to go to trial on short notice. Gilmore v. United States (1959, 273 F. 2d 79, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 344).

6. Crime against United States

False pretense is a crime against the United States, and persons conspiring to commit it may be punished under U.S.R.S. § 5440 (section 371 of title 18, U.S. Code). Geist v. United States (26 App. D.C. 594).

7. Election of offenses

Where indictment charged embezzlement, false pretense, and larceny after trust, any confusion which might have existed as a result of the prosecution being allowed to put in its case before making an election was dispelled by election at end of Government's case and by instructions to jury. Dobbins v. U.S. (1946, 157 F. 2d 257, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 218, certiorari denied 67 S. Ct. 99, 329 U.S. 734, 91 L. Ed. 634).

Where indictment charged embezzlement, false pretense, and larceny after trust, defendant's motion that Government be required to elect to place its case on one of the three crimes charged before putting in evidence was addressed to discretion of trial court and its denial of motion was not an abuse of discretion. Id.

8. Embezzlement

"Verdict under embezzlement counts negatives one essential fact in the crime of procuring money by false pretenses, namely, the divesting of the title originally." Davis v. United States (37 App. D. C. 126).

9. Evidence

In prosecution of one who presented a bad check as good and got hotel to cash it, for obtaining money by false pretenses, court properly admitted in evidence some 13 other bad checks which defendant had represented as good, and for which he got cash at about the same time, for purpose of showing fraudulent intent, Green v. United States (1951, 188 F. 2d 48, 88 U.S. App. D.C. 249, certiorari denied 71 S. Ct. 1008, 341 U.S. 955, 95 L. Ed. 1376, rehearing denied 72 S. Ct. 24, 342 U.S. 842, 96 L. Ed. 636).

In prosecution for attempting by false pretenses to obtain money from an insurance company on a fraudulent claim for stolen furs evidence of defendant's guilt was sufficient for the jury. Cooper and Williams v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1956, 123 A. 2d 918).

Where the question is one of guilty knowledge, or fraudulent intent "it has always been deemed allowable, as well in criminal as in civil cases, to introduce evidence of other acts and doings of the party, of a kindred character, in order to illustrate or establish his intent or motive in the particular act directly in judgment." Partridge v. United States (39 App. D. C. 571, Ann. Cas. 1917D, 622).

In prosecution for false pretenses involving sales to two complaining witnesses by means of fraudulent representation of warehouse receipts and for embezzlement involving conversion by defendant of money which one complaining witness turned over to defendant in connection with such sales, error in permitting introduction of testimony of another witness that about two years before acts charged defendant had sold witness similar warehouse receipts and had made to her similar representations was not cured by instruction directing jury to disregard such testimony. Boyer v. U.S. (1943, 132 F. 2d 12, 76 U.S. App. D. C. 397).

10. Expectation of belief

No one can be permitted to say, in regard to his own statements upon a material fact, that he did not expect to be believed, and, if such statements are knowingly false and wilfully made, fact that they are material is proof of an attempted fraud, since materiality, in eye of law, consists in their tendency to influence conduct of party who has interest in them and to whom they are addressed. Nelson v. United States (1956, 227 F. 2d 21, 97 U.S. App. D.C. 6, 53 A.L.R. 2d 1206, certiorari denied 76 S. Ct. 700, 351 U.S. 910, 100 L. Ed. 1445).

11. Fact represented falsely

In order to constitute the crime of obtaining money under false pretenses, the alleged false representation must be of some past or existing fact. Biddle v. United States (1908, 156 F. 759, 84 C.C.A. 415).

12. Indictment

Abusive words conveying the meaning that plaintiff had, by trick or artifice, obtained entrance into a theater, do not charge the indictable offense of false pretenses. Friedlander v. Rapley (38 App. D.C. 208).

An indictment charging defendant in one count with forgery and in second count with uttering same forged letter was not demurrable on ground that it was "repugnant". U.S. v. Briggs (1944, 54 F. Supp. 731).

13. Instructions

In prosecution for obtaining goods by false pretenses, instruction, which enumerated elements of the crime which were to be proven beyond a reasonable doubt, was, under District of Columbia law, correct and adequate for jury's guidance and in prosecution for obtaining goods by false pretenses, court was not bound to adopt defendant's theory of the case. Nelson v. United States (1956, 227 F. 2d 21, 97 U.S. App. D.C. 6, 53 A.L.R. 2d 1206, certiorari denied 76 S. Ct. 700, 351 U.S. 910, 100 L. Ed. 1445).

In prosecution for obtaining money from complaining witness by falsely representing to him that certain repairs had been made and certain parts replaced in his automobile, instruction that jury could find that defendants had guilty knowledge if they found that they made false representations as to repairs recklessly and not caring whether the representations were true or false, was improper, in view of fact subjective knowledge is necessary for criminal responsibility for a false representation, rather than a mere reckless disregard of the facts. Avant and Hughlett v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1959, 154 A. 2d 354).

14. Instructions to counsel

In prosecution for false pretenses, trial court did not err when, prior to opening statement of Assistant United States Attorney, and at his request, trial court instructed counsel of defendant to refrain from mentioning that facts of transaction involved in false pretenses trial had previously been presented to grand jury as a charge of forgery and that the grand jury had ignored the charge. Brommer v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1960, 157 A. 2d 292).

15. Intent

Wrongful acts, which are knowingly or intentionally committed, cannot be justified or excused on ground of innocent intent, since color of act determines complexion of intent. Nelson v. United States (1956, 227 F. 2d 21, 97 U.S. App. D.C. 6, 53 A.L.R. 2d 1206, certiorari denied 76 S. Ct. 700, 351 U.S. 910, 100 L. Ed. 1445).

Jury may impute an intent to defraud, where the evidence shows that one has obtained something of value from another by means of false representations, knowingly made with intent to induce the action taken by the other, by introducing evidence tending to show that he believed the other was receiving something of substantial value. Robinson v. United States (42 App. D. C. 186).

When indictment plainly describes numerous false representations of present and past facts, and it charges that their falsity was known to defendant, that they were made with the intention of defrauding and that one believed them and acted upon them by paying money, is adequately charged a public offense. Randle v. United States (1940, 113 F. 2d 945, 72 App. D.C. 368, certiorari denied 61 S. Ct. 64, 311 U.S. 683, 85 L. Ed. 440).

16. Jurisdiction

On appeal from conviction for obtaining money by false pretenses, Court of Appeals was not required to consider defendant's criticism of warrant on which he was arrested, since jurisdiction in a criminal case is not impaired by fact that defendant was brought before court in an unlawful manner. Green v. United States (1951, 188 F. 2d 48, 88 U. S. App. D. C. 249, certiorari denied, 71 S. Ct. 1008, 341 U. S. 955, 95 L. Ed. 1376, rehearing denied 72 S. Ct. 24, 342 U. S. 842, 96 L. Ed. 636).

17. Larceny

Where one gives up possession of chattel to another who converts it to his own use, wrongdoer commits a trespass, and taking is by "larceny", but where one, though induced by fraud or trick, actually intends that title shall pass to wrongdoer, crime is that of "false pretenses". Great American Indemnity Co. v. Yoder (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 131 A. 2d 401).

Where insured entered into agreement to sell insured automobile to third person for certain sum, and insured accepted a check, and third person departed with possession and title to automobile, and thereafter insured discovered that check was fraudulent, taking of automobile by third person was by "false pretenses" and not by "theft" within meaning of policy insuring against "theft" of automobile. Id.

18. Limitations

Statute of limitations did not run during absence from the District of Columbia of defendant charged with obtaining money by false pretenses in the District of Columbia even if he did not leave the District of Columbia to avoid prosecution. Green v. United States (1951, 188 F. 2d 48, 88 U.S. App. D.C. 249, certiorari denied 71 S. Ct. 1008, 341 U.S. 955, 95 L. Ed. 1376, rehearing denied 72 S. Ct. 24, 342 U.S. 842, 96 L. Ed. 636).

19. Mere opinion or expectation

"False pretense or representation * * * must relate to some subsisting fact, past or present. A statement as to the future by way of opinion or expectation as to what can be accomplished does not constitute false pretense." Engle v. United States (48 App. D. C. 466).

20. Present or past facts

That false representations of present or past facts become effective only by being coupled with a false promise does not take a case out of the operation of the statute. Randle v. United States (1940, 113 F. 2d 945, 72 App. D.C. 368, certiorari denied 61 S. Ct. 64, 311 U.S. 683, 85 L. Ed. 440).

In indictment for obtaining money by false pretenses, the misrepresentations must relate to present or past facts, as distinguished from something to take place in the future. Id.

A false pretense, under this section, must relate to a past event or existing fact, and any representation with regard to a future transaction is excluded. Chaplin v. U.S. (1946, 157 F. 2d 697, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 80, 168 A.L.R. 828).

A liquor dealer who borrowed money on representations that he would use it to purchase liquor tax stamps, and that he would repay the money, but who used only a small portion to purchase stamps and failed to return the money so advanced, was not guilty under this section of obtaining money by "false pretenses", since the representations did not relate to a present or past existing fact. Id.

21. Previous convictions

In prosecution for obtaining money by false pretenses, where government brought out on cross-examination that defendant had been previously convicted of bad check charges and of embezzlement, and defendant was permitted to explain all bad check convictions, refusal to permit defendant to explain the conviction of embezzlement, although technically wrong, did not justify a reversal. U.S. v. Boyer (1945, 150 F. 2d 595, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 202, 166 A.L.R. 209).

22. Questions for jury

"It is for the jury to determine whether each of those elements has been established by the evidence, and the court is not authorized to invade the province of the jury by telling them that if certain facts are proved the intent to defraud is made out." Robinson v. United States (42 App. D. C. 186).

23. Reimbursement

Although hotels cashing checks for defendant who had insufficient funds did not suffer eventual loss because they were reimbursed by issuer of credit card presented by defendant, defendant was still guilty of crime of obtaining money by false pretenses in cashing checks which issuer had no reason to suppose would be honored, since offense was not purged by subsequent restoration or repayment. Gilmore v. United States (1959, 273 F. 2d 79, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 344).

24. Reliance on pretense

In prosecution for obtaining money by false pretenses in cashing checks which issuer had no reason to suppose would be honored, where defendant claimed that hotels cashing checks for defendant were induced to part with their money not on belief that checks were good but in reliance on fact that issuer of credit card would make good whatever loss hotel might suffer, evidence sustained jury's finding that hotels cashed checks in belief that checks were good. Gilmore v. United States (1959, 273 F. 2d 79, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 344).

In order to sustain a conviction for obtaining money by false pretenses in cashing checks which issuer had no reason to suppose would be honored, law merely demands that the belief that checks were good be a contributing influence sufficient to turn the scale, or that the alleged fraud would not have been accomplished except for misrepresentations made. Id.

Statement by defendant that prosecuting witness should not rely on representations but should satisfy himself by observation and inquiry, is not sufficient to relieve of criminal liability for false representation theretofore made unless it appears that prosecuting witness accepted withdrawal of representations and assumed to act entirely on his own judgment. Partridge v. United States (39 App. D. C. 571, Ann. Cas. 1917D. 622).

25. Representation

False representation must be made to the person defrauded. Foster v. Goldsoll (48 App. D.C. 505, certiorari denied 39 S. Ct. 495, 250 U.S. 647, 63 L. Ed. 1188).

26. Review

Conviction of obtaining money by false pretenses affirmed. Moffatt v. United States (1931, 46 F. 2d 616, 60 App. D.C. 35). See, also, Howe v. United States (1932, 56 F. 2d 305, 61 App. D. C. 8).

27. Schemes to defraud

In prosecution for obtaining money under false pretenses, when evidence plainly shows a planned fraud, there was no error in the use of the phrase "schemes to defraud." Randle v. United States (1940, 113 F. 2d 945, 72 App. D.C. 368, certiorari denied 61 S. Ct. 64, 311 U.S. 683, 85 L. Ed. 440).

While the word scheme does not itself occur in the statute, the language of the statute is broad enough to cover a scheme to defraud. Id.

28. Speedy trial

Where defendant was tried and convicted about 16 months subsequent to indictment and in the interim he was detained in Maryland House of Correction in Maryland until released a month prior to trial, delay in trial did not violate defendant's rights to a speedy trial, notwithstanding the United States Attorney had not sought a writ of habeas corpus ad prosequendum nor applied to Governor of Maryland for such a writ where extent of delay under all the circumstances was not so great as to amount to a denial of constitutional right. Stevenson v. United States (1960, 278 F. 2d 278, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 398).

29. Transfer of cause

The rule of criminal procedure authorizing case to be transferred to district in which defendant was arrested to receive plea of guilty to the charge could be applied to a violation of District of Columbia Code. United States v. Batton (1958, 160 F. Supp. 172).

30. Worthless check

It is no defense in fraudulent check cases that defendant subsequently reimbursed the prosecuting witness, nor that defendant at time of transaction intended to repay the money. Clagett v. United States (1923, 289 F. 532, 53 App. D.C. 134).

It is a violation of the statute and no defense for the defendant to obtain money from the prosecuting witness upon the faith of the worthless check, whether the check was to serve as security for a concurrent loan or was to be presented to the bank for payment in ordinary course. Id.

Whoever having no title or color of title to the land affected shall maliciously cause to be recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds of the District of Columbia any deed, contract, or other instrument purporting to convey or to relate to any land in said District with intent to extort money or anything of value from any person owning such land, or having any interest therein, shall be fined not less than five hundred dollars or imprisoned not more than two years, or both. (June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 535, ch. 1329, § 845a.)

Whoever falsely personates another person before any court of record or judge thereof, or clerk of court, or any officer in the District authorized to administer oaths or take the acknowledgment of deeds or other instruments or to grant marriage licenses, with intent to defraud, shall be imprisoned for not less than one year nor more than five years. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1330, ch. 854, § 859; Feb. 17, 1909, 35 Stat. 623, ch. 134.)

CODIFICATION

Reference to municipal court of the District of Columbia following clerk of court was omitted from the Code as the phrase "court of record" now includes such court in view of act Mar. 3, 1921, 41 Stat. 1310, ch. 125, § 2, formerly set out as section 11-702, and act Apr. 1, 1942, 56 Stat. 190, ch. 207, § 1, set out as section 11-752.

CHANGE OF NAME

Under act Feb. 17, 1909, the court known as "justice of the peace" was changed to "the municipal court of the District of Columbia."

Whoever falsely represents himself to be a judge of the municipal court, notary public, police officer, or other public officer, or a minister qualified to celebrate marriage, and attempts to perform the duty or exercise the authority pertaining to any such office or character, or having been duly appointed to any of such offices shall knowingly attempt to act as any such officers after his appointment or commission has expired or he has been dismissed from such office, shall suffer imprisonment in the penitentiary for not less than one year nor more than three years. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1330, ch. 854, § 860; Feb. 17, 1909, 35 Stat. 623, ch. 134.)

CHANGE OF NAME

Act Feb. 17, 1909, changed "justice of the peace" to "judge of the municipal court."

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Burden of proof 1
Evidence 2
Instructions 3
Intent 4
Protection of citizenry 5
Reliance on representation 6
Review 7
Variance 8

1. Burden of proof

In prosecution for falsely impersonating a police officer of the United States, burden is upon government to prove crime charged beyond a reasonable doubt though where defendant is charged with falsely pretending to be an officer and fails to produce evidence showing he was such officer, presumption arises that evidence if produced would have been unfavorable to defendant. Taylor v. U.S. (1948, 167 F. 2d 752, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 215).

2. Evidence

In prosecution for falsely impersonating a police officer of the United States, while it must in some manner appear that accused is not a federal officer, proposition is fairly inferable from character of proof much less direct and formal than might be required to affirmatively establish official capacity, and any facts which to average mind would fairly tend to indicate that accused was not a federal officer would be sufficient to warrant the jury in reaching such conclusion. Taylor v. U.S. (1948, 167 F. 2d 752, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 215).

Evidence that accused was not a federal officer was sufficient to sustain conviction for false impersonation of a police officer of the United States notwithstanding government failed to offer direct proof that defendant was not such officer by reference to official police rolls. Id.

3. Instructions

In prosecution for falsely representing self to be a police officer, refusal of requested instruction on the factual defense theory, raised by defendant's testimony, that he merely stated truthfully that he was an attorney and "officer of the court," was reversible error. Levine v. United States (1958, 261 F. 2d 747, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 281).

4. Intent

False personation is in the nature of positive aggressions or invasions, such as constitute common-law offenses, and hence proof of criminal intent is required and refusal of requested instruction requiring criminal or felonious intent was reversible error. Levine v. United States (1958, 261 F. 2d 747, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 281).

5. Protection of citizenry

This section penalizing false representation of a person as police officer of District of Columbia is a protection of the citizenry against exercise of excess jurisdiction by an impostor as well as impersonation in the genuine jurisdiction which might have been exercised by a legitimate officer. Taylor v. U.S. (1948, 167 F. 2d 752, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 215).

6. Reliance on representation

Reliance is not an element of statutory offense of false personation, and prosecution need not establish that parties to whom the alleged false representation was made relied upon it. Levine v. United States (1958, 261 F. 2d 747, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 281).

7. Review

Record on appeal from conviction for defendant's falsely representing himself as a notary public and attempting to exercise authority of a notary public disclosed no error affecting substantial rights. Fentress v. United States (1956, 228 F. 2d 646, 97 U.S. App. D.C. 132).

8. Variance

In prosecution for falsely pretending to be a member of District of Columbia Metropolitan Police, fact that scene of impersonation was in park subject to jurisdiction of United States Park Police did not establish a fatal variance under sections 4-120, 4-201, granting Metropolitan Police and Park Police concurrent jurisdiction over United States Parks within District of Columbia. Taylor v. U.S. (1948, 167 F. 2d 752, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 215).

It shall be unlawful for any person in the District of Columbia to falsely represent himself or herself as being an inspector of the health department of said District, or an inspector of any department of the District government; and any person so offending shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction in the municipal court of said District shall be punished by a fine of not less than ten dollars nor more than fifty dollars for the first offense, and for each subsequent offense by a fine of not less than fifty dollars nor more than one hundred dollars, or imprisonment in the jail of the District not exceeding six months, or both, in the discretion of the court. (Mar. 2, 1897, 29 Stat. 619, ch. 364; Apr. 1, 1942, 56 Stat. 190, ch. 207, § 1.)

CONSOLIDATION OF POLICE COURT AND MUNICIPAL COURT

"Municipal court" was substituted for "police court" to conform to act Apr. 1, 1942, which consolidated the police court and the municipal court. See section 11-751.

It shall be a misdemeanor, punishable by imprisonment in the District jail or penitentiary not exceeding two years, or by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, for any person, not a member of the police force, to falsely represent himself as being such member, with a fraudulent design. (R. S., D. C., § 433.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

1. Instructions

In prosecution for impersonating police officer, trial court's reading of this section defining crime as part of instructions to jury sufficiently charged elements of the crime. Wheeler v. United States (1951, 190 F. 2d 663, 89 U.S. App. D. C. 143).

In prosecution on count charging impersonation of officer and count charging grand larceny, error, if any, in charge instructing that jury could convict on second count even if they acquitted on first was harmless in view of fact that jury found defendant guilty of both offenses. Id.

Whoever, in the District of Columbia, not being a member of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, or the Grand Army of the Republic, of the Sons of Veterans, of the Woman's Relief Corps, of the Union Veteran's Union, of the Union Veteran Legion, of the United Spanish War Veterans, of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and not entitled under the rules of the order to wear the same, wilfully wears or uses the insignia, distinctive ribbon, or badge of membership, rosette, or button thereof, or who uses or wears the same to obtain aid or assistance thereby, shall be punished by a fine of not more than twenty dollars or by imprisonment for not more than thirty days, or by both such fine and imprisonment. (Mar. 15, 1906, 34 Stat. 62, ch. 949.)

Any officer authorized to take the proof or acknowledgment of an instrument which, by law, may be recorded, who wilfully certifies falsely that the instrument was acknowledged by any party thereto, or who wilfully certifies falsely as to any other material matter in such acknowledgment, shall be imprisoned for not less than one year nor more than ten years. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1327, ch. 854, § 845.)

1. Agent

The use by an agent of the signature of his principal for an unauthorized purpose constitutes forgery. Yeager v. United States (1929, 32 F. 2d 402, 59 App. D.C. 11).

2. Alteration

Question for the jury is not merely whether defendant honestly believed he had authority to alter notes, but whether he had reasonable grounds for so believing. Towles v. United States (19 App. D. C. 471).

3. Common law

Forgery, at common law, is the false making or materially altering with intent to defraud, of any writing which, if genuine, might apparently be of legal efficacy or the foundation of a legal liability. Milton v. United States (1940, 110 F. 2d 556, 71 App. D.C. 394). See, also, U.S. v. Briggs (1944, 54 F. Supp. 731).

At common law, forgery and uttering were different substantive crimes. Reid v. Aderhold (C.C.A. Ga. 1933, 65 F. 2d 110, certiorari denied 54 S. Ct. 104, 290 U.S. 676, 78 L. Ed. 584).

4. Defenses

Post-conviction change in standards with regard to defense of insanity did not entitle defendant, tried and convicted under previous standard, to reversal, because court did not charge jury on issue of insanity in accordance with post-conviction change. Stogner v. United States (1956, 229 F. 2d 513, 97 U. S. App. D. C. 172).

5. Elements of offense

Forgery by false making has been committed where the accused, with intent to defraud, proffers a blank note to a customer and then induces the customer, who is reasonably justified in believing the representation, to sign it on the false representation that the paper is something other than a note, and the accused then fills in blanks and negotiates note. Lieberman v. United States (1958, 253 F. 2d 46, 102 U. S. App. D. C. 310).

Where contractor deceived customers into signing blank promissory notes and deeds of trust and later filled in instruments and passed them, he was guilty of forgery. Id.

To constitute "forgery" under this section, there must be a false making or other alteration of some instrument in writing, there must be fraudulent intent, and instrument must be apparently capable of effecting a fraud. U.S. v. Briggs (1944, 54 F. Supp. 731).

6. Embezzlement

Where one employed as bookkeeper, salesman, and collector of an electric company, with authority to indorse checks in the name of the company and deposit them in the bank, cashed the checks instead and appropriated the money to his own use, the offense of which he was guilty was forgery, and conviction for embezzlement must be reversed. Yeager v. United States (1929, 32 F. 2d 402, 59 App. D.C. 11).

7. Habeas corpus

Habeas corpus for release of one convicted of forgery denied. Reid v. Aderhold (C.C.A. Ga., 1933, 65 F. 2d 110, certiorari denied 54 S. Ct. 104, 290 U.S. 676, 78 L. Ed. 584).

8. Indictment

"It matters not that at common law the charge of falsely making an instrument was held to include the offense of falsely altering it, since they are disjunctively named in the statute as distinct ways in which the crime of forging may be committed. Forgery is a statutory, not a common-law crime in this District, and the offense must be charged as defined in the statute, irrespective of common-law rules of pleading." Frisby v. United States (38 App. D.C. 22, 37 L.R.A., N.S., 96).

"The offense thus denounced is complete even though the instrument never is uttered. When it is uttered, another and distinct offense is committed, and a second uttering, of course, constitutes still another offense. In Frisby v. United States (38 App. D.C. 22, 37 L.R.A., N.S., 96) the question was not directly involved and the Burton case (202 U.S. 344, 50 L. Ed. 1057, 26 Sup. Ct. 688) was not brought to our attention." Read v. United States (1924, 299 F. 918, 55 App. D.C. 43, certiorari denied 45 S. Ct. 352, 267 U.S. 596, 69 L. Ed. 805).

"The statute defines two distinct criminal acts, either of which constitutes the crime of forgery. The making of a false instrument with intent to defraud is forgery. The uttering of a forged instrument with intent to defraud is forgery. But where the instrument is both forged and uttered by the same person, * * * there is only the single crime of forgery committed." Frisby v. United States (38 App. D.C. 22, 37 L.R.A., N.S., 96). See, also, Frisby v. United States (35 App. D.C. 513). Both acts may be charged in the indictment, or the pleader may elect to charge but one. Simon v. United States (37 App. D.C. 280).

Indictment for uttering need not set forth the particular acts claimed to constitute such uttering. Fuller v. United States (1923, 288 F. 442, 53 App. D.C. 88).

Indictment charging defendant with possession and knowingly uttering and publishing a forged security, states a single offense. Price v. United States (1923, 289 F. 562, 53 App. D.C. 164).

Indictment need not allege the persons or corporations intended to be defrauded, but requires nothing more than a general intent to defraud. Read v. United States (1924, 299 F. 918, 55 App. D.C. 43, certiorari denied 45 S. Ct. 352, 267 U.S. 596, 69 L. Ed. 805).

An indictment charging defendant with having forged name of another individual to a letter and procuring of money for such letter from still another party with intent to defraud was sufficient to charge crimes of forgery and uttering, as against contention that instrument was not capable of effecting a fraud. U.S. v. Briggs (1944, 54 F. Supp. 731).

An indictment charging defendant in one count with forgery and in second count with uttering same forged letter was not demurrable on ground that it was "repugnant". Id.

Counts in indictment charging defendant with uttering forged documents in interference proceeding in United States Patent Office "with intent to defraud and injure" were not required to name persons whom defendant intended to defraud and injure. Mas v. U.S. (1945, 151 F. 2d 32, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 223, certiorari denied 66 S. Ct. 267, 326 U.S. 776, 90 L. Ed. 469).

9. Intent

"There must be a false making or other alteration of some instrument in writing; there must be a fraudulent intent; and the instrument must be apparently capable of effecting a fraud * * *. Intent in forgery will not be presumed from the mere making of a false instrument. It must be gathered from some affirmative act, or from the existence of circumstances from which criminal intent may be inferred." Dowling v. United States (41 App. D.C. 11). See, also, Frisby v. United States (38 App. D.C. 22, 37 L.R.A., N.S., 96).

It is not essential that "anyone shall be actually defrauded, or that the accused shall have the intent to defraud any particular person. All that is required in that respect is that there be an intent to defraud someone." Easterday v. United States (1923, 292 F. 664, 53 App. D.C. 387, certiorari denied 44 S. Ct. 181, 263 U.S. 719, 68 L. Ed. 523). See, also, Read v. United States (1924, 299 F. 918, 55 App. D.C. 43, certiorari denied 45 S. Ct. 352, 267 U.S. 596, 69 L. Ed. 805); Milton v. United States (1940 110 F. 2d 556, 71 App. D.C. 394).

10. Instrument

It is enough if the forged instrument be apparently sufficient to support a legal claim and thus to effect a fraud. Milton v. United States (1940, 110 F. 2d 556, 71 App. D.C. 394).

11. Search and seizure

Where police officer, who saw defendant walking along street about 2:00 in the morning, and who thought defendant had narcotics, without a warrant stopped defendant, who admitted that he had not worked for over a year, and had maintained himself by gambling, and officer then informed defendant that he was arresting him for vagrancy and required him to disrobe, search, which led to discovery of stolen money orders, was an unreasonable and unlawful violation of defendant's rights as a citizen, rendering stolen money orders inadmissible in prosecution for forgery, housebreaking, grand larceny, and interstate transportation of falsely made securities. White etc. v. United States (1960, 271 F. 2d 829, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 246).

12. Burden of proof

In forgery prosecution, testimony of two psychiatrists and a lay witness to effect that defendant was, in their opinion, suffering from mental illness when he committed the crimes charged satisfied requirement that defendant produce some evidence, and shifted burden of proving sanity to government. United States v. Amburgey (1960, 189 F. Supp. 687).

Whoever wilfully forges or counterfeits or makes use of any imitation calculated to deceive the public, though with colorable difference or deviation therefrom, of the private brand, wrapper, label, trademark, bottle, or package usually affixed or used by any person to or with the goods, wares, merchandise, preparation, or mixture of such person, with intent to pass off any work, goods, manufacture, compound, preparation, or mixture as the manufacture or production of such person which is not really such, shall be fined not more than five hundred dollars or imprisoned not more than one year, or both. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1333, ch. 854, § 879.)

Whoever, during the life of a testator or after his death, shall, for a fraudulent purpose, take and carry away a will, codicil, or other testamentary instrument, or destroy, mutilate, or secrete the same, whether it relates to personal or real property, shall suffer imprisonment for not more than five years.

If any person in whose possession or custody a will or codicil shall be after the death of a testator or testatrix shall wilfully neglect to deliver the same to the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, holding a special term as a probate court, or to the register of wills, or to some executor named in the will, for the space of three calendar months after the death of testator or testatrix shall be known to him, the person thus offending shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1324, ch. 854, § 830; June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 535, ch. 1329; June 25, 1936, 49 Stat. 1921, ch. 804; June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 991, ch. 646, § 32(b); May 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 107, ch. 139, § 127.)

AMENDMENT

1902—Act June 30, 1902, added the second paragraph.

CHANGE OF NAME

Act June 25, 1936, substituted "District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia" for "Supreme Court of the District of Columbia."

NOTES TO DECISIONS1. Time in which to probate

"While the statutes regulating the probate of wills provides no time within which probate shall be applied for, yet they contemplate that this shall be speedily done." McGowan v. Elroy (28 App. D. C. 188).

§ 22-1404. Secreting or converting property, documents, or assets of decedent's estate.

Whosoever wilfully and fraudulently makes away with, secretes, or converts to his own use any property, documents, or assets of any kind or nature belonging to the estate of a deceased person shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $2,000 or imprisonment for not more than two years, or both. (Mar. 3, 1901, ch. 854, § 830a, as added Apr. 19, 1920, 41 Stat. 567, ch. 153, § 1.)

Whoever, with intent to defraud or injure another person, shall take away or conceal any writing whereby the estate or right of such other person shall or may be defeated, injured, or altered shall suffer imprisonment for not more than seven years. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1326, ch. 854, § 840.)

NOTES TO DECISIONSIndictment 1
Writing 2*1. Indictment

Averments of indictment were sufficient when they clearly set forth the defendant's relation to the building association; that certain books of record were required to be kept, and that six carefully described books of record were kept; and that the defendant, on a day named, "unlawfully, wilfully, and with an intent to defraud and injure the said association, and the said stockholders and members thereof, did take away and conceal said books hereinbefore in this indictment particularly described, said books then and there being the writing, records, and property of said association, stockholders, and members." Miller v. United States (41 App. D.C. 52, certiorari denied 34 S. Ct. 323, 231 U.S. 755, 58 L. Ed. 468).

2. Writing

The words "whereby the estate, etc.," do not modify the word "writing," but the section is to be read as though there were a comma after the latter word. Miller v. United States (41 App. D.C. 52, certiorari denied 34 S. Ct. 323, 231 U.S. 755, 58 L. Ed. 468).

§ 22-1406. Sale or concealment by conditional vendee, with intent to defraud.

Whoever, being in possession of personal property received upon a written and conditional contract of sale, with intent to defraud, sells, conveys, conceals, or aids in concealing the same, or removes the same from the District of Columbia without the consent of the vendor, before performance of the conditions precedent to acquiring the title thereto, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $100, or by imprisonment for not more than ninety days. (Apr. 28, 1904, 33 Stat. 554, ch. 1808, § 833a; May 27, 1921, 42 Stat. 9, ch. 13.)

AMENDMENT

1921—Act May 27, 1921, inserted the word "not" in the last phrase.

§ 22-1410. Making, drawing, or uttering check, draft, or order with intent to defraud—Proof of intent—"Credit" defined.

Any person within the District of Columbia who, with intent to defraud, shall make, draw, utter, or deliver any check, draft, or order for the payment of money upon any bank or other depository, knowing at the time of such making, drawing, uttering, or delivering that the maker or drawer has not sufficient funds in or credit with such bank or other depository for the payment of such check, draft, or order in full upon its presentation, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and punishable by imprisonment for not more than one year, or be fined not more than $1,000, or both. As against the maker or drawer thereof the making, drawing, uttering, or delivering by such maker or drawer of a check, draft, or order, payment of which is refused by the drawee because of insufficient funds of the maker or drawer in its possession or control, shall be prima facie evidence of the intent to defraud and of knowledge of insufficient funds in or credit with such bank or other depository, provided such maker or drawer shall not have paid the holder thereof the amount due thereon, together with the amount of protest fees, if any, within five days after receiving notice in person, or writing, that such draft or order has not been paid. The word "credit," as used herein, shall be construed to mean arrangement or understanding, express or implied, with the bank or other depository for the payment of such check, draft, or order. (July 1, 1922, 42 Stat. 820, ch. 273.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Evidence 1
Issuance for antecedent debt 2
Limitations 3
Questions for jury 4

1. Evidence

In prosecutions for passing bad checks payable to United States Treasurer and delivered to agent for Federal War Assets Administration, proof of fact, not alleged in informations, that checks covered purchases of war surplus articles under veterans' preference, was unnecessary for conviction. McGuinness v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 77 A. 2d 22).

2. Issuance for antecedent debt

Under "worthless" check statute, fact that checks were given in payment of antecedent debt did not destroy presumption of fraudulent intent, and evidence as to issuance of two checks which were dishonored for lack of sufficient funds established prima facie case authorizing submission of case to jury in absence of any evidence by defendant on the point. Clarke v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1958, 140 A. 2d 181).

Fact that a check is issued for a past-due obligation does not preclude a conviction under the "worthless" statute. Id.

3. Limitations

The Wartime Suspension of Limitations Act was inapplicable to charges of violating District of Columbia statute by passing bad checks payable to United States Treasurer and delivered to agent for Federal War Assets Administration, though giving of such checks may have resulted in offenses within all categories of extension statute, as none of such offenses was essential ingredient of violation of local statute, so that prosecutions begun over three years after commission of offenses were barred by general statute of limitations for non-capital offenses. McGuinness v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1951, 77 A. 2d 22).

4. Questions for jury

In prosecution for violation of this section making it a crime for any person, with intent to deceive, to deliver any check while knowing that there are insufficient funds to his credit with bank for payment of such check, question of whether or not defendant had an intent to defraud in issuance of check for past consideration, presented a question of fact for the jury. Clarke v. United States (1959, 263 F. 2d 269, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 19).

It shall be unlawful in the District of Columbia for any person, firm, association, corporation, or advertising agency, either directly or indirectly, to display or exhibit to the public in any manner whatever, whether by handbill, placard, poster, picture, film, or otherwise; or to insert or cause to be inserted in any newspaper, magazine, or other publication printed in the District of Columbia; or to issue, exhibit, or in any way distribute or disseminate to the public; or to deliver, exhibit, mail, or send to any person, firm, association, or corporation any false, untrue, or misleading statement, representation, or advertisement with intent to sell, barter, or exchange any goods, wares, or merchandise or anything of value or to deceive, mislead, or induce any person, firm, association, or corporation to purchase, discount, or in any way invest in or accept as collateral security any bonds, bill, share of stock, note, warehouse receipt, or any security; or with the purpose to deceive, mislead, or induce any person, firm, association, or corporation to purchase, make any loan upon or invest in any property of any kind; or use any of the aforesaid methods with the intent or purpose to deceive, mislead, or induce any other person, firm, or corporation for a valuable consideration to employ the services of any person, firm, association, or corporation so advertising such services. NOTES TO DECISIONS1. Amendments

In prosecution upon two informations charging in effect that accused inserted advertising calculated to induce readers for a valuable consideration to employ the advertiser's service, "knowing the same to be false and containing certain false, untrue and misleading statements," action of trial court in permitting amendments whereby words "for a valuable consideration" were deleted and words "with intent to barter, sell, or exchange any goods, wares, or merchandise, or anything of value" were added, was not, so far as appeared from record, prejudicial, and was not abuse of discretion. Robles v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1955, 115 A. 2d 303).

Prosecution under section 22-1411 shall be in the municipal court for the District of Columbia upon information filed by the United States Attorney for the District of Columbia, or one of his assistants. (May 29, 1916, 39 Stat. 165, ch. 130, § 2; Apr. 1, 1942, 56 Stat. 190, ch. 207, § 1; June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 909, ch. 646, § 1.)

CHANGE OF NAME

Act June 25, 1948, eff. Sept. 1, 1948, substituted "United States Attorney" for "United States District Attorney." See U. S. Code, title 28, § 501.

CONSOLIDATION OF POLICE COURT AND MUNICIPAL COURT

"Municipal court for the District of Columbia" was substituted for "police court of the District of Columbia" to conform to act Apr. 1, 1942, which consolidated the police court and the municipal court. See section 11-751.

Any person, firm, or association violating any of the provisions of section 22-1411 shall upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine of not more than $500 or by imprisonment of not more than sixty days, or by both fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court. A corporation convicted of an offense under the provisions of section 22-1411 shall be fined not more than $500, and its president or such other officials as may be responsible for the conduct and management thereof shall be imprisoned not more than sixty days, in the discretion of the court. (May 29, 1916, 39 Stat. 165, ch. 130, § 3.)

If any person shall fraudulently tamper with any box used or intended by the jury commission for the names of prospective jurors, or of prospective condemnation jurors or commissioners, or shall fraudulently tamper with the contents of any such box, or with any jury list, or be guilty of any fraud or collusion with respect to the drawing of jurors or condemnation jurors or commissioners, or if any jury commissioner shall put in or leave out of any such box the name of any person at the request of such person, or at the request of any other person, or if any jury commissioner shall wilfully draw from any such box a greater number of names than is required by the court, any such person or jury commissioner so offending shall for each offense be punished by a fine of not more than $500 or imprisonment in the District jail or workhouse for not more than one year, or both. (Apr. 19, 1920, 41 Stat. 560, ch. 153, § 213.)

1. Admissibility of evidence—In general

In joint prosecutions for violations of lottery laws, admission of one defendant's accusatory statement against the other three defendants was not error in view of later instructions that jury should disregard such statement. Davis v. United States (1960, 274 F. 2d 585, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 76).

In prosecution for operation of lottery and for possession of numbers slips, slips used as evidence to prove possession charge could also be used to prove charge of operation of lottery. Maynard v. United States (1954, 215 F. 2d 336, 94 U. S. App. D. C. 347).

2. — Arrest, search and seizure

Where defendant had been indicted for carrying on a lottery known as the numbers game, in violation of this section, evidence obtained by police officers through an illegal search and arrest is inadmissible and the conviction must be reversed. McDonald v. United States (1948, 69 S. Ct. 191, 335 U.S. 451, 93 L. Ed. 153).

Where, over period of two and a half months, officers had placed numbers bets on fifteen separate occasions at one location, and, on ten separate occasions, had observed a suspect depart from that location with bulging pockets and enter other premises, from which he subsequently departed "without the bulge," officers had reasonable grounds to believe that latter premises were being used in lottery operations, and that defendant, who at time such premises were searched, pursuant to a search warrant was the only male present and was leaving "hastily," was participating therein, justifying arrest of defendant without an arrest warrant and seizure and use of incriminating evidence found in course of search of defendant made in connection with such arrest. Stephens v. United States (1959, 271 F. 2d 832, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 249).

In prosecution of numerous defendants for violation of lottery laws and conspiracy to violate those laws, where evidence obtained at one of several places raided was inadmissible because it had been obtained as a result of illegal entry into premises, but mass of other evidence legally seized sustained convictions, error in admitting such illegally obtained evidence was not, except as to one defendant who was found guilty of possessing lottery slips seized at such address, prejudicial. Woods et al. v. United States (1956, 240 F. 2d 37, 99 U. S. App. D. C. 351, certiorari denied 77 S. Ct. 815, 353 U. S. 941, 1 L. Ed. 2d 760).

Whether lottery slips seized under search warrant were dead or alive they could be introduced in support of charge of operating a lottery. Shaw v. United States (1953, 209 F. 2d 298, 93 U. S. App. D. C., 90, certiorari denied 74 S. Ct. 430, 347 U. S. 905, 98 L. Ed. 1063).

Where suspected gambler appeared, without counsel, before Senate Crime Investigating Committee, under compulsion of subpoena, and committee, without advising him of his rights to counsel and against self-incrimination, threatened prosecution for contempt if he refused to answer, for perjury if he lied, and for gambling activities if he told truth, and, with warning that he was still under subpoena, directed him to lead policeman to his home and there turn over a book, and where policeman, upon entering the home and learning that the book was not available examined and took without process other papers and documents, such papers and documents were obtained by unreasonable search and seizure, and such evidence was inadmissible. Nelson v. United States (1954, 208 F. 2d 505, 93 U. S. App. D. C. 14).

Where Court of Appeals could not determine from record of more than 2,000 pages that jury would have convicted defendant had not evidence obtained through unreasonable search and seizure been adduced, conviction would be reversed and case remanded for new trial. Id.

In prosecution for operation of lottery known as numbers game, admission of numbers slips, numbers books, and other physical evidence seized at time of defendant's arrest, was proper, notwithstanding that it was not shown that numbers slips related to an existing lottery rather than to one already completed. Harvey v. United States (1952, 197 F. 2d 594, 91 U. S. App. D. C. 36).

In prosecution for operating numbers game and knowingly possessing numbers slips, found in defendant's automobile at time of his arrest without warrant, evidence of circumstances leading to arrest was sufficient to show probable cause therefor, so as to render search of automobile and seizure of slips reasonable and valid and authorize admission of slips in evidence against defendant. Mills v. United States (1952, 196 F. 2d 600, 90 U. S. App. D. C. 365, certiorari denied 73 S. Ct. 27, 344 U. S. 826, 97 L. Ed. 643).

Where police officers legally obtained search warrant for certain premises which they believed was being used in numbers lottery and entered and found extensive evidence of numbers activities and arrested all persons present, they could legally search the persons arrested, and evidence thereby obtained was admissible in prosecution for carrying on and promoting a numbers game and for possession of numbers slips. Wyche v. United States (1952, 193 F. 2d 703, 90 U. S. App. D. C. 67, certiorari denied 72 S. Ct. 556, 342 U. S. 943, 96 L. Ed. 702, rehearing denied 72 S. Ct. 675, 343 U. S. 921, 96 L. Ed. 1334).

Where there is no claim in the case that the officers advised the suspect of the cause of their demand before they broke down the door, upon that ground alone, the breaking of the door was unlawful, presence of arresting officers was unlawful, the arrest was unlawful, the search unlawful and the evidence thus procured should have been suppressed, and a new trial on the indictment must be ordered. Accarino v. United States (1950, 179 F. 2d 456, 85 U.S. App. D.C. 395).

3. — Conspiracy

That alleged coconspirator had been seen talking to defendant on day before that on which such alleged coconspirator allegedly informed government agent that he had turned his numbers work over to defendant did not establish that conspiracy was in existence on that date; and in absence of evidence that conspiracy was then in existence, agent's testimony with regard to alleged conversation was inadmissible against defendant, in prosecution for conspiracy to commit lottery offenses. Taylor v. United States (1958, 260 F. 2d 737, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 219).

Erroneous admission of evidence that alleged coconspirator had told government agent that he had turned his numbers work over to defendant would require reversal of conviction under indictment count charging conspiracy to commit lottery offenses; and since it was probable that such evidence had also been considered by jury in connection with related count charging defendant with operation of a lottery, conviction on that count would also be reversed. Id.

In prosecution under this section a page from a notebook found on the person of the accused was properly admitted in evidence, over the objection of the accused that it was a memorandum of a bet on a horse race, although it may tend, incidentally, to prove another distinct offense. Shettel v. United States (1940, 113 F. 2d 34, 72 App. D.C. 250).

Intercepted interstate and local messages pertaining to gambling are not admissible when received by person not authorized by the sender. United States v. Plisco (1938, 22 F. Supp. 242).

4. Arrest, search and seizure

Where defendants although present at time when premises were searched pursuant to warrant, made no claim to property when inquiry was made in that respect by searching officers, and defendants disavowed any interest in premises, they were without right to have been served with a copy of search warrant, and could not claim that copy left on premises was defective. Shaw v. United States (1954, 209 F. 2d 298, 93 U. S. App. D. C. 90, certiorari denied 74 S. Ct. 430, 347 U. S. 905, 98 L. Ed. 1063).

Where officers, while standing in place open to public, saw through open door into back room and observed activities and paraphernalia which were familiar indicia of numbers lottery operation, they had "probable cause" and duty to make arrest, and arrest and seizure of paraphernalia were "legal arrest and seizure", though made without search or arrest warrant. Fisher v. United States (1953, 205 F. 2d 702, 92 U. S. App. D. C. 247, certiorari denied 74 S. Ct. 122, 346 U. S. 872, 98 L. Ed. 381).

Circumstances revealed in police officer's affidavit provided sufficient probable cause to sustain issuance to officer of warrant for search of premises where it was believed defendants were operating a numbers game by telephone. Washington v. United States (1953, 202 F. 2d 214, 92 U. S. App. D. C. 31, certiorari denied 73 S. Ct. 938, 245 U. S. 956, 97 L. Ed. 1377, rehearing denied 73 S. Ct. 1130, 345 U. S. 1003, 97 L. Ed. 1408).

The arrest without warrant of defendant accused of carrying on a lottery and possessing tickets and certificates designed for purpose of conducting a lottery was legal where the facts and circumstances within the arresting officers' knowledge and of which they had reasonably trustworthy information were sufficient to warrant man of reasonable caution in belief that defendant was taking numbers bets in corridor of building. De Bruhl v. United States (1952, 199 F. 2d 175, 91 U. S. App. D. C. 125, certiorari denied 73 S. Ct. 111, 344 U. S. 868, 97 L. Ed. 673).

In prosecution for violation of District of Columbia gambling statutes by engaging in the numbers business and for violation of federal statute requiring payment of tax as prerequisite to engaging in business of accepting wagers, evidence relating to police investigation extending over a ten week period disclosed probable cause for issuance of search warrant. United States v. Long (1959, 169 F. Supp. 730).

Where police investigation extending over a 10-week period established probable cause for issuance of search warrant for gambling activities in violation of District of Columbia statutes, the fact that eleven day period elapsed between last police observation of premises and issuance of such warrant did not require suppression of evidence seized from the premises searched on any theory of lack of probable cause. Id.

Where District of Columbia Metropolitan Police received information linking telephone number to numbers game and the source stated that bets were placed by named person using designated code number and Metropolitan Police received additional information from Arlington County police that very heavy number bets were called into the telephone number and policeman made series of telephone calls to that number and identified himself as such person and gave such code number and received numbers information, there was probable cause for issuance of search warrant which led to seizure of numbers slips and other numbers paraphernalia. United States v. Haje (1958, 159 F. Supp. 870).

Where police had rejected convenient present opportunity to make lawful arrest in public street, search of apartment, which defendant had entered before arrest was attempted, could not be supported as incidental to arrest. United States v. Johnson (1953, 113 F. Supp. 359).

5. Conspiracy

In prosecution of defendants for violation of lottery laws and conspiracy to violate laws, crime of conspiracy was not so merged in or indistinguishable from the lottery statute as to prevent conviction of defendants on both charges. Woods et al. v. United States (1956, 240 F. 2d 37, 99 U. S. App. D. C. 351, certiorari denied 77 S. Ct. 815, 353 U. S. 941, 1 L. Ed. 2d 760).

The crime of conspiracy to violate lottery laws and lottery statute violations are not so closely connected as to render applicable a proposition that where a concert of action between two or more persons is logically necessary to a crime's completion, a charge of conspiracy will not lie against such persons. Id.

6. Constitutionality

The Gamblers' Occupational Tax Act, as applied to persons in District of Columbia, constitutes a valid exercise of the taxing power and is not a penalty under the guise of a tax, even though wagering is by federal law a crime in the District of Columbia. Lewis v. United States (1955, 75 S. Ct. 415, 348 U. S. 419, 99 L. Ed. 475, rehearing denied 75 S. Ct. 602, 349 U. S. 917, 99 L. Ed. 1250).

Gamblers' Occupational Tax Act is not unconstitutional as applied to person in District of Columbia on ground that it violates privilege against self-incrimination notwithstanding fact that wagering is by federal law a crime in the District of Columbia. Id.

7. Counsel, conduct of

In prosecution for carrying on and promoting a numbers game and for possession of numbers slips, wherein defendants' former counsel of their own choice disclaimed any desire to enter a motion to suppress evidence and also gave specific reasons for disclaimer, contention of defendants' present counsel on appeal that trial court erred in refusing to suppress evidence would be rejected as asking Court of Appeals to substitute its judgment of proper trial tactics for that of the lawyer of the forum. Wyche v. United States (1952, 193 F. 2d 703, 90 U. S.

App. D. C. 67, certiorari denied 72 S. Ct. 556, 342 U. S. 943, 96 L. Ed. 702, rehearing denied 72 S. Ct. 675, 343 U. S. 921, 96 L. Ed. 1334).

8. Discovery and inspection

Defendants are entitled to inspection before trial of documents and statements which are or may become evidence. United States v. Bell (1955, 126 F. Supp. 612, motion denied 17 F.R.D. 13).

9. Distribution of prizes

One of the essential elements of a lottery is the awarding of a prize by chance, but the exact method adopted for the application of chance to the distribution of prizes is immaterial. Forte v. United States (1936, 83 F. 2d 612, 65 App. D.C. 355, 105 A.L.R. 300).

10. Double conviction for same offense

Even if defendant was twice convicted for same offense, any error was cured by concurrent sentences imposed. Lewis v. United States (1959, 263 F. 2d 265, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 15).

11. Gaming table

The statute penalizing anyone setting up in the District of Columbia any "gaming table", etc., or who permits any person to bet or play at or upon any such gaming table or device, etc., indicates a physical device of some sort and does not mean the mere taking of a bet on a race. Plummer v. United States (1951, 189 F. 2d 19, 88 U.S. App. D. C. 244).

12. Harmless or prejudicial error

Where papers and documents obtained from one of several defendants in joint prosecution for violation of lottery laws, were obtained as result of unreasonable search and seizure, the use of evidence so obtained infected the cases of other defendants, and denial of motion to suppress such evidence, made by defendant from whom the papers and documents were illegally seized, was error prejudicial to other defendants as well. Nelson v. United States (1954, 208 F. 2d 505, 93 U. S. App. D. C. 14).

13. Indictment

Under this section making it unlawful to keep, set up, or promote a lottery, the charge may contemplate an act already complete when officer arrives, and possession of numbers slips, whether expired or not, may be relevant and material evidence that possessor has been conducting a lottery, and possessor need not be caught in the act, but may be caught with damaging evidence of a completed offense. Harvy v. United States (1952, 197 F. 2d 594, 91 U.S. App. D.C. 36).

Where an indictment under this section contains two counts, one for misdemeanor and one for felony, defendant's objection that the conviction on the misdemeanor count was invalid is immaterial in view of the fact that the sentences for each were to be served concurrently and the longer sentence was based on a valid count. Coupe v. United States (1940, 113 F. 2d 145, 72 App. D.C. 86, certiorari denied 60 S. Ct. 1105, 310 U.S. 651, 84 L. Ed. 1417).

14. Instructions

Provision of this section that possession of numbers slips shall be prima facie evidence that possessor was concerned in carrying on lottery, when quoted in instruction to jury, did not constitute instruction that it had become duty of lottery prosecution defendant, who had had possession of numbers slips, to establish his innocence to obtain acquittal. Maynard v. United States (1954, 215 F. 2d 336, 94 U. S. App. D. C. 347).

In prosecution for operating lottery and for possession of numbers slips, wherein jury had been fully instructed as to the government's burden of proof, trial judge's answer to jury's question, whether possession of slips constituted prima facie evidence of operation of lottery, given in words of this section providing that such possession did constitute prima facie evidence, without explaining meaning of prima facie evidence, was appropriate and understandable within framework of entire charge. Id.

In prosecution under six count indictment charging violation of laws against lotteries, instruction to effect that every circumstance relied upon by prosecution as part of circumstantial evidence tending to convict, must be established beyond reasonable doubt was properly refused in view of other instructions. Shaw v.

United States (1954, 209 F. 2d 93 U. S. App. D. C. 90, certiorari denied 74 S. Ct. 430, 347 U. S. 905, 98 L. Ed. 1063).

The trial court instructions to the jury, "Do I believe from the evidence I have heard in this trial that the defendants have committed this crime? If you answer the question yes, you must find the defendants guilty. If your answer is no, then you must find them not guilty," is erroneous, as this statement is not the law, for the law is that if the jury believes beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant has committed the alleged offense, it should find a verdict of guilty, but if there be a reasonable doubt in the minds of the jurors, they must acquit. Billeci v. United States (1950, 184 F. 2d 394, 87 U.S. App. D.C. 274, 24 A.L.R. 2d 881).

If the intonations and gestures of a trial judge, when instructing the jury, are erroneously detrimental to a defendant in a criminal case, it is the duty of counsel to report fully and accurately, at the time and on the record, although not in the hearing of the jury, what has transpired. Id.

When a federal judge comments upon evidence by expressing his opinion upon phases of it, he is treading close to the line which divides proper judicial action from the field which is exclusively the jury's; therefore, he must make it unequivocally clear to the jury that conclusions upon such matters are theirs, not his, to make, and he must do so in such manner and in such time that the jury will not be left in doubt. Id.

15. License upon payment of tax

Provision of Gamblers' Occupational Tax Act requiring person engaged in business of wagering to pay a special tax of $50 before engaging in such business does not give a person, upon payment of the fee, a license to engage in wagering in District of Columbia, where wagering is, by federal law, a crime as the federal government may tax what it also forbids. Lewis v. United States (1955, 75 S. Ct. 415, 348 U. S. 419, 99 L. Ed. 475, rehearing denied 75 S. Ct. 602, 349 U. S. 917, 99 L. Ed. 1250).

Fact that provision of Gamblers' Occupational Tax Act requiring person engaged in business of wagering to pay special tax of $50 and exhibit stamp in his place of business might furnish probable cause for issuance of search warrant could not be urged as defense by person who was arrested for engaging in business of wagering without paying special tax. Id.

16. Motion to dismiss

Where count one charged in effect that the defendant, among others, violated this section relating to sale of lottery tickets, and counts two through seven charged that such defendant sold named persons a chance in a lottery on six different dates, defendant's motion for dismissal of counts two through seven would not be granted even though the defendant could not be found guilty of count one if the government proved that defendant violated this section by proving only the six sales that gave rise to counts two through seven; the determination of that matter must await the trial on the facts. United States v. Long (1959, 169 F. Supp. 730).

17. Motion to suppress

In proceedings on defendant's motion to suppress and for return of property seized from his custody, possession and person under a warrant for the search of an apartment, evidence required finding that there had been a lack of probable cause to believe that grounds existed to support issuance of search warrant. United States v. Johnson (1953, 113 F. Supp. 359).

18. Multiple violations

Six sales of lottery tickets on different dates to the same person are six violations of this section relating to gambling. United States v. Long (1959, 169 F. Supp. 730).

19. New trial

In prosecution for violating lottery laws, District Court did not abuse discretion in denying motion for new trial on ground that defendant's trial counsel refused to permit her to testify and failed to introduce certain other testimony. Ingram v. United States (1954, 209 F. 2d 818, 93 U. S. App. D. C. 307).

20. Numbers game

"Numbers game" is lottery when the player merely guesses that the result of mathematical calculations, based upon the prices paid at a certain track, will be a certain number. Forte v. United States (1936, 83 F. 2d 612, 65 App. D.C. 355, 105 A.L.R. 300).

Conviction of violating and of conspiracy to violate the lottery law was sustained where evidence showed that defendants had been engaged in operation of the "numbers" game. Smith v. United States (1940, 112 F. 2d 217 72 App. D.C. 187, certiorari denied 61 S. Ct. 20, 311 U.S. 663, 85 L. Ed. 425).

21. Possession of tickets

The statutory presumption of promoting a lottery which arises from evidence of possession of lottery tickets may be properly invoked upon circumstantial evidence of possession of such tickets provided such circumstantial evidence is strong. Davis v. United States (1960, 274 F. 2d 585, 107 U. S. App. D. C. 76).

Proof of possession of numbers slips is not essential to conviction for operating lottery. United States v. Lewis (1959, 171 F. Supp. 71, affirmed in part, reversed in part on other grounds 274 F. 2d 585, 107 U. S. App. D. C. 76, certiorari denied 80 S. Ct. 1241, 363 U. S. 806, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1149).

22. Questions for court

In prosecution under this section, the credibility of the testimony of officers as to evidence of guilt found in defendant's automobile, is for the judge and the trial court's finding in disputed evidence will be upheld. Coupe v. United States (1940, 113 F. 2d 145, 72 App. D.C. 86, certiorari denied 60 S. Ct. 1105, 310 U.S. 651, 84 L. Ed. 1417).

23. Questions for jury

Where defendant in prosecution for promotion of numbers game renewed, during trial, motion to suppress evidence obtained incident to arrest of defendant without a warrant, on ground that there was no probable cause for defendant's arrest, and court, instead of determining issue of probable cause, improperly submitted issue of probable cause to jury, admission of testimony of police officers that they were experienced in the investigation of the numbers game and that because of such experience, officers knew from conduct of defendant that he was participating in operation of a lottery, was reversible error, because testimony trenched on jury's duty to determine ultimate question whether defendant was guilty. Simmons v. United States (1953, 206 F. 2d 427, 92 U. S. App. D. C. 122).

24. Review

An order granting suppression of evidence seized from defendant's person at time of his arrest, entered before trial in criminal case, is not appealable as a "final decision", regardless of whether, in the particular case, effect of suppressing the evidence would be to force dismissal of indictment for lack of evidence. Carroll v. United States (1957, 77 S. Ct. 1332, 354 U. S. 394, 1 L. Ed. 2d 1442).

In prosecution for violation of District of Columbia gambling laws, it was unfortunate that, during course of trial, it was brought to attention of jury that a codefendant had pleaded guilty to felony count of indictment, which jointly charged all of defendants; but in view of overwhelming evidence of guilt, any prejudice which might have remained despite judge's admonition to jury could be said to be harmless, and district court would not be put in error for refusing to grant motion for mistrial. Carter v. United States (C.A.D.C. 1960, 281 F. 2d 640).

Conviction for operating lottery in violation of District of Columbia statutes was affirmed on appeal, notwithstanding defendant's contentions (1) that numbers slips and other gambling paraphernalia were seized under warrants which were not supported by showing of adequate probable cause and (2) that evidence was insufficient to sustain conviction. Ellis v. United States (1959, 270 F. 2d 448, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 145).

Where defendants, each of whom was convicted of substantive offense of operating lottery, and jointly of conspiracy to operate lottery, did not request trial court to compel election of counts on ground that substantive and conspiracy counts were duplicitous, in view of identity of proof under each count, and constituted double jeopardy, defendants did not save question for review on appeal and Court of Appeals would not consider merits of contention. Aikens et al. v. United States (1956, 232 F. 2d 66, 98 U. S. App. D. C. 66).

25. Severance

In prosecution for operation of lottery and for possession of numbers slips, trial court's denial of defendants' motions for severance did not constitute abuse of discretion. Maynard v. United States (1954, 215 F. 2d 336, 94 U. S. App. D. C. 347).

26. Sufficiency of evidence

Evidence, including possession of lottery tickets, was sufficient to sustain conviction of one defendant for promoting a lottery but was insufficient to sustain conviction as to another defendant. Davis v. United States (1960, 274 F. 2d 585, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 76).

Evidence, as to all defendants but one, was sufficient to support convictions on all counts, in prosecution for operating and conspiracy to operate lottery, and for possession of lottery tickets, and maintenance of gambling premises. Aikens et al. v. United States (1956, 232 F. 2d 66, 98 U. S. App. D. C. 66).

Evidence that search of previously occupied apartment of defendant uncovered numbers slips and notebook, in absence of evidence of possession of lottery tickets by defendant, was insufficient to support conviction for possession of lottery tickets, operation of lottery, or for maintaining gambling premises. Id.

Evidence was insufficient to establish beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant set up or kept a gaming table for the purpose of gaming. Plummer v. United States (1951, 189 F. 2d 19, 88 U.S. App. D.C. 244).

Evidence justified submitting to jury prosecution for operating a lottery and possessing materials therefor. Kenney v. U.S. (1946, 157 F. 2d 442, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 259).

27. — Arrest, search and seizure

In joint prosecutions for violations of lottery laws, evidence sustained trial judge's finding that police gave sufficient notice of their purpose and authority before breaking in door of one defendant's premises in executing search warrant. Davis v. United States (1960, 274 F. 2d 585, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 76).

Evidence sustained conclusion of existence of sufficient cause to believe that the offense of conducting a "number game" had been committed and that defendant had participated therein to justify arrest and search without warrant. Newyahr v. U.S. (1950, 177 F. 2d 658, 85 U.S. App. D.C. 384, certiorari denied 70 S. Ct. 350, 338 U.S. 936, 94 L. Ed. 577).

In numbers game prosecution, wherein defendants moved to suppress evidence and for return of property, evidence established that police officers, who had submitted affidavits upon which warrants had issued, had had probable cause to believe, through personal contact, knowledge, observation and information, that the premises searched were being used for operation of a numbers lottery and that evidence of crime was there concealed. United States v. Bell (1955, 126 F. Supp. 612, motion denied 17 F.R.D. 13).

28. —Prima facie evidence

Defendant's possession of used numbers slips, known in the game as "dead" slips, constituted prima facie evidence of carrying on of a lottery. Clement v. United States (1954, 208 F. 2d 46, 93 U. S. App. D. C. 154).

Even possession of "dead" or "hit" lottery tickets falls within language of this section raising presumption of violation of this section proscribing operation of lottery. United States v. Lewis (1959, 171 F. Supp. 71, affirmed in part, reversed in part on other grounds 274 F. 2d 585, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 76, certiorari denied 80 S. Ct. 1241, 363 U.S. 806, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1149).

If any person shall, within the District of Columbia, knowingly have in his possession or under his control, any record, notation, receipt, ticket, certificate, bill, slip, token, paper, or writing, current or not current used or to be used in violating the provisions of section 22-1501, 22-1504, or 22-1508, he shall, upon conviction of each such offense, be fined not more than $1,000 or be imprisoned for not more than one year, or both. For the purpose of this section, possession of any record, notation, receipt, ticket, certificate, bill, slip, token, paper, or writing shall be presumed to be knowing possession thereof. (Mar. 3, 1901, ch. 854, § 863a as added Apr. 5, 1938, 52 Stat. 198, ch 72, § 2, and amended June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 95, ch. 159 § 206(a).)

AMENDMENT

1953—Act June 29, 1953, amended section generally and among other changes so referred to violations under section 22-1501, 22-1504, or 22-1508, created a presumption that possession of prohibited records is knowing possession, and increased the maximum penalty for violation of the section from a $500 fine or six months imprisonment or both to a $1,000 fine or one year imprisonment, or both.

1. Admissibility of evidence—In general

In joint prosecutions for violations of lottery laws, admission of one defendant's accusatory statement against the other three defendants was not error in view of later instructions that jury should disregard such statement. Davis v. United States (1960, 274 F. 2d 585, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 76).

In prosecution for operation of lottery and for possession of numbers slips, slips used as evidence to prove possession charge could also be used to prove charge of operation of lottery. Maynard v. United States (1954, 215 F. 2d 336, 94 U. S. App. D. C. 347).

2. —Arrest, search and seizure

Where defendant had been indicted for carrying on a lottery known as the numbers game, in violation of the District Code, evidence obtained by police officers through an illegal search and arrest is inadmissible and the conviction must be reversed. McDonald v. United States (1948, 69 S. Ct. 191, 335 U.S. 451, 93 L. Ed. 153).

In prosecution of numerous defendants for violation of lottery laws and conspiracy to violate those laws, where evidence obtained at one of several places raided was inadmissible because it had been obtained as a result of illegal entry into premises, but mass of other evidence legally seized sustained convictions, error in admitting such illegally obtained evidence was not, except as to one defendant who was found guilty of possessing lottery slips seized at such address, prejudicial. Woods et al. v. United States (1956, 240 F. 2d 37, 99 U. S. App. D. C. 351, certiorari denied 77 S. Ct. 815, 353 U. S. 941, 1 L. Ed. 2d 760).

In prosecution for operating numbers game and knowingly possessing numbers slips, found in defendant's automobile at time of his arrest without warrant, evidence of circumstances leading to arrest was sufficient to show probable cause therefor, so as to render search of automobile and seizure of slips reasonable and valid and authorize admission of slips in evidence against defendant. Mills v. United States (1952, 196 F. 2d 600, 90 U. S. App. D. C. 365, certiorari denied 73 S. Ct. 27, 344 U. S. 826, 97 L. Ed. 643).

Where police officers legally obtained search warrant for certain premises which they believed was being used in numbers lottery and entered and found extensive evidence of numbers activities and arrested all persons present, they could legally search the persons arrested, and evidence thereby obtained was admissible in prosecution for carrying on and promoting a numbers game and for possession of numbers slips. Wyche v. United States (1952, 193 F. 2d 703, 90 U. S. App. D. C. 67, certiorari denied 72 S. Ct. 556, 342 U. S. 943, 96 L. Ed. 702, rehearing denied 72 S. Ct. 675, 343 U. S. 921, 96 L. Ed. 1334).

Where there is no claim in the case involved that the officers advised the suspect of the cause of their demand before they broke down the door, upon that ground alone, the breaking of the door was unlawful, the arrest was unlawful, the search unlawful and the evidence thus procured should have been suppressed and a new trial on the indictment must be ordered. Accarino v. United States (1950, 179 F. 2d 456, 85 U. S. App. D. C. 395).

3. — Conspiracy

That alleged coconspirator had been seen talking to defendant on day before that on which such alleged coconspirator allegedly informed government agent that he had turned his numbers work over to defendant did not establish that conspiracy was in existence on that date; and in absence of evidence that conspiracy was then in existence, agent's testimony with regard to alleged conversation was inadmissible against defendant, in prosecution for conspiracy to commit lottery offenses. Taylor v. United States (1958, 260 F. 2d 737, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 219).

Erroneous admission of evidence that alleged coconspirator had told government agent that he had turned his numbers work over to defendant would require reversal of conviction under indictment count charging conspiracy to commit lottery offenses; and since it was probable that such evidence had also been considered by jury in connection with related count charging defendant with operation of a lottery, conviction on that count would also be reversed. Id.

4. Arrest, search and seizure

Action of officers who, with permission of owners, entered vacant row house adjoining that in which they suspected defendants were maintaining unlawful betting office, in inserting antenna spike under baseboard and into party wall and connecting ear phones so that they were then able to overhear defendants conduct their betting business by telephone, did not constitute such an unlawful "search and seizure" as is proscribed by the Fourth Amendment to the federal Constitution and such actions did not constitute an interference with any communications system in violation of the Communications Act of 1934. Silverman et al. v. United States (1960, 275 F. 2d 173, 107 U. S. App. D. C. 144, certiorari granted 80 S. Ct. 1237, 363 U. S. 801, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1145).

Affidavits before Commissioner were sufficient to satisfy requisite of probable cause for issuance both of arrest warrants of persons who were subsequently convicted of illegal gambling on evidence showing that they maintained betting office and issuance of search warrants for search of premises which contained such office. Id.

Where, over period of two and a half months, officers had placed numbers bets on fifteen separate occasions at one location, and, on ten separate occasions, had observed a suspect depart from that location with bulging pockets and enter other premises, from which he subsequently departed "without the bulge," officers had reasonable grounds to believe that latter premises were being used in lottery operations, and that defendant, who at time such premises were searched pursuant to a search warrant was the only male present and was leaving "hastily," was participating therein, justifying arrest of defendant without an arrest warrant and seizure and use of incriminating evidence found in course of search of defendant made in connection with such arrest. Stephens v. United States (1959, 271 F. 2d 832, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 249).

Where officers, while standing in place open to public, saw through open door into back room and observed activities and paraphernalia which were familiar indicia of numbers lottery operation, they had "probable cause" and duty to make arrest, and arrest and seizure of paraphernalia were "legal arrest and seizure," though made without search or arrest warrant. Fisher v. United States

(1953, 205 F. 2d 702, 92 U. S. App. D. C. 247, certiorari denied 74 S. Ct. 122, 346 U. S. 872, 98 L. Ed. 381).

Circumstances revealed in police officer's affidavit provided sufficient probable cause to sustain issuance to officer of warrant for search of premises where it was believed defendants were operating a numbers game by telephone. Washington v. United States (1953, 202 F. 2d 214, 92 U. S. App. D. C. 31, certiorari denied 73 S. Ct. 938, 245 U. S. 956, 97 L. Ed. 1377, rehearing denied 73 S. Ct. 1130, 345 U. S. 1003, 97 L. Ed. 1408).

The arrest without warrant of defendant accused of carrying on a lottery and possessing tickets and certificates designed for purpose of conducting a lottery was legal where the facts and circumstances within the arresting officers knowledge and of which they had reasonably trustworthy information were sufficient to warrant man of reasonable caution in belief that defendant was taking numbers bets in corridor of building. De Bruhl v. United States (1952, 199 F. 2d 175, 91 U. S. App. D. C. 125, certiorari denied 73 S. Ct. 111, 344 U. S. 868, 97 L. Ed. 673).

In prosecution for violation of District of Columbia gambling statutes by engaging in the numbers business and violation of federal statute requiring payment of tax as prerequisite to engaging in business of accepting wagers, evidence relating to police investigation extending over a 10-week period disclosed probable cause for issuance of search warrant. United States v. Long (1959, 169 F. Supp. 730).

Where police investigation extended over a 10-week period established probable cause for issuance of search warrant for gambling activities in violation of District of Columbia statutes, the fact that 11-day period elapsed between last police observation of premises and issuance of such warrant did not require suppression of evidence seized from the premises searched on any theory of lack of probable cause. Id.

Where District of Columbia Metropolitan Police received information linking telephone number to numbers game and the source stated that bets were placed by named person using designated code number and Metropolitan Police received additional information from Arlington County police that very heavy number bets were called into the telephone number and policeman made series of telephone calls to that number and identified himself as such person and gave such code number and received numbers information, there was probable cause for issuance of search warrant which led to seizure of numbers slips and other numbers paraphernalia. United States v. Haje (1958, 159 F. Supp. 870).

Where police had rejected convenient present opportunity to make lawful arrest in public street, search of apartment, which defendant had entered before arrest was attempted, could not be supported as incidental to arrest. United States v. Johnson (1953, 113 F. Supp. 359).

Arrest of defendant, a cafeteria employee, after manager voiced suspicions to officer that defendant was stealing food, was without probable cause, and incidental search that turned up lottery tickets and other paraphernalia for use in lottery was illegal. Mathis v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1957, 129 A. 2d 178).

5. Conscious possession

Where conscious possession of papers to be used in violating statute making it unlawful to "purchase, possess, own or acquire any chance, right, or interest * * * in any policy lottery or any lottery * * *" was clearly proved, accused was properly convicted under statute prohibiting any person from knowingly having in his possession any paper used or to be used in violating the statute. Ferguson v. United States (1956, 239 F. 2d 952, 99 U. S. App. D. C. 331, certiorari denied 77 S. Ct. 1287, 353 U. S. 986, 1 L. Ed. 2d 1144).

6. Conspiracy

In prosecution of defendants for violation of lottery laws and conspiracy to violate laws, crime of conspiracy was not so merged in or indistinguishable from the lottery statute as to prevent conviction of defendants on both charges. Woods et al. v. United States (1956, 240 F. 2d 37, 99 U. S. App. D. C. 351, certiorari denied 77 S. Ct. 815, 353 U. S. 941, 1 L. Ed. 2d 760).

The crime of conspiracy to violate lottery laws and lottery statute violations are not so closely connected as to render applicable a proposition that where a concert of action between two or more persons is logically necessary to a crime's completion, a charge of conspiracy will not lie against such persons. Id.

7. Constitutionality

This section making possession of numbers slips a crime is constitutional. Ferguson v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1956, 123 A. 2d 615).

8. Construction

Conviction of having possession of numbers slips in violation of lottery laws was warranted as against contention that there was not any evidence to indicate that such slips were "live" slips, that is, were tickets in an existing lottery. Ledbetter v. United States (1954, 211 F. 2d 628, 93 U. S. App. D.C. 155, certiorari denied 74 S. Ct. 789, 347 U. S. 977, 98 L. Ed. 1116).

Defendant's possession of used numbers slips, known in the game as "dead" slips, constituted an offense under this section penalizing possession of slips "used, or to be used" for carrying on a lottery even though amendment adding the words "current or not current" had not yet been enacted. Clement v. United States (1954, 208 F. 2d 46, 93 U. S. App. D. C. 154).

9. Counsel, conduct of

In prosecution for carrying on and promoting a numbers game and for possession of numbers slips, wherein defendants' former counsel of their own choice disclaimed any desire to enter a motion to suppress evidence and also gave specific reasons for disclaimer, contention of defendants' present counsel on appeal that trial court erred in refusing to suppress evidence would be rejected as asking Court of Appeals to substitute its judgment of proper trial tactics for that of the lawyer of the forum. Wyche v. United States (1952, 193 F. 2d 703, 90 U. S. App. D. C. 67, certiorari denied 72 S. Ct. 556, 342 U. S. 943, 96 L. Ed. 702, rehearing denied 72 S. Ct. 675, 343 U. S. 921, 96 L. Ed. 1334).

10. Elements of lottery

Though consideration together with chance and prize is one of three elements necessary to constitute a lottery, it is unnecessary, in prosecution for possession of numbers slips, to prove that consideration has passed for them or that they have entered the play of the numbers game. Ferguson v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1956, 123 A. 2d 615).

11. Harmless or prejudicial error

In prosecution of defendant for possessing lottery slips which were seized by police after illegally entering premises at which they arrested defendant, admission of slips constituted prejudicial error. Woods et al. v. United States (1956, 240 F. 2d 37, 99 U. S. App. D. C. 351, certiorari denied 77 S. Ct. 815, 353 U. S. 941, 1 L. Ed. 2d 760).

12. Instructions

Provision of lottery statute that possession of numbers slips shall be prima facie evidence that possessor was concerned in carrying on lottery, when quoted in instruction to jury, did not constitute instruction that it had become duty of lottery prosecution defendant, who had had possession of numbers slips, to establish his innocence to obtain acquittal. Maynard v. United States (1954, 215 F. 2d 336, 94 U. S. App. D. C. 347).

In prosecution for operating lottery and for possession of numbers slips, wherein jury had been fully instructed as to the government's burden of proof, trial judge's answer to jury's question, whether possession of slips constituted prima facie evidence of operation of lottery, given in words of statute providing that such possession did constitute prima facie evidence, without explaining meaning of prima facie evidence, was appropriate and understandable within framework of entire charge. Id.

13. Motion to suppress

Where numbers slips taken from defendant were admitted without objection on trial which commenced three days after his arrest, motion to suppress made for first time when trial resumed following a continuance was not timely, and denial of the motion was not error. Harris v. U.S. (1943, 32 A. 2d 101, certiorari denied 69 S. Ct. 161, 335 U. S. 873, 93 L. Ed. 417).

14. New trial

In prosecution for violating lottery laws, District Court did not abuse discretion in denying motion for new trial on ground that defendant's trial counsel refused to permit her to testify and failed to introduce certain other testimony. Ingram v. United States (1954, 209 F. 2d 818, 93 U.S. App. D. C. 307).

15. Review

An order granting suppression of evidence seized from defendant's person at time of his arrest, entered before trial in criminal case, is not appealable as "final decision", regardless of whether, in the particular case, effect of suppressing the evidence would be to force dismissal of indictment for lack of evidence. Carroll v. United States (1957, 77 S. Ct. 1332, 354 U. S. 394, 1 L. Ed. 2d 1442).

Convictions of defendants who were jointly indicted on four counts charging violations of District of Columbia Code sections proscribing gambling and on a fifth count charging that they had engaged in business of accepting wagers without having paid special tax required by Internal Revenue Code and who were acquitted on charges in fourth and fifth counts, were not subject to reversal because of claimed inconsistencies of verdict. Silverman et al v. United States (1960, 275 F. 2d 173, 107 U. S. App. D. C. 144, certiorari granted 80 S. Ct. 1237, 363 U. S. 801, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1145).

Rational consistency in a jury's verdict on each of several counts is not necessary. Id.

Conviction for operating lottery in violation of District of Columbia statutes was affirmed on appeal, notwithstanding defendant's contentions (1) that number slips and other gambling paraphernalia were seized under warrants which were not supported by showing of adequate probable cause and (2) that evidence was insufficient to sustain conviction. Ellis v. United States, (1959, 270 F. 2d 448, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 145).

Where defendants, each of whom was convicted of substantive offense of operating lottery, and jointly of conspiracy to operate lottery, did not request trial court to compel election of counts on ground that substantive and conspiracy counts were duplicitous, in view of identity of proof under each count, and constituted double jeopardy, defendants did not save question for review on appeal, and Court of Appeals would not consider merits of contention. Aikens et al. v. United States (1956, 232 F. 2d 66, 98 U. S. App. D. C. 66).

Where there was conflicting evidence as to means by which defendant's notebook, upon which conviction for illegal possession of numbers slips was based, was acquired, Municipal Court of Appeals was not authorized to resolve questions under such circumstances and could not disturb finding of trial court adverse to defendant. Moody v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1960, 163 A. 2d 337).

Evidence sustained conviction for illegal possession of numbers slips. Id.

16. Severance

In prosecution for operation of lottery and for possession of numbers slips, trial court's denial of defendants' motions for severance did not constitute abuse of discretion. Maynard v. United States (1954, 215 F. 2d 336, 94 U.S. App. D.C. 347).

17. Sufficiency of evidence

In joint prosecutions for violations of lottery laws, evidence sustained trial judge's finding that police gave sufficient notice of their purpose and authority before breaking in door of one defendant's premises in executing search warrant. Davis v. United States (1960, 274 F. 2d 585, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 76).

Evidence, as to all defendants but one, was sufficient to support convictions on all counts, in prosecution for operating and conspiracy to operate lottery, and for possession of lottery tickets, and maintenance of gambling premises. Aikens et al. v. United States (1956, 232 F. 2d 66, 98 U. S. App. D. C. 66).

Evidence that search of previously occupied apartment of defendant uncovered numbers slips and notebook, in absence of evidence of possession of lottery tickets by defendant, was insufficient to support conviction for possession of lottery tickets, operation of lottery, or for maintaining gambling premises. Id.

Evidence justified submitting to jury prosecution for operating a lottery and possessing materials therefor. Kenney v. U.S. (1946, 157 F. 2d 442, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 259).

Evidence that defendant admitted ownership of billfold containing quantity of undated numbers slips was prima facie indicative that possession of such tickets was violative of statute forbidding possession of lottery slips and shifted burden of going forward with the evidence to defendant to prove that numbers slips were not lottery slips within meaning of statute. Roseborough v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1952, 86 A. 2d 920).

Evidence was insufficient to sustain conviction of defendant for knowingly having in his possession "numbers slips" in violation of this section. Fletcher v. U. S. (D. C. Mun. App. 1946, 49 A. 2d 88).

If any person shall knowingly permit, on any premises under his control in the District, the sale of any chance or ticket in or share of a ticket in any lottery or policy lottery, or shall knowingly permit any lottery or policy lottery, or policy shop on such premises, he shall be fined not less than fifty dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, or be imprisoned not more than one year, or both. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1330, ch. 854, § 864.)

Whoever shall in the District set up or keep any gaming table, or any house, vessel, or place, on land or water, for the purpose of gaming, or gambling device commonly called A B C, faro bank, E O, roulette, equality, keno, thimbles, or little joker, or any kind of gaming table or gambling device adapted, devised, and designed for the purpose of playing any game of chance for money or property, or shall induce, entice, and permit any person to bet or play at or upon any such gaming table or gambling device, or on the side of or against the keeper thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment for a term of not more than five years. 1. In general

This section penalizing anyone setting up in the District of Columbia any "gaming table", etc., or who permits any person to bet or play at or upon any such gaming table or device, etc., indicates a physical device of some sort and does not mean the mere taking of a bet on a race. Plummer v. United States (1951, 189 F. 2d 19, 88 U. S. App. D. C. 244).

"Any games, devices, or contrivances set up or kept for the purpose of gaming, or any gambling device, so set up and kept, adapted, devised, and designed for the purpose of playing any game of chance for money or property, and to which the public may resort to bid or wager money, is a gaming table within the meaning of the statute.

The definition of a gaming table under the statute does not involve the ordinary mechanical definition of a table, but depends for its statutory meaning upon the means or contrivances adopted for playing the game." Miller v. United States (6 App. D.C. 6). See, also, Nelson v. United States (28 App. D.C. 32); Swan v. United States (1924, 295 F. 921, 54 App. D.C. 100).

"Two offenses are created by section 865 (this section). One is the setting up or keeping of a gaming table or device; the other is the keeping of a house, vessel, or place for the purpose of gaming." Wade v. United States (33 App. D.C. 29, 20 L.R.A., N.S., 347, 17 Ann. Cas. 707).

2. Claw machine

"Claw machine" used for the purpose of obtaining prizes, by mere chance, was a "gambling device." Boosalis v. Crawford (1938, 99 F. 2d 374, 69 App. D.C. 141).

3. Elements of offense

This section defining as a felony setting up of gaming table and keeping of any house or place for purpose of gaming reaches any operator who would permit any person to bet on side of or against the keeper of house, and persons who operated betting office where they received wagers and maintained records of wins and losses, were guilty of violating this section, notwithstanding fact that they conducted their operations by telephone and that they did not invite public to their offices. Silverman v. United States (1960, 275 F. 2d 173, 107 U.S. App. D.C., 144, certiorari granted 80 S. Ct. 1237, 363 U.S. 801, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1145).

The gravamen of offense of setting up and keeping a gaming place is furnishing the facilities for gaming activities and it is immaterial that betting actually took place or that money actually passed. Sesso v. U.S. (1943, 133 F. 2d 381, 77 U.S. App. D.C. 35).

4. Evidence

Evidence was insufficient to establish beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant set up or kept a gaming table for the purpose of gaming. Plummer v. United States (1951, 189 F. 2d 19, 88 U.S. App. D.C. 244).

In prosecution for setting up and keeping a gaming place, evidence necessary to show a gaming place need not be direct, and the intent with which the act was done may be gathered from all the circumstances shown in evidence. Cesso v. U.S. (1943, 133 F. 2d 381, 77 U.S. App. D.C. 35).

In prosecution for setting up and keeping a gaming place for purpose of betting on result of horse races, where prima facie evidence of corpus delicti was made out, damaging admissions made by defendant were admissible in evidence. Id.

In prosecution for setting up and keeping a gaming place for purpose of betting on result of horse races, evidence authorized inference that defendant was in control and possession of the premises when the offense occurred. Id.

Evidence sustained conviction of setting up and keeping a gaming place for purpose of betting upon result of horse races. Id.

In prosecution for setting up and keeping a gaming place for purpose of betting upon result of horse races, evidence sustained finding that a gaming place was illegally set up and maintained. Id.

In prosecution for keeping gambling tables, testimony of a defendant at a previous trial, together with a bank statement to which it related, were properly admitted, where the testimony had some tendency to establish such defendant's guilt. Warde v. U.S. (1947, 158 F. 2d 651, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 355).

Evidence of gambling on one occasion is sufficient to sustain conviction for keeping gambling tables. Id.

Intercepted interstate and local messages pertaining to gambling are not admissible when received by person not authorized by the sender. United States v. Plisco (1938, 22 F. Supp. 242).

5. Gambling device

Where player of pinball amusement machine achieving certain minimum score would receive a "free play" or another "try" without an additional coin but nothing more, the machine was not a "gambling device" designed for purpose of playing game of chance for "property" within this section. Washington Coin Mach. Ass'n v. Callahan (1944, 142 F. 2d 97, 79 U.S. App. D.C. 41).

To "gamble" is to risk one's money or other property on an event, chance, or contingency in the hope of the realization of gain, and the test as to whether a particular machine combination constitutes a "gambling device" is whether it is adapted, devised, and designed for purpose of playing any game of chance for money or property. Id.

6. Gaming table

Section 865 of the code (this section) made it a crime to set up or keep any gaming table, or any house, vessel, or place, on land or water, for the purpose of gaming or gambling, under the penalty of imprisonment for a term of not more than five years. Kelleher v. United States (1930, 35 F. 2d 877, 59 App. D.C. 107).

7. Indictment

Indictments charging that appellants set up and kept a gambling table for the purpose of betting and wagering on the results of horse races, contrary to this section. Charge an offense against the laws of the United States. Nuckols v. United States (1938, 99 F. 2d 353, 69 App. D.C. 120, certiorari denied 59 S. Ct. 89, 305 U.S. 626; 83 L. Ed. 401).

Indictment in either case of maintaining table or place in which gaming was done need not allege proof of passing money; but if it is drawn in almost the language of the statute, and charges both the place and table defendants were conducting, that is sufficient. Beard v. United States (1936, 82 F. 2d 837, 65 App. D.C. 231, certiorari denied 56 S. Ct. 675, 298 U.S. 566, 80 L. Ed. 1382).

8. Offense a felony

This section, by prescribing a maximum penalty of five years' imprisonment, made the offense a felony and no warrant for arrest was necessary where defendant was apprehended in the act of violating the statute. Zerega v. United States (1929, 32 F. 2d 963, 59 App. D.C. 67).

9. Place for gaming

It is not necessary that one charged with the crime of maintaining a gambling place should have been in permanent possession of the place or a lessee or keeper, but that it is sufficient if he is in charge of the place at the time the offense occurs. Donald v. United States (1939, 102 F. 2d 618; 70 App. D.C. 14).

In prosecution for setting up and keeping a gaming place for purpose of betting upon result of horse races, it is not necessary that defendant should have been in permanent possession of the premises or that he should have been a lessee or even a keeper. Sesso v. U.S. (1943, 133 F. 2d 381, 77 U.S. App. D.C. 35).

In prosecution for setting up and keeping a gaming place for purpose of betting upon result of horse races, it was only incumbent upon the Government to show that defendant was in charge, possession or control of the place when the offense occurred. Id.

10. Property

The term "property" as used in this section includes goods, chattels, effects, evidences of rights in action, and all written instruments by which any pecuniary obligation, or money or right or title to property, real or personal, is created or transferred but none of such terms should be expanded to include a free amusement feature such as privilege of playing an additional free game if certain score is made. Washington Coin Mach. Ass'n v. Callahan (1944, 142 F. 2d 97, 79 U.S. App. D.C. 41).

11. Purpose

The purpose of Congress in enacting this section was to make criminal the use of all contrivances by which money or property is bet or wagered or risked on the chance of some material reward. Washington Coin Mach. Ass'n v. Callahan (1944, 142 F. 2d 97, 79 U.S. App. D.C. 41).

12. Review

Conviction on five counts of keeping gaming table and a place for gambling on horse races was affirmed. Brown v. United States (1929, 32 F. 2d 953, 59 App. D.C. 57).

When one was convicted for operating gaming table he could not afterwards dispute the verdict, for a question of fact or of law distinctly put in issue and directly determined by a court of competent jurisdiction cannot afterwards be disputed between the same parties. Beard v. Sanford (C.C.A. Ga. 1938, 99 F. 2d 750, certiorari denied 59 S. Ct. 644, 306 U.S. 655, 83 L. Ed. 1053).

When appellant was convicted on two counts, first, by setting up gaming table, and, second, keeping a place for gaming, but as he did not raise the question of double jeopardy on the trial or on the appeal from conviction, effect of his failure to do so was to waive the question for all time. Id.

13. Searches and seizure

Where defendant had been indicted for carrying on a lottery known as the numbers game in violation of the District Code, evidence obtained by police officers through an illegal search and arrest is inadmissible and the conviction must be reversed. McDonald v. United States (1948, 69 S. Ct. 191, 335 U.S. 451, 93 L. Ed. 153).

Where there is no claim in the case involved that the officers advised the suspect of the cause of their demand before they broke down the door, upon that ground alone, the breaking of the door was unlawful, presence of arresting officers was unlawful, the arrest was unlawful, the search unlawful and the evidence thus procured should have been suppressed. A new trial on the indictment must be ordered. Accarino v. United States (1950, 179 F. 2d 456, 85 U.S. App. D.C. 395).

14. Separate trial

Where four defendants were indicted for keeping a gaming table, and one was also charged with assault, a motion of the three to be tried separately from the fourth, who had been charged with assault, will not be granted since their guilt of the only crime of which they were accused was so clear that no defense was attempted and none would have been attempted if they had been tried separately and the court's refusal to try them separately was not prejudicial. Scheve v. United States (1950, 184 F. 2d 695, 87 U.S. App. D.C. 289).

15. Verdict

Convictions of defendants who were jointly indicted on four counts charging violations of District of Columbia Code sections proscribing gambling and on a fifth count charging that they had engaged in business of accepting wagers without having paid special tax required by Internal Revenue Code and who were acquitted on charges in fourth and fifth counts, were not subject to reversal because of claimed inconsistencies of verdict. Silverman v. United States (1960, 275 F. 2d 173, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 144, certiorari granted 80 S. Ct. 1237, 363 U.S. 801, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1145).

Rational consistency in a jury's verdict on each of several counts is not necessary. Id.

§ 22-1505. Gambling premises—Definition—Prohibition against maintaining—Forfeiture—Liens—Deposit of moneys in Treasury—Penalty—Subsequent offenses.

(a) Any house, building, vessel, shed, booth, shelter, vehicle, enclosure, room, lot, or other premises in the District of Columbia, used or to be used in violating the provisions of section 22-1501 or 22-1504, shall be deemed "gambling premises" for the purpose of this section.

(b) It shall be unlawful for any person in the District of Columbia knowingly, as owner, lessee, agent, employee, operator, occupant, or otherwise, to maintain or aid or permit the maintaining of any gambling premises.

(c) All moneys, vehicles, furnishings, fixtures, equipment, stock (including, without limitation, furnishings and fixtures adaptable to nongambling uses, and equipment and stock for printing, recording, computing, transporting, safekeeping, or communication), or other things of value used or to be used—

(1) in carrying on or conducting any lottery, or the game or device commonly known as a policy lottery or policy, contrary to the provisions of section 22-1501;

(2) in setting up or keeping any gaming table, bank, or device contrary to the provisions of section 22-1504; or

(3) in maintaining any gambling premises, shall be subject to seizure by any member of the Metropolitan Police force or the United States Park Police, or the United States marshal, or any deputy marshal, for the District of Columbia, and shall, unless good cause is shown to the contrary by the owner, be forfeited to the District of Columbia by order of any court having jurisdiction unless good cause is shown to the contrary by the owner, for disposition by public auction or as otherwise provided by law. Bona fide liens against property so forfeited shall, on good cause shown by the lienor, be transferred from the property to the proceeds of the sale of the property. Forfeit moneys and other proceeds realized from the enforcement of this section shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the District of Columbia.

(d) Whoever violates this section shall be imprisoned not more than one year or fined not more than $1,000, or both, unless the violation occurs after he has been convicted of a violation of this section, in which case he may be imprisoned for not more than five years, or fined not more than $2,000, or both. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1331, ch. 854, § 866; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 95, ch. 159, § 206(b)).

AMENDMENT

1953—Act June 29, 1953, amended section generally. Prior to the amendment the section provided: "Whoever in the District knowingly permits any gaming table, bank, or device to be set up or used for the purpose of gaming in any house, building, vessel, shed, booth, shelter, lot, or other premises to him belonging or by him occupied, or of which at the time he has possession or control, shall be punished by imprisonment in the jail for not more than one year or by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars or both."

1. In general

This section formerly provided that whoever knowingly permitted any gaming table, bank, or device to be set up or used for the purpose of gaming in any house, building, vessel, shed, booth, shelter, lot, or other premises belonging to or occupied by him, or under his possession or control, should be punished by imprisonment in the jail for not more than one year or by a fine not exceeding $500, or both. Kelleher v. United States (1930, 35 F. 2d 877, 59 App. D.C. 107).

2. Arrest, search and seizure

In joint prosecutions for violations of lottery laws, evidence sustained trial judge's finding that police gave sufficient notice of their purpose and authority before breaking in door of one defendant's premises in executing search warrant. Davis v. United States (1960, 274 F. 2d 585, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 76).

In prosecution for violation of District of Columbia gambling statutes by engaging in the numbers business and for violation of federal statute requiring payment of tax as prerequisite to engaging in business of accepting wagers, evidence relating to police investigation extending over a 10-week period disclosed probable cause for issuance of search warrant. United States v. Long (1959, 169 F. Supp. 730).

Where police investigation extended over a ten week period established probable cause for issuance of search warrant for gambling activities in violation of District of Columbia statutes, the fact that 11-day period elapsed between last police observation of premises and issuance of such warrant did not require suppression of evidence seized from the premises searched on any theory of lack of probable cause. Id.

3. Conspiracy

In prosecution of defendants for violation of lottery laws and conspiracy to violate laws, crime of conspiracy was not so merged in or indistinguishable from the lottery statute as to prevent conviction of defendants on both charges. Woods et al. v. United States (1956, 240 F. 2d 37, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 351, certiorari denied 77 S. Ct. 815, 353 U.S. 941, 1 L. Ed. 2d 760).

The crime of conspiracy to violate lottery laws and lottery statute violations are not so closely connected as to render applicable a proposition that where a concert of action between two or more persons is logically necessary to a crime's completion, a charge of conspiracy will not lie against such persons. Id.

4. Evidence—Admissibility

In joint prosecutions for violations of lottery laws, admission of one defendant's accusatory statement against the other three defendants was not error in view of later instructions that jury should disregard such statement. Davis v. United States (1960, 274 F. 2d 585, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 76).

In prosecution of numerous defendants for violation of lottery laws and conspiracy to violate those laws, where evidence obtained at one of several places raided was inadmissible because it had been obtained as a result of illegal entry into premises, but mass of other evidence legally seized sustained convictions, error in admitting such illegally obtained evidence was not, except as to one defendant who was found guilty of possessing lottery slips seized at such address, prejudicial. Woods et al. v. United States (1956, 240 F. 2d 37, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 351, certiorari denied 77 S. Ct. 815, 353 U.S. 941, 1 L. Ed. 2d 760).

5. — Sufficiency

Evidence, as to all defendants but one, was sufficient to support convictions on all counts, in prosecution for operating and conspiracy to operate lottery, and for possession of lottery tickets, and maintenance of gambling premises. Aikens et al. v. United States (1956, 232 F. 2d 66, 98 U.S. App. D.C. 66).

Evidence that search of previously occupied apartment of defendant uncovered numbers slips and notebook, in absence of evidence of possession of lottery tickets by defendant, was insufficient to support conviction for possession of lottery tickets, operation of lottery, or for maintaining gambling premises. Id.

6. Forfeiture

A claw machine was a gambling device subject to forfeiture. Boosalis v. Crawford (1938, 99 F. 2d 374, 69 App. D.C. 141).

7. — Alternative remedies

Owners of property, held by District of Columbia as preliminary to libel proceedings for its forfeiture pursuant to this section authorizing forfeiture of property used in lottery or gaming activities, could apply for administrative relief, could sue officers who seize the property in trespass, or could assert their right as claimants in the libel when filed. United States v. Bell (1954, 120 F. Supp. 670).

8. — Time for proceedings

Property held as preliminary to forfeiture proceeding, under this section authorizing forfeiture of property used in lottery or gaming activities, would be ordered returned unless libel for forfeiture were filed within five days, in view of fact that District of Columbia Municipality had notice of two motions for more than sixty days and of three motions for more than fifty days wherein property owner sought return of property. United States v. Bell (1954, 120 F. Supp. 670).

9. Habeas corpus

Contentions determined adversely to petitioner on appeals to the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia from conviction of an offense under this section in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, and to the United States Supreme Court, could not be successfully advanced on petition for habeas corpus. Beard v. Sanford (C.C.A. Ga. 1938, 99 F. 2d 750, certiorari denied 59 S. Ct. 644, 306 U.S. 655, 83 L. Ed. 1053).

10. Jurisdiction

Court, in criminal proceeding against owners of property, held by District of Columbia as preliminary to proceeding for its forfeiture, pursuant to this section authorizing forfeiture of property used in lottery or gaming activities, had jurisdiction to order return of the property. United States v. Bell (1954, 120 F. Supp. 670).

11. Motion for return of property

Averment by United States Attorney, made in reply to motion in criminal proceeding for return of property seized, that property will not be used as evidence, is not sufficient to defeat the motion. United States v. Bell (1954, 120 F. Supp. 670).

12. Proof

An indictment charging an offense under this section cannot be sustained by proof of a violation of section 865 (§ 22-1504). "In order to warrant a conviction under section 866 (this section) it is necessary that a defendant shall knowingly permit a gambling device to be set up or used for the purpose of gaming upon premises owned or occupied by him, or of which at the time of the commission of the offense he had possession or control." Nelson v. United States (28 App. D. C. 32).

13. Review

Convictions of defendants who were jointly indicted on four counts charging violations of District of Columbia Code sections proscribing gambling and on a fifth count charging that they had engaged in business of accepting wagers without having paid special tax required by Internal Revenue Code and who were acquitted on charges in fourth and fifth counts, were not subject to reversal because of claimed inconsistencies of verdict. Silverman et al., v. United States (1960, 275 F. 2d 173, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 144, certiorari granted 80 S. Ct. 1237, 363 U.S. 801, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1145).

Rational consistency in a jury's verdict on each of several counts is not necessary. Id.

Conviction for operating lottery in violation of District of Columbia statutes was affirmed on appeal, notwithstanding defendant's contentions (1) that number slips and other gambling paraphernalia were seized under warrants which were not supported by showing of adequate probable cause and (2) that evidence was insufficient to sustain conviction. Ellis v. United States (1959, 270 F. 2d 448, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 145).

Where defendants, each of whom was convicted of substantive offense of operating lottery, and jointly of conspiracy to operate lottery, did not request trial court to compel election of counts on ground that substantive and conspiracy counts were duplicative, in view of identity of proof under each count, and constituted double jeopardy, defendants did not save question for review on appeal, and Court of Appeals would not consider merits of contention. Aikens et al. v. United States (1956, 232 F. 2d 66, 98 U.S. App. D. C. 66).

Whoever shall in the District deal, play, or practice, or be in any manner accessory to the dealing or practicing, of the confidence game or swindle known as three-card monte, or of any such game, play, or practice, or any other confidence game, play, or practice, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars and by imprisonment for not more than five years. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1331, ch. 854, § 867.)

CROSS REFERENCE

Search warrant, see § 23-301.

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Arrest, search and seizure

In prosecution for practicing confidence game and swindle known as three-card monte, evidence as to what arresting officers saw transpiring indicated that they were justified in making arrest without warrant, and articles seized as incident to such arrest were admissible in evidence regardless whether crime charged was misdemeanor, as indicated by statute, or felony, because punishable by imprisonment for more than one year. Coleman v. United States (1954, 215 F. 2d 681, 94 U. S. App. D. C. 311).

All games, devices, or contrivances at which money or any other thing shall be bet or wagered shall be deemed a gaming table within the meaning of sections 22-1504 to 22-1506; and the courts shall construe said sections liberally, so as to prevent the mischief intended to be guarded against. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1331, ch. 854, § 868.)

CROSS REFERENCE

NOTES TO DECISIONS

In general 1
Evidence 2
Indictment 3

1. In general

The statute penalizing anyone setting up in the District of Columbia any "gaming table" etc., or who permits any person to bet or play at or upon any such gaming table or device, etc., indicates a physical device of some sort and does not mean the mere taking of a bet on a race. Plummer v. United States (1951, 189 F. 2d 19, 88 U. S. App. D. C. 244).

2. Evidence

Evidence was insufficient to establish beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant set up or kept a gaming table for the purpose of gaming. Plummer v. United States (1951, 189 F. 2d 19, 88 U. S. App. D. C. 244).

3. Indictment

Indictment is sufficient which alleges a setting up of gaming table and keeping a gaming table for the purpose of betting on the results of horse races. Swan v. United States (1924, 295 F. 921, 54 App. D.C. 100).

It shall be unlawful for any person, or association of persons, within the District of Columbia to purchase, possess, own, or acquire any chance, right, or interest, tangible or intangible, in any policy lottery or any lottery, or to make or place a bet or wager, accept a bet or wager, gamble or make books or pools on the result of any athletic contest. For the purpose of this section, the term "athletic contest" means any of the following, wherever held or to be held: a football, baseball, softball, basketball, hockey, or polo game, or a tennis, golf, or wrestling match, or a tennis or golf tournament, or a prize fight or boxing match, or a trotting or running race of horses, or a running race of dogs, or any other athletic or sporting event or contest. Any person or association of persons violating this section shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned not more than one year, or both. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1331, ch. 854, § 869; May 16, 1908, 35 Stat. 164, ch. 172, § 3; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 96, ch. 159, § 206c.)

AMENDMENTS

1953—Act June 29, 1953, amended section generally. Prior to the amendment the section read: "It shall be unlawful for any person or association of persons to bet, gamble, or make books or pools on the result of any trotting or running race of horses, or boat race, or race of any kind, or on any election, or any contest of any kind, or game of baseball. Any person or association of persons violating the provisions of this section shall be fined not exceeding five hundred dollars or be imprisoned not more than ninety days, or both."

1908—Act May 16, 1908, struck out after the word "persons" in the first sentence the following words "in city of Washington and Georgetown in District of Columbia within one mile of boundaries of said District."

NOTES TO DECISIONS

In general 1

Defamatory words 3

Geographical prohibition 5
Search and seizure 6
Verdict 7

1. In general

This section made it unlawful for any person to bet, gamble, or make books or pools on the result of any trotting or running race of horses, or boat race, or race of any kind, and prescribed a punishment for violation of the provisions of the section of a fine not exceeding $500 or imprisonment not exceeding 90 days, or both. Kelleher v. United States (1930, 35 F. 2d 877, 59 App. D.C. 107).

2. Accomplices

Persons engaging in wagering contests are not accomplices. Paylor v. United States (42 App. D. C. 428, L. R. A. 1915D, 682, certiorari denied 35 S. Ct. 209, 235 U.S. 704, 59 L. Ed. 434).

3. Defamatory words

When words are not libelous per se, as laying bets on horse races, it is for the jury to determine the defamatory meaning. Baker v. Warner (1914, 34 S. Ct. 175, 231 U.S. 588, 58 L. Ed. 384).

4. Evidence

Where evidence justified conviction on counts under 1901 Code § 865 (§ 22-1504), counts under this section need not be considered. Zerega v. United States (1929, 32 F. 2d 963, 59 App. D.C. 67).

5. Geographical prohibition

This section only prohibited betting on horse races and bookmaking within one mile of the boundaries of the cities of Washington and Georgetown. Baker v. Warner (1914, 34 S. Ct. 175, 231 U.S. 588, 58 L. Ed. 384).

6. Search and seizure

Where District of Columbia Metropolitan Police received information linking telephone number to numbers game and the source stated that bets were placed by named person using designated code number and Metropolitan Police received additional information from Arlington County police that very heavy number bets were called into the telephone number and policeman made series of telephone calls to that number and identified himself as such person and gave such code number and received numbers information, there was probable cause for issuance of search warrant which led to seizure of numbers slips and other numbers paraphernalia. United States v. Haje (1958, 159 F. Supp. 870).

7. Verdict

Convictions of defendants who were jointly indicted on four counts charging violations of District of Columbia Code sections proscribing gambling and on a fifth count charging that they had engaged in business of accepting wagers without having paid special tax required by Internal Revenue Code and who were acquitted on charges in fourth and fifth counts, were not subject to reversal because of claimed inconsistencies of verdict. Silverman et al. v. United States (1960, 275 F. 2d 173, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 144, certiorari granted 80 S. Ct. 1237, 363 U.S. 801, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1145).

Rational consistency in a jury's verdict on each of several counts is not necessary. Id.

The following words and phrases used in sections 22-1509 to 22-1512 shall, unless a different meaning is plainly required by the context, have the following meanings:

"Person" shall mean an individual, partnership, corporation, or association, whether acting in his or their own right or as the officer, agent, servant, correspondent, or representative of another.

"Contract" shall mean any agreement, trade, or transaction.

"Securities" shall mean all evidences of debt or property and options for the purchase and sale thereof, shares in any corporation or association, bonds, coupons, scrip, rights, choses in action, and other evidences of debt or property and options for the purchase or sale thereof.

"Commodities" shall mean anything movable that is bought and sold.

"Bucket-shop" shall mean any room, office, store, building, or other place where any contract prohibited by sections 22-1509 to 22-1512 is made or offered to be made.

"Keeper" shall mean any person owning, keeping, managing, operating, or promoting a bucket-shop, or assisting to keep, manage, operate, or promote a bucket-shop.

"Bucketing" or "bucket-shopping" shall mean: (a) The making of or offering to make any contract respecting the purchase or sale, either upon credit or upon margin, of any securities or commodities wherein both parties thereto intend, or such keeper intends, that such contract shall be, or may be, terminated, closed, or settled according to or upon the basis of the public market quotations of prices made on any board of trade or exchange upon which said securities or commodities are dealt in and without a bona fide purchase or sale of the same; or (b) the making of or offering to make any contract respecting the purchase or sale, either upon credit or upon margin, of any securities or commodities, wherein both parties intend, or such keeper intends, that such contract shall be, or may be, deemed terminated, closed, or settled when such public market quotations of prices for the securities or commodities named in such contract shall reach a certain figure without a bona fide purchase or sale of the same; or (c) the making of or offering to make any contract respecting the purchase or sale, either upon credit or upon margin, of any securities or commodities wherein both parties do not intend, or such keeper does not intend, the actual or bona fide receipt or delivery of such securities or commodities, but do intend, or such keeper does intend, a settlement of such contract based upon the differences in such public market quotations of prices at which said securities or commodities are or are asserted to be bought and sold. (Mar. 3, 1901, ch. 854, § 869a, as added Mar. 1, 1909, 35 Stat. 670, ch. 233).

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Any contract 1
Conspiracy 2
Constitutionality 3
Prosecutions 4

1. Any contract

The words "any contract defined in the preceding section," as used in section 869b (§ 22-1510) "were intended to refer, and did in fact refer, to bucketing and bucket-shopping contracts, or to 'agreements, trades, or transactions' relating thereto." United States v. Cella (37 App. D.C. 423, certiorari denied 32 S. Ct. 526, 223 U.S. 728, 56 L. Ed. 633).

2. Conspiracy

Conspiracy to violate the "bucket-shop" law of the District of Columbia (act of March 1, 1909, 35 Stat. 670, ch. 233 (§§ 22-1509 to 22-1512)) is an offense against the United States within the meaning of R.S. §§ 1014, 5440 (sections 371, 3041 of title 18, U.S. Code). United States v. Cella (37 App. D.C. 423, certiorari denied 32 S. Ct. 526, 223 U.S. 728, 56 L. Ed. 633). See, also, United States v. Campbell (D.C. Pa., 1910, 179 F. 762).

Where indictment was for conspiracy to violate this section, the proceeding was removable under R.S. § 1014 (section 371 of title 18, U.S. Code). United States ex rel. Vause v. McCarthy (D.C. N.Y. 1918, 250 F. 800, affirmed 256 F. 651, 168 C.C.A. 45).

3. Constitutionality

The provision in this section that unless a different meaning is plainly required by the context, the word "contract" when used in sections 22-1509 to 22-1512, shall mean "any agreement, trade, or transaction," does not invalidate such sections as prohibiting all agreements, trades, and transactions, but refers only to the particular kinds of contracts elsewhere described in such sections, namely bucketing and bucket-shop contracts, or all agreements, trades, and transactions relating thereto. United States v. Cella (37 App. D.C. 423, certiorari denied 32 S. Ct. 526, 223 U.S. 728, 56 L. Ed. 633).

In the prosecution of keepers of a bucket shop for violating sections 22-1509 to 22-1512, relating to bucket shopping, such sections will not be declared invalid because of the possibility that under these sections innocent customers might be penalized, as the provisions defining a bucket shop, and prohibiting the keeper of it from making bucketing contracts, are entirely separable from, and not dependent upon, the provisions relating to the other party to such contract. Id.

4. Prosecutions

Prosecutions under this section should be in the name of the United States. United States v. Cella (37 App. D.C. 423, certiorari denied 32 S. Ct. 526, 223 U.S. 728, 56 L. Ed. 633).

§ 22-1510. Penalty for bucketing or keeping bucket-shop.

Any person who makes or offers to make any contract defined in section 22-1509, or who is the keeper of any bucket-shop, shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars or by imprisonment for not more than one year. Any person who shall be convicted of a second offense shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than five years. The continuing of the keeping of a bucket-shop by any person after the first conviction therefor shall be deemed a second offense under sections 22-1509 to 22-1512. If a domestic corporation shall be convicted of a second offense, the United States District Court for the District of Columbia shall have jurisdiction, upon an information in equity in the name of the United States attorney for the District of Columbia, on the relation of the commissioners of the District of Columbia, to dissolve the corporation; and if a foreign corporation shall be convicted of a second offense, the United States District Court for the District of Columbia shall have jurisdiction, in the same manner, to restrain the corporation from doing business in the District of Columbia. (Mar. 3, 1901, ch. 854, § 869b, as added Mar. 1, 1909, 35 Stat.

671, ch. 233, and amended June 25, 1936, 49 Stat. 1921, ch. 804; June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 909, 991, ch. 646, §§ 1, 32(b); May 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 107, ch. 139, § 127.)

CHANGE OF NAME

Act June 25, 1948, § 32(b), eff. Sept. 1, 1948, as amended by act May 24, 1949, substituted "United States District Court for the District of Columbia" for "District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia."

Act June 25, 1948, § 1, eff. Sept. 1, 1948, substituted "United States attorney" for "United States district attorney." See U.S. Code, title 28, § 501.

Act June 25, 1936, substituted "District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia" for "Supreme Court of the District of Columbia."

Any person who shall communicate, receive, exhibit, or display in any manner any statement of quotations of prices of any securities or commodities with an intent to make, or offer to make, or to aid in making, or offering to make any contract prohibited by sections 22-1509 to 22-1512, upon conviction thereof shall be subject to the penalties provided in section 22-1510. (Mar. 3, 1901, ch. 854, § 869c, as added Mar. 1, 1909, 35 Stat. 671, ch. 233.)

Every person shall furnish, upon demand, to any customer or principal for whom such person has executed any order for the actual purchase or sale of any securities or commodities, either for immediate or future delivery, a written statement, containing the names of the persons from whom such property was bought or to whom it has been sold, as the fact may be, the time when, place where, and the price at which the same was either bought or sold; and if such person shall refuse or neglect to furnish such statement within twenty-four hours after such demand such refusal or neglect shall be prima facie evidence that such purchase or sale was bucketing or bucket-shopping within the terms of sections 22-1509 to 22-1512. (Mar. 3, 1901, ch. 854, § 869d, as added Mar. 1, 1909, 35 Stat. 671, ch. 233.)

(a) It shall be unlawful to pay or give, or to agree to pay or give, or to promise or offer, any valuable thing to any individual—

(1) with intent to influence such individual to lose or cause to be lost, or to attempt to lose or cause to be lost, or to limit or attempt to limit his or his team's margin of victory or score in, any professional or amateur athletic contest in which such individual is or may be a contestant or participant; or

(2) with intent to influence such individual, in the case of any professional or amateur athletic contest in connection with which such individual (as a manager, coach, owner, second, jockey, trainer, handler, groom, or otherwise) has or will have any duty or responsibility with respect to a contestant, participant, or team who or which is engaging or may engage therein, to cause or attempt to cause (A) the loss of such athletic contest by such contestant, participant, or team;

or (B) the margin of victory or score of such contestant, participant, or team to be limited; or

(3) with intent to influence such individual, in the case of any professional or amateur athletic contest in connection with which such individual is to be or may be a referee, judge, umpire, linesman, starter, timekeeper, or other similar official, to cause or attempt to cause (A) the loss of such athletic contest by any contestant, participant, or team who or which is engaging or may engage therein; or (B) the margin of victory or score of any such contest, participant, or team to be limited.

(b) It shall be unlawful for any individual to solicit or accept, or to agree to accept, any valuable thing or a promise or offer of any valuable thing—

(1) to influence such individual to lose or cause to be lost, or to attempt to lose or cause to be lost, or to limit or attempt to limit his or his team's margin of victory or score in, any professional or amateur athletic contest in which such individual is or may be a contestant or participant; or

(2) to influence such individual, in the case of any professional or amateur athletic contest in connection with which such individual (as a manager, coach, owner, second, jockey, trainer, handler, groom, or otherwise) has or will have any duty or responsibility with respect to a contestant, participant, or team who or which is engaging or may engage therein, to cause or attempt to cause (A) the loss of such athletic contest by such contestant, participant, or team; or (B) the margin of victory or score of such contestant, participant, or team to be limited; or

(3) to influence such individual, in the case of any professional or amateur athletic contest in connection with which such individual is to be or may be a referee, judge, umpire, linesman, starter, timekeeper, or other similar official, to cause or attempt to cause (A) the loss of such athletic contest by any contestant, participant, or team who or which is engaging or may engage therein; or (B) the margin of victory or score of any such contestant, participant, or team to be limited.

(c) Whoever violates any provision of subsection (a) of this section shall be guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than five years and by a fine of not more than $10,000.

(d) Whoever violates any provision of subsection (b) of this section shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by imprisonment for not more than one year and by a fine of not more than $5,000.

(e) As used in this section, the term "athletic contest" means any of the following, wherever held or to be held: A football, baseball, softball, basketball, hockey, or polo game, or a tennis or wrestling match, or a prize fight or boxing match, or a horse race or any other athletic or sporting event or contest. (Mar. 3, 1901, ch. 854, § 869e, as added July 11, 1947, 61 Stat. 313, ch. 230.)

(a) Whenever, in the judgment of the United States attorney for the District of Columbia, the testimony of any witness, or the production of books, papers, or other records or documents, by any witness, in any case or proceeding involving a violation of this chapter before any grand jury or a court in the District of Columbia, is necessary in the public interest, such witness shall not be excused from testifying or from producing books, papers, and other records and documents on the grounds that the testimony or evidence, documentary or otherwise, required of him may tend to incriminate him, or subject him to penalty or forfeiture; but such witness shall not be prosecuted or subject to any penalty or forfeiture for or on account of any transaction, matter, or thing concerning which he is compelled, after having claimed his privilege against self-incrimination, to testify or produce evidence, documentary or otherwise; except that such witness so testifying shall not be exempt from prosecution and punishment for perjury or contempt committed in so testifying.

(b) The judgment of the United States attorney for the District of Columbia that any testimony, or the production of any books, papers, or other records or documents, is necessary in the public interest shall be confirmed in a written communication over the signature of the United States attorney for the District of Columbia, addressed to the grand jury or the court in the District of Columbia concerned, and shall be made a part of the record of the case or proceeding in which such testimony or evidence is given. (Mar. 3, 1901, ch. 854, § 869f, as added June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 96, ch. 159, § 206(d).)

(a) Whoever is found in the District in a gambling establishment or an establishment where intoxicating liquor is sold without a license or any narcotic drug is sold, administered, or dispensed without a license shall, if he knew that it was such an establishment and if he is unable to give a good account of his presence in the establishment, be imprisoned for not more than one year or fined not more than $500, or both.

(b) Whoever is employed in a gambling establishment in the District or an establishment in the District where intoxicating liquor is sold without a license or where any narcotic drug is sold, administered, or dispensed without a license, knowing that it is such an establishment, shall be imprisoned for not more than one year or fined not more than $500, or both. (June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 97, ch. 159, § 208.)

§ 22-1701. Harbor regulations—Authority vested in Commissioners to make—Federal approval if affecting navigable waters—Parks and waterfront—Penalty.

Every vessel coming to anchor in the Potomac River between the junction of the Washington and Georgetown Channels of said river and the extension of the south line of P Street southwest, in the city of Washington, shall anchor as near the flats in said river as possible, so that the channel of said river will not be obstructed; and if such vessel is to remain over twelve hours it shall be moored with both anchors, so as to give room for passing vessels and so as not to swing and obstruct said channel. Every vessel coming to anchor in any other portion of the navigable waters in the District of Columbia shall also be so moored under the direction of the harbor master, or the pilot of the police boat acting in the harbor master's absence, as not to obstruct the channel, and be secured with an anchor at bow and stern as to keep the long axis of the vessel parallel with that of the channel and prevent it from swinging so as to obstruct the free passage of the channel by other vessels.

No vessel shall be permitted to anchor in the Washington Channel of the Potomac River between a point one thousand feet south of the south line of P Street and the north line of K Street south extended, each point to be designated by a white buoy; and all vessels coming to anchor above the north line of K Street south aforesaid shall come to anchor as near the flats as possible and so that the channel will not be obstructed; and all vessels coming to anchor shall be so moored by the use of both anchors as to prevent obstruction of the channel within four hundred feet of the nearest wharf, the said anchorage to continue only twenty-four hours unless otherwise ordered or directed by the harbor master.

The captain or owner of any sunken vessel or other structure in any dock or at the end of any wharf in the District of Columbia, shall raise and remove the same in five days. Any vessel at the end of wharves or in docks shall, when required by the harbor master, haul either way to accommodate vessels going in or coming out from such wharves or docks. They shall not occupy regular steamers' or sailing packets' berths without permission from the recognized occupants of such wharves and dock, and they are required to rig in all fore-and-aft spars, have boats hoisted up under the bow, and davits turned up, as the harbor master may direct. Vessels when not engaged in loading or discharging cargo shall give place to such vessels as are ready to receive or deliver freights; and if the captain or person in charge of any vessel refuse to move said vessel when notified by the occupant of the wharf at which she is lying, the harbor master shall order him to haul to some other berth or into the stream. The powers and authority herein conferred upon the harbor master may, in his absence or temporary disability, be exercised by the pilot of the harbor police boat. Any person refusing to obey the instructions of the harbor master, or, in case of his absence or temporary disability, the said pilot of the harbor police boat, or any person failing to comply with any of the provisions of this section, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars or by imprisonment not exceeding six months, or both.

The commissioners of the District of Columbia are hereby vested with authority to make harbor regulations for the entire water-front of the city within the District of Columbia, to alter and amend the same from time to time as they may find necessary: Provided, That whenever these regulations affect navigable waters, channels, and anchorage areas or other interests of the United States, such regulations shall be subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Army: And provided further, That whenever said regulations affect the water-front within the District of Columbia under the jurisdiction of the Director of the National Park Service, or affect the interests and rights of the National Capital Planning Commission, such regulations shall be subject to prior approval of the respective agencies. Any captain or owner of or any one in charge of any barge, sand scow, or any vessel that may sink in said canals shall raise and remove the same in five days." were omitted from the Code as obsolete.

1. Argument of counsel

In prosecution for housebreaking, fact that prosecutor remarked to jury, in his summation, about defendant's failure to call certain witnesses, did not mean that trial court was required to instruct jury that it was not the duty of defendant to make any defense, and trial court did not err in refusing such a requested instruction. Lawson v. United States (1957, 248 F. 2d 654, 101 U. S. App. D. C. 332, certiorari denied 78 S. Ct. 552, 355 U. S. 963, 2 L. Ed. 2d 537).

2. Arrest and search

Police officers, who suspected defendant of having broken into and robbed drugstore, were entitled to ring defendant's doorbell and inquire concerning his whereabouts, and their observation, while awaiting admittance to defendant's house, of bottles and cigarettes, which apparently had been stolen from drugstore and which were lying in vicinity of porch, did not constitute a "search". Ellison v. United States (1953, 206 F. 2d 476, 93 U. S. App. D. C. 1).

3. — Arrest without warrant

Officers, who were investigating drugstore robbery, who knew that defendant had committed similar robbery two years before, and who discovered, on defendant's premises, heap of bottles and cigarettes, which were of type stolen from drugstore, had probable cause to believe defendant was guilty of felony, and, therefore, were justified in arresting defendant without warrant. Ellison v. United States (1953, 206 F. 2d 476, 93 U. S. App. D. C. 1).

The entering of a building with intent to commit any offense is a felony, and where officer's information gave him probable cause to believe that defendant had entered building with intent to steal, and defendant's appearance fitted "lookout" description given officer, no warrant was needed and arrest of defendant was lawful; and fact that district attorney saw fit to reduce charge from housebreaking to petit larceny did not change circumstances of arrest or invalidate confession obtained while defendant being held under such arrest. Scott v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1959, 147 A. 2d 767).

4. — Search without warrant

Where police officer, who saw defendant walking along street about 2:00 in the morning, and who thought defendant had narcotics, without a warrant stopped defendant, who admitted that he had not worked for over a year, and had maintained himself by gambling, and officer then informed defendant that he was arresting him for vagrancy and required him to disrobe, search, which led to discovery of stolen money orders, was an unreasonable and unlawful violation of defendant's rights as a citizen, rendering stolen money orders inadmissible in prosecution for forgery, housebreaking, grand larceny, and interstate transportation of falsely made securities. White, etc. v. United States (1959, 271 F. 2d 829, 106 U. S. App. D. C. 246).

Where defendant was arrested late at night without a warrant and booked on an open charge for investigation, statements of defendant while in jail that he had nothing to hide and that the officers could go and see for themselves did not establish an agreement that the officers could search the defendant's household without first procuring a warrant. Judd v. United States (1951, 190 F. 2d 649, 89 U. S. App. D. C. 64).

5. Evidence—Admissibility

In prosecution for housebreaking and larceny, United States District Court, under the circumstances, did not abuse its discretion in admitting evidence of defendant's participation in another alleged crime of similar character committed the same evening. Adams v. United States (1956, 239 F. 2d 451, 99 U. S. App. D. C. 288).

Housebreaking, robbery and burglary are merely aggravated forms of larceny and evidence competent in one case is competent, also, in the others. Edwards v. U.S. (1944, 139 F. 2d 365, 78 U. S. App. D. C. 226, certiorari denied 64 St. Ct. 523, 321 U. S. 769, 88 L. Ed. 1064).

Where written confession of housebreaking and larceny was inadmissible because result of illegal detention and lengthy questioning of accused, subsequent oral admissions of accused, while still in custody immediately following first confession, and while demonstrating how premises were entered, were likewise inadmissible. Akow-skey v. U.S. (1947, 158 F. 2d 649, 81 U. S. App. D. C. 353).

6. — Sufficiency

In prosecution for housebreaking and larceny, evidence regarding identification of defendant made a case for the jury. Williams v. United States (C.A. D.C. 1960, 282 F. 2d 867).

Evidence was sufficient to sustain convictions for housebreaking, larceny and destroying movable property. Braddy v. United States of America (1955, 225 F. 2d 551, 96 U. S. App. D. C. 251).

In prosecution for housebreaking and larceny, evidence was sufficient to establish corporate character of occupant of property entered and owner of property stolen. Bord v. U.S. (1943, 133 F. 2d 313, 76 U. S. App. D. C. 205, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 77, 78, 317 U. S. 671, 87 L. Ed. 539).

In prosecution for housebreaking and larceny, evidence was sufficient to sustain determination that defendant was one of men who entered building and committed larceny. Id.

Where jury could find beyond a reasonable doubt that both defendant and his companion entered a room with intent to steal and that either defendant or his companion stole watch, defendant's conviction of larceny of a watch and of entering a room with intent to commit larceny was authorized, notwithstanding that defendant's part in the crimes may have been only to stand guard. Fretz v. U.S. (1944, 140 F. 2d 468, 78 U. S. App. D. C. 290).

Where evidence showed that crimes of housebreaking and larceny were committed in store building by two men, defendant was found in unexplained association with another who later confessed participation in crimes and each was in possession of some of the stolen property, evidence was sufficient to justify conviction. Edwards v. U.S. (1944, 139 F. 2d 365, 78 U. S. App. D. C. 226, certiorari denied 64 S. Ct. 523, 321 U. S. 769, 88 L. Ed. 1064).

Evidence sustained a conviction for housebreaking. Henderson v. United States (1949, 172 F. 2d 289, 84 U. S. App. D. C. 295).

7. — Witnesses

In prosecution for housebreaking and larceny, record supported Government's theory that, while witness had made conflicting statements regarding whether he would testify, prosecutor reasonably believed that he would testify, and therefore action of prosecutor in calling witness who identified certain tools, but then relied on his privilege and refused to connect himself or defendant with the crime, was not objectionable on ground that defendant was deprived of a fair trial, where court instructed the jury to disregard witness' testimony and the tools which he identified. Bord v. U.S. (1943, 133 F. 2d 313, 76 U. S. App. D. C. 205, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 77, 78, 317 U.S. 671, 87 L. Ed. 539).

8. Indictment

There is no variance where the indictment alleges that building entered was occupied by A and the proof shows occupancy by B, with the consent of A. Cady v. United States (1924, 293 F. 829, 54 App. D.C. 10).

The attempt to identify particular room in indictment charging larceny of watch and entering a room with intent to commit larceny was harmless surplusage. Fretz v. U.S. (1944, 140 F. 2d 468, 78 U.S. App. D.C. 290).

The purpose of the law in requiring the name of the person who occupied and used building entered to be stated in indictment is to negative the defendant's right to break and enter and to protect him from a second prosecution for the same offense. Bord v. U.S. (1943, 133 F. 2d 213, 76 U. S. App. D. C. 205, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 77, 78, 317 U.S. 671, 87 L. Ed. 539).

9. Instructions

In prosecution for housebreaking and grand larceny, trial court committed no reversible error in charging that if defendant's possession of recently stolen property was not accounted for in that satisfactory, straightforward and truthful way that would stamp it as an honest accounting, then such possession would be a foundation for a presumption of guilt against the possessor, even though trial court could have chosen more exact language in its attempt to express limited character of presumption to which it was referring. Wright v. United States (1951, 189 F. 2d 699, 89 U. S. App. D. C. 70).

In prosecution for housebreaking and larceny, where after jury had been out several hours the court recalled jury and stated that a juror should ask himself whether his view is reasonable or unreasonable, that he should not be bullheaded, that he should not be stubborn, and that if he found himself in a small minority he should ask himself "would I be shocking my conscience or reason if I yielded", use of the words "bullheaded" and "stubborn" did not coerce the jury, in view of additional parts of the instruction. Bord v. U.S. (1943, 133 F. 2d 313, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 205, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 77, 78, 317 U.S. 671, 87 L. Ed. 539).

10. Intent

Unlawful entry with intent to commit an offense constitutes the crime, hence, the actual commission of the other offense is not necessary. Lee v. United States (37 App. D. C. 442).

Evidence, that lock on garage had been pulled, that defendants were in the garage that morning and when questioned by a witness at that time refused to make a response and drove away, was sufficient to sustain conviction of feloniously entering with intent to commit larceny. Cady v. United States (1924, 293 F. 829, 54 App. D.C. 10).

11. Joinder

Counts of housebreaking and of larceny committed after the entry may be joined, and the court does not err in refusing to require the government to elect between them. Lee v. United States (37 App. D. C. 442).

12. Plea of guilty

In prosecution for housebreaking, larceny and destruction of property, wherein one defendant was permitted to change his plea in open court and in presence of jury and was asked by trial judge whether he admitted committing offense and replied that he did admit being with "them," there was error which, in view of circumstantial and inconclusive nature of evidence, would require reversal of another defendant's conviction.

Gaynor v. United States (1957, 247 F. 2d 583, 101 U. S. App. D. C. 177).

Where evidence in prosecution for housebreaking and grand larceny disclosed close association between defendant and codefendant in events leading to their arrests, receiving codefendant's plea of guilty in presence of jury, and calling attention to such plea during taking of evidence and while instructing jury, was prejudicial to defendant's right to be tried solely on evidence against him. Payton v. United States (1955, 222 F. 2d 794, 96 U. S. App. D. C. 1).

Upon defendant's motion to withdraw his plea of guilty and to vacate and set aside sentence imposed upon him, court would treat defendant's papers as motion pursuant to statute pertaining to remedies on motion attacking sentence with reference to sentence being served and as application for relief in nature of common-law writ of error coram nobis with reference to sentences not then being served. United States v. Sheffield (1959, 179 F. Supp. 634, certiorari denied 80 S. Ct. 1633, 363 U.S. 853, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1735).

In proceeding treated as motion attacking sentence being served and as application for relief in nature of common-law writ of error coram nobis with regard to sentences not being served, evidence established that defendant was mentally competent at time of his plea of guilty and sentencing and that he had voluntarily and understandingly entered his plea. Id.

13. Review

Record in prosecution for housebreaking and larceny established that defendant received effective assistance of counsel, though defendant's counsel failed to seek to impeach complaining witness by use of police investigation report containing statements attributed to complaining witness. Williams v. United States (C.A. D.C. 1960, 282 F. 2d 867).

Where, in prosecution for housebreaking, no trial objection was made to certain evidence, Court of Appeals was not required to decide question of its admissibility, and in view of character of the evidence, would not do so in its discretion. Lawson v. United States (1957, 248 F. 2d 654, 101 U. S. App. D. C. 332, certiorari denied 78 S. Ct. 552, 355 U. S. 963, 2 L. Ed. 2d 537).

In prosecution for robbery and housebreaking where the Court of Appeals found no error affecting the substantial rights of the defendant, the judgment would be affirmed. Baker Jr. v. United States (1956, 234 F. 2d 685, 98 U. S. App. D. C. 250, certiorari denied 77 S. Ct. 136, 352 U. S. 901, 1 L. Ed. 2d 89, certiorari denied 78 S. Ct. 98, 355 U. S. 864, 2 L. Ed. 2d 70, rehearing denied 78 S. Ct. 152, 355 U. S. 886, 2 L. Ed. 2d 116, certiorari denied 79 S. Ct. 1145, 359 U. S. 1005, 3 L. Ed. 2d 1033, rehearing denied 80 S. Ct. 48, 361 U. S. 857, 4 L. Ed. 2d 97, certiorari denied 80 S. Ct. 1071, 362 U. S. 983, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1017, rehearing denied 80 S. Ct. 1603, 363 U. S. 832, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1526).

Where general sentence imposed upon accused, who was charged under two count indictment with housebreaking and larceny, was within the maximum sentence permitted for housebreaking, reviewing court could affirm the judgment without considering alleged errors concerning conviction for larceny. Nelms v. United States (1954, 215 F. 2d 678, 94 U. S. App. D. C. 267).

14. — Remand

Where defendant was convicted under first count of unlawful entry and his conviction under second count of possession of implements of crime consisting of crowbars was under statute which is unconstitutional in its application to crowbars, case was remanded with directions either to modify judgment by setting aside verdict on second count and dismissing that count or in the alternative to vacate judgment entirely, set aside verdict on second count, dismiss that count and resentence defendant for unlawful entry, notwithstanding that general sentence was for period less than maximum for unlawful entry. Willis C. Washington v. United States (1956, 232 F. 2d 357, 98 U.S. App. D.C. 100).

15. Sentence

Under the Indeterminate Sentence Act the trial court could impose a term of imprisonment of 15 years, or less, as a maximum, i.e., not more than one-fifth of the 15 years. Anderson v. Rives (1936, 85 F. 2d 673, 66 App. D. C. 228, 45 A.L.R. 2d 1430).

16. Waiver of lunacy hearing

In prosecution for housebreaking, trial court's acceptance of waiver of pretrial lunacy hearing from defendant who stated he needed hospitalization and whose testimony showed confusion was error notwithstanding certification from acting superintendent of mental hospital that defendant was mentally competent to stand trial. Durham v. United States (1954, 214 F. 2d 862, 94 U. S. App. D. C. 228, 45 A. L. R. 2d 1430).

Chapter 19.—INCEST

Sec.

22-1901. Definition and penalty.

If any person in the District related to another person within and not including the fourth degree of consanguinity, computed according to the rules of the Roman or civil law, shall marry or cohabit with or have sexual intercourse with such other so-related person, knowing him or her to be within said degree of relationship, the person so offending shall be deemed guilty of incest, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than twelve years. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1332, ch. 854, § 875.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Habeas corpus 1
Instructions 2

1. Habeas corpus

Where accused was found not guilty by reason of insanity and was committed to hospital and some two months thereafter accused petitioned for writ of habeas corpus without prepayment of costs and District Court denied such petition without a hearing and without stating reasons for denial, case would be remanded and District Court, if it rejected allegation of poverty, would be required to state basis for such rejection, and if leave to file without costs was permitted or if accused should pay necessary filing fees, hospital superintendent would be directed to report as to accused's condition, and upon the return the District Court should conduct hearing to determine whether accused had recovered sanity and would not be dangerous to himself or others in reasonable future. Tate, Sr. v. United States (1960, 275 F. 2d 894, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 230).

2. Instructions

In prosecution for incest, refusal to give a prayer requested by defendant concerning reputation was not error where the subject had been adequately covered in an instruction given. Hodge v. U.S. (1942, 126 F. 2d 849, 75 U.S. App. D.C. 332).

3. View of premises

In prosecution for incest, refusal to grant defendant's motion for view of premises was not an abuse of discretion. Hodge v. U.S. (1942, 126 F. 2d 849, 75 U.S. App. D. C. 332).

Chapter 20.—INDECENT PUBLICATIONS

Sec.

22-2001. Definition and penalty.

Whoever sells, or offers to sell, or give away, in the District, or has in his possession with intent to sell or give away or to exhibit to another, any obscene, lewd, or indecent book, pamphlet, drawing, engraving, picture, photograph, instrument, or article of indecent or immoral use, or advertises the same for sale, or writes or prints any letter, circular, handbill, book, pamphlet, or notice of any kind stating by what means any of such articles may be obtained, or advertises any drug, nostrum, or instrument intended to produce abortion, or gives or participates in, or by bill, poster, or otherwise advertises, any public exhibition, show, performance, or play containing obscene, indecent, or lascivious language, postures, or suggestions, or otherwise offending public decency, shall be fined not less than fifty dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, or imprisoned not more than one year, or both. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1332, ch. 854, § 872.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Arrest, search and seizure 1
Constitutionality 2
Guilty knowledge 3
Intent 4
Sentence 5
Sufficiency of evidence 6

1. Arrest, search and seizure

Affidavit, which revealed that informer, who had learned that pornographic material was being sold, saw third party pass through entrance which might have led to two stores and possibly to apartments above, and that third party returned with pornographic material purchased for informer, affidavit was not sufficient to show probable cause for issuance of search warrant, and resulting search of one of the stores was illegal, and the evidence procured should have been suppressed in subsequent prosecution of store operator for possessing, with intent to sell, lewd and obscene photographs, films, and literature. Lerner and Lerner v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1959, 151 A.2d 184).

2. Constitutionality

No merit exists in defendant's contention that the statute, as construed and interpreted by the trial court, countervenes the first and fifth amendments. Benjamin v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1950, 74 A. 2d 64).

3. Guilty knowledge

Guilty knowledge must be alleged and proved. Moens v. United States (1920, 267 F. 317, 50 App. D.C. 15).

4. Intent

"If the indictment had charged knowledge of the character of the pictures in the possession of the accused, the criminal intent in exhibiting them would be implied from the guilty knowledge of their nature." Moens v. United States (1920, 267 F. 317, 50 App. D.C. 15).

5. Sentence

Where defendant, who had been sentenced by Municipal Court for District of Columbia to one year and a fine of $300, and in default of payment to be imprisoned for an additional year, for possessing and selling obscene literature and pictures, contended only that sentence imposed in default of payment of the fine was too severe, Municipal Court of Appeals could not reduce sentence in absence of showing of abuse of discretion on part of lower court. Hankins v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1956, 120 A. 2d 590).

Statutes providing that defendant upon whom fine has been imposed may, in default of payment, be committed for such term as court thinks proper not to exceed one year, gives broad discretion in imposing imprisonment in default of payment of fine. Id.

6. Sufficiency of evidence

Evidence sustained conviction of female dancers for participating in obscene, indecent and lascivious performances. Clarke et al. v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1960, 160 A. 2d 97).

Without attempting to describe the pictures, court was of opinion that they were of such a nature as to sustain a finding of guilty by any recognized standard. Benjamin v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1950, 74 A. 2d 64).

Chapter 21.—KIDNAPING

Sec.

22-2101. Definition.

Whoever shall be guilty of, or of aiding or abetting in, seizing, confining, inveigling, enticing, decoying, kidnaping, abducting, concealing, or carrying away any individual by any means whatsoever, and holding or detaining, or with the intent to hold or detain, such individual for ransom or reward, shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by imprisonment for life or for such term as the court in its discretion may determine. This section shall be held to have been violated if either the seizing, confining, inveigling, enticing, decoying, kidnaping, abducting, concealing, carrying away, holding, or detaining occurs in the District of Columbia. If two or more individuals enter into any agreement or conspiracy to do any act or acts which would constitute a violation of the provisions of this section, and one or more of such individuals do any act to effect the object of such agreement or conspiracy, each such individual shall be deemed to have violated the provisions of this section. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1322, ch. 854, § 812; Feb. 18, 1933, 47 Stat. 858, ch. 103.)

AMENDMENT

1933—Act Feb. 18, 1933, amended the provisions to read as set forth in the text. Prior to the amendment the section read: "Whoever unlawfully and forcibly or fraudulently carries off or decoys out of the District any person, or arrests or imprisons any person with the intention of having such person carried out of the District, shall be imprisoned for not less than one nor more than seven years, or fined not exceeding one thousand dollars, or both: Provided, That whoever leads, carries, or entices away a child under the age of sixteen years, with the intent unlawfully to detain or conceal such child so lead, taken, or enticed away, shall be imprisoned for not more than twenty years or fined not exceeding one thousand dollars, or both."

"In no case, in the absence of an express provision of statute, can a parent be guilty of kidnaping his or her own minor child, unless the forcible taking is from the custody established by the decree of a competent court." Hard v. Splain (45 App. D. C. 1).

1. Accomplice

In prosecution for the unauthorized use of a vehicle and larceny of other property in District of Columbia, evidence on issue of whether defendant had aided and abetted those who took the property and whether the planning and the taking were within the District sustained conviction, even though it was not shown that defendant was present at the taking or had used the automobile in the District. Williams v. United States (1954, 215 F. 2d 35, 94 U. S. App. D. C. 219).

2. Defense

In prosecution for grand larceny and for unauthorized use of a vehicle, wherein defense was interposed that defendant was repossessing automobile on request of man engaged in automobile business, testimony and argument of Government to effect that repossession of automobiles must be accomplished by a United States marshal and that repossession by an individual was illegal, which testimony and argument led jury to believe that defendant was engaged in an illegal enterprise in repossessing automobile, was prejudicial error, where jury was not instructed to disregard testimony or argument on this point, notwithstanding that jury was instructed that Government had to prove every element of crime, including intent, beyond reasonable doubt. Evans v. United States (1956, 232 F. 2d 379, 98 U. S. App. D. C. 122).

3. — Intoxication

One who steals while intoxicated may nevertheless be convicted if he converts the property after complete return to consciousness. Ryan v. United States (26 App. D. C. 74, 6 Ann. Cas. 633).

4. Embezzlement

To constitute larceny the property must be unlawfully taken from the possession of another, with the fraudulent intent to convert the same to his own use; he who takes without the consent of the owner commits a trespass; the offense of embezzlement consists in the wrongful conversion of the property which has been entrusted to the possession of another; he commits no trespass or wrong in acquiring the possession, but a breach of trust in converting the property to his own use. Rohde v. United States (34 App. D. C. 249).

Treasurer of unincorporated association who converts funds coming into his possession as such treasurer is guilty of embezzlement and not larceny. Id.

Embezzlement is where any agent, attorney, clerk, or servant wrongfully converts to his own use anything of value which shall come into his possession or under his care by virtue of his employment, but his possession for a special limited purpose may not destroy legal possession of the owner, and therefore his subsequent conversion of the article would be larceny. Talbert v. United States (42 App. D.C. 1, certiorari denied 34 S. Ct. 997, 234 U.S. 762, 58 L. Ed. 1581).

Driver of transfer truck who converts property while hauling it from a freight depot is guilty of larceny and not embezzlement. Weisberg v. United States (1919, 258 F. 284, 49 App. D.C. 28). See, also, Talbert v. United States (42 App. D.C. 1, certiorari denied 34 S. Ct. 997, 234 U.S. 762, 58 L. Ed. 1581).

A bookkeeper and clerk in a hotel, to whom a guest delivers property for safe-keeping, and who subsequently abstracts them from the hotel safe, is guilty of larceny and not embezzlement. Chanock v. United States (1920, 267 F. 612, 50 App. D.C. 54, 11 A.L.R. 799).

5. Evidence—Admissibility

Stolen guns, which were obtained by officers from defendant's apartment and automobile as result of unlawful search and seizure in violation of the Fourth Amendment to the Constitution, were inadmissible in grand larceny prosecution. Lee v. United States (1956, 232 F. 2d 354, 98 U. S. App. D. C. 97).

The corporate character of the owner or occupant of property stolen or entered may be proved by "reputation"; that is, by evidence tending to show that the corporation was de facto organized and acting as such. Bord v. United States (1943, 133 F. 2d 313, 76 U. S. App. D. C. 205, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 77, 78, 317 U. S. 671, 87 L. Ed. 539).

6. — Sufficiency

In prosecution for housebreaking and larceny, evidence regarding identification of defendant made a case for the jury. Williams v. United States (C.A. D.C. 1960, 282 F. 2d 867).

Evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction for housebreaking, larceny and destroying movable property. Braddy v. United States of America (1955, 225 F. 2d 551, 96 U. S. App. D. C. 251).

Evidence justified larceny conviction of an accused whose alleged confederate removed carton of spark plugs from store and placed carton in their automobile while accused was in store notwithstanding no property was marked for or offered in evidence at trial. Foster v. United States (1954, 212 F. 2d 249, 94 U. S. App. D. C. 83, certiorari denied 75 S. Ct. 69, 348 U. S. 845, 99 L. Ed. 666).

In prosecution for housebreaking and larceny, evidence was sufficient to establish corporate character of occupant of property entered and owner of property stolen. Bord v. U.S. (1943, 133 F. 2d 313, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 205, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 77, 78, 317 U.S. 671, 87 L. Ed. 539).

In prosecution for housebreaking and larceny, evidence was sufficient to sustain determination that defendant was one of men who entered building and committed larceny. Id.

In prosecution for housebreaking and larceny, record supported Government's theory that, while witness had made conflicting statements regarding whether he would testify, prosecutor reasonably believed that he would testify, and therefore action of prosecutor in calling witness who identified certain tools, but then relied on his privilege and refused to connect himself or defendant with the crime, was not objectionable on ground that defendant was deprived of a fair trial, where court instructed the jury to disregard witness' testimony and the tools which he identified. Id.

Evidence that another person had stolen bag containing surgical instruments and placed bag on wheelbarrow used by such person and defendant in collecting junk and stated to defendant that bag had been found among garbage cans and that when contents of bag were discovered defendant made unsuccessful effort to return bag and instruments to owner, and later delivered bag and contents to policeman, was insufficient to convict defendant of grand larceny. Williams v. U.S. (1944, 140 F. 2d 351, 78 U. S. App. D. C. 322).

7. Force and violence

Larceny consists in "a wrongful and fraudulent taking" and it does not exclude the idea of force and violence, or of fraud accompanied by force, nor does it imply that the taking must be secret. Williams v. United States (3 App. D. C. 335).

8. Fraud, larceny by

Where the victim was induced by artifice to part with possession of property but clearly did not intend to pass title, subsequent conversion by the swindlers completed the crime of larceny by trick. Ballard v. United States (1956, 237 F. 2d 582, 99 U. S. App. D. C. 101, certiorari denied 77 S. Ct. 574, 352 U. S. 1017, 1 L. Ed. 2d 554).

Under the statute making it a crime to feloniously take and carry away anything of the value of $50 or upwards, one who obtains money from another upon representation that he will perform certain services therewith for the latter intending at the time to convert the money and actually converting it to his own use is guilty of larceny. Graham v. United States (1951, 187 F. 2d 87, 88 U. S. App. D. C. 129, certiorari denied 71 S. Ct. 741, 341 U. S. 920, 95 L. Ed. 1353).

9. Habeas corpus

Where petitioners were arrested in Pennsylvania, charged with committing certain crimes in the District of Columbia, habeas corpus proceedings would be proper to raise jurisdictional questions respecting their removal to the District. U.S. ex rel, Miller et al. v. Reing (D.C. Pa. 1949, 81 F. Supp. 367).

10. Indictment

It is sufficient in the indictment to describe the property by the generic name of the class to which it belongs. Nordlinger v. United States (24 App. D. C. 406, 70 L. R. A. 227).

11. Inferences

Where theater was entered and money and property stolen therefrom and on same night adjoining flower shop was entered and money stolen therefrom, it could reasonably be inferred that the man who stole from the theater also stole from the flower shop. Bord v. U.S. (1943, 133 F. 2d 313, 76 U. S. App. D. C. 205, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 77, 78, 317 U.S. 671, 87 L. Ed. 539).

Where evidence showed that crimes of housebreaking and larceny were committed in store building by two men, defendant was found in unexplained association with another who later confessed participation in crimes and each was in possession of some of the stolen property, evidence was sufficient to justify conviction. Edwards v. U.S. (1944, 139 F. 2d 365, 78 U.S. App. D.C. 226, certiorari denied 64 S. Ct. 523, 321 U. S. 769, 88 L. Ed. 1064).

12. Instructions

In prosecution for grand larceny, where judge instructed jury that the testimony of an accomplice should be received with care and scrutinized with caution, there was no error in refusing to charge that conviction could not rest on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice. Ballard v. United States (1956, 237 F. 2d 582, 99 U. S. App. D. C. 101, certiorari denied 77 S. Ct. 574, 352 U. S. 1017, 1 L. Ed. 2d 554).

In prosecution on count charging impersonation of officer and count charging grand larceny, error, if any, in charge instructing that jury could convict on second count even if they acquitted on first was harmless in view of fact that jury found defendant guilty of both offenses. Wheeler v. United States (1951, 190 F. 2d 663, 89 U. S. App. D. C. 143).

In prosecution for grand larceny, court's charge as a whole relating to larceny was an adequate statement of law applicable to the evidence and was fair to defendant. Graham v. United States (1951, 187 F. 2d 87, 88 U. S. App. D. C. 129, certiorari denied 71 S. Ct. 741, 341 U. S. 920, 95 L. Ed. 1353).

In prosecution for grand larceny, defendant's general request, made prior to rendition of charge, that court charge that if prosecuting witness gave defendant money intending that he may be able to pass title to it, there was no larceny, was an incorrect statement of law. Id.

In prosecution for housebreaking and larceny, where after jury had been out several hours the court recalled jury and stated that a juror should ask himself whether his view is reasonable or unreasonable, that he should not be bullheaded, that he should not be stubborn, and that if he found himself in a small minority he should ask himself "would I be shocking my conscience or reason if I yielded", use of the words "bullheaded" and "stubborn," did not coerce the jury, in view of additional parts of the instruction. Bord v. U.S. (1943, 133 F. 2d 313, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 205, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 77, 78, 317 U.S. 671, 87 L. Ed. 539).

Where defendant was charged with entering and stealing from theater and with entering and stealing from adjoining flower shop on same night, instruction that, if jury found defendant guilty of entering and stealing from theater, they might but need not draw the inference that it was he who entered and stole from the flower shop, was proper. Id.

13. Intent

Unlawful taking is not sufficient, it must be coupled with the intent to steal. Ryan v. United States (26 App. D. C. 74, 6 Ann. Cas. 633).

Drunkenness no defense unless "so drunk as to be incapable of forming the intent to steal; that is to say, incapable of consciousness that he is committing a crime. Incapable of discriminating between right and wrong." Id.

Where possession is secured by fraud, trick, or artifice the criminal intent must exist at the time the article is received. Talbert v. United States (42 App. D.C. 1, certiorari denied 34 S. Ct. 997, 234 U.S. 762, 58 L. Ed. 1581). See, also, Woodward v. United States (38 App. D.C. 323); Miller v. United States (41 App. D.C. 52, certiorari denied 34 S. Ct. 323, 231 U.S. 755, 58 L. Ed. 468).

Where possession of jewelry is secured by a salesman for the purpose of exhibiting the same to a prospective purchaser, and he subsequently converts it to his own use, the offense is larceny, and it is immaterial when the intent to convert was formed. Talbert v. United States (42 App. D.C. 1, certiorari denied 34 S. Ct. 997, 234 U.S. 762, 58 L. Ed. 1581).

14. Joinder

Counts of housebreaking and of larceny committed after the entry may be joined, and the court does not err in refusing to require the government to elect between them. Lee v. United States (37 App. D. C. 442).

15. Liability of arresting officer

Arrest of one without warrant on strong suspicion of stealing a pocketbook containing $30, precluded maintenance of action for false arrest, since the officers could not know the amount of money it contained. Maghan v. Jerome (1937, 88 F. 2d 1001, 67 App. D.C. 9).

16. Locus of conversion

The fact that one who, while intoxicated, stole an automobile and converted the same beyond the District of Columbia does not prevent a prosecution here, when the original taking was in the District. Ryan v. United States (26 App. D. C. 74, 6 Ann. Cas. 633).

Indictment for larceny will not lie against one who steals property in another state and brings it into the District. Brown v. United States (35 App. D. C. 548, Ann. Cas. 1912A, 388). See, also, Davis v. United States (18 App. D.C. 468).

17. Plea of guilty

In prosecution for housebreaking, larceny and destruction of property, wherein one defendant was permitted to change his plea in open court and in presence of jury and was asked by trial judge whether he admitted committing offense and replied that he did admit being with "them," there was error which, in view of circumstantial and inconclusive nature of evidence, would require reversal of another defendant's conviction. Gaynor v. United States (1957, 247 F. 2d 583, 101 U. S. App. D. C. 177).

Where evidence in prosecution for housebreaking and grand larceny disclosed close association between defendant and codefendant in events leading to their arrests, receiving codefendant's plea of guilty in presence of jury, and calling attention to such plea during taking of evidence and while instructing jury, was prejudicial to defendant's right to be tried solely on evidence against him. Leroy Payton v. United States (1955, 222 F. 2d 794, 96 U. S. App. D. C. 1).

18. Prior acquittal

On plea of prior acquittal, the test of the identity of offenses that has commonly been applied in such cases is whether the facts necessary to conviction under the second indictment would have been sufficient, if proved, to warrant a conviction under the first. Nordlinger v. United States (24 App. D. C. 406, 70 L. R. A. 227).

19. Questions for jury

Evidence, in prosecution for theft and unauthorized use of motor vehicle, that appellant and another defendant took truck with paint spray pump, both of which appellant knew were not owned by fellow defendant, and that they had traveled 175 miles on way to another state, and had arranged to sell or pledge the pump in exchange for gasoline, oil and whiskey, was sufficient, in absence of any explanation, to raise issue for jury on question of defendant's guilty knowledge and intent. Gilbert v. United States (1954, 215 F. 2d 334, 94 U. S. App. D. C. 321).

20. Review

Record on appeal from conviction for attempted grand larceny did not disclose material and prejudicial variance between indictment and conviction and proof, prejudicial error in precluding cross-examination concerning ownership of property, or application of erroneous concept of crime of attempted larceny by trick. Pearce v. United States (C.A. D.C. 1960, 286 F. 2d 532).

Record in prosecution for housebreaking and larceny established that defendant received effective assistance of counsel, though defendant's counsel failed to seek to impeach complaining witness by use of police investigation report containing statements attributed to complaining witness. Williams v. United States (C.A. D.C. 1960, 282 F. 2d 867).

In prosecution for robbery and housebreaking where the Court of Appeals found no error affecting the substantial rights of the defendant, the judgment would be affirmed. Baker Jr. v. United States (1956, 234 F. 2d 685, 98 U. S. App. D. C. 250, certiorari denied 77 S. Ct. 136, 352 U. S. 901, 1 L. Ed. 2d 89, certiorari denied 78 S. Ct. 98, 355 U. S. 864, 2 L. Ed. 2d 70, rehearing denied 78 S. Ct. 152, 355 U. S. 886, 2 L. Ed. 2d 116, certiorari denied 79 S. Ct. 1145, 359 U. S. 1005, 3 L. Ed. 2d 1033, rehearing denied 80 S. Ct. 48, 361 U. S. 857, 4 L. Ed. 2d 97, certiorari denied 80 S. Ct. 1071 362 U. S. 983, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1017, rehearing denied 80 S. Ct. 1603, 363 U. S. 832, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1526).

Where general sentence imposed upon accused, who was charged under two count indictment with housebreaking and larceny, was within the maximum sentence permitted for housebreaking, reviewing court could affirm the judgment without considering alleged errors concerning conviction for larceny. Nelms v. United States (1954, 215 F. 2d 678, 94 U. S. App. D. C. 267).

21. Search without warrant

Where police officer, who saw defendant walking along street about 2:00 in the morning, and who thought defendant had narcotics, without a warrant stopped defendant, who admitted that he had not worked for over a year, and had maintained himself by gambling, and officer then informed defendant that he was arresting him for vagrancy and required him to disrobe, search, which led to discovery of stolen money orders, was an unreasonable and unlawful violation of defendant's rights as a citizen, rendering stolen money orders inadmissible in prosecution for forgery, housebreaking, grand larceny, and interstate transportation of falsely made securities. White, etc. v. United States (1959, 271 F. 2d 829, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 246).

Where jewelry had been taken from scene of murder and officers were informed that a man was selling some jewelry on a street, they had right and duty to approach, confront and interrogate him though they had no warrant. Lee v. United States (1955, 221 F. 2d 29, 95 U. S. App. D. C. 156).

Where defendant was arrested late at night without a warrant and booked on an open charge for investigation, statements of defendant while in jail that he had nothing to hide and that the officers could go and see for themselves did not establish an agreement that the officers could search the defendant's household without first procuring a warrant. Judd v. United States (1951, 190 F. 2d 649, 89 U. S. App. D. C. 64).

22. Seizure defined

Where officers had right and duty to confront and interrogate suspect in investigation of murder, and suspect on alighting from automobile dropped handkerchief containing jewelry into street, action of officers in taking jewelry was not "seizure" in legal sense and same was competent evidence in larceny prosecution and trial court properly refused to suppress it as evidence. Lee v. United States (1955, 221 F. 2d 29, 95 U. S. App. D. C. 156).

23. Sentence

In prosecution for grand larceny and unauthorized use of a vehicle, imposition of sentences on defendant of from two to five years on the unauthorized use count and from two to seven years on the grand larceny count, was proper even though the two offenses grew out of the same set of facts and circumstances and offense of unauthorized use was included in that of grand larceny, where sentences were imposed to run concurrently. Evans v. United States (1956, 232 F. 2d 379, 98 U. S. App. D. C. 122).

Where person having been sentenced for two to four years for grand larceny, served 25 months and was then resentenced to serve 15 months on grounds that the prior sentences were void because the Indeterminate Sentence Act did not apply to such actions, sentence did not run as of date of the original sentences. De Benque v. United States (1936, 85 F. 2d 202, 66 App. D.C. 36, 106 A.L.R. 839, certiorari denied 56 S. Ct. 960, 298 U.S. 681, 80 L. Ed. 1402, rehearing denied 57 S. Ct. 6, 299 U.S. 620, 81 L. Ed. 457).

24. Unexplained possession of stolen property

The unexplained exclusive possession of stolen property, shortly after the commission of larceny, does not raise presumption of law that defendant committed larceny, but it may satisfy jury and warrant verdict of guilty. Wright v. United States (1951, 189 F. 2d 699, 89 U. S. App. D. C. 70).

In prosecution for housebreaking and grand larceny, trial court committed no reversible error in charging that if defendant's possession of recently stolen property was not accounted for in that satisfactory, straightforward and truthful way that would stamp it as an honest accounting, then such possession would be a foundation for a presumption of guilt against the possessor, even though trial court could have chosen more exact language in its attempt to express limited character of presumption to which it was referring. Id.

"The unexplained exclusive possession of stolen property, shortly after the commission of a larceny, may satisfy the jury and warrant a verdict of guilty" of larceny. Tractenberg v. United States (1924, 293 F. 476, 53 App. D.C. 396).

Possession of recently stolen property, unexplained, is sufficient to support conviction for larceny. Edwards v. U.S. (1944, 139 F. 2d 365, 78 U.S. App. D.C. 226, certiorari denied 64 S. Ct. 523, 321 U. S. 769, 88 L. Ed. 1064).

25. Variance

Where indictment alleges ownership in A B R, and the proof shows A P R, the variance is not prejudicial. Jones v. United States (1923, 289 F. 536, 53 App. D.C. 138). See, also, Williams v. United States (3 App. D.C. 335).

27. — Directed verdict

Where court instructed jury that if it should find defendant guilty of embezzlement as to either transaction, it would have to return a verdict of not guilty as to the companion larceny count, but jury found defendant guilty of both embezzlement and larceny as to the same transaction, District Court had right to direct verdict of acquittal on larceny count, and defendant was not prejudiced by any alleged "choice of verdicts" since penalty for embezzlement was less than that for larceny. United States v. Daigle (1957, 149 F. Supp. 409, affirmed 101 U.S. App. D.C. 286, 248 F. 2d 608, certiorari denied 78 S. Ct. 344, 355 U.S. 913, 2 L. Ed. 2d 274.)

27. — Directed verdict

In grand larceny prosecution, court properly refused to direct verdict for the defendant. Graham v. United States (1951, 187 F. 2d 87, 88, U. S. App. D. C. 129, certiorari denied 71 S. Ct. 741, 341 U. S. 920, 95 L. Ed. 1353).

Whoever shall feloniously take and carry away any property of value of less than $100, including things savoring of the realty, shall be fined not more than $200 or be imprisoned for not more than one year, or both. And in all convictions for larceny, either grand or petit, the trial justice may, in his sound discretion, order restitution to be made of the value of the money or property shown to have been stolen by the defendant and made way with or otherwise disposed of and not recovered. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1324, ch. 854, § 827; June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 535, ch. 1329; Aug. 12, 1937, 50 Stat. 628, ch. 599; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 99, ch. 159, § 215(c).)

AMENDMENTS

1953—Act June 29, 1953, increased the value from $50 to $100.

1937—Act Aug. 12, 1937, increased the value from $35 to $50.

1902—Act June 30, 1902, added the second sentence.

1. Arrest without warrant

Officers, who were investigating drugstore robbery, who knew that defendant had committed similar robbery two years before, and who discovered, on defendant's premises, heap of bottles and cigarettes, which were of type stolen from drugstore, had probable cause to believe defendant was guilty of felony, and, therefore, were justified in arresting defendant without warrant. Ellison v. United States (1953, 206 F. 2d 476, 93 U. S. App. D. C. 1).

Stealing of less than $35 was a misdemeanor and an officer could not arrest for a misdemeanor without a warrant unless it was committed in his presence or within his view. Maghan v. Jerome (1937, 88 F. 2d 1001, 67 App. D.C. 9).

The entering of a building with intent to commit any offense is a felony, and where officer's information gave him probable cause to believe that defendant had entered building with intent to steal, and defendant's appearance fitted "lookout" description given officer, no warrant was needed and arrest of defendant was lawful; and fact that district attorney saw fit to reduce charge from housebreaking to petit larceny did not change circumstances of arrest or invalidate confession obtained while defendant was being held under such arrest. Scott, Jr. v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1959, 147 A. 2d 767).

2. Burden of proof

In prosecution for petit larceny, burden of proof to establish a taking and asportation by defendant is more onerous on the prosecution where the larceny alleged occurs in a self-service store. Groomes v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1959, 155 A. 2d 73).

3. Continuance

Where the trial court had said a doctor's certificate would be required before the case could be continued on account of appellant's illness, and appellant was produced in court, and the trial continued without further objection, the question of granting the continuance was in the judicial discretion of the trial court. Campbell v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1949, 65 A. 2d 191).

4. Conversion

One who is handed a bill or coin for the purpose of making change receives only custody of the money, and if he returns less than the correct change, with the felonious intent of converting the remainder to his own use, he is guilty of larceny. Rice v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1949, 64 A. 2d 567).

5. Evidence—Admissibility

Where items allegedly stolen from complaining witness were plainly visible from hallway through open door of defendant's apartment, and complaining witness gathered up articles claimed and handed them to arresting officer, who had remained in hallway, complaining witness acted as arm of police in reducing articles to possession, and inasmuch as officer did not have a search warrant, search and seizure were unlawful, evidence obtained by complaining witness was inadmissible in prosecution of defendant and, even though case was tried by court without jury, defendant was entitled to a new trial. Moody v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1960, 163 A. 2d 337).

Where detective arranged to meet defendant in poolroom and upon meeting him suggested that they go to precinct for their discussion and while at station house he asked defendant to see any money he had on his person and defendant voluntarily produced a dollar bill which was found to have serial number corresponding with serial number on a bill stolen the night before from a pharmacy, whereupon he was placed under arrest, one dollar bill was properly admitted in subsequent prosecution for petit larceny. Jackson v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1958, 146 A. 2d 577).

In prosecution for petit larceny involving theft of currency from a pharmacy formerly employing defendant, on whose person was found a one dollar bill containing a serial number corresponding with one of serial numbers of currency that had been stolen, two one dollar bills taken from poolroom cash register where defendant had just recently made change, having serial numbers corresponding with two bills of stolen currency, were admissible although bills were not directly connected with defendant and standing alone would be insufficient to support a conviction. Id.

In prosecution of maid for stealing currency from room in rooming house, admission of officer's testimony that from his investigation he learned that only maid and complaining witness had keys to room did not result in prejudice to maid, where true facts relating to keys were brought to light by other evidence. Brock v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1956, 122 A. 2d 763).

Where defendant was convicted of petit larceny upon evidence obtained during an unlawful search and seizure, it must be reversed as the search of her desk was an invasion upon her privacy so as to constitute a violation of the Fourth Amendment. Blok v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1950, 70 A. 2d 55).

In prosecution for petit larceny, which if committed was complete before fight ensued, admission of testimony concerning fight and nature of prosecuting witness' wounds was prejudicial error. Furr v. U.S. (D.C. Mun. App. 1943, 32 A. 2d 111).

In prosecution for petit larceny, admission of evidence regarding subsequent fight and nature of wounds received by prosecuting witness was so plainly prejudicial that appellate court had right to notice and correct the error even if it had not been properly saved for review. Id.

6. — Sufficiency

Evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction for house-breaking, larceny and destroying movable property. Braddy v. United States (1955, 225 F. 2d 551, 96 U. S. App. D. C. 251).

Where jury could find beyond a reasonable doubt that both defendant and his companion entered a room with intent to steal and that either defendant or his companion stole watch, defendant's conviction of larceny of a watch and of entering a room with intent to commit larceny was authorized, notwithstanding that defendant's part in the crimes may have been only to stand guard. Fretz v. U.S. (1944, 140 F. 2d 468, 78 U.S. App. D.C. 290).

In prosecution for petit larceny, elements of a taking and asportation by defendant are satisfied, where evidence shows that property was taken from owner and was concealed or put in a convenient place for removal, and fact that possession of defendant was brief or that defendant was detected before goods could be removed from the owner's premises is immaterial. Groomes v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1959, 155 A. 2d 73).

Where evidence in prosecution for petit larceny disclosed that defendant, while shopping in self-service market, was seen by clerk to remove two articles from shelf and put them in her purse, which was inside a cart containing some groceries, and that defendant then closed the purse, and clerk and manager of store followed defendant to checkout line, and when she saw them she walked toward back of store and gave them the articles from her purse, there was a sufficient showing by the prosecution of a taking and carrying away of the articles by the defendant. Id.

Evidence was sufficient to sustain a conviction for petit larceny. Jackson v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1958, 146 A. 2d 577).

Evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction of stealing currency from locked brief case of occupant of rooming house where defendant was working as maid. Brock v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1956, 122 A. 2d 763).

Where after defendant left the store, he was arrested for petit larceny by the store detective who was the prosecuting witness and whose testimony was accepted as true by the jury, as it obviously was, the guilt of appellant was established beyond a reasonable doubt. Campbell v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1949, 65 A. 2d 191).

Defendant's assignment of error that there was insufficient evidence to justify conviction, where the testimony of complaining witness was uncorroborated, is unsound since it has been repeatedly held that generally testimony of a single witness may legally suffice as evidence upon which a jury may found the verdict. Rice v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1949, 64 A. 2d 567).

7. Indictment

The attempt to identify particular room in indictment charging larceny of watch and entering a room with intent to commit larceny was harmless surplusage. Fretz v. U.S. (1944, 140 F. 2d 468, U.S. App. D.C. 290).

8. Instructions

Trial judge did not violate the rule of singling out and declaring the effect of certain facts, without consideration of other modifying facts, where by instructing the jury, he outlined the issues, and said among other things that "it was a question of fact for the jury to determine whether the cash register receipts had been obtained by defendant before, at the time of, or after his appearance at the store from which defendant was convicted of petty larceny of an item from the store." Campbell v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1949, 65 A. 2d 191).

9. Plea of guilty

In prosecution for housebreaking, larceny and destruction of property, wherein one defendant was permitted to change his plea in open court and in presence of jury and was asked by trial judge whether he admitted committing offense and replied that he did admit being with "them," there was error which, in view of circumstantial and inconclusive nature of evidence, would require reversal of another defendant's conviction. Gaynor v. United States (1957, 247 F. 2d 583, 101 U. S. App. D. C. 177).

Upon defendant's motion to withdraw his plea of guilty and to vacate and set aside sentence imposed upon him, court would treat defendant's papers as motion pursuant to statute pertaining to remedies on motion attacking sentence with reference to sentence being served and as application for relief in nature of common-law writ of error coram nobis with reference to sentences not then being served. United States v. Sheffield (1959, 179 F. Supp. 634, certiorari denied 80 S.Ct. 1633, 363 U.S. 853, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1735).

In proceeding treated as motion attacking sentence being served and as application for relief in nature of common-law writ of error coram nobis with regard to sentences not being served, evidence established that defendant was mentally competent at time of his plea of guilty and sentencing and that he had voluntarily and understandingly entered his plea. Id.

10. Probation

The Municipal Court of the District of Columbia may in its discretion order restitution or reparation as a condition of probation. Basile v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1944, 38 A. 2d 620).

11. Return of articles

Where evidence in prosecution for petit larceny disclosed that defendant, while shopping in self-service market, was seen by clerk to remove two articles from shelf and put them in her purse, which was inside a cart containing some groceries, and that defendant then closed the purse, and clerk and manager of store followed defendant to checkout line, and that when she saw them she walked toward back of store and gave them the articles from her purse, fact that defendant changed her mind about taking the articles or returned the articles to escape prosecution did not purge the original taking. Groomes v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1959, 155 A. 2d 73).

12. Sentence

Where defendant was convicted on all counts of a four count indictment charging him in one count with bribery, and in three counts with petit larceny, and sentences on the petit larceny counts ran concurrently with the sentence on the bribery count, and did not exceed it, validity of the bribery conviction supported the judgment. Green v. United States (1959, 267 F. 2d 619, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 342).

13. Suppression of evidence

Where police officer observed defendant and another, both of whom he recognized as having prior convictions for larceny, carrying a console-type record player and followed them into a liquor store, saw that the record player was new and questioned them about the machine and defendant gave improbable and unbelievable answers, officer had probable cause to arrest defendant for petit larceny, and refusal of trial court to suppress the evidence seized at time of arrest was not erroneous. Brooks v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1960, 159 A. 2d 876).

14. Value of property

In prosecution under petit larceny statute covering thefts of property of value of less than $100, defendant was not prejudiced by proof that she stole more than $100. Brock v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1956, 122 A. 2d 763).

§ 22-2203. Larceny after trust.

If any person entrusted with the possession of anything of value, including things savoring of the realty, for the purpose of applying the same for the use and benefit of the owner or person, so delivering it, shall fraudulently convert the same to his own use he shall, where the value of the thing so converted is $100 or more, be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than ten years, or by a fine of not more than $1,000, or both; and where the value of the thing so converted is less than $100 he shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than one year or by a fine of not more than $500 or both: Provided, That nothing contained in this section shall be construed to alter or repeal any section contained in this chapter. (Mar. 3, 1901, ch. 854, § 851b, as added Mar. 3, 1913, 37 Stat. 727, ch. 108, and amended Aug. 12, 1937, 50 Stat. 629, ch. 599; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 99, ch. 159, § 215(g).)

AMENDMENTS

1953—Act June 29, 1953, increased the value from $50 to $100.

1937—Act Aug. 12, 1937, increased the value from $35 to $50.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Election of offenses 1
Embezzlement 2
Fraud or trick 3
Use and benefit 4

1. Election of offenses

Where indictment charged embezzlement, false pretense, and larceny after trust, any confusion which might have existed as a result of the prosecution being allowed to put in its case before making an election was dispelled by election at end of Government's case and by instructions to jury. Dobbins v. U.S. (1946, 157 F. 2d 257, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 218, certiorari denied 67 S. Ct. 99, 329 U.S. 734, 91 L. Ed. 634).

Where indictment charged embezzlement, false pretense, and larceny after trust, defendant's motion that Government be required to elect to place its case on one of the three crimes charged before putting in evidence was addressed to discretion of trial court and its denial of motion was not an abuse of discretion. Id.

2. Embezzlement

Taking was an embezzlement and not larceny after trust, Talbert v. United States (42 App. D.C. 1, certiorari denied 34 S. Ct. 997, 234 U.S. 762, 58 L.Ed. 1581). See, also, Henry v. United States (1921, 273 F. 330, 50 App. D.C. 366, certiorari denied 42 S. Ct. 51, 257 U.S. 640, 66 L. Ed. 411).

3. Fraud or trick

This section has no bearing on larceny by fraud or trick. Talbert v. United States (42 App. D.C. 1, certiorari denied 34 S. Ct. 997, 234 U.S. 762, 58 L. Ed. 1581).

4. Use and benefit

"Under the provisions of this section, the possession of property must be intrusted 'for the purpose of applying the same for the use and benefit' of the person so intrusting it; that is, the person to whom intrusted must be clothed with some actual dominion and control over the property for the purpose named. Otherwise, he is a mere temporary custodian, and, if he wrongfully appropriates the property he is guilty of larceny, and not of the crime denounced by this section." Atkinson v. United States (1923, 289 F. 935, 53 App. D.C. 277).

Any person who, without the consent of the owner, shall take, use, operate, or remove, or cause to be taken, used, operated, or removed from a garage, stable, or other building, or from any place or locality on a public or private highway, park, parkway, street, lot, field, inclosure, or space, an automobile or motor vehicle, and operate or drive or cause the same to be operated or driven for his own profit, use, or purpose shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars or imprisonment not exceeding five years, or both such fine and imprisonment. (Mar. 3, 1901, ch. 854, § 826b, as added Feb. 3, 1913, 37 Stat. 656, ch. 23, § 1.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Accomplice 1	Prime facie rule 5
Aiding and abetting 2	Questions for jury 6
Defense 3	Sentence 7
Evidence 4	Variance 8

1. Accomplice

In prosecution for the unauthorized use of a vehicle and larceny of other property in District of Columbia, evidence on issue of whether defendant had aided and abetted those who took the property and whether the planning and the taking were within the District sustained conviction, even though it was not shown that defendant was present at the taking or had used the automobile in the District. Williams v. United States (1954, 215 F. 2d 35, 94 U. S. App. D. C. 219).

2. Aiding and abetting

One aiding and abetting unauthorized use of automobile stands in same shoes as principal offender. Allen v. United States (1958, 257 F. 2d 188, 103 U.S. App. D.C. 184).

3. Defense

In prosecution for grand larceny and for unauthorized use of a vehicle, wherein defense was interposed that defendant was repossessing automobile on request of man engaged in automobile business, testimony and argument of Government to effect that repossession of automobile must be accomplished by a United States marshal and that repossession by an individual was illegal, which testimony and argument led jury to believe that defendant was engaged in an illegal enterprise in repossessing automobile, was prejudicial error, where jury was not instructed to disregard testimony or argument on this point, notwithstanding that jury was instructed that Government had to prove every element of crime, including intent, beyond reasonable doubt. Evans v. United States (1956, 232 F. 2d 379, 98 U. S. App. D. C. 122).

Voluntary drunkenness does not constitute a defense to a charge of unauthorized use of a vehicle and specific intent or knowledge is not an element of the offense since the statute involves only a "general criminal intent" which may be presumed from doing the prohibited act. Proctor v. U.S. (1950, 177 F. 2d 656, 85 U.S. App. D. C. 341).

4. Evidence

Evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction for unauthorized use of an automobile. Allen v. United States (1958, 257 F. 2d 188, 103 U.S. App. D.C. 184).

In action for injuries sustained in an automobile accident, where owner testified that the driver did not have permission to use automobile, statements of driver about 10 or 15 minutes after the accident to an investigating officer that owner told driver that he could take the car, and statement of the driver to plaintiff that defendant would be angry with the driver because the defendant loaned the driver his car, were not admissible as excited utterances, since the driver had a motive for falsely representing his authority to have possession of the vehicle to avoid a criminal prosecution. Sawyer et ano. v. Miseli (D.C. Mun. App. 1959, 156 A. 2d 141).

5. Prima facie rule

In prosecution for unlawfully taking, using, operating, and removing a certain automobile truck from a certain street without owner's consent, the jury were entitled to apply the prima facie rule applicable to unexplained possession of recently stolen property. Epps v. U.S. (1946, 157 F. 2d 11, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 244).

6. Questions for jury

Evidence, in prosecution for theft, and unauthorized use of motor vehicle, that appellant and another defendant took truck with paint spray pump, both of which appellant knew were not owned by fellow defendant, and that they had traveled 175 miles on way to another state, and had arranged to sell or pledge the pump in exchange for gasoline, oil and whiskey, was sufficient, in absence of any explanation, to raise issue for jury on question of defendant's guilty knowledge and intent. Gilbert v. United States (1954, 215 F. 2d 334, 94 U.S. App. D. C. 321).

Evidence whether defendant who was found staggering with bleeding forehead from alley in vicinity of damaged automobile in which were found pieces of glass which appeared to fit perfectly the pieces in broken lens of spectacles found in defendant's pocket, was guilty of unauthorized use of motor vehicle, was for jury. Patalas v. United States (1951, 185 F. 2d 507, 87 U. S. App. D. C. 379.)

In prosecution for unlawfully taking, using, operating, and removing a certain automobile truck without the consent of the owner, whether defendant was guilty was for jury. Epps v. U.S. (1946, 157 F. 2d 11, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 244).

7. Sentence

In prosecution for grand larceny and unauthorized use of a vehicle, imposition of sentences on defendant of from two to five years on the unauthorized use count and from two to seven years on the grand larceny count, was proper even though the two offenses grew out of the same set of facts and circumstances and offense of unauthorized use was included in that of grand larceny, where sentences were imposed to run concurrently. Evans v. United States (1956, 232 F. 2d 379, 98 U. S. App. D. C. 122).

8. Variance

Where indictment charged defendant with unlawfully taking, using, operating, and removing certain automobile truck from a certain street without owner's consent and proof showed that such truck was parked right on such street, there was no variance. Epps v. U.S. (1946, 157 F. 2d 11, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 244).

Whoever, after March 7, 1942, and in any period during which any restrictions on the sale or use of any of the articles hereinafter referred to are in effect pursuant to any law of the United States, shall feloniously take and carry away any oil or gasoline, or any other lubricant or fuel; or any antifreeze mixture, compound, or solution; or any tire, tire casing, inner tube, or rim; or any wheel, tire chain, battery, or other part, equipment, or accessory, of the value of less than $100, being then and there in, on, part of, or attached to any vehicle in the District of Columbia, shall suffer imprisonment for not more than three years: Provided, That nothing contained in this section shall be construed to affect the offense of grand larceny as defined by existing law. (Mar. 3, 1901, ch. 854, § 826c, as added Mar. 7, 1942, 56 Stat. 143, ch. 165, and amended June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 99, ch. 159, § 215(b).)

AMENDMENT

1953—Act June 29, 1953, increased the value from $50 to $100.

Any person who shall, with intent to defraud, receive or buy anything of value which shall have been stolen or obtained by robbery, knowing or having cause to believe the same to be so stolen or so obtained by robbery, if the thing or things received or bought shall be of the value of $100 or upward, shall be imprisoned for not less than one year nor more than ten years; or if the value of the thing or things so received or bought be less than $100, shall be fined not more than $500 or imprisoned not more than one year, or both. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1324, ch. 854, § 829; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 98, ch. 159, § 213.)

AMENDMENT

1953—Act June 29, 1953, inserted "with intent to defraud," following "Any person who shall", deleted "with intent to defraud the owner thereof" preceding "if the thing or things", substituted "knowing or having cause to believe" for "knowing", increased the value from $35 to $100 and providing for a fine of not more than $500 for offense involving the lesser sum and decreased the limit on imprisonment for such offense from two to one year.

1. Accomplice in larceny

One who advises, incites, or connives at the offense of larceny but is not present at the taking (although chargeable as a principal under 1901 code, § 908 [§ 22-105]) may be convicted of receiving stolen property when he subsequently purchases it from the thief. Weisberg v. United States (1919, 258 F. 284, 49 App. D.C. 28).

2. Arrest

Where officers, who knew that furniture had been stolen and who had information linking accused to the crime, went to accused's second-hand furniture store and observed articles in show windows similar to those which had been stolen, asked accused for records required to be kept by second-hand dealers, asked to be shown more of same type of furniture which accused denied having, and looked around premises without objection by accused and found five new chairs hidden beneath old furniture, arrest without warrant was legal. McQuaid v. United States (1952, 198 F. 2d 987, 91 U. S. App. D. C. 229, certiorari denied 73 S. Ct. 499, 344 U. S. 929, 97 L. Ed. 715).

3. Evidence—Admissibility

Admissibility of evidence of other offenses is not subject to the qualification that the goods must have been received by the accused from the same person. Witters v. United States (1939, 106 F. 2d 837, 70 App. D.C. 316, 125 A.L.R. 1031).

4. — Corroboration

In prosecution for receiving stolen goods, testimony that defendant had goods in his possession shortly after theft thereof and retained such possession while attempting with others to sell them was sufficient corroborative evidence to support his admissions that he received goods and knew they had been stolen. Inman v. United States (1957, 243 F. 2d 256, 100 U. S. App. D. C. 150, certiorari denied 79 S. Ct. 132, 358 U. S. 888, 3 L. Ed. 2d 116).

5. — Sufficiency

In prosecution for knowingly receiving stolen goods, evidence relating to identity, ownership, and value of goods sustained conviction. McQuaid v. United States (1952, 198 F. 2d 987, 91 U. S. App. D. C. 229, certiorari denied 73 S. Ct. 499, 344 U. S. 929, 97 L. Ed. 715).

6. — Unexplained possession

A person's unexplained possession of goods known by him to have been stolen is a forceful circumstance supporting his admissions of receipt of goods to such extent as to justify jury in concluding that admissions were true. Inman v. United States (1957, 243 F. 2d 256, 100 U. S. App. D. C. 150, certiorari denied 79 S. Ct. 132, 358 U. S. 888, 3 L. Ed. 2d 116).

7. Instructions

In prosecution for knowingly receiving stolen property, instruction that it was not necessary to find that accused knew that property was stolen specifically from company named in indictment was not error where other instructions were given on theory that identification and ownership were essential elements of the crime and further instructions were not requested and there were no objections to instructions given. McQuaid v. United States (1952, 198 F. 2d 987, 91 U. S. App. D. C. 229, certiorari denied 73 S. Ct. 499, 344 U. S. 929, 97 L. Ed. 715).

In prosecution for receiving stolen goods of the value of $35 or more, jury should have been instructed to find the value of the goods, and not merely that the goods were of some value, even though defense counsel did not request such instruction, and even though indictment charged that the stolen goods had a value of about $1,115.01. McQuaid v. United States (1951, 193 F. 2d 696, 90 U. S. App. D. C. 59).

Failure of court to charge in prosecution for receiving stolen goods of the value of about $1,115.01, that the jury should find the value of the stolen goods was not prejudicial error, where sentence imposed on defendant was not for the more serious offense of receiving stolen goods of the value of $35 or more, but for receiving goods of a value of less than $35 and where defendant wanted new trial, not resentence. Id.

Jury were properly instructed that defendant's knowledge that goods were stolen must be proved as a separate substantive fact. Baer v. United States (1924, 293 F. 843, 54 App. D.C. 24).

8. Larceny

In prosecution for receiving stolen goods, whether evidence supporting defendant's admissions of his receipt of goods and knowledge that they were stolen would have supported conviction of larceny is immaterial, as one technically guilty of larceny, but not present when it occurred, may be convicted of receiving stolen goods. Inman v. United States (1957, 243 F. 2d 256, 100 U. S. App. D.C. 150, certiorari denied 79 S. Ct. 132, 358 U. S. 888, 3 L. Ed. 2d 116).

"Under the prevailing modern rule the crime of receiving stolen goods is a substantive offense, separate and distinct from the larceny itself." Weisberg v. United States (1919, 258 F. 284, 49 App. D.C. 28).

Whoever shall embezzle, steal, or purloin any money, property, or writing, the property of the District of Columbia, shall suffer imprisonment for not exceeding five years, or be fined not more than five thousand dollars, or both. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1324, ch. 854, § 831.)

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Evidence

In prosecution for housebreaking and larceny, United States District Court, under the circumstances, did not abuse its discretion in admitting evidence of defendant's participation in another alleged crime of similar character committed the same evening. Adams v. United States (1956, 239 F. 2d 451, 99 U. S. App. D. C. 288).

Whoever shall receive, conceal, or aid in concealing, or have in possession, with intent to convert to his own use, any money, property, or writing, the property of the District of Columbia, knowing the same to have been embezzled, stolen, or purloined from the District of Columbia by any other person, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars or imprisonment not exceeding five years, or both. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1324, ch. 854, § 828; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 99, ch. 159, § 215(d).)

Chapter 23.—LIBEL—BLACKMAIL

Sec.

- 22-2301. Libel.
- 22-2302. Libel—Publication—Sufficiency.
- 22-2303. Libel—Justification.
- 22-2304. False charges of unchastity.
- 22-2305. Blackmail.

Whoever publishes a libel shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars or imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years, or both. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1323, ch. 854, § 815.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Common law 1
Privileged communication 2
Sentence 3

1. Common law

Where this section provides the punishment for libel, defining publication and justification but not libel itself, common-law libel is thus meant. Ormsby v. United States (C.C.A. 6, 1921, 273 F. 977).

2. Privileged communication

A scurrilous letter, addressed to the District Commissioners, charging certain of their subordinate officers with malfeasance in office, copies of which were sent to such officials, is not privileged, especially when no foundation for the charge appears. Raymond v. United States (25 App. D.C. 555, certiorari denied 26 S. Ct. 755, 200 U.S. 619, 50 L. Ed. 623).

3. Sentence

One convicted under this section, and sentenced to 5 years' imprisonment at hard labor is not thereby subjected to "cruel or unusual punishment." Raymond v. United States (25 App. D.C. 555, certiorari denied 26 S. Ct. 755, 200 U.S. 619, 50 L. Ed. 623).

To knowingly send or deliver any libelous communication to the party libeled is a sufficient publication to subject the person sending or delivering the same to punishment as provided in section 22-2301. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1323, ch. 854, § 816.)

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Indictment

Indictment is clearly inconsistent with an inference that the asserted libel was a privileged communication or an act done in the performance of a legal duty, because of the allegation in the indictment that the libelous words charged were not only false, scandalous, malicious, and defamatory, but were uttered with the unlawful and malicious intention to vilify, defame, scandalize, and disgrace the subject of the publication. Ormsby v. United States (C.C.A. 6, 1921, 273 F. 977).

Any publication of a libel shall be justified if it appear that the matter charged as libelous was true and was published with good motives and for justifiable ends. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1323, ch. 854, § 817.)

§ 22-2304. False charges of unchastity.

Whoever wrongfully accuses any woman of unchastity shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both, and shall also be liable to a civil action for damages by the party injured. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1323, ch. 854, § 818.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Conspiracy 1
Crime against United States 2
Privileged communication 3

1. Conspiracy

In action for damages under this section, an alleged conspiracy or combination is not one of the elements of the cause of action, as it is not created by the conspiracy, but by the wrongful acts done by the defendants to the injury of the plaintiff. Ewald v. Lane (1939, 104 F. 2d 222, 70 App. D.C. 89, certiorari denied 60 S. Ct. 81, 308 U.S. 568, 84 L. Ed. 477).

2. Crime against United States

One who "wrongfully accuses a woman of unchastity commits a crime against the United States. And * * * an indictment for a conspiracy to commit * * * such an offense" charges an offense under said section 371 of title 18, U.S. Code. Fletcher v. United States (42 App. D.C. 53, certiorari denied 35 S. Ct. 283, 235 U.S. 706, 59 L. Ed. 434).

3. Privileged communication

Statement by physician to unmarried woman in the presence of a third party (who is there at the latter's request) that she is pregnant is privileged, in the absence of malice. Brice v. Curtis (38 App. D. C. 304)

Whoever verbally or in writing accuses or threatens to accuse any person of a crime or of any conduct which, if true, would tend to disgrace such other person, or in any way subject him to the ridicule or contempt of society, or threatens to expose or publish any of his infirmities or failings, with intent to extort from such other person anything of value or any pecuniary advantage whatever, or to compel the person accused or threatened to do or to refrain from doing any act, and whoever with such intent publishes any such accusation against any other person shall be imprisoned for not more than five years or be fined not more than one thousand dollars, or both. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1323, ch. 854, § 819.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Affidavit, probable cause 1
Collection agency 2
Intent 3
Review 4

1. Affidavit, probable cause

When creditor, with intent to extort money, had accused debtor with conduct which, if true, would tend to subject him to the contempt of society, said debtor had probable cause for swearing out the affidavit under § 819 of the code (this section). Slater v. Taylor (31 App. D.C. 100, 18 L.R.A., N.S., 77).

2. Collection agency

No recovery can be had against a collection agency when they alleged that person's credit standing would be jeopardized if debt were not paid, as this does not violate the blackmail statute. Clark v. Associated Retail Credit Men of Washington, D.C. (1939, 105 F. 2d 62, 70 App. D.C. 183).

3. Intent

In blackmail prosecution, evidence sustained finding of intent to extort. Connor v. United States (1953, 200 F. 2d 750, 91 U. S. App. D. C. 417).

4. Review

Where no objection had been made during trial to admission of evidence, and proceedings with respect to pretrial motion, other than written motion and order denying it, were not part of record on appeal, reviewing court could not sustain defendant's contention that trial court had erred in denying his pretrial motion to suppress certain evidence. Wade, Jr. v. United States (1958, 259 F. 2d 950, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 135).

- 22-2404. Punishment for murder in first and second degrees.
- 22-2405. Punishment for manslaughter

Whoever, being of sound memory and discretion, kills another purposely, either of deliberate and premeditated malice or by means of poison, or in perpetrating or attempting to perpetrate any offense punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary, or without purpose so to do kills another in perpetrating or in attempting to perpetrate any arson, as defined in section 22-401 or 22-402, rape, mayhem, robbery, or kidnapping, or in perpetrating or attempting to perpetrate any housebreaking while armed with or using a dangerous weapon, is guilty of murder in the first degree. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1321, ch. 854, § 798; June 12, 1940, 54 Stat. 347, ch. 339.)

1. Arraignment

Arraignment consists of three parts: (1) Calling the defendant by name and commanding him to hold up his hand, that his identification may be certain; (2) reading to him the indictment; (3) taking his plea. Johnson v. United States (38 App. D.C. 347, affirmed 32 S. Ct. 748, 225 U.S. 405, 56 L. Ed. 1142).

2. Assault

"A conviction for an assault and battery is no bar to a subsequent indictment for manslaughter, or murder, in case the person assaulted dies within a year and a day." Hopkins v. United States (4 App. D.C. 430).

Failure of deceased to secure proper medical attention after assault no defense to charge of homicide. Id.

3. Common law

"The definition of murder in section 798 of the 1901 code (this section) is the common-law definition of the crime." Hamilton v. United States (26 App. D.C. 382). See, also, Bishop v. United States (1940, 107 F. 2d 297, 71 App. D.C. 132).

4. Conduct of prosecutor

In prosecution for murder, where prosecution did not abide by the court's ruling that it could not impeach its own witness and over repeated objections sought to convince jury that the witness had given a statement that was inconsistent with his sworn testimony at trial and made references to a prior statement of the witness not in evidence and improper conduct was renewed in summation to the jury, improper conduct of the prosecutor required reversal where conduct of the prosecutor might have affected the verdict on the issue of self defense or the degree of homicide. Belton v. United States (1958, 259 F. 2d 811, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 81).

5. Confessions

In prosecution for murder in first degree committed in perpetration of offense of housebreaking while armed with a deadly weapon, evidence sustained admission in evidence of defendant's written confession, subject to final determination by jury, upon all evidence, as to its voluntary nature. Tyler v. United States (1952, 193 F. 2d 24, 90 U.S. App. D.C. 2, certiorari denied 72 S. Ct. 639, 343 U.S. 908, 96 L. Ed. 1326).

Where defendant had been duly committed to jail upon other charges and was being legally detained, and defendant was delivered to custody of policemen by jail officials for purpose of going to police headquarters to take a lie detector test, to which defendant had agreed to submit, though jailer exceeded his authority in surrendering defendant, fact that defendant was in temporary care of police at time of making written confession to murder charge did not render confession inadmissible at his trial. Id.

The drunken condition of accused when making a confession, unless such drunkenness goes to the extent of mania, does not affect the admissibility of such confession in evidence. Bell v. United States (1931, 47 F. 2d 438, 60 App. D.C. 76, 74 A.L.R. 1098).

While it is the general rule that a confession to be admissible must relate to the offense charged, it is equally true that it may include other offenses when there can be no separation of the relevant and irrelevant parts. Robinson v. United States (1933, 63 F. 2d 147, 61 App. D.C. 370, certiorari denied 53 S. Ct. 697, 289 U.S. 749, 77 L. Ed. 1494).

Where the evidence showed that one charged with murder in the first degree had made confession of his crime after being in custody but eleven hours, without fear or compulsion, the voluntariness of his confession was for the jury. McAfee v. United States (1940, 111 F. 2d 199, 72 App. D.C. 60, certiorari denied 60 S. Ct. 1094, 310 U.S. 643, 84 L. Ed. 1410).

In prosecution for murder, where neither of defendants made any attack upon the voluntariness of their confessions, either on direct examination or cross-examination, and not until on redirect examination did they intimate that confessions were obtained by threats of police to hold relatives of defendants until confessions were made, admitting confessions was not error. Hawkins v. U.S. (1947, 158 F. 2d 652, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 376, certiorari denied 67 S. Ct. 1347, 331 U.S. 830, 91 L. Ed. 1844, rehearing denied 67 S. Ct. 1728, 331 U.S. 869, 91 L. Ed. 1872).

Error, if any, in permitting defendant's written confession to be received in evidence on ground that it clearly appeared that statement had been obtained through force, coercion and intimidation was rendered harmless by fact that defendant took stand in his own behalf and of his own accord gave testimony which was in all essential respects similar to statements in confession. Wheeler v. U.S. (1948, 165 F. 2d 225, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 363, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 448, 333 U.S. 830, 92 L. Ed. 1115). See, also, Wheeler v. Reid (1949, 175 F. 2d 829, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

6. Conviction of lesser offense

Under indictment charging first degree murder done during perpetration or attempted perpetration of rape, mayhem, robbery, kidnapping, or housebreaking while armed with or using a dangerous weapon, defendant may, if evidence warrants, be found guilty of the necessarily included offense of second degree murder. Green v. United States (1955, 218 F. 2d 856, 95 U.S. App. D. C. 45).

Where defendant is guilty of murder or nothing, it is not error to refuse to charge as to manslaughter. Horton v. United States (15 App. D. C. 310).

When, in homicide case, the only defense is insanity, but there is no evidence to reduce the crime from murder to manslaughter, it was not error for the trial court to state to the jury that the evidence will not justify a verdict of manslaughter. Id.

Where several strong men join in a criminal attack upon a defenseless man, knock him down, and, when he attempts to escape, pursue him and then with augmented numbers continue the assault, and one of the conspirators, while his confederates are beating their victim, plunges a knife into him, they should all be charged with manslaughter, even though they did not contemplate the use of the knife, for the conspirators must be presumed to know that great force and violence probably will result. Patten v. United States (42 App. D. C. 239).

To reduce homicide from murder to manslaughter, defendant must not only show that he acted under the influence of passion but "in addition that there was a sufficient cause of provocation for his passion." Jackson v. United States (48 App. D. C. 272).

Law presumes that defendant, while attempting to perpetuate a robbery, foresaw and intended whatever consequences might naturally result from such an encounter, and the law, not as a matter of fact, but as a conclusion of legal reasoning and experience, considers this state of mind to be implied malice, the homicide would not be manslaughter which is an unlawful killing without malice, but murder either in first or second degree. Marcus v. United States (1937, 86 F. 2d 854, 66 App. D.C. 298).

7. Corpus delicti

In prosecution for murder in first degree committed in perpetration of offense of housebreaking while armed with deadly weapon, without considering defendant's written confession, evidence was sufficient to prove corpus delicti. Tyler v. United States (1952, 193 F. 2d 24, 90 U.S. App. D. C. 2, certiorari denied 72 S. Ct. 639, 343 U.S. 908, 96 L. Ed. 1326).

8. Deliberation

Evidence that defendant first struck his victim because she had complained about his work, that he went to floor above, obtained a stick from a fireplace, returned downstairs and killed her, that in the killing he used the stick and also choked her, and that to insure her death he used a knife, was sufficient to permit jury to find deliberation. Fisher v. U.S. (1945, 149 F. 2d 28, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 96, affirmed 66 S. Ct. 1318, 328 U.S. 463, 90 L. Ed. 1382, 166 A.L.R. 1176, rehearing denied 67 S. Ct. 24, 329 U.S. 818, 91 L. Ed. 697).

9. Double jeopardy

Where jury was authorized at first trial to find defendant guilty of either first degree murder or second degree murder, and jury found defendant guilty of second degree murder, but on appeal that conviction was reversed and the case was remanded for a new trial, second trial of defendant for first degree murder placed him in jeopardy twice for same offense in violation of the constitutional prohibition against double jeopardy, and defendant had not waived that defense by making successful appeal of erroneous conviction of second degree murder. Green v. United States (1957, 78 S. Ct. 221, 355 U.S. 184, 2 L. Ed. 2d 199, 61 A. L. R. 2d 1119).

Where jury was authorized to find defendant guilty of either first degree murder or alternatively of second degree murder and jury found him guilty of second degree murder, defendant, by appealing, did not prolong his original jeopardy, and when his conviction for second degree murder was reversed and case remanded he could not be tried again for first degree murder without placing him in new jeopardy. Id.

10. Elements of crime

Premeditation and deliberation are necessary elements of first degree murder. Mergner v. U.S. (1945, 147 F. 2d 572, 79 U.S. App. D. C. 373, certiorari denied 65 S. Ct. 1085, 325 U.S. 850, 89 L. Ed. 1971).

Murder first degree is defined by statute as a purposeful killing done either with premeditated malice or in committing or attempting to commit a felony and the statute also characterizes as such a killing one in the perpetration or attempted perpetration of any one of the enumerated felonies although there was no purpose to kill. Goodall v. U.S. (1950, 180 F. 2d 397, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 148, 17 A.L.R. 2d 1070, certiorari denied 70 S. Ct. 1009, 339 U.S. 987, 94 L. Ed. 924).

Since the indictment did not charge defendant with purposely killing another, but only with killing him while attempting to rob him, it was necessarily found under the second segment of the statute providing that the intent to kill is not an ingredient of the crime and need not be alleged or proved. Id.

11. Evidence—Admissibility

In prosecution of Puerto Rican defendant, whose companion shot and killed guard in front of dwelling of President of the United States, for first-degree murder, wherein defendant interposed defense that he and companion had no intent to kill anyone but merely wished to create an incident in order to bring to the attention of the American people conditions in Puerto Rico, defendant was properly allowed to testify as to his own intent. Collazo v. United States (1952, 196 F. 2d 573, 90 U.S. App. D. C. 241, certiorari denied 72 S. Ct. 1065, 343 U.S. 968, 96 L. Ed. 1364).

In prosecution for murder in first degree committed in perpetration of offense of housebreaking while armed with deadly weapon, ruling that statement of witness that he told defendant that lie detector indicated that defendant was lying, would not be admitted as evidence of any alleged lying of defendant, but merely as evidence bearing upon question whether defendant's confession was, in fact, voluntary, was correct. Tyler v. United States (1952, 193 F. 2d 24, 90 U.S. App. D. C. 2, certiorari denied 72 S. Ct. 639, 343 U.S. 908, 96 L. Ed. 1326).

To make one criminal act evidence of another, there must be a connection to show that he who committed the one must have done the other, and the admissibility of such evidence is a judicial question. Burge v. United States (26 App. D. C. 524).

Evidence received tending to show defendant and wife quarreled and fought, sufficiently established the corpus delicti to justify receiving testimony of defendant's statements. Murray v. United States (1923, 288 F. 1008, 53 App. D.C. 119, certiorari denied 43 S. Ct. 703, 262 U.S. 757, 67 L. Ed. 1218).

In prosecution for murder committed while attempting to perpetrate robbery, admitting evidence that defendant entered plea of not guilty at preliminary hearing before committing magistrate, and that when defendant was asked to plead he answered that he was guilty of robbing and shooting, but that it was not premeditated or that he had not committed premeditated murder, was not prejudicial error where the evidence added nothing prejudicial either to confession or to evidence given by defendant at trial. Mumforde v. U.S. (1942, 130 F. 2d 411, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 107, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 53, 317 U.S. 656, 87 L. Ed. 527).

In murder prosecution, evidence of uncommunicated complaint which victim of defendant had made about his work prior to the offense was properly excluded, where the complaint was not a threat, and there was no claim of self-defense. Fisher v. U.S. (1945, 149 F. 2d 28, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 96, affirmed 66 S. Ct. 1318, 328 U.S. 463, 90 L. Ed. 1382, 166 A.L.R. 1176, rehearing denied 67 S. Ct. 24, 329 U.S. 818, 91 L. Ed. 697).

In first degree murder prosecution, evidence that defendant deliberately pursued and shot deceased's sister immediately after defendant shot deceased was admissible as tending to show that defendant's shooting of deceased was not an accident in an attempt at self-defense against deceased's husband, but was done with deliberate intent to kill. Copeland v. U.S. (1946, 152 F. 2d 769, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 308, certiorari denied 66 S. Ct. 1010, 328 U.S. 841, 90 L. Ed. 1615).

In prosecution of three defendants jointly indicted on charge of murder in perpetration of robbery, where defendants suggested possibility that victim died of heart attack, exhibiting victim's clothing to jury and showing bullet hole in back of victim's coat was not improper. Hall v. U.S. (1948, 168 F. 2d 161, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 166, 4 A.L.R. 2d 1193, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 1509, 334 U.S.

853, 92 L. Ed. 1775, rehearing denied 69 S. Ct. 9, 335 U.S. 839, 93 L. Ed. 391).

In murder prosecution, receiving evidence that revolver with which victim was shot had been stolen from house of certain person was not error on ground that it constituted evidence of offense other than that for which defendants were on trial, in absence of any evidence showing that any of the defendants had stolen the revolver or had received it knowing it to have been stolen. Id.

An examination of murder weapon by ballistics expert during trial was not part of the trial, and the fact that such examination was made in the absence of the defendant does not render inadmissible evidence concerning it. degree, indictment must stand. Goodall v. U.S. (1950, 180 F. 2d 397, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 148, 17 A.L.R. 2d 1070, certiorari denied 70 S. Ct. 1009, 339 U.S. 987, 94 L. Ed. 924).

12. — Sufficiency

In prosecution under District of Columbia murder-during-robbery statute, for death of policeman whom defendant shot and killed while policeman, who began pursuit some minutes after robbery, was pursuing defendant, evidence whether asportation was continuing was sufficient to sustain conviction. Carter v. United States (1955, 223 F. 2d 332, 96 U. S. App. D. C. 40, certiorari denied 76 S. Ct. 324, 350 U. S. 949, 100 L. Ed. 827).

In arson and murder prosecution, evidence was sufficient to establish that victim's death had been caused by the fire in house in which her body was found. Green v. United States (1955, 218 F. 2d 856, 95 U. S. App. D. C. 45).

In prosecution for murder in first degree committed in perpetration of offense of housebreaking while armed with a deadly weapon, without considering defendant's written confession, evidence was sufficient to justify submission of case to jury and to support verdict of guilty. Tyler v. United States (1952, 193 F. 2d 24, 90 U. S. App. D. C. 2, certiorari denied 72 S. Ct. 639, 343 U. S. 908, 96 L. Ed. 1326).

Evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction for murder in first degree. Pritchett v. United States (1951, 185 F. 2d 438, 87 U.S. App. D. C. 374, certiorari denied 71 S. Ct. 608, 341 U.S. 905, 95 L. Ed. 1344).

Evidence supported conviction of codefendant who participated in robbery but who did not do the shooting or killing of another in perpetrating a robbery. Wheeler v. U.S. (1948, 165 F. 2d 225, 82 U.S. App. D. C. 363, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 448, 333 U.S. 830, 92 L. Ed. 1115).

Evidence that defendant found deceased with a woman with whom defendant was friendly, that some discussion ensued, and that later all went outside, where an altercation occurred and defendant cut deceased with a knife resulting in death, was sufficient evidence of deliberation and premeditation to go to jury upon charge of first-degree murder. Thomas v. United States (1947, 158 F. 2d 97, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 314, certiorari denied 67 S. Ct. 1303, 331 U. S. 822, 91 L. Ed. 1838).

Under an indictment in the common-law form for murder in the first degree, the prosecution may prove facts to bring the case within any of the provisions of this section defining murder in the first degree. Burton v. United States (1945, 151 F. 2d 17, 80 U. S. App. D. C. 208, certiorari denied 66 S. Ct. 473, 326 U. S. 789, 90 L. Ed. 479).

Evidence of premeditation and deliberation was sufficient to sustain conviction for first degree murder. Mergner v. U.S. (1945, 147 F. 2d 572, 79 U.S. App. D.C. 373, certiorari denied 65 S. Ct. 1085, 325 U.S. 850, 89 L. Ed. 1971).

Evidence sustained conviction for murder committed while attempting to perpetrate robbery. Mumforde v. U.S. (1942, 130 F. 2d 411, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 107, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 53, 317 U.S. 656, 87 L. Ed. 527).

13. Grounds for impeachment

Though the statute allows an exception to the general rule that one cannot impeach his own witness by use of previously made contradictory statements, to come within the exception, actual surprise must be found. Belton v. United States (1958, 259 F. 2d 811, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 81).

14. Housebreaking

Where this section defined murder in the first degree as purposely killing a human being either with deliberate or premeditated malice, or by poison, or in perpetrating or attempting to perpetrate any offense punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary, and since housebreaking is so punishable, one who commits a homicide while engaged in that offense may be charged with first degree murder. Monroe v. United States (1926, 10 F. 2d 645, 56 App. D.C. 80).

15. Indictment

Statute of 1 Hen. V, ch. 5 (1413) requiring indictment to set forth "estate, or degree, or mystery of defendant and the town or county, etc., of which he was conversant," is not in force in the District. Lanckton v. United States (18 App. D. C. 348).

An indictment charging the commission of murder in a house situated in the District is not defective because it does not particularly describe the location of the house. Id.

It is not necessary to charge in the indictment that accused was of sound mind and discretion. Hill v. United States (22 App. D. C. 395).

Indictment for murder is not defective for want of an express allegation of an intent to kill. Hamilton v. United States (26 App. D.C. 382). See, also, Hill v. United States (22 App. D.C. 395).

An indictment for murder which alleges that defendant did "choke, suffocate and strangle" of which the person died, is sufficient even though there is no allegation that the choking was "mortal." Hamilton v. United States (26 App. D. C. 382).

Requirement of copy of indictment and list of jurors and witnesses is mandatory. Aldridge v. United States (1931, 47 F. 2d 407, 60 App. D.C. 45, reversed on other grounds 51 S.Ct. 470, 283 U.S. 308, 75 L. Ed. 1054, 73 A.L.R. 1203).

Where indictment informed defendant in the plainest sort of language that he was charged with killing while attempting robbery, i. e., accused of murder in the first degree, indictment must stand. Goodall v. U.S. (1950, 180 F. 2d 397, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 148, 17 A.L.R. 2d 1070, certiorari denied, 70 S. Ct. 1009, 339 U.S. 987, 94 L. Ed. 924).

16. Instructions

In prosecution under indictment charging murder and robbery of victim wherein principal defense was insanity, it was not error for trial court to decline to give requested instruction that evidence of diminished intellect would permit jury to return a verdict of a lesser degree of homicide than first degree murder. Stewart v. United States (1960, 275 F. 2d 617, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 159, certiorari granted 80 S. Ct. 1266, 363 U.S. 818, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1516).

Where, in arson and murder prosecution, all testimony as to what occurred in burning house pointed to first degree murder only, giving of second degree murder instruction was error. Green v. United States (1955, 218 F. 2d 856, 95 U.S. App. D. C. 45).

In prosecution for first degree murder committed in robbing a grocery store, defended on ground of insanity, instruction attempting to distinguish between "mental disease" and "mental disorder", read in light of explanation offered by record, could have led jury to conclude defendant could be acquitted by reason of insanity only if defendant suffered from abnormality due to physical deterioration of or injury to brain, and was erroneous and prejudicial to defendant. Stewart v. United States (1954, 214 F. 2d 879, 94 U. S. App. D. C. 293).

Conviction for first degree murder committed in robbing a grocery store would be reversed by Court of Appeals for District of Columbia where given instruction prejudicial to defendant was fatally defective, regardless of whether errors in instruction were properly preserved. Id.

In prosecution for first degree murder committed in robbing a grocery store, defended on ground of insanity, instruction stating that a psychopath is not insane within meaning of law, and that a psychopath is person of low intelligence, although expert testimony was that a psychopath was usually of superior intelligence, was erroneous as court invasion of combined functions of expert witness and jury by assertions treating factual issues as already settled by testimony or law. Id.

In prosecution of Puerto Rican defendant, whose companion shot and killed guard in front of dwelling of President of the United States, for first degree murder, wherein defendant interposed defense that he and companion, though armed with pistols, had no intent to kill anyone but merely wished to create an incident in order to bring to the attention of American people conditions in Puerto Rico, court properly charged jury that defendant's testimony as to conditions in Puerto Rico had nothing to do with the case, over objection of defendant that such conditions were relevant and material to issue of his intent and materially responsive to prosecutor's claim of motive. Collazo v. United States (1952, 196 F. 2d 573, 90 U. S. App. D. C. 241, certiorari denied 72 S. Ct. 1065, 343 U. S. 968, 96 L. Ed. 1364).

Charge to jury was proper which stated that the defendant might be found guilty of murder or manslaughter, or acquitted altogether if he killed deceased in the reasonable apprehension of danger to his own life, and it was not error for the trial court to exclude testimony to show vicious and dangerous character of deceased. Travers v. United States (6 App. D. C. 450).

Instructions, that insanity was induced by operation of strong drink upon a mind rendered unsound by an injury, or that he was incapable of forming a specific intent to kill so as to reduce the crime to manslaughter, are not sufficient when the evidence does not support such instructions and where the jury is informed by other instructions that they must find that he had sufficient mental capacity to distinguish right from wrong at time of act, beyond a reasonable doubt. Snell v. United States (16 App. D. C. 501).

A requested instruction of self-defense is defective which fails to state what the defendant was in imminent danger of. Jackson v. United States (48 App. D. C. 272).

Where instruction regarding second-degree murder and manslaughter was given at request of defendant's counsel, if the instruction was subject to criticism on ground that it was confusing because it opened up a matter not properly for jury's consideration, it was favorable to defendant, and he could not complain. Mumforde v. U.S. (1942, 130 F. 2d 411, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 107, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 53, 317 U. S. 656, 87 L. Ed. 527).

Where defendant testified that he entered store with definite purpose of committing robbery, but that a moment later he changed his mind and drew pistol from pocket hoping to quiet woman in charge, and thus to escape detection and arrest, but in excitement pistol was unintentionally discharged, instruction that, if defendant voluntarily abandoned his plan to rob before fatal shot was fired, defendant would not be guilty of murder in first degree, fully protected defendant's legal rights. Id.

The perpetration of a robbery, during which act a homicide is committed, legally takes the place of that premeditation to kill which is necessary for murder in the first degree, and it was not error to give such instruction merely because the indictment for murder tendered no such issue as robbery. Burton v. U.S. (1945, 151 F. 2d 17, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 208, certiorari denied 66 S. Ct. 473, 326 U.S. 789, 90 L. Ed. 479).

Instruction that defendant had a vital interest in outcome of case, and in testing truth and weighing force of defendant's testimony jury might do so in light of that interest as well as in light which might be shed by all other evidence in case, was not objectionable. Fisher v. U.S. (1945, 149 F. 2d 28, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 96, affirmed 66 S. Ct. 1318, 328 U.S. 463, 90 L. Ed. 1382, 166 A.L.R. 1176, rehearing denied 67 S. Ct. 24, 329, U.S. 818, 91 L. Ed. 697).

Instruction that in considering questions of intent, premeditation and deliberation, jury should consider entire personality of defendant, his mental, nervous, emotional and physical characteristics as developed by evidence was properly refused because it confused issue of insanity with question whether psychopathic characteristics of defendant prevented him from forming deliberate intent necessary to constitute first degree murder. Id.

Failure to volunteer an instruction on question whether defendants were exhausted by hours of questioning when they confessed to murder charge was not error, where there was hardly sufficient evidence to warrant such an instruction and none was requested. Hawkins v. U. S. (1947, 158 F. 2d 652, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 376, certiorari denied, 67 S. Ct. 1347, 331 U.S. 830, 91 L. Ed. 1844, rehearing denied 67 S. Ct. 1728, 331 U.S. 869, 91 L. Ed. 1872).

In prosecution for murder resulting in conviction of second-degree murder, the court's charge covering premeditation, malice, and self-defense was not erroneous. Thomas v. U.S. (1947, 158 F. 2d 97, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 314, certiorari denied 67 S. Ct. 1303, 331 U.S. 832, 91 L. Ed. 1838).

Where robbery of fountain cash register at front of drug store by one of codefendants jointly indicted on charge of killing another in perpetrating robbery was a part of general holdup of store in perpetration of which other defendant killed proprietor while obtaining money in cash register in rear of store, defendant who did not do the shooting was not entitled to an instruction that two separate robberies had been committed, that such defendant could be convicted only of being accessory after the fact or that such defendant could be convicted only of offense of robbery. Wheeler v. U.S. (1948, 165 F. 2d 225, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 363, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 448, 333 U.S. 830, 92 L. Ed. 1115). See, also, Wheeler v. Reid (1949, 175 F. 2d 829, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

Fact that there was evidence that one of the three defendants jointly indicted on charge of murder in perpetration of robbery threw away the gun and bullets after the murder did not require an instruction that jury could find such defendant guilty as accessory after the fact, where such defendant's testimony and other circumstances stamped him as an accessory before the fact and therefore guilty as a principal. Hall v. U.S. (1948, 168 F. 2d 161, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 166, 4 A.L.R. 2d 1193, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 1509, 334 U.S. 853, 92 L. Ed. 1775, rehearing denied 69 S. Ct. 9, 335 U.S. 839, 93 L. Ed. 391).

Court's comments concerning alibi as a defense were proper and not prejudicial where it was said that such defense should be given such weight and consideration to which it is entitled to under all facts and circumstances. Goodall v. U.S. (1950, 180 F. 2d 397, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 148, 17 A.L.R. 2d 1070, certiorari denied 70 S. Ct. 1009, 339 U.S. 987, 94 L. Ed. 924).

Appellant's claim that Court failed to charge that if jury believed him guilty of killing but if any reasonable doubt existed as to whether he committed murder first or murder second, it should be resolved in favor of the lesser crime, is without merit since such an instruction is necessary only when from the evidence as a whole the jury might reasonably find the dependent guilty in either degree and must decide which degree. Id.

17. Intent

Under District of Columbia statute, murder committed in course of robbing a grocery store is first degree murder although there is no premeditation or intent or desire to kill. Stewart v. United States (1954, 214 F. 2d 879, 94 U.S. App. D. C. 293).

Intent to kill must always be proved in first-degree murder prosecution under first clause of local statute in order to convict, but motive for the killing is not always a material element in defense. Collazo v. United States (1952, 196 F. 2d 573, 90 U. S. App. D. C. 241, certiorari denied 72 S. Ct. 1065, 343 U. S. 968, 96 L. Ed. 1364).

Defendant is guilty of murder if the deceased, in seeking to escape the violent assault of accused had a well-grounded belief that he would take her life or inflict serious injury, and so believing inadvertently fell into a canal and was drowned, and it is not necessary to show by the prosecution nor that the jury shall believe that the defendant had the malicious intent to do bodily harm. Norman v. United States (20 App. D. C. 494).

"A deliberate intent to take life is declared to be an essential element of murder in the first degree, and this, of course, must be shown as a fact." Sabens v. United States (40 App. D.C. 440). See, also, Jordan v. United States (1937, 87 F. 2d 64, 66 App. D.C. 309, certiorari denied 58 S. Ct. 762, 303 U.S. 654, 82 L. Ed. 1114).

Under this section defining "murder in first degree" as the killing of another while armed with or using a dangerous weapon in the perpetration or attempted perpetration of a robbery, it is not necessary to show that the killing was done purposely to raise the offense to first degree murder. Mumforde v. U.S. (1942, 130 F. 2d 411, 76 U. S. App. D. C. 107, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 53, 317 U. S. 656, 87 L. Ed. 527).

In prosecution for homicide, the recurrence of other acts of the sort tends to negative inadvertence, defensive purpose, or any form of innocent intent. Copeland v. U. S. (1946, 152 F. 2d 769, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 308, certiorari denied 66 S. Ct. 1010, 328 U.S. 841, 90 L. Ed. 1615).

18. Intoxication

"Voluntary intoxication is neither an excuse nor a palliation for crime." Lanckton v. United States (18 App. D. C. 348).

Although defendant forms a deliberate and premeditated intent to kill while sober, and then voluntarily becomes drunk, he cannot be convicted of murder in the first degree, if at the time of the commission of the offense he was too drunk to deliberate and premeditate. Sabens v. United States (40 App. D. C. 440).

A charge given by the court of its own motion was proper to the effect that voluntary intoxication was generally not a justification for crime and that it is only considered when evidence tends to show condition of mind which rendered him incapable of forming an intent. Smith v. United States (1921, 269 F. 860, 50 App. D.C. 208).

Under this section, evidence of intoxication may be shown for purpose of proving lack of capacity to deliberate or premeditate; and under conflicting evidence, the question is for the jury. McAfee v. United States (1940, 111 F. 2d 199, 72 App. D.C. 60, certiorari denied 60 S. Ct. 1094, 310 U.S. 643, 84 L. Ed. 1410).

19. Jury

What is reasonable adequate provocation is generally for the jury. Jackson v. United States (48 App. D. C. 272).

"It is in the discretion of the court to permit the jury to separate in a homicide case, and his action in that respect will not be reviewed unless it appear affirmatively that prejudice resulted to the defendant." McHenry v. United States (1922, 276 F. 761, 51 App. D.C. 119, 34 A.L.R. 1109).

In prosecution of three defendants jointly indicted on charge of murder in perpetration of robbery, where two of three defendants testified that written statements given by them to officers were extorted by physical mistreatment, and officers denied having mistreated defendants, question as to whether written statements were voluntary and admissible was for jury. Hall v. U.S. (1948, 168 F. 2d 161, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 166, 4 A.L.R. 2d 1193, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 1509, 334 U.S. 853, 92 L. Ed. 1775, rehearing denied 69 S. Ct. 9, 335 U.S. 839, 93 L. Ed. 391).

20. Malice

However sudden the killing may be, if the means used, or the manner of doing it, or other external circumstances attending it, indicate a sedate and deliberate mind and formed design to kill, it will be upon express malice. Travers v. United States (6 App. D. C. 450).

"Implied malice constitutes murder in the second degree." Sabens v. United States (40 App. D. C. 440).

A heavy paling, with sharp, protruding nails, is a deadly weapon, from the use of which malice must be presumed. Patten v. United States (42 App. D.C. 239). See, also, Hopkins v. United States (4 App. D.C. 430).

A homicide committed purposely and with deliberate and premeditated malice is murder in the first degree and "Malice aforethought" may be shown expressly, or may be "implied" from the commission of the act itself. Bishop v. United States (1940, 107 F. 2d 297, 71 App. D.C. 132).

21. Means of commission

"The proof of the means of commission of a homicide need not conform strictly to the averment of such means in the indictment. If the means of death proved agree in substance with that charged, it is sufficient." Hamilton v. United States (26 App. D. C. 382).

22. Mental capacity

The criteria for evaluation of mental condition of accused at time of commission of crime and as to his capacity to be tried are not the same. Stewart v. United States (1960, 275 F. 2d 617, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 159, certiorari granted 80 S. Ct. 1266, 363 U.S. 818, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1516).

In prosecution under indictment charging defendant with first degree murder and robbery of his victim wherein principal defense was insanity of accused, who had been found competent to stand trial after appropriate proceeding and who took stand and exhibited bizarre symptoms and abnormal behavior which if truly reflecting his mental state would have made a trial legally impossible, accused by his demeanor put his mental condition as of time of trial in issue and testimony of government witnesses concerning defendant's mental condition at a time appreciably after commission of crime was properly admitted to rebut impression of madness. Id.

In prosecution for first degree murder committed in robbing a grocery store, defended on ground of insanity, it was jury's function to determine from all evidence, including expert testimony, whether defendant suffered from abnormal mental condition and whether nature and extent of condition from which defendant suffered relieved defendant of criminal responsibility under then prevailing standards. Stewart v. United States (1954, 214 F. 2d 879, 94 U. S. App. D. C. 293).

Mental dullness, weakness, or incapacity does not excuse from the consequences of crime, unless the evidence proves that defendant was at the time of the commission of the act so mentally impaired that he could not distinguish between right and wrong. Travers v. United States (6 App. D. C. 450).

Law does not recognize the doctrine of emotional insanity. Taylor v. United States (7 App. D. C. 27).

Refusal of the trial justice to admit in evidence an exemplification of the record of the Georgia State Sanitarium, showing the mental condition, treatment, and incarceration of certain relatives of the defendant, was proper. Snell v. United States (16 App. D. C. 501).

Where jury were fully informed that before they could find the accused guilty of the crime charged, insanity or unsoundness of mind being set up as a defense, they were required to find that the accused had sufficient capacity to distinguish between right and wrong, at the time of and with respect to the act which was the subject of inquiry, beyond a reasonable doubt. Id.

23. Motive

If fact of killing by an accused is in issue, prosecutor is permitted as part of his effort to prove that accused committed the act, to prove that accused had a motive for killing the deceased, and accused as part of his effort to prove that he did not commit the act, is permitted to prove that he had no motive for killing the deceased. Collazo v. United States (1952, 196 F. 2d 573, 90 U. S. App. D. C. 241, certiorari denied 72 S. Ct. 1065, 343 U. S. 968, 96 L. Ed. 1364).

If killing is intended by accused and none of the established legal excuses for the killing is pleaded, the motive of the killer is wholly immaterial. Id.

Government is not required to prove motive, but jury may consider absence of such proof as a circumstance in defendant's favor. Lanckton v. United States (18 App. D. C. 348).

Motive may be proved, because it "may be very important in determining whether or not the accused was actuated by deliberate, premeditated malice." McHenry v. United States (1922, 276 F. 761, 51 App. D.C. 119, 34 A.L.R. 1109). See, also, Lomax v. United States (37 App. D.C. 414); McUin v. United States (17 App. D.C. 323).

24. Prejudicial error

In prosecution for murder, where a police officer testified that defendant had failed to make a report to the police because of his record and defendant's counsel brought out the fact that the record referred to was failure to settle hotel bills, the net effect was not prejudicial to defendant. Burton v. U.S. (1945, 151 F. 2d 17, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 208, certiorari denied 66 S. Ct. 473, 326 U.S. 789, 90 L. Ed. 479).

In murder prosecution, where a nurse who made a written statement to the police took the stand and her testimony was substantially the same as the written statement, any error in permitting statement to be introduced in evidence was not prejudicial. Id.

Accused in murder prosecution was required to plead and prove his own case and was responsible for the production in court of witnesses necessary to do so, and failure of the government to produce certain witnesses could not be regarded as prejudicial. Thomas v. U. S. (1947, 158 F. 2d 97, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 314, certiorari denied 67 S. Ct. 1303, 331 U.S. 822, 91 L. Ed. 1838).

25. Punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary

"The words 'punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary' do not mean an offense that can be punished only by such imprisonment, but include such as may be so punished." United States v. Evans (28 App. D.C. 264).

26. Purposely

Word "purposely" as used in statute dealing with first-degree murder, is synonymous with "intentionally", and does not refer to the purpose of, or the intention in, the killing. Collazo v. United States (1952, 196 F. 2d 573, 90 U. S. App. D. C. 241, certiorari denied 72 S. Ct. 1065, 343 U. S. 968, 96 L. Ed. 1364).

Quare: Whether it is necessary to charge in indictment for first-degree murder that the killing was "purposely" done. As to this point the court did not decide but stated that, it is a safe rule, in criminal pleading, to follow the language of the statute, where there is any uncertainty in respect of its meaning. United States v. Evans (28 App. D. C. 269).

Proof of purpose in murder prosecution need not be direct; it may be inferred from the circumstances attending the killing. Jordon v. United States (1937, 87 F. 2d 64, 66 App. D.C. 309, certiorari denied 58 S. Ct. 762, 303 U. S. 654, 82 L. Ed. 1114).

Prosecution required to show purpose to kill in murder prosecution. Id.

27. Questions withheld from jury

Under all the facts and circumstances, the question whether there had been only second degree murder because of the killer's intoxication should not have been submitted to the jury. Goodall v. U.S. (1950, 180 F. 2d 397, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 148, 17 A.L.R. 1070, certiorari denied 70 S. Ct. 1009, 339 U.S. 987, 94 L. Ed. 924).

28. Review

It is the duty of an appellate court to correct any error prejudicial to the defendant, even though not properly raised in the trial court. Pattern v. U.S. (42 App. D.C. 239). See, also, Burge v. U.S. (26 App. D.C. 524).

29. Robbery

Fact that a robbery is being perpetrated by one who killed another, without purpose to do so and without deliberate or premeditated malice, supplies the element necessary to constitute the crime of first degree murder under this section, and under this section the crime of robbery is still in progress so long as the essential ingredient of asportation continues. Carter v. United States (1955, 223 F. 2d 332, 96 U. S. App. D. C. 40, certiorari denied 76 S. Ct. 324, 350 U. S. 949, 100 L. Ed. 827).

One who kills as he robs is charged by this section with having that degree of malice which is indispensable to murder in the first degree. Wheeler v. U.S. (1948, 165 F. 2d 225, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 363, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 448, 333 U.S. 830, 92 L. Ed. 1115). See, also, Wheeler v. Reid (1949, 175 F. 2d 829, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

Evidence supported conviction of murder while perpetrating robbery. Medley v. U.S. (1946, 155 F. 2d 857, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 85, certiorari denied 66 S. Ct. 1377, 328 U.S. 873, 90 L. Ed. 1642, rehearing denied 67 S. Ct. 35, 329 U.S. 822, 91 L. Ed. 99).

Homicide committed while attempting robbery is first degree murder. United States v. Evans (28 App. D.C. 264).

30. Self-defense

To justify application of the law of self-defense, the defendant must show clearly that he was attacked, and that he had good reason to believe that he was in imminent peril of his life or of great bodily harm. Hopkins v. United States (4 App. D. C. 430).

Accidental homicide and homicide in self-defense are wholly irreconcilable. Fearson v. United States (10 App. D. C. 536).

Court properly charged the jury that they should consider the words and acts of the deceased and any threats against the accused at the time of the killing. Wallace v. United States (18 App. D. C. 152).

Stabbing of a woman is not justifiable as self-defense in absence of anything to show that defendant suffered pain, or was apprehensive of bodily harm so serious as to suggest the use of a deadly weapon. Grant v. United States (28 App. D. C. 169).

Before one can be permitted to take life under the apprehension that he is in danger of life or serious bodily harm from the violence of another, it must appear that he had a reasonable right to believe, from all the facts and circumstances presented to his mind, that he was in such danger. Sacrine v. United States (38 App. D. C. 371).

In homicidal cases, where the defense is self-defense, the majority of the courts hold "that it is proper to give incidents or specific acts of violence within the knowledge of the witness or coming under his observation." Marshall v. United States (45 App. D.C. 373).

A charge to the jury that it must appear that there was no reasonable occasion for the defendant to escape from the conflict was error, as the true test is whether circumstances presented to the mind of the defendant were such that would have produced upon the mind of any reasonable, prudent person, the reasonable belief that the deceased was about to kill him or do him serious bodily harm. Id.

A charge is sufficient which states that "if a man reasonably believes that he is in immediate danger of death or grievous bodily harm from his assailant, he may stand his ground, and if he kills him he has not exceeded the bounds of lawful self-defense." Price v. United States (1922, 276 F. 628, 51 App. D.C. 106).

31. Severance

Refusal of motion of one of two defendants jointly indicted on charge of killing another in perpetrating a robbery for a severance on ground that such defendant could not obtain a fair and impartial trial because codefendant had made admissions and confessions out of his presence and hearing was not an abuse of discretion, where codefendant's testimony from witness stand was substantially to same effect as his former extrajudicial statement implicating moving defendant. Wheeler v. U.S. (1948, 165 F. 2d 225, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 363, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 448, 333 U.S. 830, 92 L. Ed. 1115). See, also, Wheeler v. Reid (1949, 175 F. 2d 829, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

Refusal to grant three defendants jointly indicted on charge of murder in perpetration of robbery separate trials was not an abuse of discretion, where trial court duly limited effect of evidence introduced which was competent against one defendant and incompetent as to others. Hall v. U.S. (1948, 168 F. 2d 161, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 166, 4 A.L.R. 2d 1193, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 1509, 334 U.S. 853, 92 L. Ed. 1775, rehearing denied 69 S. Ct. 9, 335 U.S. 839, 93 L. Ed. 391).

32. Summation of evidence

Fact that trial court, when summarizing the evidence, took longer to summarize evidence of the prosecution did not establish that it had placed undue emphasis on evidence of prosecution and had minimized evidence of defendant, where more time was taken to summarize evidence of prosecution because it was more voluminous than that of defendant, and it was not claimed by defendant that certain facts were "singled out" without consideration of other modifying facts. Wheeler v. U. S. (1948, 165 F. 2d 225, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 363, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 448, 333 U.S. 830, 92 L. Ed. 1115). See, also, Wheeler v. Reid (1949, 175 F. 2d 829, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

33. Time

Some appreciable time must elapse in order that reflection and consideration amounting to the deliberation and premeditation required for first-degree murder may occur. Bullock v. U.S. (1941, 122 F. 2d 213, 74 App. D.C. 220, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 39, 317 U. S. 627, 87 L. Ed. 507).

34. Trial proceedings

An examination of murder weapon by ballistics expert during trial was not part of the trial and the fact that such examination was made in the absence of the defendant does not render inadmissible the evidence concerning it. Goodall v. U.S. (1950, 180 F. 2d 397, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 148, 17 A.L.R. 2d 1070, certiorari denied 70 S. Ct. 1009, 339 U.S. 987, 94 L. Ed. 924).

35. Verdict

In District of Columbia a jury may not qualify a verdict of murder in the first degree by adding thereto "without capital punishment." Johnson v. United States (38 App D.C. 347, affirmed 32 S. Ct. 748, 225 U.S. 405, 56 L. Ed. 1142).

Where the evidence was sufficient for jury on charge of first-degree murder and jury was properly instructed, court's refusal to direct a verdict on first-degree murder charge could not be held to have erroneously influenced jury in reaching its verdict of second-degree murder. Thomas v. U.S. (1947, 158 F. 2d 97, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 314, certiorari denied 67 S. Ct. 1303, 331 U.S. 822, 91 L. Ed. 1838).

36. Victim's conduct contributing to death

One who, in striking another, inflicts a blow which may not be mortal in and of itself but thereby starts a chain of causation which leads to death, is guilty of homicide even if victim contributes to his own death or hastens it by failing to take proper treatment. United States v. Hamilton (1960, 182 F. Supp. 548).

Where, after defendant had jumped on and kicked victim's face, tubes were inserted into victim's nasal passages and trachea to maintain his breathing process, but victim later pulled out the tubes and died of asphyxiation due to aspiration or inhalation of blood caused by the severe injuries to his face, defendant was guilty of homicide, not merely of assault with a dangerous weapon, even if victim consciously and deliberately pulled out tubes and would have lived if he had not. Id.

§ 22-2402. Murder in first degree—Placing obstructions upon or displacement of railroad.

Whoever maliciously places an obstruction upon a railroad or street railroad, or displaces or injures anything appertaining thereto, or does any other act with intent to endanger the passage of any locomotive or car, and thereby occasions the death of another, is guilty of murder in the first degree. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1321, ch. 854, § 799.)

Whoever with malice aforethought, except as provided in sections 22-2401, 22-2402, kills another, is guilty of murder in the second degree. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1321, ch. 854, § 800; June 12, 1940, 54 Stat. 347, ch. 339.)

1. Generally

"Murder in the second degree" is the unlawful killing of another, where there is not a premeditated design and plan to effect death, but where there is malice aforethought. Fryer v. United States (1953, 207 F. 2d 134, 93 U. S. App. D. C. 34, certiorari denied 74 S. Ct. 135, 346 U. S. 885, 98 L. Ed. 389, rehearing denied 74 S. Ct. 305, 346 U. S. 928, 98 L. Ed. 420).

2. Accident

If defendant did not have purpose to kill or if pistol went off accidentally, he would be guilty of murder in the second degree. Marcus v. United States (1937, 86 F. 2d 854, 66 App. D.C. 298).

Instruction to jury was correct to the effect that if in perpetrating the crime the killing was not done purposely but by accident or otherwise, appellant was not guilty of murder in the first degree. Jordon v. United States (1937, 87 F. 2d 64, 66 App. D.C. 309, certiorari denied 58 S. Ct. 762, 303 U.S. 654, 82 L. Ed. 1114).

3. Admissibility of evidence

On plea of self-defense evidence of deceased's character and belligerency, though unknown to defendant, is admissible in corroboration of defendant's testimony that deceased was the aggressor. Evans v. United States (1960, 277 F. 2d 354, 107 U. S. App. D. C. 324).

In prosecution for homicide resulting in conviction of second degree murder where defendant claimed killing was necessary in order to repel sexual assault by deceased who was drunk at the time of killing, it was reversible error to refuse to admit testimony to the effect that deceased was aggressive when drunk. Id.

Error in exclusion of testimony is not harmless if the excluded testimony, while not sufficient to produce an acquittal, might have induced jury to convict of a lesser included offense. Id.

In prosecution of defendant for killing of his wife's paramour who had engaged in improper relations with defendant's wife, wherein defendant asserted that he was of unsound mind at time of commission of the homicide in that he had "blacked out" at time of shooting, and that his state of mind was due to destruction of sanctity of his home, questioning of defendant about his relations with another woman was not error even though it might incidentally indicate commission of other crimes, since the evidence was relevant and material to defendant's attitude towards his own wife and home. Bell v. United States (1954, 210 F. 2d 711, 93 U. S. App. D. C. 173, certiorari denied 74 S. Ct. 682, 347 U. S. 956, 98 L. Ed. 1101, certiorari denied 77 S. Ct. 684, 353 U. S. 924, 1 L. Ed. 2d 720, certiorari denied 78 S. Ct. 1002, 356 U. S. 963, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1070).

In murder prosecution, where preceding witnesses had testified that defendant stabbed deceased with a knife, testimony that immediately after the stabbing deceased exclaimed "I've been stuck" was admissible as part of the res gestae, although the witness so testifying did not also testify that the attack had taken place. U. S. v. Edmonds (1946, 63 F. Supp. 968).

In prosecution for murder of husband, forged letter written by accused to a friend of husband and purporting to be a confession of murder by fictitious person was admissible, though letter was postmarked and delivered several months after crime was committed. Harris v. U.S. (1948, 169 F. 2d 887, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 348, certiorari denied 69 S. Ct. 161, 335 U.S. 873, 93 L. Ed. 417).

4. Conviction of lesser offense

Although the indictment charged murder in first degree, appellant could have been found guilty of second degree murder had the evidence warranted it, since a defendant may be found guilty of any offense necessarily included in the crime charged in the indictment. Goodall v. United States (1950, 180 F. 2d 397, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 148, 17 A.L.R. 2d 1070, certiorari denied 70 S. Ct. 1009, 339 U.S. 987, 94 L. Ed. 1389).

5. Examination of witnesses

In murder prosecution, where defense counsel had elicited from defendant on direct examination the fact that he had been in jail continuously from time of his arrest, court properly permitted government counsel on cross-examination to inquire of defendant whether it was not a fact that the court had set bail at $1,500 and that defendant therefore had an opportunity to obtain release while awaiting trial if he had been able to secure bond. U.S. v. Edmonds (1946, 63 F. Supp. 968).

In murder prosecution, permitting government counsel on cross-examination to inquire of defendant whether it was not a fact that the court had set bail at $1,500 and that defendant could have obtained his release while awaiting trial if he had been able to secure bond, after defendant's counsel had brought out the fact that defendant had been in jail continuously from time of his arrest, did not affect the course of the trial so as to be ground for new trial. Id.

Defendant was not prejudiced by trial court's propounding questions to him when he was testifying as a witness, where defendant by the interchange was enabled to make a logical answer explaining his conduct, entirely consistent with his theory of self-defense. Griffin v. U.S. (1948, 164 F. 2d 903, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 20, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 727, 333 U.S. 857, 92 L. Ed. 1137).

6. Indeterminate Sentence Act

Indeterminate Sentence Act is inapplicable to second degree murder and the existing statute providing a penalty of imprisonment for life or for not less than 20 years remains in effect, and definite term of 20 years is a valid sentence. Anderson v. Rives (1936, 85 F. 2d 673, 66 App. D.C. 174).

7. Instructions

In homicide prosecution, omission to define "malice aforethought" and omission to charge on involuntary manslaughter constituted plain error, and second-degree murder conviction would have to be reversed and case remanded for new trial even though trial counsel had not requested such charges. McDonald v. United States (C.A.D.C. 1960, 284 F. 2d 232).

In prosecution for first degree murder, instruction to jury that second degree murder is killing with malice aforethought, but without intent to kill, was erroneous as to such limitation. Kitchen v. United States (1953, 205 F. 2d 720, 92 U.S. App. D.C. 382).

In prosecution for murder, court properly instructed that, if defendant did flee from the scene, jury had right to consider that fact as a consciousness of guilt, if jury deemed it proper to do so. U.S. v. Edmonds (1946, 63 F. Supp. 968).

In murder prosecution, where court called jury's attention to defendant's denial that he fled from the scene, and permitted jury to determine that question before they could consider flight as a consciousness of guilt, court did not err in refusing to elaborate by giving an additional charge to the effect that defendant claimed that he ran from the scene not for the purpose of avoiding arrest but because of fear of attack by decedent's companion. Id.

Appellant's claim that Court failed to charge that if jury believed him guilty of killing but if any reasonable doubt existed as to whether he committed murder first or murder second, it should be resolved in favor of the lesser crime, is without merit, since such an instruction is necessary only when from the evidence as a whole the jury might reasonably find guilty in either degree and must decide which degree. Goodall v. U.S. (1950, 180 F. 2d 397, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 148, 17 A.L.R. 2d 1070, certiorari denied 70 S. Ct. 1009, 339 U.S. 987, 94 L. Ed. 1389).

8. Intervening cause of death

Evidence sustained conviction of manslaughter notwithstanding defense of an intervening cause of death. Ross v. United States (1959, 267 F. 2d 618, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 341, certiorari denied 79 S. Ct. 1464, 360 U.S. 939, 3 L. Ed. 2d 1551).

9. Malice

"Malice" is a state of mind showing a heart fatally bent on mischief and unmindful of social duties and may also be defined as a condition of mind that prompts a person to do an injurious act wilfully to the injury of another; and malice may be implied or inferred from the act committed, or it may be expressed. Fryer v. United States (1953, 207 F. 2d 134, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 34, certiorari denied 74 S. Ct. 135, 346 U.S. 885, 98 L. Ed. 389, rehearing denied 74 S. Ct. 305, 346 U.S. 928, 98 L. Ed. 420).

Where a homicide directly resulted from excessive speed of the driver of an automobile carrying contraband liquor, after being told to stop by arresting officers, the illegal transportation was an offense punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary, and constitutes the malice essential to murder in the second degree. Lee v. United States (1940, 112 F. 2d 46, 72 App. D.C. 147).

A defendant's voluntary intoxication does not of itself negative the malice required to constitute second-degree murder and thereby reduce second-degree murder to voluntary manslaughter. Nestlerode v. U.S. (1941, 122 F. 2d 56, 74 App. D.C. 276).

Presence of absence of malice aforethought constitutes difference between second-degree murder and manslaughter. United States v. Hamilton (1960, 182 F. Supp. 548).

Where there is malice aforethought in regard to a homicide, crime is second-degree murder, but, if malice aforethought is lacking, crime is manslaughter. Id.

"Malice aforethought" or "malice" is a word of art and, in law of homicide, denotes a vicious and wicked state of mind and may be described as a heart fatally bent on mischief and unmindful of social duty. Id.

Where, as result of exchange of banter, subsequent argument, and then acrimonious quarrel, defendant knocked victim to the ground and, in fit of ungovernable rage, jumped on and kicked victim's face, thereby inflicting wounds which contributed to victim's death, there was no malice in the legal sense, and, therefore, crime was that of manslaughter. Id.

"Legal malice" does not necessarily mean a malicious or malevolent purpose or personal hatred or hostility toward deceased, but a state of mind which shows a heart unmindful of social duty and fatally bent on mischief, or which prompts a person to do an injurious act willfully to the injury of another. U.S. v. Edmonds (1946, 63 F. Supp. 968).

A killing under the influence of passion, induced by insufficient provocation, may be "murder in the second degree," and an accidental or unintentional killing constitutes murder in the second degree if it is accompanied by malice. Id.

10. Manslaughter

Where defendant struck a person who fell to the sidewalk and whose head hit the concrete and where several days later such person died as a result of the head injuries, the defendant was guilty of manslaughter. Williams v. United States (1959, 267 F. 2d 625, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 348).

11. Premeditation

An intentional killing that is not premeditated and not connected with another crime is "murder in the second degree". Kitchen v. United States (1953, 205 F. 2d 720, 92 U.S. App. D.C. 382).

12. Questions withheld from jury

Under all the facts and circumstances, the question whether there had been only second degree murder because of the killer's intoxication should not have been submitted to the jury. Goodall v. U.S. (1950, 180 F. 2d 397, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 148, 17 A.L.R. 2d 1070, certiorari denied 70 S. Ct. 1009, 339 U.S. 987, 94 L. Ed. 1389).

13. Reduction to manslaughter

If the killing is committed in a sudden heat of passion, caused by adequate provocation, the crime may be reduced from murder to manslaughter, but a trivial or slight assault is not sufficient provocation for that purpose. U.S. v. Edmonds (1946, 63 F. Supp. 968).

Jury was warranted in concluding that conduct of deceased in kicking defendant was not adequate provocation for the fatal stabbing of deceased, so as to reduce the killing to manslaughter. Id.

14. Sufficiency of evidence

In homicide prosecution, evidence raised question for jury as to whether defendant was not guilty by reason of insanity. Rose v. United States (C.A.D.C. 1960, 283 F. 2d 376).

Evidence that defendant approached deceased and others with a knife in his hand and wantonly stabbed deceased during an altercation, resulting in death, warranted conviction of murder in the second degree. U.S. v. Edmonds (1946, 63 F. Supp. 968).

Evidence that defendant found deceased with a woman with whom defendant was friendly, that some discussion ensued, followed by an altercation during which defendant cut deceased with a knife resulting in death, justified a finding that defendant acted with the malice aforethought essential to crime of second degree murder. Thomas v. U.S. (1947, 158 F. 2d 97, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 314, certiorari denied 67 S. Ct. 1303, 331 U.S. 822, 91 L. Ed. 1838).

Evidence sustained conviction of second degree murder as against contention that fatal wound was inflicted in self-defense. Parker v. U.S. (1947, 158 F. 2d 185, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 282, certiorari denied 67 S. Ct. 861, 330 U.S. 829, 91 L. Ed. 1278).

The punishment of murder in the first degree shall be death by electrocution. The punishment of murder in the second degree shall be imprisonment for life, or for not less than twenty years. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1321, ch. 854, § 801; Jan. 30, 1925, 43 Stat. 798, ch. 115, § 1.)

AMENDMENT

1925—Act Jan. 30, 1925, changed punishment of murder in first degree, from hanging to electrocution.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Accident 1
Double jeopardy 2
Indeterminate Sentence Act 3
Prosecution for second-degree murder 4
Supersedece 5

1. Accident

If defendant did not have purpose to kill or if pistol went off accidentally, he would then be guilty of murder in the second degree and punishable by imprisonment for life, or for not less than 20 years. Marcus v. United States (1937, 86 F. 2d 854, 66 App. D.C. 298).

2. Double jeopardy

Where jury was authorized at first trial to find defendant guilty of either first degree murder or second degree murder, and jury found defendant guilty of second degree murder, but on appeal that conviction was reversed and the case was remanded for a new trial, second trial of defendant for first degree murder placed him in jeopardy twice for same offense in violation of the constitutional prohibition against double jeopardy, and defendant had not waived that defense by making successful appeal of erroneous conviction of second degree murder. Green v. United States (1957, 78 S. Ct. 221, 355 U.S. 184, 2 L. Ed. 2d 199, 61 A.L.R. 2d 1119).

Where jury was authorized to find defendant guilty of either first degree murder or alternatively of second degree murder and jury found him guilty of second degree murder, defendant, by appealing, did not prolong his original jeopardy, and when his conviction for second degree murder was reversed and case remanded he could not be tried again for first degree murder without placing him in new jeopardy. Id.

3. Indeterminate Sentence Act

Indeterminate Sentence Act is inapplicable to second degree murder and the existing penalty of imprisonment for life or for not less than 20 years remains in effect. Anderson v. Rives (1936, 85 F. 2d 673, 66 App. D.C. 174).

4. Prosecution for second-degree murder

Prosecution in District of Columbia for second-degree murder was properly conducted in name of the United States rather than in name of District of Columbia. Morton v. Welch (C.C.A. Va. 1947, 162 F. 2d 840, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 44, 332 U.S. 779, 92 L. Ed. 363, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 1498, 334 U.S. 848, 92 L. Ed. 1771).

5. Supersedece

Provisions of the Criminal Code as to murder and manslaughter do not supersede or repeal the Code of the District of Columbia. Johnson v. United States (1912, 32 S. Ct. 748, 225 U.S. 405, 56 L. Ed. 1142).

§ 22-2405. Punishment for manslaughter.

Whoever commits manslaughter shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding fifteen years, or by both such fine and imprisonment. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1321, ch. 854, § 802.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Definition of manslaughter 1
Indictment
Generally 2
Sufficiency 3
Involuntary manslaughter 4
Joinder of defendants 5
Jury 6
Sufficiency of indictment 3

1. Definition of manslaughter

"Manslaughter" is the unlawful killing of a human being without malice aforethought. U.S. v. Edmonds (1946, 63 F. Supp. 968). See, also, Fryer v. United States (1953, 207 F. 2d 134, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 34, certiorari denied 74 S. Ct. 135, 346 U.S. 885, 98 L. Ed. 389, rehearing denied 74 S. Ct. 305, 346 U.S. 928, 98 L. Ed. 420).

2. Indictment—Generally

Crime must be charged with reasonable particularity of time, place, and circumstances. United States v. Geare (1924, 293 F. 997, 54 App. D.C. 30).

3. Sufficiency

Where manslaughter indictment against landlord, its vice president, and tenant, who operated rooming house, charged acts of negligence which were not violations of common law duties jointly owed by defendants, and indictment was uncertain concerning statutory and regulatory requirements with which defendants allegedly failed to comply, the indictment was bad on demurrer. U.S. v. Interstate Properties (1946, 153 F. 2d 469, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 392).

If regulation is pleaded which requires notice from an official to person who owns or controls building that a specific condition must be remedied within a certain period of time, fact should be stated concerning the giving of such notice and allegations of manslaughter indictment that findings and directives were made known to defendants were insufficient, but nature of findings and directives and when and how they were made known to defendants should have been made to appear. Id.

Where manslaughter indictment charged landlord, its vice president, and tenant, who operated rooming house, with negligently failing to have a dumb-waiter shaft constructed of fire-resistive materials and negligently failing to provide a front fire escape, and that defendants were under duty to roomers to comply with all orders, rules, regulations, and ordinances relating to use, occupancy and safety of buildings, and particularly building code and elevator code of District of Columbia, and that regulations required dumb-waiter shaft to be of fire-resistive construction, the indictment did not sufficiently plead existence of applicable regulations requiring use of fire-resistive materials in dumb-waiter shafts and installation of front fire escape. Id.

4. Involuntary manslaughter

Conviction on charge of involuntary manslaughter affirmed, upon evidence that defendant operated an automobile while drinking and in a criminally careless manner, and ran over and caused the death of a man whom he knew to be so intoxicated he could hardly stand. Story v. United States (1927, 16 F. 2d 342, 57 App. D.C. 3, 53 A.L.R. 246, certiorari denied 47 S. Ct. 576, 274 U.S. 739, 71 L. Ed. 1318).

5. Joinder of defendants

Where manslaughter indictment charged landlord, its vice president, and tenant, who operated rooming house, with violation of alleged joint duty to use reasonable care to maintain premises in a reasonably safe condition, that defendants negligently failed to have a dumb-waiter shaft constructed of fire-resistive materials, that they negligently failed to forbid use of shaft as a receptacle for waste, and that they negligently failed to provide a front fire escape, the acts of negligence charged were not violations of common-law duties jointly owed by the defendants, and there was a misjoinder of defendants under common law principles. U. S. v. Interstate Properties (1946, 153 F. 2d 469, 80 App. D.C. 392).

6. Jury

Deliberations of the jury should be confined to the charge in the indictment, and if defendant was not charged generally with negligence but with specific acts of negligence, namely, unlawful speeding and reckless driving, and if the death was not caused by those acts or one of them, he was entitled to a verdict of not guilty. Sinclair v. United States (1920, 265 F. 991, 49 App. D.C. 351).

Chapter 25.—PERJURY

Sec.

22-2501. Perjury—Subornation of perjury.

Every person who, having taken an oath or affirmation before a competent tribunal, officer, or person, in any case in which the law authorized such oath or affirmation to be administered, that he will testify, declare, depose, or certify truly, or that any written testimony, declaration, deposition, or certificate by him subscribed is true, wilfully and contrary to such oath or affirmation states or subscribes any material matter which he does not believe to be true, shall be guilty of perjury; and any person convicted of perjury or subornation of perjury shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for not less than two nor more than ten years. Any such false testimony, declaration, deposition, or certificate given in the District of Columbia, but intended to be used in a judicial proceeding elsewhere, shall also be perjury within the meaning of this section. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1329, ch. 854, § 858.)

1. Administration of oaths

This section is broad enough to cover false testimony given under oath before any tribunal or any officer or person authorized to administer oaths. U. S. v. Meyers (1948, 75 F. Supp. 486, affirmed 171 F. 2d 800, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 101, 11 A.L.R. 2d 1, certiorari denied 69 S. Ct. 602, 336 U. S. 912, 93 L. Ed. 1076).

A United States senator as chairman of a subcommittee was an "officer or person authorized to administer oaths" within meaning of this section. Id.

2. Admissibility of evidence

In prosecution for perjury, teletype message sent by F. B. I. in Washington to Texas agent containing accusations that defendant had been guilty of fornication in District of Columbia was improperly received because of charge of another criminal offense. Pyle v. U.S. (1946, 156 F. 2d 852, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 209).

In perjury prosecution based on testimony of defendant in rape prosecution denying that signature on statement introduced in evidence was his, where no signatures were obtained from defendant during the perjury trial, signatures which were part of record from rape case were admissible and were not objectionable as requiring defendant to give testimony. Buckner v. U.S. (1946, 154 F. 2d 317, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 38).

Submission of illegally obtained evidence to a previous Grand Jury, which did not indict defendant, would not necessarily raise an inference that the same or similar unlawful evidence was presented to a Grand Jury which was impaneled two years later and returned an indictment charging defendant with perjury. United States v. Weinberg (1953, 108 F. Supp. 567).

3. Authorized by law

An oath to portion of application for duplicate certificate of title for a motor vehicle, requiring a statement of reason for the application, was not "authorized by law" within meaning of this section. Shelton v. U.S. (1948, 165 F. 2d 241, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 32).

Information called for by regulations under Traffic Act § 40-601 et seq., in an application for certificate of title is not required to be under oath so as to constitute a false statement perjury, though lien statement which Motor Vehicle Lien Law, § 40-701 et seq., requires that application contain, must be under oath. Id.

4. Belief as to falsity of testimony

To return a verdict of guilty on a charge of perjury, jury must be convinced beyond reasonable doubt not only that accused testified falsely but that he did not, at the time, believe his testimony to be true. Young v. United States (1954, 212 F. 2d 236, 94 U. S. App. D. C. 54, certiorari denied 74 S. Ct. 870, 347 U. S. 1015, 98 L. Ed. 1137).

Generally, a belief as to falsity of testimony may be inferred by jury in perjury prosecution from proof of falsity itself, although in some cases this may not be so, as, for instance, where testimony concerns a triviality or an occurrence of long before. Id.

5. Circumstantial evidence

Falsity of sworn statement and that the accused actually remembered the facts which he had formerly sworn to may be proved by circumstantial evidence and the only issue in such a case is whether it meets the test of proof beyond a reasonable doubt. Behrle v. United States (1939, 100 F. 2d 714, 69 App. D.C. 304).

6. Civil service

Under civil-service regulations, false statements as to whether one had previously been employed by the Government, and whether he resigned or was discharged, was perjury within section R.S. § 5392 (section 1621 of title 18, U.S. Code). Johnson v. United States (26 App. D.C. 128).

7. Conspiracy

Crime of conspiracy to commit perjury under § 37 United States Penal Code of March 4, 1909 (35 Stat. 1088, ch. 321, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1588), relating to offenses against United States, and D. C. 1901, § 858 (this section) (31 Stat. 1329, ch. 854), denouncing perjury offenses, is charged by indictment alleging pending divorce suit in Supreme Court of District of Columbia, but such indictment does not come within meaning of the Code of 1901, § 910 (§ 22-107) which provides for punishment of offenses not covered by District Code or any law inapplicable to District of Columbia by United States. Fletcher v. United States (42 App. D.C. 53, certiorari denied 35 S. Ct. 283, 235 U.S. 706, 59 L. Ed. 434).

8. Constitutionality

In prosecution for perjury allegedly committed by witness before Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, count of indictment charging that witness lied in denying that he had ever been a sympathizer or promoter of Communism or Communist interests, was fatally defective because it restricted freedom of belief and expression in violation of the First Amendment to the Federal Constitution providing that Congress shall make no law abridging freedom of speech, or of the press. United States v. Lattimore (1953, 112 F. Supp. 507, affirmed in part, reversed in part on other grounds 215 F. 2d 847, 94 U. S. App. D. C. 268).

In prosecution for perjury allegedly committed by witness before Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, count of indictment charging that witness was lying when he stated that neither he nor anyone in his party made any pre-arrangements with the Communist Party in order to get into Yenan, China was invalid for failure to meet requirements of the Sixth Amendment to the federal Constitution which protects an accused in right to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation against him and Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure which requires that indictment shall be a plain, concise, and definite written statement of essential facts constituting offense charged. Id.

In prosecution for perjury allegedly committed by witness before Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, count of indictment charging that witness lied in denying that he had ever been a sympathizer or promoter of Communism or Communist interests, was fatally defective because in violation of the Sixth Amendment to the federal Constitution protecting accused in right to be informed of nature and cause of such accusation against him. Id.

9. Corroboration

Perjury cannot be proved by uncorroborated testimony of one witness, since falsity of one person's oath cannot be established by another person's oath alone. Doto v. United States (1955, 223 F. 2d 309, 96 U. S. App. D. C. 17, certiorari denied 76 S. Ct. 59, 350 U. S. 847, 100 L. Ed. 754).

In a perjury prosecution the rule is that the uncorroborated oath of one witness is not enough to establish, for purposes of conviction of perjury, the falsity of sworn testimony, and it is not the rule that no person may be convicted of perjury unless the falsity of the statement made under oath is established by the testimony of two independent witnesses or by one witness and the corroborating facts and circumstances. Maragon v. United States (1951, 187 F. 2d 79, 87 U. S. App. D. C. 349, certiorari denied 71 S. Ct. 804, 341 U. S. 932, 95 L. Ed. 1361).

10. Crime against United States

A crime against United States is committed by any person who violates either § 818 (§ 22-2304) or this section of the Federal Code. Arnstein v. United States (1924, 296 F. 946, 54 App. D.C. 199).

11. Defense

A defense to a charge of perjury may not be established by the device of lifting a statement of the accused out of its immediate context and thereby giving it a meaning wholly different from that which its context clearly shows. Meyers v. United States (1949, 171 F. 2d 800, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 101, 11 A.R.L. 2d 1, certiorari denied 69 S. Ct. 602, 336 U.S. 912, 93 L. Ed. 1076).

12. Federal Penal Code

Had Congress intended that the perjury statute in the Federal Penal Code should have effect in the District of Columbia, it would have said so in clear language. Carpenter v. United States (1939, 100 F. 2d 716, 69 App. D.C. 306).

13. Habeas Corpus

If it be assumed, arguendo, that the Court erred in its trial of a perjury committed before Congress in holding that three Senators (admittedly present) of a Congressional subcommittee were qualified, at most it was a mere error of law not subject to attack by habeas corpus as habeas corpus does not lie to correct mere errors in law but proper remedy is by appeal. Meyers v. U.S. (1950, 181 F. 2d 802, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 320, certiorari denied 70 S. Ct. 1030, 339 U.S. 983, 94 L. Ed. 923).

14. Indictment

In prosecution for perjury allegedly committed by witness before Subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee, count of indictment charging that witness lied in denying that he had ever been a sympathizer or promoter of Communism or Communist interests was void for vagueness. United States v. Lattimore (1954, 215 F. 2d 847, 94 U. S. App. D. C. 268).

In prosecution for perjury allegedly committed by witness before Subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee, count of indictment charging that witness lied when he testified that he did not "know" that certain contributor to magazine edited by witness was a Communist was not, because of the use of the word "know", invalid, on ground of vagueness. Id.

In prosecution for perjury allegedly committed by witness before Subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee, count of indictment charging that witness lied when he testified that, apart from Russian contributions, he never published, while editor of magazine, an article by a person whom he knew to be a Communist was sufficiently certain and involved a valid and proper inquiry. D. C. Id.

In prosecution for perjury allegedly committed by witness before Subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee, count of indictment charging that witness lied in denying that he knew that contributor to magazine, which was edited by witness, was a "Communist" was not invalid, on ground of vagueness, because of the use of the word "Communist." Id.

In prosecution for perjury allegedly committed by witness before Subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee, count of indictment charging that witness testified falsely when he gave a negative answer to question whether it was necessary, before he went beyond line of demarcation between Nationalist China and Communist China, to have permission of Communist authorities and when he testified that neither he nor any one in his party made any prearrangement with the Communist Party in order to get into Communist China was invalid because of a fatal variance in its terms. Id.

Failure to set forth person before whom oath was taken together with his authority to administer same was not fatal to perjury indictment, especially in view of rule requiring merely that indictment be plain, concise, and definite written statement of essential facts constituting offense charged and providing that it need not contain any other matter not necessary to such statement. United States v. Young (1953, 113 F. Supp. 20, affirmed 212 F. 2d 236, 94 U. S. App. D. C. 54, certiorari denied 74 S. Ct. 870, 347 U. S. 1015, 98 L. Ed. 1137)

15. Instructions

Instruction that "perjury" is simply the giving of false testimony under oath, testimony that a party does not believe to be true, and that if he testifies before a competent tribunal as to a fact which is false, and he does not believe it to be true, then that is "perjury", was sufficient, though court did not in terms define the word "willfully". Maragon v. United States (1951, 187 F. 2d 79, 87 U.S. App. D.C. 349, certiorari denied 71 S. Ct. 804, 341 U.S. 932, 95 L. Ed. 1361).

In perjury prosecution, instructions charging jury on matter of corroboration were proper. Buckner v. U. S. (1946, 154 F. 2d 317, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 38).

16. Issue

Question is not whether appellant made the statement voluntarily or involuntarily or whether the statement made was true or false, for it was not the truth or falsity of what he said which was involved, but simply the fact of his having said it. O'Brien v. United States (1938, 99 F. 2d 368, 69 App. D.C. 135).

17. Marriage license

Under the statute defining perjury, generally, or by requirements of the statute which defines it in terms of false swearing by an applicant for a marriage license, the ultimate test of materiality in either case is whether such statements have a natural tendency to influence the clerk in his investigation of the facts, in the exercise of his official discretion, and in the administration of the law. Robinson v. United States (1940, 114 F. 2d 475, 72 App. D.C. 254).

18. Materiality of evidence

Where perjury prosecution was based upon alleged perjurious statement, which was made by defendant while testifying before the Senate Special Committee to Investigate Organized Crime in Interstate Commerce, that defendant was a United States citizen, question as to defendant's citizenship was material to inquiry which committee was authorized to make. Doto v. United States (1955, 223 F. 2d 309, 96 U. S. App. D. C. 17, certiorari denied 76 S. Ct. 59, 350 U. S. 847, 100 L. Ed. 754).

In order to obtain a conviction for perjury of witness who allegedly testified falsely before a Subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee, the government was required to prove that question, which witness allegedly answered untruthfully, was material to the investigation being carried on by the Subcommittee. United States v. Lattimore (1954, 215 F. 2d 847, 94 U. S. App. D. C. 268).

Perjury is committed when one states, contrary to his oath, any material matter which he does not believe to be true. Pyle v. U.S. (1946, 156 F. 2d 852, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 209).

Although perjury must relate to a matter which was material to the issue, the materiality need not be immediate, but it is sufficient if the false testimony gives weight to or detracts from testimony as to material facts in issue. Id.

Where defendant's testimony in prosecution of another for unlawful transportation of a girl for immoral purposes did not vary on issue of transportation from defendant's prior written statement, variations between statement and testimony on question of whether statement was given voluntarily, as to who paid rent on her apartment and other details, related to immaterial matters and furnished no basis for perjury charge. Id.

In a perjury case arising out of a congressional investigation, which concededly may be broad in its scope as far as determining necessity for corrective legislation is concerned, element of materiality must be present or charges fall. United States v. Lattimore (1953, 112 F. Supp. 507, affirmed in part, reversed in part on other grounds, 215 F. 2d 847, 94 U. S. App. D. C. 268).

19. Nature of perjury

The word "wilfully" in a perjury statute means "knowingly" or "intentionally". Maragon v. United States (1951, 187 F. 2d 79, 87 U. S. App. D. C. 349, certiorari denied 71 S. Ct. 804, 341 U. S. 932, 95 L. Ed 1361).

The criminal nature of perjury is not removed by the fact that the perjurer later in the proceedings states the truth. Meyers v. United States (1949, 171 F. 2d 800, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 101, 11 A.R.L. 2d 1, certiorari denied 69 S. Ct. 602, 336 U.S. 912, 93 L. Ed. 1076).

20. Number of offenses

One making two false statements, one violating this section and the other violating Motor Vehicle Lien Law, § 40-714, commits two offenses, though both statements are under one oath. Shelton v. U.S. (1948, 165 F. 2d 241, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 32).

21. Reversal

Where counts charging perjury were merged and it could not be determined upon which false statement in application for certificate of title the jury rested its general verdict, but verdict if upon statement as to liens would not support sentence, judgment of conviction was subject to reversal. Shelton v. U.S. (1948, 165 F. 2d 241, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 32).

22. Sentence

Where appellant was convicted on three counts, each of which charged him with suborning one of another's perjuries, and received only one sentence, the judgment must be affirmed where appellant was properly convicted on any one of the three counts against him. Meyers v. United States (1949, 171 F. 2d 800, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 101, 11 A.R.L. 2d 1, certiorari denied 69 S. Ct. 602, 336 U.S. 912, 93 L. Ed. 1076).

23. Sufficiency of evidence

Evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction for perjury. Doto v. United States (1955, 223 F. 2d 309, 96 U. S. App. D. C. 17, certiorari denied 76 S. Ct. 59, 350 U. S. 847, 100 L. Ed. 754).

Evidence sustained conviction of defendant for perjury for testifying under oath before Investigating Subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments that he had only one bank account. Maragon v. United States (1951, 187 F. 2d 79, 87 U.S. App. D.C. 349, certiorari denied 71 S. Ct. 804, 341 U.S. 932, 95 L. Ed. 1361).

Corroborative evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction for perjury. Buckner v. U.S. (1946, 154 F. 2d 317, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 38).

24. Tribunal

The word "tribunal", as used in this section, implies an officer or body having authority to adjudicate matters,

25. — Congress

Where appellant was convicted of perjury before a Congressional Committee, such conviction must be reversed where the committee did not constitute a quorum, as all of the elements of the crime charged shall be proved beyond a reasonable doubt and an element of the crime of perjury is the presence of a competent tribunal, and a tribunal that is not competent is no tribunal. Christofjel v. United States (1949, 69 S. Ct. 1447, 338 U.S. 84, 93 L. Ed. 1826).

In prosecution for perjury allegedly committed by witness before Subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee, count of indictment charging that witness lied in denying that he knew that contributor to magazine, which was edited by witness, was a Communist was not defective, as a matter of law, on ground that question was not material to study being made by Subcommittee with reference to subversive activities of Communist agents. United States v. Lattimore (1954, 215 F. 2d 847, 94 U.S. App. D.C. 268).

In passing on motion to dismiss indictment charging that witness perjured himself before Subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee, it was proper to draw from Subcommittee's hearings explanatory material necessary to an understanding of the terms and parts of the indictment, but it was not permissible to refer to the hearings for facts which might become issues on the pleas and which might be subject to dispute. Id.

One may be indicted for perjury before Congress under this section. Meyers v. United States (1949, 171 F. 2d 800, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 101, 11 A.R.L. 2d 1, certiorari denied 69 S. Ct. 602, 336 U.S. 912, 93 L. Ed. 1076).

(July 15, 1932, 47 Stat. 698, ch. 492, § 8; June 6, 1940, 54 Stat. 243, ch. 254, § 6 (a).)

1. Constitutionality

This section declaring it a crime "to invite, entice, persuade * * * any person * * * for purpose of prostitution," is not unconstitutional as setting up no ascertainable standard of guilt or so vague, indefinite and general as to violate rights of one accused of such offense under Fifth Amendment, but is clear in language and purpose, free of ambiguity, and lays down definite and easily understandable standard of criminal liability. Hawkins v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1954, 105 A. 2d 250).

2. Counsel for indigent defendant

When prosecution involves a matter of serious moral turpitude but there is no appeal as a matter of right to Municipal Court of Appeals because penalty imposed is less than $50, indigent defendant is entitled to aid of counsel in preparing application for leave to appeal. Wildeblood v. United States (1959, 273 F. 2d 73, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 338).

3. Enforcement

Enforcement of this section making it unlawful for any person to invite another to accompany him for lewd and immoral purpose must be with design to prevent offense, to prevent unwarranted irreparable destruction of reputations, and to prevent criminal offense of blackmail in connection with charge of verbal invitation, and it must not foster conditions or practices which make easy and encourage such offense. Kelly v. United States (1952, 194 F. 2d 150, 90 U.S. App. D.C. 125).

4. Evidence—In general

Testimony asserting sodomy must be subjected to most careful scrutiny, and such principle is applicable to invitation to sodomy. Kelly v. United States (1952, 194 F. 2d 150, 90 U.S. App. D.C. 125).

That defendant "asked him if he wanted a date" did not necessarily include prostitution. Williams v. United States (1940, 110 F. 2d 554, 71 App. D.C. 377).

It is not necessary to prove any particular language or conduct to establish that a defendant solicited prostitution. Curran v. U.S. (D.C. Mun. App. 1947, 52 A. 2d 121).

5. — Admissibility

In prosecution for soliciting prostitution, where officer's opinion or assumption as to what consideration the $5 demanded by defendant would cover was elicited by defense counsel on cross-examination, defendant could not complain that such evidence was inadmissible. Hall v. U.S. (D.C. Mun. App. 1943, 34 A. 2d 631).

6. — Arresting officer, testimony of Great caution should be applied in considering testimony of arresting officer in cases where alleged assault is nonviolent sexual touching which by its nature left no traces and to which there were no other witnesses. Guarro v. United States (1956, 237 F. 2d 578, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 97).

7. — Character evidence

In prosecution for statutory offense of unlawfully inviting another to accompany accused for lewd and immoral purpose, evidence of good character of accused is particularly applicable in that it is usually only defense, except word of accused, and should be considered by court. Kelly v. United States (1952, 194 F. 2d 150, 90 U.S. App. D.C. 125).

In prosecution for soliciting a person for immoral or lewd purposes an acquittal is not required to follow whenever evidence of good character of accused is presented. Bicksler v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1952, 90 A. 2d 233).

Character evidence alone is not determinative of guilt or innocence of an accused and at most it can be basis for inference by trier of facts that a person possessing good character would, in all probability and based on experience of human relations, not be guilty of crime charged. King v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1952, 90 A. 2d 229).

8. — Corroboration

In prosecution for soliciting for the purpose of prostitution, it was not necessary that testimony of the person solicited be corroborated. Parker v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1958, 143 A. 2d 98).

Corroboration of testimony of witness for prosecution is not required in a case of solicitation for prostitution. Price v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 135 A. 2d 854).

A conviction of soliciting for a lewd and immoral purpose may be based on uncorroborated testimony of one government witness. Brenke v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 78 A. 2d 677).

9. — Hearsay

In prosecution for soliciting for prostitution, even if evidence of conversation between sailor to whom arresting officer had been talking and one of sailors walking behind defendant were hearsay and improperly admitted, error, if any, was not prejudicial where finding of guilt was based upon solicitation which occurred subsequently. Price v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 135 A. 2d 854).

10. — Presumption of innocence

In prosecution for addressing a person for immoral purposes, brought to court without a jury, record did not establish that accused was not afforded presumption of innocence. King v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1952, 90 A. 2d 229).

11. — Sufficiency

Evidence was insufficient to sustain conviction for unlawful invitation by accused to another to accompany accused for lewd and immoral purpose. Kelly v. United States (1952, 194 F. 2d 150, 90 U.S. App. D.C. 125).

Evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction of soliciting for purpose of prostitution. Parker v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1958, 143 A. 2d 98).

Evidence sustained conviction for soliciting for prostitution. Price v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 135 A. 2d 854).

Evidence justified conviction for soliciting a person for immoral or lewd purposes. Bicksler v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1952, 90 A. 2d 233).

Evidence justified conviction for addressing a person for immoral purposes. King v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1952, 90 A. 2d 229).

In prosecution for soliciting prostitution of any person sixteen years of age or older, lack of testimony as to age of police officers allegedly solicited by defendant did not entitle her to acquittal when officers were in court so that judge, sitting without jury, could use his senses and draw inferences as to their ages by his personal observation. Cunningham v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1952, 86 A. 2d 918).

Evidence justified finding that witnesses were solicited directly and personally by defendant and sustained conviction for soliciting prostitution. Id.

Evidence as to the provocative position of defendant on a park bench, physical blandishment, challenging verbal invitation, prompt discussion of financial terms, and the ready arrangement for a room, sustained conviction of soliciting prostitution. Hall v. U.S. (D.C. Mun. App. 1943, 34 A. 2d 631).

Evidence sustained conviction of soliciting prostitution. Curran v. U. S. (D. C. Mun. App. 1947, 52 A. 2d 121).

12. Military service record

Defendant's honorable discharge from United States Army approximately five years before offense charged did not require defendant's acquittal of charge of soliciting for lewd and immoral purpose as a matter of law. Brenke v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 78 A. 2d 677).

13. Place of action

An information that does not charge that defendant acted in any such place as provided in the statute charges no crime. Williams v. United States (1940, 110 F. 2d 554, 71 App. D.C. 377).

14. Prior record of defendant

Fact that defendant during nine-year period had received six sentences for soliciting prostitution did not forfeit her right to equal protection of the law, but it did affect credibility of her testimony. Hamilton v. U. S. (1943, 31 A. 2d 887, reversed on other grounds 140 F. 2d 679, 78 U.S. App. D.C. 316).

15. Questions for Congress

Whether the District of Columbia was already adequately protected from the evils of prostitution without the added prohibition of transportation for that purpose was for Congress, not the courts, to decide. U. S. v. Beach (1945, 65 S. Ct. 602, 324 U.S. 193, 89 L. Ed 865, opinion conformed to 149 F. 2d 837, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 160, certiorari denied 66 S. Ct. 47, 326 U.S. 745, 90 L. Ed. 445).

16. Questions for jury

In prosecution for soliciting a person for immoral or lewd purposes, whether a solicitation occurred and whether solicitation was by defendant or by arresting officer, were for jury where testimony was conflicting and conflicting inferences could reasonably be drawn therefrom. Bicksler v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1952, 90 A. 2d 233).

17. Reopening of prosecution

Reopening of prosecution for soliciting for prostitution, after both government and defense had rested and final argument had commenced, to receive corroborating testimony as to defendant's presence at time and place of alleged offense was within sound discretion of trial court. Price v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 135 A. 2d 854).

18. Review

Where prior to taking of testimony on information motion to dismiss on ground that information did not charge crime was denied, and evidence was taken and motion on ground that no crime was charged and that crime had not been established was granted because evidence was insufficient, and judgment of not guilty was then entered on record, judgment was that evidence failed to sustain offense charged and state had no right to appeal. Korol v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 82 A. 2d 129).

In prosecution for soliciting prostitution, conflicting evidence raised question for trial judge, whose decision was conclusive on appeal where supported by substantial evidence. Curran v. U. S. (D. C. Mun. App. 1947, 52 A. 2d 121).

19. Subpoena duces tecum

Where appellant was convicted for violation of this section, it was not error for the court to refuse to issue a compulsory process for obtaining witnesses as the rule is well established that a party is not entitled of right to a subpoena duces tecum in any form at any time and under any circumstances; and a subpoena duces tecum too indefinite in terms, too broad in scope or untimely requested may properly be denied. Kelly v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1950, 73 A. 2d 232).

20. Trial by court

In prosecution for addressing a person for immoral purposes, brought to court without jury, record did not establish that court failed to afford accused protection accused would have been afforded by properly instructed jury. King v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1952, 90 A. 2d 229).

21. Trial by jury

Refusal to grant motion for trial by jury, defendant being charged with soliciting prostitution, was error. Blackburn v. United States (1936, 84 F. 2d 269, 66 App. D.C. 15).

The act of prostitution was not an offense indictable at common law, so as to entitle a person accused thereof to a trial by jury under the Constitution of the United States. Bailey v. United States (1938, 98 F. 2d 306, 69 App. D.C. 25).

22. United States attorney, prosecution by Prosecution for violation of statute rendering it unlawful to invite, entice or persuade any person fifteen years of age or over for purpose of prostitution or any other immoral or lewd purposes, should be conducted by United States attorney in name of and for benefit of United States, since offense is punishable by both fine and imprisonment. United States v. Paul Strothers (1956, 228 F. 2d 34, 97 U.S. App. D. C. 63).

23. White Slave Act

The transportation of a woman wholly within the District of Columbia with the intent or purpose to induce or entice the woman transported to practice prostitution violates the Mann Act, U.S. Code, title 18, § 2421. U. S. v. Beach (1945, 65 S. Ct. 602, 324 U.S. 193, 89 L. Ed. 865, opinion conformed to 149 F. 2d 837, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 160, certiorari denied 66 S. Ct. 47, 326 U.S. 745, 90 L. Ed. 445).

The Mann Act, U.S. Code, title 18, § 2421, penalizing the transportation in the District of Columbia of any woman with the intent or purpose to induce or entice the woman transported to practice prostitution does not conflict with any other legislation applicable to the District. Id.

Section, act Aug. 15, 1935, 49 Stat. 651, ch. 546, § 2, related to inmate or frequenter of house of ill fame.

The court may impose conditions upon any person found guilty under section 22-2701, and so long as such person shall comply therewith to the satisfaction of the court the imposition or execution of sentence may be suspended for such period as the court may direct; and the court may at or before the expiration of such period remand such sentence or cause it to be executed. Conditions thus imposed by the court may include submission to medical and mental examination, diagnosis and treatment by proper public health and welfare authorities, and such other terms and conditions as the court may deem best for the protection of the community and the punishment, control, and rehabilitation of the defendant. The director of public health of the District of Columbia, the Women's Bureau of the Police Department, the Board of Public Welfare, and the probation officers of the court are authorized and directed to perform such duties as may be directed by the court in effectuating compliance with the conditions so imposed upon any defendant. (Aug. 15, 1935, 49 Stat. 651, ch. 546, § 3; Aug. 1, 1950, 64 Stat. 393, ch. 513, § 1.

CHANGE OF NAME

"Director of public health" substituted for "health officer" to conform to act Aug. 1, 1950. See note set out under section 6-101.

TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS

felony and, upon conviction, shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than five years and by a fine of not more than $1,000. (June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 833, ch. 404, § 1; Jan. 3, 1941, 54 Stat. 1225, ch. 936, § 1.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Cross examination 1
Evidence 3
Indictment 2
Verdict 4

1. Cross examination

Appellant's contention that the trial court improperly restricted his cross examination of complaining witnesses is without foundation where the record shows that the court permitted extensive, and in fact, exhaustive cross examination, particularly on matters affecting the witnesses' credibility. Wright v. United States (1950, 183 F. 2d 821, 87 U.S. App. D.C. 67).

2. Indictment

It was proper to charge in first count of indictment that defendants compelled, induced, enticed and procured a certain female to engage in prostitution, and in second count to charge an attempt. Welch v. U.S. (1943, 135 F. 2d 465, 77 U.S. App. D.C. 317, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 1329, 319 U. S. 769, 87 L. Ed. 1718).

3. Evidence

Evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction for attempting to compel, induce, entice, and procure a certain female to engage in prostitution. Welch v. U.S. (1943, 135 F. 2d 465, 77 U.S. App. D.C. 317, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 1329, 319 U. S. 769, 87 L. Ed. 1718).

4. Verdict

Where first count of indictment charged that defendants compelled, induced, enticed and procured a certain female to engage in prostitution, and second count charged an attempt, even if there had been inconsistency between directed verdict on first count and verdict finding defendants guilty on second count, that would constitute no reason for setting aside verdict of jury. Welch v. U.S. (1943, 135 F. 2d 465, 77 U.S. App. D.C. 317, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 1329, 319 U. S. 769, 87 L. Ed. 1718).

Where first count of indictment charged that defendants compelled, induced, enticed and procured a certain female to engage in prostitution, and second count charged an attempt, the fact that court directed a verdict on the first count and that jury convicted defendants on the second count resulted in no inconsistency. Id.

§ 22-2706. Compelling female to live life of prostitution against her will—Penalty.

Any person who, within the District of Columbia, by threats or duress, detains any female against her will, for the purpose of prostitution or sexual intercourse, or any person who shall compel any female, against her will, to reside with him or with any other person for the purposes of prostitution or sexual intercourse, shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction, shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than five years and a fine of not more than $1,000. (June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 833, ch. 404, § 2; Jan. 3, 1941, 54 Stat. 1225, ch. 936, § 2.)

Any person who, within the District of Columbia, shall receive any money or other valuable thing for or on account of arranging for or causing any female to have sexual intercourse with any other person or to engage in prostitution, debauchery, or any other immoral act, shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction, shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than five years and a fine of not more than $1,000. (June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 833, ch. 404, § 3; Jan. 3, 1941, 54 Stat. 1226, ch. 936, § 3.)

Sentence 14

1. Amount of money received

Under this section, it is immaterial whether the procurer receives much or little and it is not important whether payment is made all at once in a lump sum or in scattered amounts at different times. Boykin v. U.S. (1942, 130 F. 2d 416, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 147).

2. Attempt

Where defendant, upon obtaining affirmative reply to his question whether police officers were looking for girls, inquired what type they wanted, priced the girls at $10 each, and revealed, in answer to question put by one officer, that defendant's fee was $2, fact that defendant's actions never progressed beyond stage of conversation and that no money was received was not fatal to a conviction for an attempt to receive money for arranging for a female to have sexual intercourse, and, had the money passed, the principal crime itself would have been consummated. Sellers Jr. v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 131 A. 2d 300).

Mere preparation is not an attempt, but preparation may progress to the point of attempt, and question whether it has is one of degree which can be resolved only on basis of facts of each case. Id.

3. Brothel keepers

This section does not penalize brothel keeper as such or agents who procure patrons for brothels or for woman elsewhere so long as they do nothing toward bringing the woman there for that purpose and for money or value received. Boykin v. U.S. (1942, 130 F. 2d 416, 76 U.S. App. D. C. 147).

4. Cohabit, definition of

The word "cohabit" as formerly used in this section, making it unlawful for person to receive money or valuable thing for procuring or placing in house of prostitution or elsewhere any female for purpose of causing her illegally to cohabit with any male person or persons, covers promiscuous and casual relations and is not used in strict sense of cohabiting with a single person in manner of husband and wife. Boykin v. U.S. (1942, 130 F. 2d 416, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 147).

5. Construction

Where there had been contradictory rulings in district court in interpreting this section, neither interpretation could be taken to have settled the law or as showing intent of Congress. Boykin v. U.S. (1942, 130 F. 2d 416, 76 U. S. App. D. C. 147).

Term "arranging" may include within its meaning the act of procuring as a part of the arrangement, but it certainly does not confine itself to only that activity and has much broader significance embracing many more activities than the one of procuring. Byas v. United States (1950, 182 F. 2d 94, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 309).

6. Conviction, grounds for

Under this section, the keeping and maintaining of a girl for prohibited purpose cannot be grounds for conviction. Boykin v. U.S. (1942, 130 F. 2d 416, 76 U.S. App. D. C. 147).

7. Cross examination

Appellant's contention that the trial court improperly restricted his cross examination of complaining witnesses is without foundation where the record shows that the court permitted extensive, and in fact, exhaustive cross examination, particularly on matters affecting the witnesses' credibility. Wright v. United States (1950, 183 F. 2d 821, 87 U.S. App. D.C. 67).

8. Elements of offense

Under this section the placing of woman in house of prostitution or elsewhere for purpose of causing her to cohabit illegally with male person or persons and prohibited intent must coincide but payment for the placing need not do so and it may occur before, at, or after the placing, but whenever it takes place it must be for or on account of that act. Boykin v. U.S. (1942, 130 F. 2d 416, 76 U. S. App. D. C. 147).

Under this section, the gist of the offense is the placing of a female in a house of prostitution or elsewhere for purpose of causing her illegally to cohabit with any male person or persons and not the receiving of money. Id.

Principal elements of crime described in this section making it unlawful for any one to receive money or other valuable thing for arranging for or causing any female to have sexual intercourse with any other person or engage in prostitution, debauchery, or any other immoral act are the receipt of money and the arranging of an assignation. Sellers Jr. v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 131 A. 2d 300).

This section making it unlawful for any one to receive money or other valuable things for arranging for or causing any female to have sexual intercourse with any other person or to engage in prostitution, debauchery, or any other immoral act includes not only the actual act of procurement but also the agreement to procure. Id.

9. Evidence

Evidence clearly supported finding that appellant at least participated in arranging for a female to commit an act of prostitution with a police officer. Byas v. United States (1950, 182 F. 2d 94, 86 U. S. App. D. C. 309).

Evidence of conditions of the defendant's house at the time of her arrest for violating statute, which established presence of the two women referred to in the indictment, was competent and relevant in proof of one element of each offense, i. e., "engagement in prostitution." Smith v. U.S. (1950, 180 F. 2d 775, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 195).

Evidence sustained conviction for attempt to receive money for arranging for a female to have sexual intercourse. Sellers Jr. v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 131 A. 2d 300).

10. Indictment

To sustain conviction under this section, the government must charge and prove an act of procuring a woman for or placing her in a house of prostitution or elsewhere, for the purpose of causing her to cohabit illegally with a male person or persons, and that the defendant received money or other valuable thing for or on account of the procuring or placing. Boykin v. U.S. (1942, 130 F. 2d 416, 76 U. S. App. D. C. 147).

Where appellant was convicted on seven counts of an eight count indictment of receiving money for arranging for one to engage in prostitution, with four counts relating to one female and three to another, the crimes charged in the several counts were of the same character, permitting joinder of the counts. Smith v. U. S. (1950, 180 F. 2d 775, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 195).

11. Instructions

In prosecution for violating this section, instruction informing jury to find defendant guilty if jury believed defendant kept, placed, or maintained girl at premises for prohibited purpose was reversibly erroneous, since it permitted jury to find defendant guilty without regard to placing or the intent with which it was done. Boykin v. U.S. (1942, 130 F. 2d 416, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 147).

In prosecution for pandering, where defendant produced witnesses who testified to his general reputation, and court refused requested instruction on weight to be given to evidence of good character but expressed purpose to instruct on the subject, failure to give instruction on weight to be given to evidence of good character was error. Colbert v. U.S. (1946, 146 F. 2d 10, 79 U.S. App. D.C. 261).

An erroneous instruction may be withdrawn or corrected at any time, at least prior to the time the jury retires to deliberate. Byas v. United States (1950, 182 F. 2d 94, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 309).

Where judge told the jury that the essential elements of the crime would have to be proved by the government beyond a reasonable doubt before verdict of guilty could be found and immediately thereafter in a concise statement he set out the elements, no error was committed. Id.

Objection to court's use of the word "arrange" is without merit since it needs no judicial definition as is a common word and admits of no double entendre which casts an umbrage of legal nicety beyond its ordinary meaning. Id.

12. Procuring patrons

This section does not punish merely procuring patrons for a woman, or sharing her earnings, or keeping or maintaining her even with intent to cause her to cohabit illegally. Boykin v. U.S. (1942, 130 F. 2d 416, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 147).

13. Review

In prosecution for violating this section, where arresting officer was permitted to testify that defendant and his daughter were registered at hotel as man and wife, whether testimony was properly allowed to remain in evidence for purpose of showing defendant's knowledge of his daughter's activities would not be determined where reversal was required on other grounds. Boykin v. U.S. (1942, 130 F. 2d 416, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 147).

Defendant's contentions that this section outlaws only the act of placing, and that receiving money for or on account of some other act than placing, does not violate this section would be considered on merits notwithstanding claim that the contentions were too late because raised for the first time on appeal, in view of unusual circumstances in which appeal had been taken and perfected. Id.

Court will not entertain an appeal based on a complaint that because of inartful exercise of his right to challenge jurors peremptorily, a party has created such prejudice as to deny himself a fair trial. Byas v. United States (1950, 182 F. 2d 94, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 309).

14. Sentence

In prosecution for violating this section where defendant was convicted under separate counts which, in the light of evidence presented to sustain them, differed only in charging separate acts of receiving money for a single placing and where defendant was sentenced under each conviction, the sentence was invalid since it was a sentence for two crimes when only one had been charged. Boykin v. U.S. (1942, 130 F. 2d 416, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 147).

NOTE TO DECISION

1. In general

Intent of this act was "to enjoin and abate houses of lewdness, assignation, and prostitution" as therein defined, but to subject owners or lessees to the provisions of the act only when guilty knowledge was brought home to them. Holmes v. United States (1921, 269 F. 489, 50 App. D.C. 147, 12 A.L.R. 427).

§ 22-2714. Abatement of nuisance under section 22-2713 by injunction—Temporary injunction—Effect of injunction.

Whenever a nuisance is kept, maintained, or exists as defined in sections 22-2710 to 22-2718 the attorney of the United States for the District of Columbia, or the Attorney-General of the United States, or any citizen of the District of Columbia, may maintain an action in equity in the name of the United States of America, upon the relation of such attorney of the United States for the District of Columbia, the Attorney-General of the United States, or citizen, to perpetually enjoin said nuisance, the person or persons conducting or maintaining the same, and the owner or agent of the building or ground upon which said nuisance exists. In such action the court, or a judge in vacation, shall, upon the presentation of a petition therefor alleging that the nuisance complained of exists, allow a temporary writ of injunction, without bond, if it shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of the court or judge by evidence in the form of affidavits, depositions, oral testimony, or otherwise, as the complainant may elect, unless the court or judge by previous order shall have directed the form and manner in which it shall be presented. Three days' notice, in writing, shall be given the defendant of the hearing of the application, and if then continued at his instance the writ as prayed shall be granted as a matter of course. When an injunction has been granted it shall be binding on the defendant throughout the District of Columbia, and any violation of the provisions of injunction herein provided shall be a contempt as hereinafter provided. (Feb. 7, 1914, 38 Stat. 280, ch. 16, § 2.)

FEDERAL RULES OF CIVIL PROCEDURE

Injunctions, see Rule 65, U. S. Code, title 28, Appendix.

§ 22-2715. Abatement of nuisance under section 22-2713—Trial—Dismissal of complaint—Prosecution to judgment—Costs.

The action when brought shall be triable at the first term of court, after due and timely service of the notice has been given, and in such action evidence of the general reputation of the place shall be admissible for the purpose of proving the existence of said nuisance. If the complaint is filed by a citizen, it shall not be dismissed, except upon a sworn statement made by the complainant and his attorney, setting forth the reasons why the action should be dismissed, and the dismissal approved by the attorney of the United States for the District of Columbia or the Attorney-General of the United States of America in writing or in open court. If the court is of the opinion that the action ought not to be dismissed, it may direct the attorney of the United States for the District of Columbia to prosecute said action to judgment; and if the action is continued more than one term of court, any citizen of the District of Columbia, or the attorney of the United States for the District of Columbia, may be substituted for the complaining party and prosecute said action to judgment. If the action is brought by a citizen, and the court finds there was no reasonable ground or cause for said action, the costs may be taxed to such citizen. (Feb. 7, 1914, 38 Stat. 281, ch. 16 § 3; June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 909, ch. 646, § 1.)

FEDERAL RULES OF CIVIL PROCEDURE

Injunctions, see Rule 65, U. S. Code, title 28, Appendix.

In case of the violation of any injunction granted under the provisions of section 22-2714, the court, or, in vacation, a judge thereof, may summarily try and punish the offender. The proceedings shall be commenced by filing with the clerk of the court an information, under oath, setting out the alleged facts constituting such violation, upon which the court or judge shall cause a warrant to issue, under which the defendant shall be arrested. The trial may be had upon affidavits, or either party may at any stage of the proceedings demand the production and oral examination of the witnesses. A party found guilty of contempt, under the provisions of this section, shall be punished by a fine of not less than $200 nor more than $1,000 or by imprisonment in the District jail not less than three nor more than six months or by both fine and imprisonment. (Feb. 7, 1914, 38 Stat. 281, ch. 16, § 4.)

If the existence of the nuisance be established in an action as provided in sections 22-2713 to 22-2721, or in a criminal proceeding, an order of abatement shall be entered as a part of the judgment in the case, which order shall direct the removal from the building or place of all fixtures, furniture, musical instruments, or movable property used in conducting the nuisance, and shall direct the sale thereof in the manner provided for the sale of chattels under execution, and the effectual closing of the building or place against its use for any purpose, and so keeping it closed for a period of one year, unless sooner released. If any person shall break and enter or use a building, erection, or place so directed to be closed he shall be punished as for contempt, as provided in section 22-2716. (Feb. 7, 1914, 38 Stat. 281, ch. 16, § 5.)

The proceeds of the sale of the personal property, as provided in section 22-2717, shall be applied in the payment of the costs of the action and abatement, and the balance, if any, shall be paid to the defendant. (Feb. 7, 1914, 38 Stat. 281, ch. 16, § 6.)

If the owner appears and pays all costs of the proceeding and files a bond, with sureties to be approved by the clerk, in the full value of the property, to be ascertained by the court or, in vacation, by the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia, conditioned that he will immediately abate said nuisance and prevent the same from being established or kept within a period of one year thereafter, the court, or, in vacation, the judge, may, if satisfied of his good faith, order the premises closed under the order of abatement to be delivered to said owner and said order of abatement canceled so far as the same may relate to said property; and if the proceeding be an action in equity and said bond be given and costs therein paid before judgment and order of abatement, the action shall be thereby abated as to said building only. The release of the property under the provisions of this section shall not release it from judgment, lien, penalty, or liability to which it may be subject by law. (Feb. 7, 1914, 38 Stat. 281, ch. 16, § 7.)

§ 22-2720. Tax for maintaining such nuisance.

Whenever a permanent injunction issues against any person for maintaining a nuisance as herein defined, or against any owner or agent of the building kept or used for the purpose prohibited by sections 22-2713 to 22-2721, there shall be assessed against said building and the ground upon which the same is located and against the person or persons maintaining said nuisance, and the owner or agent of said premises, a tax of $300. The assessment of said tax shall be made by the assessor of the District of Columbia and shall be made within three months from the date of the granting of the permanent injunction. In case the assessor fails or neglects to make said assessment the same shall be made by the chief of police, and a return of said assessment shall be made to the collector of taxes. Said tax shall be a perpetual lien upon all property, both personal and real used for the purpose of maintaining said nuisance, and the payment of said tax shall not relieve the person or building from any other penalties provided by law. The provisions of the law relating to the collection and distribution of taxes upon personal and real property shall govern in the collection and distribution of the tax herein prescribed in so far as the same are applicable and not in conflict with the provisions of said sections. (Feb. 7, 1914, 38 Stat. 282, ch. 16, § 8.)

The United States attorney or other attorney representing the prosecution for violation of sections 22-2713 to 22-2721, with the approval of the court, may grant immunity to any witness called to testify in behalf of the prosecution. (Feb. 7, 1914, 38 Stat. 282, ch. 16, § 9; June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 909, ch. 646, § 1.)

CHANGE OF NAME

Act June 25, 1948, eff. Sept. 1, 1948, substituted "United States Attorney" for "United States District Attorney." See U. S. Code, title 28, § 501.

§ 22-2722. Keeping bawdy or disorderly houses.

Any person convicted of keeping a bawdy or disorderly house shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars or imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both. (July 16, 1912, 37 Stat. 192, ch. 235, § 1.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Appeal 1
Arrest 2
Common law 3
Evidence 4

Instructions 5
Probation officer recommending sentence 6
Questions for court 7
Waiver 8

1. Appeal

On appeal from conviction of operating a disorderly house where defendant contended that hotel register was improperly admitted, being unlawfully seized property because warrant of arrest was void for insufficiency of supporting affidavit, Municipal Court of Appeals ordered warrant of arrest and supporting affidavit made part of record. Darnall v. U. S. (D. C. Mun. App. 1943, 33 A. 2d 734).

2. Arrest

In prosecution for keeping a disorderly house, affidavit made by arresting officer in applying for warrant was sufficient to establish probable cause. Packard et al. v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1950, 77 A. 2d 19).

Affidavit for warrant of arrest, which merely recited police officer's legal conclusion that defendant was maintaining a disorderly house, and which was devoid of single recital of fact to support conclusion and referred to a name other than that of defendant, was insufficient to support warrant. Darnall v. U. S. (D. C. Mun. App. 1943, 33 A. 2d 734).

3. Common law

What may not have been an infamous crime at common law, may, by statute, be made such and in determining whether a crime is infamous, we must look to the penalty the law imposes, and though the crime of keeping a disorderly house may not have been an infamous crime at common law, it is within the power of Congress to impose a penalty that will make it such in the District of Columbia. Palmer v. Lenovitz (35 App. D. C. 303).

4. Evidence

Where warrant of arrest for maintaining disorderly house was void, the arrest, which was for a misdemeanor not committed in presence or within view of arresting officers, was unlawful and hotel register seized at time of arrest was unlawfully seized and inadmissible in evidence. Darnall v. U. S. (D. C. Mun. App. 1943, 33 A. 2d 734).

In prosecution for maintaining disorderly house, admission in evidence of hotel register which was seized at time of defendant's arrest under void warrant, notwithstanding defendant's subsequent motion to suppress register as evidence, and objection at time of trial to its admission, was reversible error. Id.

Evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction for operating a disorderly house. Collins v. U. S. (D. C. Mun. App. 1945, 41 A. 2d 515).

5. Instructions

Instructions given to jury in prosecution for operating a disorderly house were not tainted with prejudicial error. Collins v. U. S. (D. C. Mun. App. 1945, 41 A. 2d 515).

6. Probation officer recommending sentence

Where accused pleaded guilty to maintaining disorderly house and, on plea for probation, trial judge announced that probation officer had recommended maximum sentence and, on objection to consideration of recommendation, trial judge, without express ruling thereon, sentenced defendant to the near maximum penalty, sentence was set aside. Ishkanian v. U. S. (D. C. Mun. App. 1944, 35 A. 2d 176).

A recommendation by a probation officer to trial judge as to sentence to be imposed is not merely unauthorized by §§ 24-101 to 24-105 but is an infringement upon court's judicial function, which officer has no right to exercise and judge no right to permit. Id.

7. Questions for court

In prosecution for maintaining disorderly house, objection to introduction of hotel register as unlawfully seized evidence because of invalidity of warrant of arrest raised question for judge presiding at trial. Darnall v. U. S. (D. C. Mun. App. 1943, 33 A. 2d 734).

8. Waiver

In prosecution for maintaining a disorderly house, defendant, by failing to move to quash warrant of arrest before he entered plea of not guilty, did not "waive" right to object to introduction of hotel register, seized at time of arrest, as unlawfully seized evidence. Darnall v. U. S. (D. C. Mun. App. 1943, 33 A. 2d 734).

Chapter 28.—RAPE

Sec.

Whoever has carnal knowledge of a female forcibly and against her will, or carnally knows and abuses a female child under sixteen years of age, shall be imprisoned for not more than thirty years: Provided, That in any case of rape the jury may add to their verdict, if it be guilty, the words "with the death penalty," in which case the punishment shall be death by electrocution: Provided further, That if the jury fail to agree as to the punishment the verdict of guilty shall be received and the punishment shall be imprisonment as provided in this section. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1322, ch. 854, § 808; Apr. 19, 1920, 41 Stat. 567, ch. 153, § 808; Jan. 30, 1925, 43 Stat. 798, ch. 115, § 1.)

AMENDMENTS

1925—Act Jan. 30, 1925, provided for execution of death penalty by electrocution instead of by hanging.

1920—Act Apr. 19, 1920, eliminated provision for minimum five-year term of imprisonment.

1. Constitutionality

This section which empowers the jury to add the words "with the death penalty" to verdict in cases of rape does not violate U. S. Const. Art. 3, § 2, cl. 3 and U. S. Const. Amend. 6, guaranteeing right to "jury trial" on theory that at the time of the adoption of the Constitution common-law juries did not fix penalty. Lindsey v. U.S. (1943, 133 F. 2d 368, 77 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

2. — Due process

In rape prosecution, where record left serious doubt as to whether defendant had enjoyed due process of law regarding his right to effective assistance of counsel and right to testify in his own behalf, defendant was entitled to have sentence vacated. Mason v. United States (1952, 193 F. 2d 23, 90 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

3. Continuance

A general indignation toward those who commit rape is not regarded as "bias or prejudice", and it cannot be assumed in support of a motion for an indefinite continuance, on ground that alleged confession of another man to ten or more similar offenses has inflamed the mind of the community so that a particular defendant cannot receive a fair trial, that all juries impaneled at any given time will not give any defendant a fair trial. Robinson v. U.S. (1942, 128 F. 2d 322, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 29).

In rape prosecution, trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for an indefinite continuance on ground that alleged confession of another man to ten or more similar offenses had inflamed the mind of the community so that defendant could not receive a fair trial where there was no specific showing of any kind in support of motion. Id.

4. Death penalty

In prosecution for rape of nine-year-old girl, death sentence was within sound discretion of jury alone, and in considering imposition of death sentence, jury could give weight to any consideration such as age, sex, ignorance, illness or intoxication. Tatum v. United States (1951, 190 F. 2d 612, 88 U. S. App. D. C. 386).

Where evidence was sufficient to sustain verdict of guilty in prosecution for rape, jury had exclusive power to determine whether death penalty should be imposed. Williams v. U.S. (1942, 131 F. 2d 21, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 299).

5. Defense

Where defense announced that defenses would be, first, that no crime had been committed by defendant, and, secondly, that if he had committed crime, he was not guilty by reason of insanity, court, in stating that defense would have to take one position or other, as defenses were inconsistent, committed error which reviewing court, under rule, would notice on appeal and for which it would reverse judgment, as there was no inconsistency and as inconsistent defenses could be interposed. Whittaker v. United States (1960, 231 F. 2d 631, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 268).

In prosecution for rape and robbery, the defendant did not have the obligation of making out a complete defense. McKenzie v. U.S. (1942, 126 F. 2d 533, 75 U.S. App. D. C. 270).

6. Discretion of court

In rape prosecution, record sustained trial court's determination, on motion for new trial, that evidence did not sustain charges that defendant was not competently represented by trial counsel. Ewing v. U.S. (1943, 135 F. 2d 633, 77 U. S. App. D. C. 14, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 829, 318 U. S. 776, 87 L. Ed. 1145, rehearing denied 63 S. Ct. 991, 318 U. S. 803, 87 L. Ed. 1167).

In rape prosecution, where hearing on motion for new trial had been continued over and over to allow some supposed new lead to be followed out and when, after final continuance had been granted, with court's insistence that hearing be brought to an end, defendant filed affidavits and insisted on cross-examining those who had made counter affidavits, but court took matter under advisement and at next sitting brought hearing to close without taking further evidence, action of court in determining the matter on affidavits was not an abuse of discretion. Id.

7. Elements of offense

The elements of the crime of carnally knowing and abusing a female child under statute of the District of Columbia are penetration of a child under the age of 16. Wheeler v. United States (1954, 211 F. 2d 19, 93 U.S. App. D. C. 159, certiorari denied 74 S. Ct. 876, 347 U. S. 1019, 98 L. Ed. 1140, rehearing denied 75 S. Ct. 21, 348 U. S. 852, 99 L. Ed. 671).

8. Evidence—Admissibility

In prosecution for asserted taking of indecent liberties with child and asserted carnal knowledge, where examining physician was out of jurisdiction and unavailable, report of his medical examination was not admissible. Whittaker v. United States (1963, 281 F. 2d 631, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 263).

Incriminating statements made prior to illegal detention of a defendant without taking him to committing magistrate were not inadmissible because of such detention. Perry v. United States (1958, 253 F. 2d 337, 102 U. S. App. D. C. 315, certiorari denied 78 S. Ct. 785, 356 U. S. 941, 2 L. Ed. 2d 816).

In prosecution for rape, admission into evidence of manifest kept by taxi driver was not error, where such exhibit met requirements of Federal Business Records Act of being made in usual course of business and within reasonable time after event in issue, in absence of showing of prejudice to defendant. Hines v. United States (1955, 220 F. 2d 381, 95 U. S. App. D. C. 118).

In prosecution for rape, action of trial court in admitting into evidence certain articles of wearing apparel worn by victim, which were not turned over to police until morning after crime, was not error, where reasons for articles not being turned over until next morning were adequately explained. Id.

In prosecution for carnally knowing a female child, allowing child to testify, over objection that defendant had abused her similarly on previous occasions was proper in view of fact that there was independent evidence which pointed to defendant as having committed the offense charged. Crawford v. United States (1952, 198 F. 2d 976, 91 U. S. App. D. C. 234).

Where prosecuting witness is under age of consent her reputation for unchastity is inadmissible. Her reputation for truth and veracity may be attacked, as in the case of any other witness. Sacks v. United States (41 App. D. C. 34). See, also, Kidwell v. United States (38 App. D. C. 566); Monalokos v. United States (41 App. D. C. 19).

Prosecuting witness in cases of rape may testify as to whether or not she made complaint, when and to whom, although the details of the disclosure are not admissible except on cross-examination or to confirm her testimony after it is impeached, or unless a part of the res gestae. Harris v. United States (1921, 269 F. 481, 50 App. D. C. 139). See, also, Snowden v. United States (2 App. D. C. 89); Lyles v. United States (20 App. D. C. 559); Roney v. United States (43 App. D. C. 533).

In prosecutions for statutory rape testimony of similar acts prior to the offense charged in the indictment is admissible. Weaver v. United States (1924, 299 F. 893, 55 App. D. C. 26).

On charge of carnal knowledge, evidence of subsequent marriage of parties is admissible. Id.

In prosecution for sex offenses, evidence of prior acts between the same parties is admissible as showing a disposition to commit the act charged, the probabilities being that the emotional predisposition or passion will continue. Bracey v. U.S. (1944, 142 F. 2d 85, 79 U. S. App. D. C. 23, certiorari denied 64 S. Ct. 1274, 322 U. S. 762, 88 L. Ed. 1589).

In prosecution for carnally knowing and abusing a 12 year old girl, where defendant elected to defend on issue of conspiracy against himself, and the only evidence which he offered in support of that defense was that which he produced by cross-examination of his 11 year old daughter, who testified that she disliked her father, rebuttal testimony indicating that daughter's dislike was based on father's commission of similar offense against daughter was properly admitted. Id.

In rape prosecution, where defense witness had testified to facts which, if believed, established defendant's innocence, and during cross-examination regarding interview with prosecutrix's mother, as to which defense witness had not testified on direct examination, witness denied that she had stated she believed defendant guilty; that he was facing the electric chair, and that she had to be on his side, but the prosecutrix's mother subsequently testified that the defense witness made such statements, evidence was admissible within the "self-contradiction rule," within the "impeachment rule," and for purpose of affecting credibility of defense witness by showing bias, and was not objectionable as being on "collateral matter." Ewing v. U.S. (1943, 135 F. 2d 633, 77 U. S. App. D. C. 14, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 829, 318 U. S. 776, 87 L. Ed. 1145, rehearing denied 63 S. Ct. 991, 318 U. S. 803, 87 L. Ed. 1167).

9. — Circumstantial evidence

In prosecution for carnally knowing and abusing a female child under the age of 16 years, child's statement, which had been given to the police, and which was used to impeach the child's testimony exonerating defendant, did not constitute direct evidence of the crime charged. Wheeler v. United States (1954, 211 F. 2d 19, 93 U. S. App. D. C. 159, certiorari denied 74 S. Ct. 876, 347 U. S. 1019, 98 L. Ed. 1140, rehearing denied 75 S. Ct. 21, 348 U. S. 852, 99 L. Ed. 671).

In prosecution for rape, circumstantial evidence was sufficient to corroborate complaining witness' testimony. McGuinn v. United States (1951, 191 F. 2d 477, 89 U. S. App. D. C. 197).

Only circumstantial evidence is required to corroborate complaining witness' testimony in rape case. Id.

10. — Confession

Where issue of voluntariness of confessions was for jury, defendant was not prejudiced because trial judge did not in the first instance hear the testimony as to the admissibility of the confession, out of the presence of the jury. De Lorenzo v. United States of America (1955, 219 F. 2d 506, 95 U. S. App. D. C. 74, certiorari denied 75 S. Ct. 897, 349 U. S. 964, 99 L. Ed. 1286).

In rape prosecution, issue of voluntariness of confessions was for jury to determine. Id.

11. — Corroboration

In rape prosecution "corroboration," in the sense that there must be circumstances in proof which tend to support the prosecutrix's story, is required. Ewing v. U.S. (1943, 135 F. 2d 633, 77 U. S. App. D. C. 14, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 829, 318 U. S. 776, 87 L. Ed. 1145, rehearing denied 63 S. Ct. 991, 318 U. S. 803, 87 L. Ed. 1167).

In rape prosecution, evidence that defendant was present in apartment visiting with prosecutrix and another shortly before crucial time and spent night either in living room or in room across hall, that force was used against door of prosecutrix's bedroom making a new break in already defective lock with no other evidence to explain the new condition, that complaint was made to friends within twelve hours, to police within 24 hours, and was followed by defendant's arrest and confrontation with prosecutrix and medical evidence that the prosecutrix had recently had intercourse for the first time, was sufficient "corroboration." Id.

12. — Examination of witnesses

In rape prosecution where during cross-examination defense witness, who had testified to facts which, if believed, established defendant's innocence, was asked whether in interview with prosecutrix's mother witness had given affirmative answer to question whether she thought defendant was guilty and prosecutrix's mother later testified that the defense witness stated that she believed defendant guilty, the province of the jury was not invaded. Ewing v. U.S. (1943, 135 F. 2d 633, 77 U. S. App. D. C. 14, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 829, 318 U. S. 776, 87 L. Ed. 1145, rehearing denied 63 S. Ct. 991, 318 U. S. 803, 87 L. Ed. 1167).

In rape prosecution, action of prosecuting attorney in cross-examining defense witness as to whether defendant suggested to witness that they get some whiskey and girls and have a party was not prejudicial error where witness' negative response was later corroborated by defendant. Id.

In prosecution for rape, and for robbery of cleaning establishment, where court warned defendants' counsel that if he asked question of witness regarding whether defendant had been identified as the man who robbed another cleaning establishment about a week prior to the commission of the offenses involved, he would do so at his peril, refusal to allow the contradiction of witness' answer was proper. McKenzie v. U.S. (1942, 126 F. 2d 533, 75 U. S. App. D. C. 270).

13. — Hearsay

Where female child, whom defendant was charged with having carnally known and abused, went to her grandmother's home three blocks away within an hour, at most, after alleged attack, and when child arrived she was highly distraught, in shock, and crying, and when grandmother asked child what was wrong with her, child replied that defendant just had something to do with her, court properly admitted grandmother's testimony concerning child's statement to grandmother, under the spontaneous exclamation exception to the hearsay rule. Wheeler v. United States (1954, 211 F. 2d 19, 93 U. S.

App. D. C. 159, certiorari denied 74 S. Ct. 876, 347 U. S. 1019, 98 L. Ed. 1140, rehearing denied 75 S. Ct. 21, 348 U.S. 852, 99 L. Ed. 671).

In prosecution for carnally knowing a female child, where defendant initiated inquiry into child's statement and made full use thereof to cast doubt upon his identity as the assailant, the interest of justice would not require reversal because of admission, without objection, of other statement by child on same subject which defendant, upon appeal, maintained should have been excluded by trial court as hearsay. Crawford v. United States (1952, 198 F. 2d 976, 91 U.S. App. D.C. 234).

14. — Res gestae

In prosecution for rape of child about five years old the statements of the child made to her grandmother on the same day of crime was admissible as part of the res gestae. Snowden v. United States (2 App. D.C. 89).

15. — Sufficiency

In prosecution for rape, evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction. Hines v. United States (1955, 220 F. 2d 381, 95 U.S. App. D. C. 118). See also, Robinson v. United States (1942, 128 F. 2d 322, 76 U. S. App. D.C. 29).

Evidence warranted a conviction for rape, and death penalty therefor. Holmes v. United States (1949, 171 F. 2d 1022, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 168).

In rape prosecution, testimony of complaining witness and the circumstantial evidence supporting it, which were sufficient to show that the intercourse occurred and took place by force and against her will in the sense that her resistance was overcome by physical force and threats which put her in fear of her life, sustained jury's implicit finding, that the act was without the "consent" of the complaining witness. Ewing v. U.S. (1943, 135 F. 2d 633, 77 U.S. App. D.C. 14, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 829, 318 U.S. 776, 87 L. Ed. 1145, rehearing denied 63 S. Ct. 991, 318 U.S. 803, 87 L. Ed. 1167).

In rape prosecution, "consent" is not shown when the evidence discloses resistance is overcome by threats which put the woman in fear of death or grave bodily harm or by those combined with some degree of physical force. Id.

16. Indictment

Count of indictment charging defendant with violating this section punishing one who carnally knows a female child under 16 years of age can be joined with count charging defendant with violation of statute punishing any person who takes, or attempts to take, any immoral, improper, or indecent liberties with any child of either sex, under the age of 16 years to arouse or gratify sexual desires, though latter statute provides that it shall not apply to the offenses covered by this section, if jury is told that it cannot find defendant guilty of both counts and can find him guilty under the second count only if he is found not guilty under the first count. Thompson v. United States (1956, 228 F. 2d 463, 97 U. S. App. D. C. 116).

That indictment charging rape contained four counts relating to two acts of intercourse did not prejudice defendant, where defendant made no election, stated that he was ready to go to jury on all four counts, and in no way questioned charge allowing case to go to jury only on two counts charging carnal knowledge of a girl under age of consent because testimony was that complaining witness was under 16. Robinson v. U.S. (1942, 128 F. 2d 322, 76 U. S. App. D. C. 29).

That indictment charging rape was signed by an Assistant United States Attorney rather than by the United States Attorney concerned a "matter of form" which did not prejudice defendant. Id.

Where indictments charging rape and robbery were returned by a grand jury which did not have upon it any member of the negro race, the indictments could not be quashed on ground that systematic course of procedure had been adopted for purpose of excluding negroes from grand jury on account of their color, in absence of proof or offer of proof of intentional exclusion of negroes from service on grand jury. McKenzie v. U.S. (1942, 126 F. 2d 533, 75 U.S. App. D.C. 270).

17. Instructions

In prosecution on two-count indictment for taking indecent liberties with child and for carnal knowledge, court acted properly at close of government's case when it granted partial judgment of not guilty under second count, stating that there was no evidence to support carnal knowledge charge but submitting to jury lesser included offense of assault with intent to commit carnal knowledge, but court erred in failing to instruct that jury was first to consider included charge of assault with intent to commit carnal knowledge and was only to consider alleged taking of indecent liberties with child if it found defendant not guilty of the former crime. Whittaker v. United States (1960, 281 F. 2d 631, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 268).

In rape prosecution, wherein jury had been instructed on verdicts of guilty with death penalty, guilty as charged, not guilty by reason of insanity, or not guilty, and jury after deliberating several hours asked court whether jury could be assured that defendant legally would be imprisoned for remainder of his life, court's response that the maximum term that court could impose was 30 years but that court also was required to impose a minimum sentence so that longest term court could impose would be indeterminate sentence of 10 to 30 years and that at end of minimum sentence parole board would have to decide whether maximum should be served or anything less than the maximum, did not constitute error. Mallory v. United States (1956, 236 F. 2d 701, 98 U. S. App. D. C. 406, reversed on other grounds 77 S. Ct. 1356, 354 U. S. 449, 1 L. Ed. 2d 1479).

Count of indictment charging defendant with violating statute punishing one who carnally knows a female child under 16 years of age can be joined with count charging defendant with violation of statute punishing any person who takes, or attempts to take, any immoral, improper, or indecent liberties with any child of either sex, under the age of 16 years to arouse or gratify sexual desires, though latter statute provides that it shall not apply to the offenses covered by the prior statute, if jury is told that it cannot find defendant guilty of both counts and can find him guilty under the second count only if he is found not guilty under the first count. Thompson v. United States (1956, 228 F. 2d 463, 97 U. S. App. D. C. 116).

In prosecution for rape, action of trial court in submitting question of death penalty to jury where government had not asked for such penalty, was not error, where court advised jury that government did not ask that penalty and that they could take that fact into consideration, and where death penalty actually was not returned and defendant was not thereby prejudiced. Hines v. United States (1955, 220 F. 2d 381, 95 U. S. App. D. C. 118).

In prosecution for rape and sodomy, defendant's prayer for instruction requiring utmost resistance by complaining witness incorrect. McGuinn v. United States (1951, 191 F. 2d 477, 89 U. S. App. D. C. 197).

In prosecution for rape and sodomy, defendant's prayers for instructions assuming as fact that complaining witness did not offer opposition should have been denied. Id.

In prosecution for rape and sodomy, defendant's prayer for instruction requiring that complaining witness' fear be not to negative her consent was properly denied, as fear of grave bodily harm was sufficient. Id.

In prosecution for rape and sodomy, court properly instructed jury that there must be absence of consent by complaining witness to warrant conviction, unless consent was induced by putting her in fear of grave bodily harm or death or by exercise of actual force against her person. Id.

Where evidence in prosecution for rape of nine-year-old girl raised defense of insanity, but no instructions thereon were given, and counsel for defendant stated in closing argument to jury that verdict of guilty was proper and trial court in its charge referred to such concession of guilt and omitted to instruct jury that notwithstanding concession, defendant was entitled to have jury alone determine his guilt or innocence, there was reversible error. Tatum v. United States (1951, 190 F. 2d 612, 88 U. S. App. D. C. 386).

In prosecution on two counts for assault with a dangerous weapon and on one count for rape, where court's charge did not discuss nor define offenses included within the indictment and jury were not told what assault with intent to rape was nor how it was distinguished from rape and were not informed that a verdict of not guilty might be returned, there was prejudicial error. Williams v. U.S. (1942, 131 F. 2d 21, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 299).

In prosecution for rape and robbery, where pistol which victim stated assailant used, clothing which he said he had stolen and money which he had taken were not found in possession of defendant, neighbors testified to good character of defendant and to his having a night job at which he worked regularly, and thorough examination by police failed to shake statement of defendant that he had never seen the prosecuting witness before, such circumstances were important enough to be called to the attention of the jury to be weighed together with evidence in support of legal presumption of innocence. McKenzie v. U.S. (1942, 126 F. 2d 533, 75 U.S. App. D.C. 270).

In prosecution for rape and robbery, failure to instruct jury in precise terms that a not guilty verdict was necessary in event of failure by the government to prove each of the elements of the offenses charged beyond a reasonable doubt was error requiring reversal, notwithstanding the court instructed that defendant was presumed to be innocent and that the government was obliged to rebut the presumption by proof of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. Id.

In prosecution for rape and robbery, where verity of identification of accused by prosecuting witness was point on which case turned, failure to instruct jury in plain words that if circumstances of identification were not convincing, jury should acquit accused was error. Id.

In prosecution for rape and robbery where court referring to conditions obtaining at time of prosecuting witness' identification of accused stated that the jury should take into consideration the attitude of the prosecuting witness upon coming in view of the accused and that they should search their reasoning power regarding what motivated the selection of the accused from among all others, in view of fact that verity of identification was the point on which the case turned, the court should have cautioned that if the motivation was not convincing beyond a reasonable doubt the jury should find the defendant not guilty. Id.

Nothing suggests that the jury did not understand and respect the action and instructions of the court for unless it appears to the contrary, jurors should be presumed to have understood and followed the court's instructions. Hall v. United States (1949, 171 F. 2d 347, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 209).

18. Intent

Specific intent to commit rape is not required to warrant conviction thereof. McGuinn v. United States (1951, 191 F. 2d 477, 89 U.S. App. D. C. 197).

19. Mental capacity

In prosecution for rape of nine-year-old girl, evidence as to alleged insanity of defendant, was sufficient to raise issue to jury under guidance of instructions. Tatum v. United States (1951, 190 F. 2d 612, 88 U.S. App. D. C. 386).

After conviction of rape, a sanity inquisition was denied when it did not occur to either his counsel or to the court that he was mentally irresponsible; and that during his examination and cross-examination, it did not "suggest, in the slightest degree, that defendant was not fully and entirely responsible from a mental standpoint." Jackson v. United States (1928, 25 F. 2d 549, 58 App. D.C. 125).

Evidence regarding insanity of defendant was insufficient to justify reversal of conviction for rape. Holloway v. U.S. (1945, 148 F. 2d 665, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 3, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 1507, 334 U.S. 852, 92 L. Ed. 1774).

20. Plea of guilty

This section authorizing jury to recommend death penalty in a rape case does not deprive court of inherent jurisdiction to accept plea of guilty, but defendant does not have absolute right to plead guilty. U. S. v. Willis (1948, 75 F. Supp. 628).

Plea of guilty of carnal knowledge, avoiding possibility of death sentence, was accepted in exercise of trial court's discretion, upon recommendation of United States Attorney and in view of facts of particular case. Id.

"In all cases (of rape) the court must have the verdict of the jury upon which to base its judgment," and there is, therefore no error in refusing to accept a plea of guilty. Green v. United States (40 App. D.C. 426).

21. Questions for jury

In prosecution for murder and rape, evidence regarding whether defendant's oral admissions against interest and his written confession were voluntary was sufficient to justify the submission of the issue of voluntariness to the jury. Catoe v. U.S. (1942, 131 F. 2d 16, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 292).

In rape cases and other cases of the nature of a sexual assault, delay in making complaint is a subject for consideration of jury and may seriously affect credibility of complaining witness. Stittely v. U. S. (D. C. Mun. App. 1948, 61 A. 2d 491).

22. Review

Defendant was not entitled to vacation of sentence on ground that he was denied effective assistance of counsel because he allegedly advised defendant to take no appeal, where record disclosed that defendant was adequately represented by able, experienced and conscientious counsel, and that defendant was fully apprised of his rights. Watson, Jr. v. United States (1960, 281 F. 2d 619, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 256).

Where accused was found not guilty by reason of insanity and was committed to hospital and some two months thereafter accused petitioned for writ of habeas corpus without prepayment of costs and District Court denied such petition without a hearing and without stating reasons for denial, case would be remanded and District Court, if it rejected allegation of poverty, would be required to state basis for such rejection, and if leave to file without costs was permitted or if accused should pay necessary filing fees, hospital superintendent would be directed to report as to accused's condition, and upon the return the District Court should conduct hearing to determine whether accused had recovered sanity and would not be dangerous to himself or others in reasonable future. Tatem, Sr., v. United States (1960, 275 F. 2d 894, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 230).

Statement of counsel for defendant in closing argument to jury in prosecution for rape of nine-year-old, that verdict of guilty was proper under the circumstances and evidence, was a defect affecting "substantial rights" within meaning of rule that plain errors or defects affecting "substantial rights" may be noticed on appeal though they were not brought to attention of the trial court. Tatum v. United States (1951, 190 F. 2d 612, 88 U.S. App. D. C. 386).

Where counsel for defendant in prosecution for rape of nine-year-old girl stated in closing argument to jury that a verdict of guilty was proper, reference by trial court in charge to the concession of guilt, and failure to caution jury that notwithstanding such concession, defendant was entitled to have the jury alone determine his guilt or innocence, constituted a defect affecting "substantial right" within meaning of rule that plain errors or defects affecting "substantial rights" may be noticed on appeal though they were not brought to attention of the trial court. Id.

Where record presented no reversible error and evidence supported conviction for rape, conviction was affirmed. Clinton v. United States (1945, 151 F. 2d 12, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 413).

That failure of the Government to call all of its witnesses whose names and addresses had been given to defendant took him by surprise could not be urged on appeal from conviction for rape, where defendant did not allege or show that witnesses were not available for him and made no proffer of proof that their testimony would have helped him. Robinson v. United States (1942, 128 F. 2d 322, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 29).

23. — Assignment of error

In prosecution for rape and sodomy, defendant's assignment of error in trial court's failure to declare mistrial because of prosecuting attorney's comment, in opening statement to jury, that only one woman survived defense challenge to jurors, was without foundation, in absence of motion by defendant for mistrial or exception to trial court's action in merely telling jury to disregard remark as improper after objection thereto. McGuinn v. United States (1951, 191 F. 2d 477, 89 U.S. App. D. C. 197).

24. Sentence

Defendant's motion, filed before expiration of minimum time of indeterminate sentence imposed by District

Court on his conviction of rape, to correct later indeterminate sentence on his subsequent unrelated conviction of assault with intent to rape, will not be dismissed by Court of Appeals as premature, thereby relegating defendant to refiling identical motion in District Court, in view of statute and criminal procedure rule authorizing motion attacking sentence and correction of illegal sentence at any time. Holloway v. United States (1951, 191 F. 2d 504, 89 U. S. App. D. C. 332).

25. Speedy trial

Where defendant was convicted of rape and assault with intent to kill, and death penalty was imposed, but convictions were reversed and new trial ordered, even though 16 months elapsed between date of order awarding new trial and date defendant was sentenced after government was willing to accept pleas of guilty to offenses not punishable by death, and defendant voluntarily entered pleas after alleged unlawful delay, defendant was not deprived of constitutional right to speedy trial. United States v. Lindsey (1959, 178 F. Supp. 598).

26. Trial procedure

Order of proof and conduct of trial in trial for rape is within court's discretion. Mears v. United States (1932, 55 F. 2d 745, 60 App. D.C. 387).

Contention of appellant's counsel that he should have been permitted to argue to the jury the so-called "sociological aspects of the case" is without merit because, for such a crime as rape, there can never be any extenuating circumstances. Holmes v. United States (1949, 171 F. 2d 1022, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 168).

In a prosecution for rape, the remarks of the prosecutor were improper where he asked defendant if he were a "sex fiend" since cross-examination is no place for argument or for vituperation; nor could a former offense be used for any other purpose than to reflect upon the credibility of appellant's testimony. Hall v. United States (1949, 171 F. 2d 347, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 209).

27. Under age of consent

When a child under the age of consent has been defiled, the law conclusively presumes force on the part of her seducer, and the question of consent is immaterial. Yeager v. United States (16 App. D. C. 356).

Carnal knowledge of child under age specified is rape. Sanselo v. United States (44 App. D. C. 508).

1. Assistance of counsel

Where defendants, who allegedly entered plea of guilty at preliminary hearing to charge of robbery, were without counsel until arraignment but when counsel was assigned by court, defendants pleaded not guilty and adhered to the plea throughout trial and on appeal and denied that they had had hearing on robbery charge and claimed that they had pleaded guilty to misdemeanor charges only, in determining whether alleged plea of guilty at preliminary hearing was admissible, court was required to assume that defendants, who had not been asked whether they wanted counsel or informed regarding privilege against self-incrimination, did not know their rights and did not intend to waive them when they allegedly pleaded guilty. Wood v. U.S. (1942, 128 F. 2d 265, 75 U.S. App. D.C. 274, 141 A. L. R. 1318).

2. Constitutionality

This section is valid. Pope v. Huff (1944, 141 F. 2d 727, 79 U. S. App. D. C. 18).

3. Conduct of prosecuting attorney

In robbery prosecution, prosecutor's statements that the defendants did not make a statement that they struck the victim in self-defense and that the prosecutor did not intend to convey that to the jury and that it was only an inference that the prosecutor was trying to say could be drawn from the evidence but that he thought that testimony was that they struck the victim were not reversible error under the evidence. Johnson v. United States (1960, 275 F. 2d 898, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 234).

In robbery prosecution, language of prosecuting attorney to jury was not so extreme as to vitiate judgment and permit collateral attack. Adams v. United States (1955, 222 F. 2d 45, 95 U.S. App. D. C. 354).

4. Defense, requisites of

In prosecution for rape and robbery, the defendant did not have the obligation of making out a complete defense. McKenzie v. U.S. (1942, 126 F. 2d 533, 75 U.S. App. D. C. 270).

5. Double jeopardy

Where purpose and effect of proceeding in juvenile court were to provide a prompt preliminary hearing in order to set a date for trial, if allegations of petitions were denied, or to continue case pending completion of full social study and recommendations for disposition of child, case had not reached stage at which juvenile's liberty had been placed in jeopardy by his acknowledgment that he held a toy gun during alleged robbery, and when trial judge subsequently waived jurisdiction to district court for trial, indictment was not subject to dismissal on ground of double jeopardy. United States v. Dickerson (1959, 271 F. 2d 487, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 221).

6. Elements of offense

"Robbery", as used in this section, means robbery in the usual common-law sense as expanded to include sudden or stealthy seizure or snatching. United States v. Mann et al. (1954, 119 F. Supp. 406).

7. Evidence—Admissibility

Even though oral and written confessions of defendants made before preliminary hearing may have been inadmissible for violation of rule requiring preliminary hearing without unnecessary delay, defendants' reaffirmation and enlargement of the formal written confession after preliminary hearing, including re-enactment of the crime, were not inadmissible as being the fruit of the original confessions, where the reaffirmation came within an hour after defendants had received both the judicial warning and their counsel's advice that they had right to remain silent and that any statements made by them could be used against them, and the defendants were not merely asked to mechanically state whether the terms of their earlier confession were true and their confessions were reread to them and were reaffirmed, and the defendants made highly incriminating admissions at scene of crime, and in their colloquy with the person who had been robbed and a witness who had been present at time of robbery. Goldsmith & Carter v. United States (1960, 277 F. 2d 355, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 305, certiorari denied 81 S. Ct. 106, 364 U.S. 863, 5 L. Ed. 2d 86).

The mere fact that a confession is made to the police, or while an accused is in custody, does not destroy its value as evidence, and once an accused has been legally charged and is in lawful detention, police interrogation is not forbidden. Id.

In prosecution for robbery and assault with a dangerous weapon, admission of police officer's testimony that before preliminary hearing the defendants had orally admitted the crimes in officer's presence was not prejudicial, where trial court gave careful instructions to jury to disregard officer's testimony and officer's testimony was cumulative and testimony could have had no measurable impact alongside the overwhelming evidence of guilt from other sources. Id.

Where certain challenged evidence, in a robbery prosecution, was not shown to have consisted of statements made during illegal detention and did not result from police interrogation, it could not be deemed inadmissible. Rogers v. United States (1959, 263 F. 2d 902, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 65, certiorari denied 79 S. Ct. 1127, 359 U.S. 994, 3 L. Ed. 2d 982).

Where defendant, after arrest but prior to arraignment, denied having any connection with robbery but admitted being in company of two other men, charged with same offense, shortly before and shortly after the robbery, admission of evidence of defendant's statement was not error where statement was not claimed to have been coerced. Sykes v. U.S. (1944, 143 F. 2d 140, 79 U.S. App. D.C. 97).

Housebreaking, robbery and burglary are merely aggravated forms of larceny and evidence competent in one case is competent, also, in the others. Edwards v. U.S. (1944, 139 F. 2d 365, 78 U.S. App. D.C. 226, certiorari denied 64 S. Ct. 523, 321 U.S. 769, 88 L. Ed. 1064).

In prosecution for robbery of a watch, a purse, a key, and $37 in money, admission of a watch, purse, key, and a $5 bill, without testimony either of prosecuting witness or officer who allegedly took the articles from defendant, constituted reversible error upon ground that identification of articles was insufficient. Smith v. U.S. (1946, 157 F. 2d 705, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 296).

Where testimony connecting defendant with another crime which had no connection with armed robbery for which he was being tried, was elicited by defendant's own counsel on cross-examination, admission of the testimony was no ground for reversal of conviction. Felton v. U.S. (1948, 170 F. 2d 153, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 277, certiorari denied 69 S. Ct. 18, 335 U.S. 831, 93 L. Ed. 385).

8. — Burden of proof

Where there is evidence that accused was of unsound mind when offenses occurred, prosecution is under necessity of establishing to satisfaction of jury beyond reasonable doubt that offenses were not result of accused's insanity. Douglas v. United States (1956, 239 F. 2d 52, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 232).

In order to justify conviction, where there is evidence that accused was of unsound mind when offenses occurred, proof, considered with presumption of sanity, must exclude beyond reasonable doubt the hypothesis that conduct indicted was product of a diseased mind or mental defect. Id.

9. — Examination of witnesses

In prosecution for robbery, conspiracy to commit robbery, and for carrying a deadly weapon without a license, requiring counsel for one defendant to ask a more precise question than question counsel asked a witness for prosecution as to whether such witness was convicted several times of prostitution during specified years was within discretion of trial court. Bundy v. United States (1952, 193 F. 2d 694, 90 U.S. App. D. C. 12, certiorari denied 72 S. Ct. 638, 343 U.S. 908, 96 L. Ed. 1326).

10. — Production of evidence

In prosecution for robbery, conspiracy to commit robbery, and for carrying a deadly weapon without a license, action of trial court in not requiring production under subpoena of arrest record of a witness for prosecution was not prejudicial to defendant where police officer testified he had no arrest record of witness by name contained in subpoena and did not know such witness used other names mentioned by him by counsel for defendant, and counsel for defendant did not during trial procure any further subpoena for arrest record of witness under any other name. Bundy v. United States (1952, 193 F. 2d 694, 90 U.S. App. D. C. 12, certiorari denied 72 S. Ct. 638, 343 U.S. 908, 96 L. Ed. 1326).

11. — Sufficiency

Evidence supported conviction of robbery. Thompson v. United States (1951, 188 F. 2d 652, 88 U.S. App. D. C. 235). See, also, Bullock v. U. S. (1946, 157 F. 2d 702, 81 U.S. App. D. C. 271, certiorari denied 67 S. Ct. 860, 330 U.S. 829, 91 L. Ed. 1278).

One could be convicted of robbery on uncorroborated testimony of complainant. Thompson v. United States (1951, 188 F. 2d 652, 88 U.S. App. D. C. 235).

In robbery prosecution, where defendant claimed that he acted under compulsion by another after having intended only an extortion, evidence justified conviction. Vinci v. U.S. (1947, 159 F. 2d 777, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 386).

12. — Suppression

In prosecution for robbery, defendant was not entitled to suppression of gun which was taken from defendant's automobile after his arrest by police upon a warrant. Bennett v. United States (1957, 249 F. 2d 505, 101 U.S. App. D. C. 413).

13. Force and violence

Intent of this section is to denounce pocket picking and the like, together with common-law robbery, under the single general name of "robbery" and though it is true that the provision for "sudden and stealthy seizure or snatching" is preceded by the phrase "by force and violence"; yet the requirement for force is satisfied within the sense of this section by an actual physical taking of the property from the person of another even without his knowledge and consent, and though the property be unattached to his person. Turner v. United States (1927, 16 F. 2d 535, 57 App. D.C. 39).

Under this section conviction for "robbery" may be had though victim did not have knowledge of the theft at the time, since "stealth" necessarily connotes lack of knowledge on part of victim. Spencer v. U.S. (1941, 116 F. 2d 801, 73 App. D. C. 98).

The force used to remove money from victim's pocket is sufficient "force or violence" within this section defining "robbery" as a taking by "force or violence," whether against resistance or by sudden or stealthy seizure or snatching, or by putting in fear. Id.

14. Habeas corpus

Where petitioners were arrested in Pennsylvania, charged with committing certain crimes in the District of Columbia, habeas corpus proceedings would be proper to raise jurisdictional questions respecting their removal to the District. U.S. ex rel. Miller et al. v. Reing (D.C. Pa. 1949, 81 F. Supp. 367).

15. Immediate actual possession

"Immediate actual possession," within this section defining robbery as a taking from the "immediate actual possession" of another, refers to an area within which victim could reasonably be expected to exercise some physical control over his property. Spencer v. U.S. (1941, 116 F. 2d 801, 73 App. D.C. 98).

The word "possession" in this section is not used in strict larcenous sense, but is used in a colloquial sense, meaning nothing more than custody or control. Neufeld v. U.S. (1941, 118 F. 2d 375, 73 App. D.C. 174, certiorari denied 62 S. Ct. 580, 315 U.S. 798, 86 L. Ed. 1199).

16. Indictment

Where indictment, containing a single count, charged, in part, the commission of the offense "by force and violence and against resistance, and by putting in fear, and by sudden and stealthy seizure and snatching," this was a proper and sufficient charge to support the conviction. Tomlinson v. United States (1938, 93 F. 2d 652, 68 App. D.C. 106, 114 A. L. R. 1315).

Where indictments charging rape and robbery were returned by a grand jury which did not have upon it any member of the negro race, the indictments could not be quashed on ground that systematic course of procedure had been adopted for purpose of excluding negroes from grand jury on account of their color, in absence of proof or offer of proof of intentional exclusion of negroes from service on grand jury. McKenzie v. U.S. (1942, 126 F. 2d 533, 75 U. S. App. D. C. 270).

Where this section did not itself express all of the elements of the crime of robbery at common law but Congress meant to make robbery a crime and by "robbery" meant robbery in the usual common-law sense of the term except as expanded by this section it was necessary and permissible for indictment to overlap this section in order to charge crime of robbery. Neufield v. U.S. (1941, 118 F. 2d 375, 73 App. D. C. 174, certiorari denied 62 S. Ct. 580, 315 U. S. 798, 86 L. Ed. 1199).

It was proper to charge in robbery indictment that money taken from named individual was property of bank and that money was stolen, notwithstanding fact that this section did not express the elements of common-law robbery that the property shall belong to some one other than the robber, and that it shall be stolen. Id.

Variance between indictment and proof, as to ownership of property in robbery, is not material, so long as offense is otherwise described with sufficient certainty to identify the act of robbery and to establish that the property was in the immediate actual possession of the person robbed. United States v. Mann et al. (1954, 119 F. Supp. 406).

Ownership of property, alleged to have been subject of robbery, need be alleged in indictment only to show that property was in some one else other than accused and to describe the property taken. Id.

17. Instructions

That court failed to instruct that jury must find circumstances of identification of accused as the criminal were convincing in order to convict would not be deemed erroneous where there had been no request for such instruction, court had fully instructed jury on all questions of law including burden of proof and weighing of evidence, and there was evidence from which jury could have reasonably concluded that defendant's identification was established beyond reasonable doubt. Obery v. United States (1955, 217 F. 2d 860, 95 U. S. App. D. C. 28, certiorari denied 75 S. Ct. 665, 349 U. S. 923, 99 L. Ed. 1255).

That trial court had failed to instruct that oral confession made by defendant to police should be regarded with caution did not constitute reversible error where there had been no request for such instruction and, under circumstances of case, omission did not affect defendant's substantial rights. Id.

In prosecution for rape and robbery, where pistol which victim stated assailant used, clothing which she said he had stolen and money which he had taken were not found in possession of defendant, neighbors testified to good character of defendant and to his having a night job at which he worked regularly, and thorough examination by police failed to shake statement of defendant that he had never seen the prosecuting witness before, such circumstances were important enough to be called to the attention of the jury to be weighed together with evidence in support of legal presumption of innocence. McKenzie v. U.S. (1942, 126 F. 2d 533, 75 U.S. App. D.C. 270).

In prosecution for rape and robbery, failure to instruct jury in precise terms that a not guilty verdict was necessary in event of failure by the government to prove each of the elements of the offenses charged beyond a reasonable doubt was error requiring reversal, notwithstanding the court instructed that defendant was presumed to be innocent and that the government was obliged to rebut the presumption by proof of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. Id.

In prosecution for rape and robbery, where verity of identification of accused by prosecuting witness was point on which case turned, failure to instruct jury in plain words that if circumstances of identification were not convincing, jury should acquit accused was error. Id.

In prosecution for rape and robbery where court referring to conditions obtaining at time of prosecuting witness' identification of accused stated that the jury should take into consideration the attitude of the prosecuting witness upon coming in view of the accused and that they should search their reasoning power regarding what motivated the selection of the accused from among all others, in view of fact that verity of identification was the point on which the case turned, the court should have cautioned that if the motivation was not convincing beyond a reasonable doubt the jury should find the defendant not guilty. Id.

Where defendant's counsel had characterized person reporting alleged robbery as a "busybody," court's charge that it was duty of citizens to report felonies and that if there was a robbery persons reporting it could not be characterized as "busybodies" was proper. Beck v. U.S. (1944, 140 F. 2d 169, 78 U.S. App. D.C. 10).

In prosecution for robbery, where defendants had denied that they were present at robbery, charge that if jury found that defendants were present jury could consider whether denial of presence was due to consciousness of guilt or some other reason was not improper. Id.

The absence from the trial of an eyewitness to the robbery of which defendant was convicted was not prejudicial, where court instructed the jury in effect that they might infer from the witness' absence that his testimony would not be favorable to the government. Furqueron v. U. S. (1947, 158 F. 2d 193, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 329).

In robbery prosecution, where defendant's testimony was that a robbery occurred and that he participated in it, both before and after, with an interlude of nonparticipation, court's statement to jury that defendant claimed that he had repented and voluntarily withdrawn from robbery was not improper. Vinci v. U.S. (1947, 159 F. 2d 777, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 386).

18. Joinder of defendants

Where defendant, with two others, was charged with robbery in one count of indictment which included a separate count charging the other two persons with another robbery committed the day before and the two counts and the three defendants were tried at same time, there was no reversible error in joinder of defendants and counts or in joint trial, inasmuch as counsel for defendant quite deliberately, after mature consideration extending over a weekend which intervened during the trial, and after the trial judge had suggested severance, deemed it prudent from standpoint of his client to proceed with the trial and so advised the court. Wynn v. United States (1960, 275 F. 2d 648, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 190).

Defendant was not deprived of effective assistance of counsel because during the trial his counsel entered an appearance also for two other defendants who were charged with the same robbery and who were also charged with another robbery committed the day before, where no conflict of interests or detriment appeared and the added representation was assumed by counsel as a calculated move on his part to aid defendant in his defense. Id.

19. New trial

Denial of motion for new trial made after conviction for robbery and based on newly discovered evidence bearing only upon the credibility of a witness for prosecution was not abuse of discretion. Wilkins, Jr., v. United States (1956, 228 F. 2d 37, 97 U.S. App. D.C. 66).

Refusal of defendant's motion for new trial after conviction of robbery on basis of newly discovered evidence discrediting any prosecuting witness was not abuse of discretion, where it appeared that alleged newly discovered evidence consisting of police record of prosecuting witness could have been procured by defendant before trial, and further that such evidence was not of such a nature that new trial would properly produce an acquittal. Thompson v. United States (1951, 188 F. 2d 652, 88 U. S. App. D. C. 235).

20. Preliminary hearing

The hearing called for by the Federal Criminal Procedure Rule relating to appearance before commissioner is not an "arraignment" but a preliminary examination of the arrested person, and it is more accurate to refer to the proceeding as a "preliminary hearing"; such hearing is the occasion for judicial warnings as to such person's rights, and it is also a purpose of the hearing to have a judicial determination as to whether such person should be held. Goldsmith & Carter v. United States (1960, 277 F. 2d 335, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 305, certiorari denied 81 S. Ct. 106, 364 U.S. 863, 5 L. Ed. 2d 86).

Where a person was arrested and search of his person produced a newspaper clipping about a robbery, and his explanation for having the clipping was that he had been playing cards with a friend who had stated that the friend's brother and brother's companion had committed such robbery, there was sufficient ground for arresting the brother and brother's companion, and after arrest it was incumbent on police to investigate more thoroughly by verifying or testing the statements about brother and brother's companion before deciding whether brother and companion should have a preliminary hearing or be released, and if the friend was willing to repeat his "charges" in presence of brother and brother's companion and in a manner which convinced officers of the friend's reliability, the police had an adequate basis to take brother and brother's companion before the magistrate and ask that they be held for the grand jury. Id.

The questioning of a suspect prior to preliminary hearing cannot be for the purpose of eliciting damaging statements to support the arrest and there cannot be prolonged or intensive questioning easily gliding into the evils of the third degree, and if a suspect, arrested or not, denies knowledge of a crime, the police are entitled, if indeed not obliged, to confront him with those who have implicated him. Id.

21. Purpose

The purpose of Congress in enacting this section was to expand the common-law definition of robbery so that it would comprehend the taking by sudden or stealthy seizure or snatching. Neufield v. U.S. (1941, 118 F. 2d 375, 73 App. D. C. 174, certiorari denied 62 S. Ct. 580, 315 U. S. 798, 86 L. Ed. 1199).

22. Questions for jury

In prosecution for robbery and carrying a dangerous weapon wherein government's testimony on issue of insanity was offered by a number of lay witnesses and a qualified psychiatrist, and on part of defendant there was opposing testimony both lay and psychiatric, issue of insanity was for jury. Niport v. United States (1959, 263 F. 2d 901, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 64).

In robbery prosecution, issue of identity of defendant was one of fact which trial court properly submitted to jury. Thompson v. United States (1951, 188 F. 2d 652, 88 U. S. App. D. C. 235).

23. Review

Where there was no suggestion of coercion, with respect to defendant's oral admissions to the police or any factor making it appropriate for the appellate court to reach the question of admissibility despite the absence of objection, the matter was not reviewable. Gilliam v. United States (1958, 257 F. 2d 185, 103 U. S. App. D.C. 181, certiorari denied 79 S. Ct. 728, 359 U.S. 947, 3 L. Ed. 2d 680, rehearing denied 79 S. Ct. 899, 359 U.S. 981, 3 L. Ed. 2d 931, certiorari denied 79 S. Ct. 1129, 359 U.S. 995, 3 L. Ed. 2d 983).

24. — Record on appeal

Record upon appeal from conviction in Federal District Court for armed robbery showed no prejudicial error. Thompson v. United States (1955, 223 F. 2d 627, 96 U. S. App. D. C. 162, certiorari denied 76 S. Ct. 324, 350 U. S. 949, 100 L. Ed. 827).

25. — Remand

Though jury was not warranted on evidence in failing to entertain reasonable doubt that except for diseased mental condition defendant would have committed robberies, Court of Appeals would not direct that defendant be acquitted by reason of insanity, but would remand for a new trial, where testimony of expert who had not testified at second trial would be available at retrial, resolvable ambiguities existed in testimony, and dearth of prosecution's nonmedical testimony, might be overcome. Douglas v. United States (1956, 239 F. 2d 52, 99 U.S. App. D. C. 232).

26. Sentence

District Court's denial of defendant's motion to vacate sentence of two to seven years imposed on defendant's plea of guilty to charges of robbery, on ground that plea was coerced, would not be disturbed by Court of Appeals, where testimony could be viewed to support thesis that court-appointed counsel of defendant merely brought his professional judgment and experience to bear, as he was bound to do, in advising defendant of high probability of conviction and of sentences some courts had imposed on pleas of guilty in such cases, and it was not shown that counsel's estimate of case was either erroneous or made to mislead defendant, and it did not appear that counsel's estimate of sentence was offered defendant as a promise rather than a hope. Smith v. United States (1959, 265 F. 2d 99, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 115).

Where defendant, who had been sentenced on first indictment from two to six years, on each of four counts in second indictment from one to three years, with such sentences to take effect consecutively with one another and with sentence on first indictment, and on third indictment from one to three years concurrently with the other sentences, had actually pleaded guilty only to one count in each of the three indictments, Court of Appeals would set aside sentence on second indictment except as to one sentence from one to three years, and, as to first indictment, district court could resentence defendant in view of fact that existing sentence was a general one covering two counts. Campbell v. United States (1958, 258 F. 2d 160, 103 U.S. App. D.C. 308).

Sentence of 3 to 12 years for robbery for which maximum sentence was 15 years was valid as conforming with statute relating to indeterminate sentences and providing for a maximum sentence not exceeding maximum fixed by law for crime committed, as against contention maximum sentence of entire term imposed by statute violated was required. McDonald v. Johnston (C.C.A. 9, 1937, 86 F. 2d 329).

Application for habeas corpus was premature when it challenged the validity of consecutive sentences as the first sentence of robbery had not expired. Johnson v. Aderhold (C. C. A. 5, 1934, 73 F. 2d 102).

27. Trial procedure

In prosecution for rape, and for robbery of cleaning establishment, where court warned defendant's counsel that if he asked question of witness regarding whether defendant had been identified as the man who robbed another cleaning establishment about a week prior to the commission of the offenses involved, he would do so at his peril, refusal to allow the contradiction of witness' answer was proper. McKenzie v. U.S. (1942, 126 F. 2d 533, 75 U. S. App. D. C. 270).

28. Unnecessary delay

A reasonable period of time elapsing between occurrence of oral confession and the time reasonably necessary to reduce it to writing for it to be signed is not "unnecessary delay" within Federal Criminal Procedure Rule governing appearance before commissioner. Goldsmith & Carter v. United States (1960, 277 F. 2d 335, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 305, certiorari denied 81 S. Ct. 106, 364 U.S. 863, 5 L. Ed. 2d 86).

Under Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure, preliminary hearing must be made promptly and without unnecessary delay and there is no requirement that preliminary hearing be immediate. Id.

Where there is a plea of unnecessary delay before preliminary hearing, the court must examine in detail all the surrounding circumstances, taking into consideration the manner in which the interrogation was conducted, the length of time involved, and particularly the purposes which the police had in conducting their inquiry, if the purposes can be discerned, and the court must not forget that interrogation is not an evil per se but an absolute necessity and that it often leads to releases, not charges. Id.

29. Verdict

In appropriate case there is duty to set aside verdict of guilty and to direct verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity; though this duty is to be performed with caution because of deference due jury in resolving factual issues. Douglas v. United States (1956, 239 F. 2d 52, 99 U. S. App. D. C. 232).

§ 22-2902. Attempt to commit robbery.

Whoever attempts to commit robbery, as defined in section 22-2901, by an overt act, shall be imprisoned for not more than three years or be fined not more than five hundred dollars, or both. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1322, ch. 854, § 811.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Acquittal on one count, effect 1
Corroboration 2
Indictment 3
Infamous crime 4
Sentence 5

1. Acquittal on one count, effect

Under this section and § 22-2901, attempted robbery or actual robbery is possible without assault, and acquittal of assault with intent to rob does not require acquittal of attempted robbery. Pope v. Huff (1944, 141 F. 2d 727, 79 U. S. App. D. C. 18).

2. Corroboration

Evidence sustained conviction of attempt to commit robbery in violation of this section, notwithstanding fact that testimony of principal prosecution witness was uncorroborated and that intent to rob could only be inferred. Accardo v. United States (1957, 249 F. 2d 519, 102 U. S. App. D. C. 4, certiorari denied 78 S. Ct. 787, 356 U. S. 943, 2 L. Ed. 2d 817).

3. Indictment

Under section 22-2901 robbery includes taking by force or violence, whether against resistance or by sudden or stealthy seizure or snatching, or by putting in fear, and to charge a taking "by force and violence, and by sudden and stealthy seizure, and against resistance, and by putting in fear" did not constitute a misjoinder of actions in a single count. Turner v. United States (1927, 16 F. 2d 535, 57 App. D. C. 39).

4. Infamous crime

Robbery is an infamous crime, and must be prosecuted by indictment. United States v. Evans (28 App. D. C. 264).

5. Sentence

Where defendant, who had been sentenced on first indictment from two to six years, on each of four counts in second indictment from one to three years, with such sentences to take effect consecutively with one another and with sentence on first indictment, and on third indictment from one to three years concurrently with other sentences, had actually pleaded guilty only to one count in each of the three indictments, Court of Appeals would set aside sentence on second indictment except as to one sentence from one to three years, and, as to first indictment, district court could resentence defendant in view of fact that existing sentence was a general one covering two counts. Campbell v. United States (1958, 258 F. 2d 160, 103 U.S. App. D.C. 308).

Sentence fixing a maximum of twelve years conformed with the act of July 15, 1932, as did the minimum period of three years, being for a minimum period "not exceeding one-fifth of the maximum period fixed by law." McDonald v. Johnston (C. C. A. 9, 1937, 86 F. 2d 329).

Chapter 30.—SEDUCTION

Sec.

22-3001. Seduction.

22-3002. Seduction by teacher.

If any person shall seduce and carnally know any female of previous chaste character, between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one years, out of wedlock, such seduction and carnal knowledge shall be deemed a misdemeanor, and the offender, being convicted thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment for a term not exceeding three years, or fined not exceeding two hundred dollars or may be punished by both such fine and imprisonment. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1332, ch. 854, § 873.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Chastity 1
Evidence 2
Promise of marriage 3
Subsequent marriage 4

1. Chastity

Virginity is the test of chastity. Bray v. United States (39 App. D. C. 600)

2. Evidence

Subsequent misconduct of prosecutrix with others is inadmissible "unless, perhaps, when improper relations with others follow closely upon the commission of the offense by the accused, and are preceded by proof of circumstances tending to show that the prosecutrix had not been previously chaste." Bray v. United States (39 App. D. C. 600).

3. Promise of marriage

"The object of the statute is to protect the chaste virgin against betrayal from an honest belief in the betrayer's protestations of love and affection, or an existing promise of marriage, or a present unqualified promise of marriage as an inducement for the commission of the act," but does not cover a promise of marriage contingent upon pregnancy resulting from the intercourse. Hamilton v. United States (41 App. D.C. 359, 51 L.R.A., N.S. 809).

4. Subsequent marriage

Subsequent marriage of the parties is no bar to prosecution. Bray v. United States (39 App. D. C. 600)

Any male person, over twenty-one years of age, who is superintendent, tutor, or teacher in any public or private school, seminary, or other institution, or instructor of any female in any branch of instruction, who has sexual intercourse with any female under twenty-one years of age and not under sixteen years of age, with her consent, while under his instruction during the term of his engagement as superintendent, tutor, or teacher, shall be imprisoned for not less than one year nor more than ten. NOTES TO DECISIONS

- Elements of offense 1
 Entry to secure divorce evidence 2
 Jurisdiction 3
 Questions for jury 4
 Reasonable cause for arrest 6
 Unlawful purpose of occupancy 5

1. Elements of offense

In a prosecution for unlawfully entering a private dwelling against the will and without consent or authority of lawful occupant, one of essential elements is whether entry was against will of one who was lawful occupant. Moore v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 136 A. 2d 868).

2. Entry to secure divorce evidence

In prosecution for unlawful entry by a private detective and photographer, employed by husband to secure evidence against his wife in a divorce proceeding, alleged right of husband to make what would otherwise be an illegal entry in order to prevent the debauchment of his wife would be personal to the husband and could not be invoked by the defendants. Leon and McManaway v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 136 A. 2d 588).

3. Jurisdiction

Under former section 11-603, the police court had jurisdiction of information charging that accused unlawfully entered and unlawfully declined to leave dwelling house in District of Columbia. Fletcher v. McMahon (1941, 121 F. 2d 729, 73 App. D. C. 263, certiorari denied 62 S. Ct. 131, 314 U. S. 662, 86 L. Ed. 531).

Appellant having been convicted in police court under this section appealed the case and by so doing deprived lower court of jurisdiction, and they had no power to commit appellant to jail. Prioleau v. Superintendent of Wash. Asylum and Jail (1925, 2 F. 2d 317, 55 App. D.C. 99).

4. Questions for jury

In prosecution for unlawful attempt to enter a private building, evidence was sufficient to raise jury question as to defendant's guilt. McFarland v. United State (D.C. Mun. App. 1960, 163 F. 2d 627).

In prosecution for unlawfully entering a private dwelling against the will and without consent or authority of lawful occupant, wherein complaining witness presented evidence tending to show that she was tenant in possession of apartment and defense introduced testimony of rental agent that apartment was rented to a couple, whether complainant was a lawful occupant was a question for the jury. Moore v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 136 A. 2d 868).

5. Unlawful purpose of occupancy

In prosecution for unlawfully entering a private dwelling against will and without consent or authority of lawful occupant, issues as to whether complaining party occupied apartment under an alias or occupied it for purpose of having adulterous relations with another had no bearing on question of whether she was a lawful occupant. Moore v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 136 A. 2d 868).

6. Reasonable cause for arrest

Police officer who, while walking to rear of tavern more than one hour after closing time, saw a man who had been peering from rear of tavern, suddenly pull his head back, and who then observed two men walking away rapidly, one of whom, when stopped by officer, was holding hammer between his legs, had reasonable cause to believe that the two men were engaged in a felonious act, and, therefore, their arrest was proper and admission of hammer in evidence in subsequent criminal prosecution was proper. McFarland v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1960, 163 A. 2d 627).

§ 22-3103. Grave robbery—Buying or selling dead bodies.

Whoever, without legal authority or without the consent of the nearest surviving relative, shall disturb or remove any dead body from a grave for the purpose of dissecting, or of buying, selling, or in any way trafficking in the same, shall be imprisoned not less than one year nor more than three years. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1334, ch. 854, § 891.)

pipe or fixture therein, shall be fined not more than two hundred dollars, or be imprisoned not more than two years, or both. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1324, ch. 854, § 825.)

§ 22-3105. Placing explosives with intent to destroy or injure property.

Whoever places, or causes to be placed, in, upon, under, against, or near to any building, car, vessel, monument, statue, or structure, gunpowder or any explosive substance of any kind whatsoever, with intent to destroy, throw down, or injure the whole or any part thereof, although no damage is done, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars or by imprisonment not exceeding ten years. (Mar. 3, 1905, 33 Stat. 1033, ch. 1461.)

Any person who shall steal, wrongfully deface, injure, mutilate, tear, or destroy any book, pamphlet, or manuscript, or any portion thereof belonging to the Library of Congress, or to any public library in the District of Columbia, whether the property of the United States or of the District of Columbia or of any individual or corporation in said District, or who shall steal, wrongfully deface, injure, mutilate, tear, or destroy any book, pamphlet, document, manuscript, print, engraving, medal, newspaper, or work of art, the property of the United States, shall be held guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall, when the offense is not otherwise punishable by some statute of the United States, be punished by a fine of not less than ten dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, and by imprisonment for not less than one month nor more than one year, or both, for every such offense. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1327, ch. 854, § 849; June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 535, ch. 1329.)

2. Evidence

In prosecution for destroying private property, where complainant purchased premises at foreclosure and sent a letter to defendant alleging ownership, and successfully prosecuted a suit for eviction, while deed was admissible evidence of ownership, it was not the only admissible evidence and complainant's testimony relating thereto, was equally admissible. *Sims v. Evidence supported conviction of destroying private property. Id.

4. Questions for jury

In prosecution for destroying private property, evidence upon the question as to whether complainant was holder of legal title or had right of possession when the offense was committed was sufficient for the jury. Sims v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1956, 120 A. 2d 69).

NOTES TO DECISIONS

1. Indictment

The words "said defendants being then and there armed with a certain pistol" were considered as mere surplusage to an indictment for robbery and not to charge a separate offense for the purpose of increasing the punishment. Tomlinson v. United States (1938, 93 F. 2d 652, 68 App. D.C. 106, 114 A.L.R. 1315, certiorari denied 58 S. Ct. 645, 303 U.S. 646, 82 L. Ed. 1102).

(1) he is a drug addict;

(2) he has been convicted in the District of Columbia or elsewhere of a felony;

(3) he has been convicted of violating section 22-2701, section 22-2722, or sections 22-3302 to 22-3306; or

(4) he is not licensed under section 22-3210 to sell weapons, and he has been convicted of violating sections 22-3201 to 22-3216.

No person shall keep a pistol for, or intentionally make a pistol available to, such a person, knowing that he has been so convicted or that he is a drug addict. Whoever violates this section shall be punished as provided in section 22-3215, unless the violation occurs after he has been convicted of a violation of this section, in which case he shall be imprisoned for not more than ten years. (July 8, 1932, 47 Stat. 651, ch. 465, § 3; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 93, ch. 159, § 204(b).)

AMENDMENT

1953—Act June 29, 1953, amended section by substituting the provisions of the text for former language which had provided that no one who had been convicted of a crime of violence should own or possess a pistol in the District of Columbia.

DEFINITION

Section 204(a) of act June 29, 1953, provided that: "For the purposes of this section [amending this section and sections 22-3204, 22-3207, 22-3208, 22-3210, and 22-3214], the term 'Dangerous Weapons Act' means the Act of July 8, 1932, as amended, providing for the control of dangerous weapons in the District."

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Defenses 1 Sentences 2

1. Defenses

Even though defendant, who was charged with making threats in a menacing manner and with unlawfully possessing an automatic pistol, had been discharged from hospital as having recovered from a mental disorder less than two months before date of alleged crimes, usual presumption of defendant's sanity, under District of Columbia law, existed at the time of trial. Williams v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1954, 104 A. 2d 828).

2. Sentences

Municipal court could impose a sentence to commence at termination of that imposed for another distinct offense, irrespective of whether initial sentence was imposed by the municipal court or by the district court. Williams v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 133 A. 2d 112).

No person shall within the District of Columbia carry either openly or concealed on or about his person, except in his dwelling house or place of business or on other land possessed by him, a pistol, without a license therefor issued as hereinafter provided, or any deadly or dangerous weapon capable of being so concealed. Whoever violates this section shall be punished as provided in section 22-3215, unless the violation occurs after he has been convicted in the District of Columbia of a violation of this section or of a felony, either in the District of Columbia or in another jurisdiction, in which case he shall be sentenced to imprisonment for not more than ten years. (July 8, 1932, 47 Stat. 651, ch. 465, § 4; Nov. 4, 1943, 57 Stat. 586, ch. 296; Aug. 4, 1947, 61 Stat. 743, ch. 469; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 94, ch. 159, § 204(c).)

AMENDMENTS

1953—Act June 29, 1953, amended section by striking out proviso authorizing arrests without a warrant and searches and seizures pursuant thereto for violation of the section which is now covered by section 23-306 and to provide for a maximum penalty of ten years for a conviction of violating the section after having previously been convicted of such offense, or of a felony.

1947—Act Aug. 4, 1947, added proviso authorizing arrests without a warrant and searches and seizures pursuant thereto for violation of the section.

1943—Act Nov. 4, 1943, amended section by inserting word "either openly or" preceding "concealed on or about", and by adding "capable of being so concealed" following "deadly or dangerous weapon."

1. Concealed about his person

"The words 'concealed about his person,' as used in the statute, were intended to mean and do mean concealed in such proximity to the person as to be convenient of access and within reach." Brown v. United States (1929, 30 F. 2d 474, 58 App. D.C. 311).

2. Constitutionality

This section denouncing offense of carrying a pistol without a license to do so is not unconstitutional in permitting imposition of greater penalty when accused has been previously convicted of that offense in District or of felony in District or anywhere. Kendrick v. United States (1956, 238 F. 2d 34, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 173).

3. Construction

The statute being criminal, penal, prohibitive and in derogation of the common law it must be given a strict rather than liberal construction. Brown v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1949, 66 A. 2d 491).

The qualifying phrase "without a license" is not to be treated as an exception to the statute but rather as a descriptive part of the offense, an "adjectival" and descriptive negative defining the corpus delicti and the phrase is incorporated in the definition forming an integral element of the crime. Id.

4. Construction with other laws

Section 22-3214 (b) specifically prohibiting possession of knife with intent to use unlawfully against another was not intended to cover the whole subject matter of knives in District of Columbia, in the sense of repealing deadly weapon statute which required no proof of unlawful intent, and hence information alleging violation of the older statute was sufficient though it specified knife as the deadly weapon and did not allege intent to use knife unlawfully against another. United States v. W. E. Shannon (D. C. Mun. App. 1958, 144 A. 2d 267).

5. Double jeopardy

Defendant, who allegedly carried concealed unlicensed pistol on his person and produced it and shot victim, was not put twice in jeopardy for same offense by prosecution upon two counts, for assault with deadly weapon, and also for carrying concealed unlicensed weapon, since element of proof in second count, that gun was unlicensed, was not necessary in proof of assault charge. Kendrick v. United States (1956, 238 F. 2d 34, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 173).

6. Election of offenses

Government is not required to bring all knife cases under code section prohibiting possession of knife with blade longer than three inches; and defendant who carried openly or concealed on or about his person a "pocket knife" which had a black outer case and a blade three-eighths of an inch wide and four and one-quarter inches from shank to tip was properly prosecuted under code section forbidding any person to carry either openly or concealed on or about his person a deadly or dangerous weapon capable of being so concealed. Degree v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1958, 144 A. 2d 547).

7. Evidence—In general

In prosecution for carrying a pistol without a license, prosecution need not prove that pistol was carried openly or was concealed, in view that it is an offense under this section to carry a pistol without a license irrespective of whether pistol was carried openly or concealed. U. S. v. Waters (1947, 73 F. Supp. 72, appeal dismissed 69 S. Ct. 168, 335 U.S. 869, 93 L. Ed. 413, cause certified 175 F. 2d 340, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 127).

Evidence that defendant taxicab driver did not need to move from front seat of his taxicab to obtain his pistol established that he had pistol "about his person" within this section prohibiting a party from carrying about his person a pistol without license. Id.

In prosecution for carrying gun without license, testimony of lieutenant of Metropolitan Police Department that he had searched records of all persons who held licenses to carry pistols in District of Columbia and that there was no record that defendant had a license was primary evidence of state of facts and not hearsay. Bussie v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 81 A. 2d 247).

8. — Burden of proof

In prosecution for carrying gun without license, prosecution was required only to prove that accused carried gun and had no license to carry it, and was not required to prove all contents of original record of all licenses for carrying guns issued by superintendent of police. Bussie v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 81 A. 2d 247).

The elements of the crime being the carrying of a pistol, without a license, the burden of proceeding does not shift to the defendant once the prima facie case of carrying the weapon has been established but remains with the prosecution. Brown v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1949, 66 A. 2d 491).

9. — Examination of witnesses

In prosecution for robbery, conspiracy to commit robbery, and for carrying a deadly weapon without a license, requiring counsel for one defendant to ask a more precise question than question counsel asked a witness for prosecution as to whether such witness was convicted several times of prostitution during specified years was within discretion of trial court. Bundy v. United States (1952, 193 F. 2d 694, 90 U.S. App. D.C. 12, certiorari denied 72 S. Ct. 638, 343 U.S. 908, 96 L. Ed. 1326).

10. — Prior conviction, proof of Where defendant was charged with carrying unlicensed pistol after felony conviction, and, on defendant's motion, allegations in indictment concerning prior conviction of felony were stricken, and defendant's counsel, out of defendant's hearing, stipulated that defendant had previously been convicted of a felony and waived later proof thereof, but concession of counsel was made without defendant's knowledge or consent, there was no waiver by defendant of necessity of proof of felony conviction, and imposition of enhanced sentence, on ground of prior felony conviction, was error. Jackson v. United States (1955, 221 F. 2d 883, 95 U.S. App. D.C. 328).

11. — Production

In prosecution for robbery, conspiracy to commit robbery, and for carrying a deadly weapon without a license, action of trial court in not requiring production under subpoena of arrest record of a witness for prosecution was not prejudicial to defendant where police officer testified he had no arrest record of witness by name contained in subpoena and did not know such witness used other names mentioned by him by counsel for defendant, and counsel for defendant did not during trial procure any further subpoena for arrest record of witness under any other name. Bundy v. United States (1952, 193 F. 2d 694, 90 U.S. App. D.C. 12, certiorari denied 72 S. Ct. 638, 343 U.S. 908, 96 L. Ed. 1326).

In prosecution for carrying gun without license, best procedure to prove that defendant had no license would be to produce official custodian of police records. Bussie v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1951, 81 A. 2d 247).

12. — Sufficiency

Conviction for carrying concealed weapons would not be reversed, on ground that trial judge, in finding defendant guilty, erroneously considered stipulation, made in connection with motion to suppress evidence, to effect that defendant had a possessory interest in two pistols sought to be suppressed where no formal written stipulation was presented to judge who heard motion to suppress, and it was merely a verbal statement by counsel, and a different judge presided at the trial, and he certified that his decision was based solely on testimony adduced at trial, and in stenographic transcript there appeared no testimony or offer of testimony as to stipulation, and it did not appear to have affected decision in any way, and testimony of police officer supplied essentials on which to predicate a conviction. Emburgh v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1960, 164 A. 2d 342).

In absence of objection to testimony of police lieutenant who stated that he had searched pistol license records, and in absence of attempt to cross-examine him as to extent of his knowledge and familiarity with records or contention that he was not in a position to make a complete search and render accurate report, testimony was of sufficient probative force to show that accused had no license even though official custodian was not produced. Bussie v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 81 A. 2d 247).

13. Indictment

Failure of pistol-carrying count of indictment to allege or proof to show that defendant had been previously convicted of felony, did not preclude imposition of greater penalty applicable to defendant who has previously been convicted of felony, where defendant had on cross-examination admitted prior felonies, and defendant was not denied right of allocution, nor was he prepared to show that he had not been previously convicted, and Government after conviction and before sentence filed information alleging prior convictions. Kendrick v. United States (1956, 238 F. 2d 34, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 173).

Pistol-carrying count of indictment was not defective in using conjunctive "and," instead of statutory disjunctive "or," in charging that defendant "did carry openly and concealed a dangerous weapon", where proof tended to show that weapon was concealed when defendant approached scene of shooting and was then produced and carried openly. Id.

Indictment charging defendant with carrying a pistol but failing to charge, as required by this section, that pistol was carried by defendant without a license failed to charge an offense. U.S. v. Waters (1947, 73 F. Supp. 72, appeal dismissed 69 S. Ct. 168, 335 U.S. 869, 93 L. Ed. 413, cause certified 175 F. 2d 340, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 127).

14. Instructions

In prosecution for unlawfully carrying a pistol, failure to instruct jury on "criminal intent" on ground that such intent was an essential ingredient in the crime derived from the common law was not error since carrying a dangerous weapon without a license was not an offense at common law and all that was needed was an intent to commit the proscribed act. Cooke v. United States (1960, 275 F. 2d 887, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 223).

Where, although trial judge did not charge jury that it must find that the defendant intended to carry an unlicensed gun in a public place, defendant's trial counsel made no objection, but defendant testified that he intentionally put the gun in his pocket before leaving his shop, omission from the charge was not plain error which could be noticed on appeal in absence of exception in court below. Id.

15. Place of business

D.C. 1929, title 6, § 114, permitted the carrying of a dangerous or deadly weapon from the place of purchase to the purchaser's dwelling or place of business, especially when person was conducting himself in a quiet, peaceable, and orderly manner. Bolt v. United States (1925, 2 F. 2d 922, 55 App. D.C. 120).

Provision of this section prohibiting a person from carrying a pistol without a license "except in his dwelling house or place of business or on other land possessed by him" manifests the intent that the "place of business" referred to is land, and would not apply so as to exempt a taxicab driver who carried a pistol without a license while in his taxicab, since the cab would not be the driver's "place of business". U.S. v. Waters (1947, 73 F. Supp. 72, appeal dismissed 69 S. Ct. 168, 335 U.S. 869, 93 L. Ed. 413, cause certified 175 F. 2d 340, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 127).

16. Possession of firearms

This section clearly establishes that possession of a firearm in one's home is not a crime. Morton v. United States (1950, 183 F. 2d 844, 87 U.S. App. D.C. 135).

17. Prior conviction

A state legislature does not violate equal protection provision of Fourteenth Amendment of United States Constitution, in enacting statutes which impose heavier penalty for second or subsequent offenses, since fact of prior conviction in such cases is considered as affording reasonable basis for classification. Kendrick v. United States (1956, 238 F. 2d 34, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 173).

Where defendant had been convicted of carrying a dangerous weapon and for housebreaking and larceny, and sentence for first offense was not to take effect under judgment until expiration of sentences on other offenses, but judgment of conviction on other offenses was reversed on appeal, appropriate procedure would be to vacate judgment of conviction on first offense and remand case for entry of judgment thereon with direction for new trial as to other offenses. Payton v. United States (1955, 222 F. 2d 794, 96 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

18. Purpose

Acquittal by defendant of assault with a dangerous weapon, did not require his acquittal on companion charge of carrying a pistol which he used to defend himself on ground that such acquittal demonstrated conclusively that defendant was carrying pistol for a lawful purpose notwithstanding defendant was exposed to a serious current threat by victim, that he did not have time to get a license and that he made a serious attempt to secure police protection, in light of the history of antiweapon legislation evidencing the clearest intent to drastically tighten ban on carrying dangerous weapons. Cooke v. United States (1960, 275 F. 2d 887, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 223).

19. Questions for jury

In prosecution for robbery and carrying a dangerous weapon wherein government's testimony on issue of insanity was offered by a number of lay witnesses and a qualified psychiatrist, and on part of defendant there was opposing testimony both lay and psychiatric, issue of insanity was for jury. Niport v. United States (1959, 263 F. 2d 901, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 64).

In prosecution for violation of this section defining the offense a person commits in carrying a pistol without license except in his dwelling house or place of business or on other land possessed by him, jury question was presented as to whether place at which defendant was carrying weapons was his place of business. Alexander v. United States (1954, 210 F. 2d 727, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 240).

In prosecution for violation of statute forbidding carrying of pistol on or about one's person without a license question whether, in having loaded pistol under hinged front seat of automobile so that he could get it by alighting from automobile and tilting driver's seat upward and forward, defendant had the weapon in such proximity to his person as to be convenient of access and within reach was one for jury. Wilson v. United States (1952, 198 F. 2d 299, 91 U.S. App. D.C. 135).

"The defendant had a right to carry the revolver, loaded or unloaded, from the place of purchase to his home; and whether he had it on his person at the time of his arrest, for that purpose only, or for some unlawful purpose as well, was a question of fact, which should have been submitted to the jury." Bell v. United States (1920, 265 F. 1007, 49 App. D.C. 367).

In prosecution for carrying gun without license, whether defendant had license was a question for the jury. Bussie v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1951, 81 A. 2d 247).

20. Self-defense

Where defendant, who was seated on right front fender of his automobile was attacked by disorderly group of men and women, retreated to driver's side of automobile, obtained pistol on floor of automobile under driver's seat and fired on his pursuers while backing away, defendant was justified in using weapon in self-defense, and fact that he had it in his hands did not constitute violation of statute forbidding carrying of pistol on or about one's person without a license. Wilson v. United States (1952, 198 F. 2d 299, 91 U.S. App. D.C. 135).

21. Sentences

Defendant simultaneously carrying two pistols, each of which was unlicensed, committed but a single offense and could not be given consecutive sentences by reason of being separately charged with carrying of unlicensed pistol in two separate informations. Cormier v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 137 A. 2d 212).

22. Probable cause for arrest

Where police officers about 1:30 a.m. observed defendant and his companion seated in parked automobile on dark street, and, as officers approached automobile, defendant and his companion "appeared to duck down," and one of the officers shined his flashlight into rear of automobile where defendant was sitting and noticed a shiny object which appeared to be a gun falling to floor near defendant's feet, and that officer drew his revolver and ordered defendant and his companion out of automobile, and shiny object on floor of automobile was in fact a fully loaded pistol, and on back seat officers found another loaded pistol in a bag, there was probable cause to justify arrest of defendant, and, in prosecution for carrying concealed weapons, trial court properly denied defendant's motion to suppress evidence, on ground that there was no probable cause for arrest and that search incidental thereto was unlawful. Emburch v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1960, 164 A. 2d 342).

The provisions of section 22-3204 shall not apply to marshals, sheriffs, prison or jail wardens, or their deputies, policemen or other duly appointed law-enforcement officers, or to members of the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps of the United States or of the National Guard or Organized Reserves when on duty, or to the regularly enrolled members of any organization duly authorized to purchase or receive such weapons from the United States, provided such members are at or are going to or from their places of assembly or target practice, or to officers or employees of the United States duly authorized to carry a concealed pistol, or to any person engaged in the business of manufacturing, repairing, or dealing in firearms, or the agent or representative of any such person having in his possession, using, or carrying a pistol in the usual or ordinary course of such business or to any person while carrying a pistol unloaded and in a secure wrapper from the place of purchase to his home or place of business or to a place of repair or back to his home or place of business or in moving goods from one place of abode or business to another. (July 8, 1932, 47 Stat. 651, ch. 465, § 5.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Business of repairing firearms 1
Special policeman 2

1. Business of repairing firearms

Defendant charged with carrying pistol for which he had no license, was not within District of Columbia statute providing that licensing provisions did not apply to persons engaged in business of repairing firearms when pistol is carried unloaded in a secure wrapper from place of business to home, where defendant claimed that repairing guns was only his hobby and that he had volunteered to work on gun which he claimed belonged to another. Cormier v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 137 A. 2d 212).

2. Special policeman

A defendant was neither a "policeman" nor a "law enforcement officer" so as to be exempt from section 22-3205 against carrying a pistol without a license, where defendant was a special policeman appointed by the Commissioners and he was not "on actual duty in the area" of the place where he was arrested nor was he "traveling without deviation immediately before and immediately after the period of actual duty between such places and his residence" within the Commissioner's regulation authorizing the carrying of firearms by special policemen under such circumstances. McKenzie v. U.S. (D.C. Mun. App. 1960, 158 A. 2d 912).

The superintendent of police of the District of Columbia may, upon the application of any person having a bona fide residence or place of business within the District of Columbia or of any person having a bona fide residence or place of business within the United States and a license to carry a pistol concealed upon his person issued by the lawful authorities of any State or subdivision of the United States, issue a license to such person to carry a pistol within the District of Columbia for not more than one year from date of issue, if it appears that the applicant has good reason to fear injury to his person or property or has any other proper reason for carrying a pistol and that he is a suitable person to be so licensed. The license shall be in duplicate, in form to be prescribed by the commissioners of the District of Columbia and shall bear the name, address, description, photograph, and signature of the licensee and the reason given for desiring a license. The original thereof shall be delivered to the licensee, and the duplicate shall be retained by the superintendent of police of the District of Columbia and preserved in his office for six years. (July 8, 1932, 47 Stat. 651, ch. 465, § 6.)

TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS

Chief of Police as successor to Major and Superintendent of Police, see note under section 4-103.

§ 22-3207. Selling pistol to minors and others.

No person shall within the District of Columbia sell any pistol to a person who he has reasonable cause to believe is not of sound mind, or is forbidden by section 22-3203 to possess a pistol, or, except when the relation of parent and child or guardian and ward exists, is under the age of twenty-one years. (July 8, 1932, 47 Stat. 652, ch. 465, § 7; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 94, ch. 159, § 204(d).)

AMENDMENT

1953—Act June 29, 1953, substituted "forbidden by section 22-3203 to possess a pistol" for a "a drug addict, or is a person who has been convicted in the District of Columbia or elsewhere of a crime of violence" and increased the age requirement from eighteen to twenty-one.

§ 22-3208. Transfers of firearms regulated.

No seller shall within the District of Columbia deliver a pistol to the purchaser thereof until forty-eight hours shall have elapsed from the time of the application for the purchase thereof, except in the case of sales to marshals, sheriffs, prison or jail wardens or their deputies, policemen, or other duly appointed law-enforcement officers, and, when delivered, said pistol shall be securely wrapped and shall be unloaded. At the time of applying for the purchase of a pistol the purchaser shall sign in duplicate and deliver to the seller a statement containing his full name, address, occupation, color, place of birth, the date and hour of application, the caliber, make, model, and manufacturer's number of the pistol to be purchased and a statement that he is not forbidden by section 22-3203 to possess a pistol. The seller shall, within six hours after such application, sign and attach his address and deliver one copy to such person or persons as the superintendent of police of the District of Columbia may designate, and shall retain the other copy for six years. No machine gun, sawed-off shotgun, or blackjack shall be sold to any person other than the persons designated in section 22-3214 as entitled to possess the same, and then only after permission to make such sale has been obtained from the superintendent of police of the District of Columbia. This section shall not apply to sales at wholesale to licensed dealers. (July

8, 1932, 47 Stat. 652, ch. 465, § 8; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 94, ch. 159, § 204(e).)

AMENDMENT

1953—Act June 29, 1953, substituted "a statement that he is not forbidden by section 22-3203 to possess a pistol" for "a statement that he has never been convicted in the District of Columbia or elsewhere of a crime of violence."

TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS

Chief of Police as successor to Major and Superintendent of Police, see note under section 4-103.

§ 22-3209. Dealers of weapons to be licensed.

No retail dealer shall within the District of Columbia sell or expose for sale or have in his possession with intent to sell, any pistol, machine gun, sawed-off shotgun, or blackjack without being licensed as provided in section 22-3210. No wholesale dealer shall, within the District of Columbia, sell, or have in his possession with intent to sell, to any person other than a licensed dealer, any pistol, machine gun, sawed-off shotgun, or blackjack. (July 8, 1932, 47 Stat. 652, ch. 465, § 9.)

The commissioners of the District of Columbia may, in their discretion, grant licenses and may prescribe the form thereof, effective for not more than one year from date of issue, permitting the licensee to sell pistols, machine guns, sawed-off shotguns, and blackjacks at retail within the District of Columbia subject to the following conditions in addition to those specified in section 22-3209, for breach of any of which the license shall be subject to forfeiture and the licensee subject to punishment as provided in this chapter.

1. The business shall be carried on only in the building designated in the license.

2. The license or a copy thereof, certified by the issuing authority, shall be displayed on the premises where it can be easily read.

3. No pistol shall be sold (a) if the seller has reasonable cause to believe that the purchaser is not of sound mind or is forbidden by section 22-3203 to possess a pistol or is under the age of twenty-one years, and (b) unless the purchaser is personally known to the seller or shall present clear evidence of his identity. No machine gun, sawed-off shotgun, or blackjack shall be sold to any person other than the persons designated in section 22-3214 as entitled to possess the same, and then only after permission to make such sale has been obtained from the superintendent of police of the District of Columbia.

4. A true record shall be made in a book kept for the purpose, the form of which may be prescribed by the commissioners, of all pistols, machine guns, and sawed-off shotguns in the possession of the licensee, which said record shall contain the date of purchase, the caliber, make, model, and manufacturer's number of the weapon, to which shall be added, when sold, the date of sale.

5. A true record in duplicate shall be made of every pistol, machine gun, sawed-off shotgun, and blackjack sold, said record to be made in a book kept for the purpose, the form of which may be prescribed by the commissioners of the District of Columbia and shall be personally signed by the purchaser and by the person effecting the sale, each in the presence of the other and shall contain the date of sale, the name, address, occupation, color, and place of birth of the purchaser, and, so far as applicable, the caliber, make, model, and manufacturer's number of the weapon, and a statement by the purchaser that he is not forbidden by section 22-3203 to possess a pistol. One copy of said record shall, within seven days, be forwarded by mail to the superintendent of police of the District of Columbia and the other copy retained by the seller for six years.

6. No pistol or imitation thereof or placard advertising the sale thereof shall be displayed in any part of said premises where it can readily be seen from the outside. No license to sell at retail shall be granted to anyone except as provided in this section. (July 8, 1932, 47 Stat. 652, ch. 465, § 10; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 94, ch. 159, § 204 (f), (g).)

AMENDMENT

1953—Par. 3(a) amended by act June 29, 1953, § 204(f), which substituted "is forbidden by section 22-3203 to possess a pistol or is under the age of twenty-one" for "is a drug addict or has been convicted in the District of Columbia or elsewhere of a crime of violence or is under the age of eighteen."

Par. 5, first sentence, amended by act June 29, 1953, § 204(g), which substituted "a statement by the purchaser that he is not forbidden by section 22-3203 to possess a pistol" for "a statement signed by the purchaser that he has never been convicted in the District of Columbia or elsewhere of a crime of violence."

TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS

Chief of Police as successor to Major and Superintendent of Police, see note under section 4-103.

§ 22-3211. False information forbidden in sale of weapons.

No person shall, in purchasing a pistol or in applying for a license to carry the same, or in purchasing a machine gun, sawed-off shotgun, or blackjack within the District of Columbia, give false information or offer false evidence of his identity. (July 8, 1932, 47 Stat. 653, ch. 465, § 11.)

No person shall within the District of Columbia change, alter, remove, or obliterate the name of the maker, model, manufacturer's number, or other mark or identification on any pistol, machine gun, or sawed-off shotgun. Possession of any pistol, machine gun, or sawed-off shotgun upon which any such mark shall have been changed, altered, removed, or obliterated shall be prima facie evidence that the possessor has changed, altered, removed, or obliterated the same within the District of Columbia: Provided, however, That nothing contained in this section shall apply to any officer or agent of any of the departments of the United States or the District of Columbia engaged in experimental work. (July 8, 1932, 47 Stat. 653, ch. 465, § 12.)

This chapter shall not apply to toy or antique pistols unsuitable for use as firearms. (July 8, 1932, 47 Stat. 653, ch. 465, § 13.)

§ 22-3214. Possession of certain dangerous weapons prohibited—Exceptions.

(a) No person shall within the District of Columbia possess any machine gun, sawed-off shotgun, or any instrument or weapon of the kind commonly known as a blackjack, slung shot, sand club, sand-bag, switch-blade knife, or metal knuckles, nor any instrument, attachment, or appliance for causing the firing of any firearm to be silent or intended to lessen or muffle the noise of the firing of any firearms: Provided, however, That machine guns, or sawed-off shotguns, and blackjacks may be possessed by the members of the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps of the United States, the National Guard, or Organized Reserves when on duty, the Post Office Department or its employees when on duty, marshals, sheriffs, prison or jail wardens, or their deputies, policemen, or other duly-appointed law-enforcement officers, officers or employees of the United States duly authorized to carry such weapons, banking institutions, public carriers who are engaged in the business of transporting mail, money, securities, or other valuables, wholesale dealers and retail dealers licensed under section 22-3210.

(b) No person shall within the District of Columbia possess, with intent to use unlawfully against another, an imitation pistol, or a dagger, dirk, razor, stiletto, or knife with a blade longer than three inches, or other dangerous weapon.

(c) Whoever violates this section shall be punished as provided in section 22-3215, unless the violation occurs after he has been convicted in the District of Columbia of a violation of this section or of a felony, either in the District of Columbia or in another jurisdiction, in which case he shall be imprisoned for not more than ten years. (July 8, 1932, 47 Stat. 654, ch. 465, § 14; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 94, ch. 159, § 204(h).)

AMENDMENT

1953—Act June 29, 1953, designated existing provisions as subsec. (a), included switch-blade knives in the list of weapons forbidden to be possessed and added subsecs. (b) and (c).

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Construction with other laws 1
Election of offenses 2
Insanity 3
Purpose 4

1. Construction with other laws

The 1953 act specifically prohibiting possession of knife with intent to use unlawfully against another was not intended to cover the whole subject matter of knives in District of Columbia, in the sense of repealing deadly weapon statute which required no proof of unlawful intent, and hence information alleging violation of the older statute was sufficient though it specified knife as the deadly weapon and did not allege intent to use knife unlawfully against another. United States v. W. E. Shannon (D. C. Mun. App. 1958, 144 A. 2d 267).

2. Election of offenses

Government is not required to bring all knife cases under code section prohibiting possession of knife with blade longer than three inches; and defendant who carried openly or concealed on or about his person a "pocket knife" which had a black outer case and a blade three-eighths of an inch wide and four and one-quarter inches from shank to tip was properly prosecuted under code section forbidding any person to carry either openly or concealed on or about his person a deadly or dangerous weapon capable of being so concealed. Degree v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1958, 144 A. 2d 547).

3. Insanity

A general verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity carried with it a finding that, except for the question as to his sanity, defendant was guilty as charged. Rucker v. United States (1960, 280 F. 2d 623, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 75).

In prosecution for assault with intent to kill and possession of a rifle with intent to use it unlawfully against another, where the court found the defendant not guilty by reason of insanity and it did not appear that defendant actually understood and acquiesced that the question of his guilt was being tried in that it did not appear that he understood and acquiesced in what was being accomplished without witnesses or evidence and he protested promptly a few day after the verdict, the defendant was entitled to a new trial. Id.

4. Purpose

Acquittal by defendant of assault with a dangerous weapon did not require his acquittal on companion charge of carrying a pistol which he used to defend himself on ground that such acquittal demonstrated conclusively that defendant was carrying pistol for a lawful purpose notwithstanding defendant was exposed to a serious current threat by victim, that he did not have time to get a license and that he made a serious attempt to secure police protection, in light of the history of antiweapon legislation evidencing the clearest intent to drastically tighten ban on carrying dangerous weapons. Cooke v. United States (1960, 275 F. 2d 887, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 223).

Any violation of any provision of this chapter for which no penalty is specifically provided shall be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000 or imprisonment for not more than one year, or both. (July 8, 1932, 47 Stat. 654, ch. 465, § 15.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Double jeopardy 1
Indictment 2
Prior conviction 3

1. Double jeopardy

Defendant, who allegedly carried concealed unlicensed pistol on his person and produced it and shot victim, was not put twice in jeopardy for same offense by prosecution upon two counts, for assault with deadly weapon, and also for carrying concealed unlicensed weapon, since element of proof in second count, that gun was unlicensed, was not necessary in proof of assault charge. Kendrick v. United States (1956, 238 F. 2d 34, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 173).

2. Indictment

Failure of pistol-carrying count of indictment to allege or proof to show that defendant had been previously convicted of felony, did not preclude imposition of greater penalty applicable to defendant who has previously been convicted of felony, where defendant had on cross-examination admitted prior felonies, and defendant was not denied right of allocution, nor was he prepared to show that he had not been previously convicted, and Government after conviction and before sentence filed information alleging prior conviction. Kendrick v. United States (1956, 238 F. 2d 34, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 173).

Pistol-carrying count of indictment was not defective in using conjunctive "and", instead of statutory disjunctive "or," in charging that defendant "did carry openly and concealed a dangerous weapon", where proof tended to show that weapon was concealed when defendant approached scene of shooting and was then produced and carried openly. Id.

3. Prior conviction

A State legislature does not violate equal protection provision of Fourteenth Amendment of United States Constitution, in enacting statutes which impose heavier penalty for second or subsequent offenses, since fact of prior conviction in such cases is considered as affording reasonable basis for classification. Kendrick v. United States (1956, 238 F. 2d 34, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 173).

Where defendant was charged with carrying unlicensed pistol after felony conviction, and, on defendant's motion, allegations in indictment concerning prior conviction of felony were stricken, and defendant's counsel, out of defendant's hearing, stipulated that defendant had previously been convicted of a felony and waived later proof thereof, but concession of counsel was made without defendant's knowledge or consent, there was no waiver by defendant of necessity of proof of felony conviction, and imposition of enhanced sentence, on ground of prior felony conviction, was error. Jackson v. United States (1955, 221 F. 2d 883, 95 U.S. App. D.C. 328).

If any part of this chapter is for any reason declared void, such invalidity shall not affect the validity of the remaining portions of this chapter. (July 8, 1932, 47 Stat. 654, ch. 465, § 16.)

(a) As used in this section, the term "dangerous article" means (1) any weapon such as a pistol, machine gun, sawed-off shotgun, blackjack, slingshot, sandbag, or metal knuckles, or (2) any instrument, attachment, or appliance for causing the firing of any firearms to be silent or intended to lessen or muffle the noise of the firing of any firearms.

(b) A dangerous article unlawfully owned, possessed, or carried is hereby declared to be a nuisance.

(c) When a police officer, in the course of a lawful arrest or lawful search, discovers a dangerous article which he reasonably believes is a nuisance under subsection (b) he shall take it into his possession and surrender it to the property clerk of the Metropolitan Police Department.

(d) (1) Within thirty days after the date of such surrender, any person may file in the office of the property clerk of the Metropolitan Police Department a written claim for possession of such dangerous article. Upon the expiration of such period, the property clerk shall notify each such claimant, by registered mail addressed to the address shown on the claim, of the time and place of a hearing to determine which claimant, if any, is entitled to possession of such dangerous article. Such hearing shall be held within sixty days after the date of such surrender.

(2) At the hearing the property clerk shall hear and receive evidence with respect to the claims filed under paragraph (1). Thereafter he shall determine which claimant, if any, is entitled to possession of such dangerous article and shall reduce his decision to writing. The property clerk shall send a true copy of such written decision to each claimant by registered mail addressed to the last known address of such claimant.

(3) Any claimant may, within thirty days after the day on which the copy of such decision was mailed to such claimant, file an appeal in the municipal court for the District of Columbia. If the claimant files an appeal, he shall at the same time give written notice thereof to the property clerk. If the decision of the property clerk is so appealed, the property clerk shall not dispose of the dangerous article while such appeal is pending and, if the final judgment is entered by such court, he shall dispose of such dangerous article in accordance with the judgment of such court. The municipal court for the District of Columbia is authorized to determine which claimant, if any, is entitled to possession of the dangerous article and to enter a judgment ordering a disposition of such dangerous article consistent with subsection (f).

(4) If there is no such appeal, or if such appeal is dismissed or withdrawn, the property clerk shall dispose of such dangerous article in accordance with subsection (f).

(5) The property clerk shall make no disposition of a dangerous article under this section, whether in accordance with his own decision or in accordance with the judgment of the municipal court for the District of Columbia, until the United States attorney for the District of Columbia certifies to him that such dangerous article will not be needed as evidence.

(e) A person claiming a dangerous article shall be entitled to its possession only if (1) he shows on satisfactory evidence that he is the owner of the dangerous article or is the accredited representative of the owner, and that the ownership is lawful; and (2) he shows on satisfactory evidence that at the time the dangerous article was taken into possession by a police officer it was not unlawfully owned and was not unlawfully possessed or carried by the claimant or with his knowledge or consent; and (3) the receipt of possession by him will not cause the article to be a nuisance. A representative is accredited if he has a power of attorney from the owner.

(f) If a person claiming a dangerous article is entitled to its possession as determined under subsections (d) and (e), possession of such dangerous article shall be given to such person. If no person so claiming is entitled to its possession as determined under subsections (d) and (e), or if there be no claimant, such dangerous article shall be destroyed. In lieu of such destruction, any such serviceable dangerous article may, upon order of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, be transferred to and used by any Federal or District Government law-enforcing agency, and the agency receiving same shall establish property responsibility and records of these dangerous articles.

(g) The property clerk shall not be liable in damages for any action performed in good faith under this section. (July 8, 1932, ch. 465, § 18, as added Feb. 20, 1952, 66 Stat. 8, ch. 47, § 1.)

NOTE TO DECISION

1. Arrest, search and seizure

Where police officers searched accused's premises under valid search warrant and arrested persons in accused's absence, pistols which were found and which accused had allegedly received as stolen property and which might have affected escape of those lawfully arrested were validly seized, and hence subsequent arrest of accused for receiving stolen property was not invalid as fruit of unlawful search, and narcotics taken from accused's person were admissible in subsequent narcotics prosecution. Palmer v. United States (1953, 203 F. 2d 66, 92 U.S. App. D.C. 103).

1. Authority of police officer

Where police officer observed defendant walking along street shortly after noon hour carrying a paper bag and recognized him as a convicted thief and pursued him because officer assumed that defendant was carrying stolen goods, even though he had no information that an offense had been committed, arrest for vagrancy was invalid for lack of any evidence of loitering. Jones v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1960, 158 A. 2d 771).

Officers of the law have no right to compel one to account for his actions merely because that person is on street at an unusual hour. Beal v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 82 A. 2d 765).

Where female defendant was seen wandering around streets time after time in early morning hours, often alone but sometimes in company of a known prostitute, and engaging in conversations with men, with no indication that such course of conduct had any legitimate purpose, arresting officer had reasonable grounds for believing that her use of streets was not for any legitimate purpose and could ask that she account for her actions. Id.

Police officer who saw defendant loitering around bus terminal and mingling with the crowd and recognized him as a professional pickpocket was authorized, under par. (1) of this section, to question defendant, and, upon defendant's failure to give a good account of himself, to place defendant under arrest. Clark v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1944, 34 A. 2d 711).

2. Construction

The vagrancy statute must be construed narrowly in favor of defendant. Harris v. District of Columbia (1958, 251 F. 2d 913, 102 U.S. App. D.C. 202).

Under this section providing that anyone who wanders about streets at late or unusual hours of the night without visible and lawful business and "not giving a good account of himself" is deemed a vagrant, quoted words mean not giving a good account upon order or demand to explain presence in the street, rather than just in response to casual or bantering questions. Beal v. District of Columbia (1953, 201 F. 2d 176, 91 U.S. App. D.C. 110).

Under statute defining vagrant as person who wanders about streets at late and unusual hours of night "without any visible and lawful business" and not giving a good account of himself, quoted phrase does not refer to ordinary vocation of person, but has reference to purpose of being on street, and "business" as specified therein is not to be limited to pursuit of monetary gain. Beal v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 82 A. 2d 765).

Vagrant statute is not to be construed as a curfew law, forbidding persons to be on streets after certain hour of night. Id.

Vagrancy statutes are designed to prevent crime and if officer must wait until crime is committed, preventive purposes of statute wholly fails. Id.

One standing on a platform for the primary purpose of picking a pocket is loitering within the meaning of the statute. Williams v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1949, 65 A. 2d 924).

This section is in nature of a police regulation to prevent crime, and was enacted for the enforcement of good order and public safety, and must be construed in view of that purpose. Clark v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1944, 34 A. 2d 711).

This section should not be so construed as to bar from society or intercourse with other human beings, persons who have been convicted of crime and have served the sentence imposed. Id.

3. Continuance

In prosecution for vagrancy, the continuance of defendant's trial for three days at request of prosecution was a matter in discretion of trial court which was not unreasonably exercised. Burns v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1944, 34 A. 2d 714).

4. Defenses

The mere irregularity of trying accused on vagrancy charge after he was validly arrested on a warrant charging disorderly conduct was no defense to the vagrancy charge. Davenport v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1948, 61 A. 2d 486).

5. Degree of proof

In vagrancy prosecution against defendant charged with frequenting houses of ill fame, government was not required to prove that occupants of house previously arrested were duly convicted in court. Fields v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1951, 77 A. 2d 563).

To convict under this section, it must be shown that defendant was found prowling around one of the public places mentioned in this section, and that he was doing so while having no visible and lawful means of support, and that he was a person known to be pickpocket, thief or burglar. Clark v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1944, 34 A. 2d 711).

Where vagrancy information charged that each defendant was a person who frequented and was employed in a house of ill fame and who engaged in and who committed acts of fornication for hire, statement of intermediate appellate court that government was required to prove that each individual frequented the house and that each engaged in acts of fornication for hire was erroneous. District of Columbia v. Hunt (1947, 163 F. 2d 833, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 159).

Appellant's own admission, not only to the officers but at the trial that she was "living" at the premises which were shown to be a house of ill fame, was sufficient to establish her guilt of "frequenting" such an establishment. Wilson v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1949, 65 A. 2d 214).

6. Double jeopardy

Fact that defendant, who allegedly sold liquor in railroad station without a license, was previously prosecuted for disorderly conduct, indecent exposure, solicitation to prostitution, violation of the A. B. C. Laws, and drinking in public, and was convicted of some of such offenses, did not preclude subsequent prosecution for vagrancy, on ground that such prosecution constituted double jeopardy, though testimony and witnesses employed in prior prosecutions were the same as those used in the vagrancy prosecution. Davenport v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1948, 61 A. 2d 486).

7. Evidence—Generally

In prosecution for vagrancy, where defendant was not confronted with an order or demand to explain her presence in the street, her conviction was reversed. Beail v. District of Columbia (1953, 201 F. 2d 176, 91 U.S. App. D.C. 110).

On defendant's motion, at conclusion of government's case, for judgment of acquittal, government's evidence was construed in light most favorable to government and was accepted as true, together with all reasonable inferences to be drawn therefrom. Mitchell v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1955, 113 A. 2d 566).

Contention that trial court erred in basing conviction for act of fornication for hire, when there had been no direct proof, is without merit under the rule of District of Columbia v. Hunt (82 U.S. App. D.C. 159, 163 F. 2d 833), since government's failure to prove expressly that she engaged in acts of fornication or perversion for hire is not fatal to prosecution so long as proof of the other violation is sufficient to sustain the conviction. Wilson v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1949, 65 A. 2d 214).

8. — Admissibility

In vagrancy prosecution, testimony of arresting officer regarding character of certain women with whom defendant had been seen was admissible. Rogers v. District of Columbia (1943, 31 A. 2d 649).

Where defendant was arrested for vagrancy on Sunday, July 4, but criminal division of the Municipal Court was in session Monday notwithstanding that Monday was a legal holiday and defendant was not taken into court until Tuesday, defendant's detention was unlawful and testimony of arresting officer in vagrancy prosecution as to admissions made to him by defendant after arrest was improperly admitted. Burns v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1944, 34 A. 2d 714).

In prosecution for vagrancy, where elements of offense required by this chapter to be established by prosecution were prima facie proven by record of defendant's convictions, and evidence of loitering and circumstantial incidents of defendant's conduct immediately before arrest and any possible deficiency was supplied by defendant's oral testimony, error in admitting testimony of arresting officer as to admissions made to him by defendant after arrest, by reason of defendant's unlawful detention, did not require reversal. Id.

Where defendant was arrested without warrant Friday evening and could have been taken to court for arraignment on Saturday but was not taken into court until Tuesday, the detention was unlawful, and, in prosecution for vagrancy which followed, admission of statements made by defendant to arresting officer was error notwithstanding statements were made at time of arrest and while detention was still lawful. Hayes v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1944, 34 A. 2d 709).

In vagrancy prosecution based on defendant's acts in railroad station, employees at station were properly permitted to testify for the government, over objection that they were biased. Davenport v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1948, 61 A. 2d 486).

Statements made by the operator of house of ill fame, in appellant's presence while they were both under arrest, to the effect that appellant was visiting her and that she was operating a house of ill fame, were hearsay, but since such statements were received without objection, the trial judge had a right to consider them along with defendant's silence. Wilson v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1949, 65 A. 2d 214).

9. — Confession

In prosecution for vagrancy, defendant's admission at trial of accuracy of his criminal record produced by prosecution satisfied burden of prosecution of proving by confession or conviction defendants criminal record. Burns v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1944, 34 A. 2d 714).

In prosecution for vagrancy, where arresting officer, who was sole witness, testified that defendant was loitering at bus terminal and mingling with the crowd and that officer recognized defendant as a professional pickpocket and that defendant, after his arrest, admitted that federal bureau of investigation record showing prior convictions was correct, conviction did not depend solely upon an uncorroborated "confession." Clark v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1944, 34 A. 2d 711).

In vagrancy prosecution, on conflicting evidence regarding whether statement voluntarily given by defendant immediately after her arrest was intended for health department only, trial judge was justified in admitting the statement as a "confession." Rogers v. District of Columbia (1943, 31 A. 2d 649).

10. — Examination of witnesses

In vagrancy prosecution where defendant's witness testified that defendant had been working for witness, question whether witness carried a number of girls on his pay roll for purpose of showing that they worked for him when in fact they were nothing more than prostitutes constituted proper cross-examination. Rogers v. District of Columbia (1943, 31 A. 2d 649).

11. — Sufficiency

In prosecution for vagrancy under information which charged that defendant was by confession or conviction known to be a pickpocket, thief, burglar, confidence operator or felon, evidence that defendant was a known thief because she had once been convicted of taking and carrying away property of another without right was not sufficient to establish that she was known to be a thief within meaning of this section. Harris v. District of Columbia (1958, 251 F. 2d 913, 102 U.S. App. D.C. 202).

Evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction for being a vagrant. Mitchell v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1955, 113 A. 2d 566).

Evidence sustained defendant's conviction of vagrancy. Beail v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 82 A. 2d 765).

Facts produced at the trial and all reasonable inferences therefrom do not support a conviction for vagrancy. Hainsworth v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1950, 72 A. 2d 776).

Evidence that defendant had offered girls in railroad station money to commit an immoral act, that he had looked into a window of a girls' dormitory, that he had entered women's restroom, and that he sold liquor in railroad station without a license, was sufficient to establish that he led an "immoral or profligate life" within meaning of par. (3) of this section. Davenport v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1948, 61 A. 2d 486).

In prosecution for vagrancy, evidence that defendant was moving about after midnight in a crowd on a loading platform at bus terminal, and that defendant was observed mingling with crowds on loading platform at a second bus terminal on two other occasions on same night, established that defendant was "loitering" and failed to give a good account of himself within this section. Burns v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1944, 34 A. 2d 714).

In prosecution for vagrancy, in absence of any proof on behalf of defendant of lawful employment or means of support, evidence which was adequate to prove other elements of the offense justified conviction. Clark v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1944, 34 A. 2d 711).

Evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction on charge of vagrancy. Roger v. District of Columbia (1943, 31 A. 2d 649).

12. Jury trial

In vagrancy prosecution, the defendant was not entitled to a jury trial. Rogers v. District of Columbia (1943, 31 A. 2d 649).

13. Lawful means of support

Woman living together with man "common law" has no "lawful" means of support, realized from a "lawful" occupation or source, for purposes of vagrancy statute. Harris v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 132 A. 2d 152).

14. Nature of vagrancy

Where defendant was charged and convicted of being a vagrant under this section defining vagrant as person who wanders about streets at late and unusual hours at night without any visible and lawful business and not giving a good account of herself, defendant could be guilty of vagrancy under this section, notwithstanding fact that she might be a person of fixed abode having lawful means of support. Beail v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1951, 82 A. 2d 765).

"Vagrancy" is a status or condition and this section punishes one for being a certain kind of person, not for doing of an overt act, and crime is personal and individual and cannot be committed jointly or in concert, since in essence it is a personal condition arrived at not instantaneously but by a mode of living. Hunt v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1946, 47 A. 2d 783).

This section denounces and makes punishable being in a state of vagrancy rather than the particular conduct enumerated in this section as evidencing or characterizing such condition. District of Columbia v. Hunt (1947, 163 F. 2d 833, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 159).

Statute prescribes as an element of the offense of vagrancy (a) defendant's notoriety as a pickpocket, etc., either by his own confession or by earlier conviction, and (b) his not giving a good account of himself when found loitering and apprehended and when these elements have been established, the statute says that defendant shall have the burden of showing that he has lawful employment or lawful means of support realized from a lawful occupation or source. Williams v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1949, 65 A. 2d 924).

15. Prosecutions for continuing offense

The prosecution of a defendant charged with violation of a continuing offense is a bar to a subsequent prosecution for same offense charged to have been committed at any time before institution of first prosecution, but is not a bar to a subsequent prosecution for continuing the offense thereafter, as this is a new violation of the law. Thomas v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1960, 161 A. 2d 52).

Where defendant was charged with vagrancy in three consecutive informations and each information charged vagrancy during a separate period, each information charged a separate crime, not one single continuing one, and trial court could correctly impose consecutive sentences. Id.

16. Purpose

The purpose of this chapter is to prevent crimes which may likely flow from vagrants mode of life. District of Columbia v. Hunt (1947, 163 F. 2d 833, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 159).

It was not purpose of this section to deprive persons of use of public sidewalks, so long as they are used either for legitimate purpose of pleasure or business; but when course of conduct indicates reasonable belief that use of street is not for legitimate purposes, officer may ask one to account for his actions. Harris v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1957, 132 A. 2d 152).

17. Thief

The word "thief" as used in this section does not cover a person who has been guilty only of unauthorized borrowing. Harris v. District of Columbia (1958, 251 F. 2d 913, 102 U.S. App. D.C. 202).

Thief is used generically in this section and may be defined as one who takes property of another without knowledge or consent of latter, and a conviction under this section making it a misdemeanor to take and carry away property of another without right to do so rendered convict a "known thief" for purposes of this section. Harris v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1957, 132 A. 2d 152).

18. Waiver

In vagrancy prosecution, motion of defendant for dismissal, made at conclusion of Government's case, was "waived" when defendant offered testimony in her own behalf. Rogers v. District of Columbia (1943, 31 A. 2d 649).

In vagrancy prosecution, motion of defendant for a finding of not guilty at conclusion of government's case, apparently denied by trial court, was not error where the record did not show that such a motion was made; and even if made, it was waived when defendant offered testimony in her own behalf. Wilson v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1949, 65 A. 2d 214).

In all prosecutions under paragraphs 1 or 3 of section 22-3302 the burden of proof shall be upon the defendant to show that he has lawful employment or has lawful means of support realized from a lawful occupation or source. (Dec. 17, 1941, 55 Stat. 809, ch. 589, § 2.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Generally 1
Constitutionality 2
Evidence 3
Government's burden 4

1. Generally

Vagrancy statute places burden of proof upon a defendant charged with its violation to show that he had lawful employment or lawful means of support. Barnard v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1956, 125 A. 2d 514).

In vagrancy prosecutions, the burden was on defendant to establish, and not on the Government to disprove, legitimacy of defendant's employment. Rogers v. District of Columbia (D. C. 1943, 31 A. 2d 649).

2. Constitutionality

Provision of this section placing on defendant the burden of proving lawful employment or lawful means of support realized from a lawful occupation or source, after prosecution has first proved, or offered evidence tending to prove, the other elements of the offense, is constitutional. Rogers v. District of Columbia (D. C. 1943, 31 A. 2d 649).

3. Evidence

In prosecution for vagrancy where government established a prima facie case, defendant's uncontradicted and uncorroborated statement that he had been doing light work on his father-in-law's farm, in absence of testimony as to details of work or compensation or as to when work ceased was insufficient to discharge defendant's burden of proving that he had lawful means of support realized from a lawful occupation or source. Burns v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1944, 34 A. 2d 714).

Where appellant says he was entitled to an acquittal because he offered evidence to show "lawful employment," when taken with the government's testimony, presented a question of fact, and we cannot say the trial judge decided incorrectly. Williams v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1949, 65 A. 2d 924).

4. Government's burden

In prosecution against three defendants for vagrancy for frequenting and being employed in a house of ill-fame, government had burden of proving that each defendant frequented the house and that each engaged in acts of fornication for hire. Hunt v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1946, 47 A. 2d 783).

In vagrancy prosecution, wherein evidence was introduced that defendant sold liquor in railroad station without a license, burden was shifted to defendant to establish, and was not on the government to disprove, legitimacy of employment. Davenport v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1948, 61 A. 2d 486).

In prosecution for vagrancy, defendant has no burden to prove lawful employment or means of support until government has first proved other elements of offense. Clark v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1944, 34 A. 2d 711).

§ 22-3304. Penalty—Conditions imposed by court.

Any person convicted of vagrancy under the provisions of sections 22-3302 to 22-3306 shall be punished by a fine of not more than $300 or imprisonment for not more than ninety days, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court. The court may impose conditions upon any person found guilty under the aforesaid provisions and so long as such person shall comply therewith to the satisfaction of the court the imposition or execution of sentence may be suspended for such period as the court may direct; and the court may at or before the expiration of such period remand such sentence or cause it to be executed. Conditions thus imposed by the court may include submission to medical and mental examination, diagnosis, and treatment by proper public health and welfare authorities, and such other terms and conditions as the court may deem best for the protection of the community and the punishment, control, and rehabilitation of the defendant. The director of public health of the District of Columbia, the Women's Bureau of the Police Department, the Board of Public Welfare, and the probation officers of the court are authorized and directed to perform such duties as may be directed by the court in effectuating compliance with the conditions so imposed upon any defendant. (Dec. 17, 1941, 55 Stat. 809, ch. 589, § 3; Aug. 1, 1950, 64 Stat. 393, ch. 513, § 1.)

CHANGE OF NAME

"Director of public health" substituted for "health officer" to conform to act Aug. 1, 1950. See note set out under section 6-101.

TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS

The Commissioners of the District of Columbia and the Director of the Department of Corrections as successors to the powers and duties of the Board of Public Welfare and the Director of Public Welfare over penal institutions, establishment of a Department of Corrections headed by a Director as successor to former Department of Corrections and abolition of Board of Public Welfare and transfer of specified functions thereof to Department of Public Health and Department of Public Welfare, see section 24-443 and Reorg. Orders No. 34, dated May 28, 1953, as amended, and No. 58, dated June 30, 1953, as amended, set out in the Appendix to title 1, Administration.

All prosecutions under sections 22-3302 to 22-3306 shall be in the Municipal Court for the District of Columbia, in the name of the District of Columbia, by the corporation counsel or any of his assistants. (Dec. 17, 1941, 55 Stat. 810, ch. 589, § 4; Apr. 1, 1942, 55 Stat. 190, ch. 207, § 1.)

CONSOLIDATION OF POLICE COURT AND MUNICIPAL COURT

"Municipal Court for the District of Columbia" was substituted for "Police Court of the District of Columbia" to conform to act Apr. 1, 1942, which consolidated the Police Court and the Municipal Court. See section 11-751.

NOTES TO DECISIONS1. Consolidation of trials

Where information charged accused with vagrancy in being employed in house of ill fame, and informations charging other two defendants were similar except that period of time over which alleged vagrancy had continued differed in each case, and only common ground between the acts of all defendants was that they took place at designated address and "divers other places in the District of Columbia," and there was no conspiracy or joint commission of crime alleged, granting consolidation of trials against all defendants was error. Hunt v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1946, 47 A. 2d 783).

Where information charged accused with vagrancy in being a person leading an immoral and profligate life and in being employed in house of ill fame, and vagrancy informations against two other defendants charged some similar acts, granting consolidations of trials against all defendants was error. District of Columbia v. Hunt (1947, 163 F. 2d 838, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 159).

Nothing in sections 22-3302 to 22-3306 shall be construed so as to interfere with or impede or diminish in any way the right to strike or the right to picket. (Dec. 17, 1941, 55 Stat. 810, ch. 589, § 6.)

- (c) To sell or offer for sale within the District of Columbia in the same place of business both kosher and nonkosher meats, (1) without displaying conspicuously in said place of business a sign in block letters at least four inches in height containing the words "kosher and nonkosher meat sold here," and (2) without displaying over such kosher meat the words "kosher meat" and over such nonkosher meat the words "nonkosher meat," in block letters at least four inches in height. (Apr. 15, 1926, 44 Stat. 253, ch. 145, § 1.)

As used in sections 22-3404 to 22-3406—

- (a) The term "meat" includes raw meat and meat prepared for human consumption, whether alone or in combination with other products;

- (b) The term "person" means individual, partnership, corporation, or association. (Apr. 15, 1926, 44 Stat. 253, ch. 145, § 2.)

(Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1334, ch. 854, § 892.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Constitutionality 1 Extraordinary emergency 2

1. Constitutionality

Act March 3, 1901, similar to this act, was constitutional. Penn Bridge Co. v. United States (29 App. D. C. 452).

2. Extraordinary emergency

"In this statute the term 'extraordinary emergency' imports a sudden and unexpected happening; an unforeseen occurrence or condition calling for immediate action to avert imminent danger to health, or life, or property; an unusual peril, actual and not imaginary, suddenly creating a situation so different from the usual or ordinary course in the prosecution of the public work that the court may and must conclude that Congress contemplated excepting from the operation of this law such an occurrence, so sudden, rare, and unforeseen." Penn Bridge Co. v. United States (29 App. D. C. 452).

Whether the evidence offered tends to prove the existence of such an emergency is a question of law for the court. Id.

Any officer or agent of the Government of the United States or of the District of Columbia, or any contractor or subcontractor, whose duty it shall be to employ, direct, or control any laborer or mechanic employed upon any of the public works of the United States or of the District of Columbia who shall intentionally violate any provision of section 22-3407 for each and every such offense shall be punished by a fine not to exceed one thousand dollars or by imprisonment for not more than six months, or both. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1334, ch. 854, § 893.)

CROSS REFERENCE

§ 22-3409. Mislabelling potatoes.

No person, firm, or corporation shall sell, offer for sale, keep, or expose for sale in the District of Columbia potatoes in any package which is not plainly marked or labeled with the name of the United States grade which represents a standard no higher than the actual grade of potatoes contained therein: Provided, however, That the term "unclassified" or "ungraded" may be used. The director of weights, measures, and markets shall administer sections 22-3409 to 22-3412 and the commissioners of the District of Columbia are authorized to establish necessary rules and regulations therefor. (Aug. 12, 1937, 50 Stat. 626, ch. 597, § 1; Apr. 11, 1946, 60 Stat. 88, ch. 134, § 1.)

CHANGE OF NAME

The name of "superintendent of weights, measures, and markets" was changed to "director of weights, measures, and markets" by act Apr. 11, 1946. See section 10-101a.

TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS

Status of department of weights, measures, and markets and director thereof, see notes under section 10-101.

§ 22-3410. Mislabelling potatoes—Sign to show grade.

No person, firm, or corporation shall sell, offer for sale, keep or expose for sale in the District of Columbia any potatoes otherwise than in packages as provided in section 22-3409 without having plainly and conspicuously displayed in proximity to said potatoes a printed sign where it may readily be seen and in letters of not less than one-half inch high printed in Gothic type clearly and distinctly stating the United States grade of said potatoes. (Aug. 12, 1937, 50 Stat. 626, ch. 597, § 2.)

§ 22-3411. Mislabelling potatoes—Law not applicable to seed potatoes.

The provisions of sections 22-3409 to 22-3412 shall not apply to officially certified seed potatoes which meet the grade or certification requirements as labeled and which are sold exclusively for seed purposes, provided they are sold in original packages and bear the official seal and certification of the department of agriculture of the State or country where the potatoes were grown. (Aug. 12, 1937, 50 Stat. 626, ch. 597, § 3.)

Any person, firm, or corporation which shall violate any provisions of sections 22-3409 to 22-3412 shall be fined not more than $50 for the first offense and not more than $200 for each subsequent offense. (Aug. 12, 1937, 50 Stat. 626, ch. 597, § 4.)

§ 22-3413. Procuring enlistment of criminals.

It shall be unlawful for any person, with knowledge of the fact, to present or offer to any recruiting agent or officer, or any muster-in officer in the United States military or naval service, either as a volunteer or as a substitute for any person, any person charged with the commission of any criminal offense, and confined or held on bail for the trial of such offense within the District; and it shall in like manner be unlawful for any person, in any way or manner, to abet, aid, or assist in procuring the offer or acceptance of any person so charged or held for trial, or released on bail and awaiting trial, either as a volunteer or as a substitute for any person drafted, or liable to draft, in the military or naval service of the United States, whether the person so drafted, or liable to draft, shall be a resident of the District, or shall reside elsewhere. And any person who shall knowingly offend against any of the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction, be punished by a fine of not less than two hundred and fifty dollars and not more than one thousand dollars, and by imprisonment in the District jail for a term not less than six months nor more than one year. (R. S., D. C., § 1179.)

Any person who, within the District of Columbia, in any manner, for exhibition or display, shall place or cause to be placed any word, figure, mark, picture, design, drawing or any advertisement of any nature upon any flag, standard, colors or ensign of the United States of America; or shall expose or cause to be exposed to public view any such flag, standard, colors or ensign upon which shall have been printed, painted or otherwise placed, or to which shall be attached, appended, affixed or annexed any word, figure, mark, picture, design or drawing, or any advertisement of any nature; or who, within the District of Columbia, shall manufacture, sell, expose for sale or to public view or give away or have in possession for sale or to be given away or for use for any purpose, any article or substance being an article of merchandise, or a receptacle for merchandise or article or thing for carrying or transporting merchandise, upon which shall have been printed, painted, attached or otherwise placed a representation of any such flag, standard, colors or ensign, to advertise, call attention to, decorate, mark or distinguish the article or substance on which so placed; or who, within the District of Columbia, shall publicly mutilate, deface, defile or defy, trample upon or cast contempt, either by word or act, upon any such flag, standard, colors or ensign, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $100 or by imprisonment for not more than thirty days, or both, in the discretion of the court. The words "flag, standard, colors, or ensign," as used herein, shall include any flag, standard, colors, ensign or any picture or representation of either, or of any part or parts of either, made of any substance or represented on any substance, of any size evidently purporting to be either of said flag, standard, colors or ensign of the United States of America or a picture or a representation of either, upon which shall be shown the colors, the stars and the stripes, in any number of either thereof, or of any part or parts of either, by which the average person seeing the same without deliberation may believe the same to represent the flag, colors, standard or ensign of the United States of America. (Feb. 8, 1917, 39 Stat. 900, ch. 34.)

§ 22-3415. Discrimination by proprietors of theaters against persons wearing uniform of Army, Navy, Coast Guard, or Marine Corps.

No proprietor, manager, or employee of a theater or other public place of entertainment or amusement in the District of Columbia shall make, or cause to be made, any discrimination against any person lawfully wearing the uniform of the Army, Navy, Coast Guard, or Marine Corps of the United States because of that uniform, and any person making, or causing to be made, such discrimination shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine not exceeding $500. (Mar. 1, 1911, 36 Stat. 963, ch. 187; Jan. 28, 1915, 38 Stat. 800, ch. 20.)

AMENDMENT

1915—Act Jan. 28, 1915, created the Coast Guard Service by combining the existing Life-Saving Service and the Revenue-Cutter Service.

§ 22-3416. Sale of unwholesome food prohibited.

No person shall sell, or cause to be sold, or offer for sale any food which is unwholesome or unfit for use. (Dec. 16, 1941, 55 Stat. 807, ch. 587, § 1.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

1. Construction with other laws

This section prohibiting the sale of unwholesome food in the District of Columbia does not, as does the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, 21 U.S. Code § 331 (a, g), cover manufacture as well as sale, and it does not, as does 21 U.S. Code § 342 (a) (3, 4), cover food which is adulterated without being unwholesome or unfit for use. Rubenstein v. U.S. (1948 153 F.2d 127, 80 U.S. App. D.C.

§ 22-3417. "Food" defined.

For the purposes of sections 22-3416 to 22-3422 the term "food" means any article used for consumption by a human being or an animal. (Dec. 16, 1941, 55 Stat. 807, ch. 587, § 2.)

It shall be the duty of the director of public health of the District of Columbia, and he or his duly appointed agent is hereby authorized, to inspect all food possessed or offered for sale, and condemn, denature, destroy, seize or remove such food as may be unfit for consumption. (Dec. 16, 1941, 55 Stat. 807, ch. 587, § 3; Aug. 1, 1950, 64 Stat. 393, ch. 513, § 1.)

CHANGE OF NAME

"Director of public health" substituted for "health officer" to conform to act Aug. 1, 1950. See note set out under section 6-101.

(a) Any person who shall take, or attempt to take any immoral, improper, or indecent liberties with any child of either sex, under the age of sixteen years with the intent of arousing, appealing to, or gratifying the lust or passions or sexual desires, either of such person or of such child, or of both such person and such child, or who shall commit, or attempt to commit, any lewd or lascivious act upon or with the body, or any part or member thereof, of such child, with the intent of arousing, appealing to, or gratifying the lust or passions or sexual desires, either of such person or of such child, or of both such person and such child shall be imprisoned in a penitentiary, not more than ten years.

(b) Any such person who shall, in the District of Columbia, take any such child or shall entice, allure, or persuade any such child, to any place whatever for the purpose either of taking any such immoral, improper, or indecent liberties with such child, with said intent or of committing any such lewd, or lascivious act upon or with the body, or any part or member thereof, of such child with said intent, shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not more than five years.

(c) Consent by a child to any act or conduct prescribed by subsection (a) or (b) shall not be a defense, nor shall lack of knowledge of the child's age be a defense.

1. Arrest, search and seizure

Even though police officers may have had probable cause to believe that defendant had committed, in his home, a perverted act on a 10- or 11-year-old boy and that defendant was in his home about two hours later when the officers arrived there, their entry, without a warrant, into his unlocked home, after their repeated knocking, to which there was no response, to make a search as a necessary prerequisite to possible arrest was illegal, in absence of any urgency for an arrest. Morrison v. United States (1959, 262 F. 2d 449, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 352).

Where police officers admitted themselves to defendant's unlocked private home and searched for defendant whom officers wished to arrest for having allegedly committed a perverted act on a 10- or 11-year-old boy earlier in the day, and boy showed officers the room in which alleged offense had occurred and pointed out handkerchief which boy said had been used by defendant and which allegedly bore some tangible evidence of the offense, handkerchief was merely evidentiary material and was not instrument or means by which alleged crime was committed, the fruits of a crime, a weapon by which escape might be effected or property the possession of which is a crime, and consequently handkerchief could not be seized legally without any warrant whatsoever and without any arrest of defendant, who was not at home. Id.

2. Corpus delicti

In prosecution for taking indecent liberties with 11-year-old girl, corpus delicti could not be established by child's uncorroborated testimony on witness stand. Wilson v. United States (1959, 271 F. 2d 492, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 226).

A requisite element of evidence in prosecution for taking indecent liberties with minor child is establishment of corpus delicti. Jones v. United States (1956, 231 F. 2d 244, 97 U.S. App. D.C. 291).

3. Counsel—Assistance of Where trial counsel, in prosecution for taking indecent liberties with a child, did not utilize defense of insanity because counsel thought the evidence did not warrant it and because he felt that, in good conscience, he could not urge it upon the court, defendant was not denied the effective assistance of counsel because of failure to raise defense of insanity, and hence his motion to vacate judgment for such reason would be denied. United States v. Plummer, Jr. (1959, 171 F. Supp. 1).

4. — Conduct of Reversal of conviction under this section would not be justified where defendant received a fair trial and conduct of his trial counsel could hardly have affected the result in view of overwhelming evidence of defendant's guilt and trial judge gave careful instructions to jury. Holley v. United States (1959, 267 F. 2d 628, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 351).

5. Elements of offense

Words "force" and "assault" are not a necessary element to commission of crime of taking of improper and indecent liberties. Younger, Jr. v. United States (1959, 263 F. 2d 735, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 51, certiorari denied 79 S. Ct. 1299, 360 U.S. 905, 3 L. Ed. 2d 1257).

6. Evidence—Admissibility

In prosecution for asserted taking of indecent liberties with child and asserted carnal knowledge, where examining physician was out of jurisdiction and unavailable, report of his medical examination was not admissible. Whittaker v. United States (1960, 281 F. 2d 631, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 268).

In prosecution for taking indecent liberties with a female child under 16 years of age, testimony of officer investigating the crime as to what someone told him the child said was prejudicial where there was no other testimony that the child identified the person who molested her. Pinkard v. United States (1957, 240 F. 2d 632, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 394).

In prosecution for taking indecent liberties with a female child under 16 years of age, hearsay statement of officer investigating the incident that witness told officer that two boys, each of whom took the stand, told her that two men had molested the girl was prejudicial notwithstanding it was contradicted by later testimony. Id.

In prosecution for taking indecent liberties with five-year-old girl, incompetent to testify, her mother's testimony as to girl's statement of what defendant did to her was admissible as evidence of spontaneous declaration under exception to hearsay rule. Jones v. United States (1956, 231 F. 2d 244, 97 U.S. App. D.C. 291).

Where alleged offense of taking indecent liberties with female child occurred on a Monday night, and child had earlier opportunity to complain, testimony concerning statement child made on following Thursday morning and in answer to her mother's inquiries, was hearsay, and its admission in prosecution for the alleged offense was, under the circumstances, prejudicial error. Smith v. United States (1954, 215 F. 2d 682, 94 U.S. App. D.C. 320).

7. — Sufficiency

In prosecution for taking indecent liberties with five-year-old girl, incompetent to testify, her mother's testimony as to child's statement of what defendant did to her was insufficient to support verdict of conviction because of failure to establish corpus delicti, in absence of evidence of injury to child. Jones v. United States (1956, 231 F. 2d 244, 97 U.S. App. D.C. 291).

Evidence was insufficient to sustain conviction for taking immoral, improper and indecent liberties with minor children. Hinton v. United States (1952, 196 F. 2d 605, 91 U.S. App. D.C. 13).

8. Indecent liberties

An assault with intent to commit carnal knowledge on a child is certainly the taking of indecent liberties with a child, but with intent of going beyond the liberties referred to in statute, and intent to commit carnal knowledge is to take indecent liberties plus an intent much more vicious, violent or aggravated. Younger Jr. v. United States (1959, 263 F. 2d 735, U.S. App. D.C. 51, certiorari denied 79 S. Ct. 1299, 360 U.S. 905, 3 L. Ed. 2d 1257).

9. Indictment

Count of indictment charging defendant with violating statute punishing one who carnally knows a female child under 16 years of age can be joined with count charging defendant with violation of statute punishing any person who takes, or attempts to take, any immoral, improper, or indecent liberties with any child of either sex, under the age of 16 years to arouse or gratify sexual desires, though latter statute provides that it shall not apply to the offenses covered by the prior statute, if jury is told that it cannot find defendant guilty of both counts and can find him guilty under the second count only if he is found not guilty under the first count. Thompson v. United States (1956, 228 F. 2d 463, 97 U.S. App. D.C. 116).

10. Insanity

Where significant evidence was introduced on trial of defendant for taking immoral liberties with female child that defendant might have been of unsound mind at time of alleged crime including evidence of delusions and hearing of voices, prosecution had burden of proving sanity beyond a reasonable doubt. Goforth v. United States (1959, 269 F. 2d 778, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 111).

11. Instructions

In prosecution on two-count indictment for taking indecent liberties with child and for carnal knowledge, court acted properly at close of government's case when it granted partial judgment of not guilty under second count, stating that there was no evidence to support carnal knowledge charge but submitting to jury lesser included offense of assault with intent to commit carnal knowledge, but court erred in failing to instruct that jury was first to consider included charge of assault with intent to commit carnal knowledge and was only to consider alleged taking of indecent liberties with child if it found defendant not guilty of the former crime. Whittaker v. United States (1960, 281 F. 2d 631, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 268).

In prosecution for taking immoral liberties with female child under 16 years of age wherein significant evidence was introduced that defendant might have been of unsound mind at time of alleged crime including evidence of delusions and hearing of voices, court should have instructed jury on issue of sanity and failure of court to do so required new trial. Goforth v. United States (1959, 269 F. 2d 778, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 111).

Where defendant was charged with offense of assault upon female child with intent to commit carnal knowledge, trial court properly instructed jury that if it found defendant not guilty on count as charged, jury should then consider lesser included offense of taking improper and indecent liberties with a child. Younger, Jr. v. United States (1959, 263 F. 2d 735, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 51, certiorari denied 79 S. Ct. 1299, 360 U.S. 905, 3 L. Ed. 2d 1257).

12. New trial

Where conviction for taking indecent liberties with child under age of 16 years, rested almost entirely on testimony of 12-year-old girl, and four days after guilty verdict defendant introduced in support of motion for new trial on ground that interest of justice required granting of new trial, affidavit of girl's mother, who had not testified at trial, and who had seen and talked with girl shortly after alleged offense, contradicting testimony of girl in two respects and giving mother's opinion that nothing happened to girl, trial court erred in denying motion. Benton v. United States (1951, 188 F. 2d 625, 88 U.S. App. D.C. 158).

13. Review

Where defense announced that defenses would be, first, that no crime had been committed by defendant, and, secondly, that if he had committed crime, he was not guilty by reason of insanity, court, in stating that defense would have to take one position or other, as defenses were inconsistent, committed error which reviewing court, under rule, would notice on appeal and for which it would reverse judgment, as there was no inconsistency and as inconsistent defenses could be interposed. Whittaker v. United States (1960, 281 F. 2d 631, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 268).

(a) Every person who shall be convicted of taking into his or her mouth or anus the sexual organ of any other person or animal, or who shall be convicted of placing his or her sexual organ in the mouth or anus of any other person or animal, or who shall be convicted of having carnal copulation in an opening of the body except sexual parts with another person, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or be imprisoned for a period not exceeding ten years. Any person convicted under this section of committing such act with a person under the age of sixteen years shall be fined not more than $1,000 or be imprisoned for a period not exceeding twenty years. And in any indictment for the commission of any of the acts, hereby declared to be offenses, it shall not be necessary to set forth the particular unnatural or perverted sexual practice with the commission of which the defendant may be charged, nor to set forth the particular manner in which said unnatural or perverted sexual practice was committed, but it shall be sufficient if the indictment set forth that the defendant committed a certain unnatural and perverted sexual practice with a person or animal, as the case may be: Provided, That the accused, on motion, shall be entitled to be furnished with a bill of particulars, setting forth the particular acts which constitute the offense charged.

(b) Any penetration, however slight, is sufficient to complete the crime specified in this section. Proof of emission shall not be necessary. (June 9, 1948, 62 Stat. 347, ch. 428, title I, § 104.)

2. Assignment of error

In prosecution for rape and sodomy, defendant's assignment of error in trial court's failure to declare mistrial because of prosecuting attorney's comment, in opening statement to jury, that only one woman survived defense challenge to jurors, was without foundation, in absence of motion by defendant for mistrial or exception to trial court's action in merely telling jury to disregard remark as improper after objection thereto. McGuinn v. United States (1951, 191 F. 2d 477, 89 U. S. App. D. C. 197).

3. Evidence—Admissibility

In prosecution of two men for sodomy, admission of one defendant's confession of prior acts of sodomy between defendants was proper under exception that evidence of other offenses than that charged is admissible in cases involving sex offenses to show defendants' mental disposition or passion. United States v. Kelly et al. (1954, 119 F. Supp. 217).

4. — Sufficiency

Where evidence in prosecution for sodomy is equally susceptible of construction as showing only attempt to commit sodomy as completion of such crime, conviction of sodomy cannot stand and to sustain conviction of sodomy, there must be substantial evidence of facts consistent with accused's guilt and inconsistent with every reasonable hypothesis of innocence. United States v. Kelly et al. (1954, 119 F. Supp. 217).

5. Instructions

In prosecution for rape and sodomy, court properly instructed jury that there must be absence of consent by complaining witness to warrant conviction, unless consent was induced by putting her in fear of grave bodily harm or death or by exercise of actual force against her person. McGuinn v. United States (1951, 191 F. 2d 477, 89 U. S. App. D. C. 197).

In prosecution for rape and sodomy, defendant's prayers for instructions assuming as fact that complaining witness did not offer opposition should have been denied. Id.

In prosecution for rape and sodomy, defendant's prayers for instruction requiring utmost resistance by complaining witness incorrect. Id.

In prosecution for rape and sodomy, defendant's prayer for instruction requiring that complaining witness' fear be mortal to negative her consent was properly denied, as fear of grave bodily harm was sufficient. Id.

For the purposes of sections 22-3503 to 22-3511—

(1) The term "sexual psychopath" means a person, not insane, who by a course of repeated misconduct in sexual matters has evidenced such lack of power to control his sexual impulses as to be dangerous to other persons because he is likely to attack or otherwise inflict injury, loss, pain, or other evil on the objects of his desire.

(2) The term "court" means the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, the criminal branch of the municipal court for the District of Columbia, or the juvenile court of the District of Columbia as the case may be.

(3) The term "patient" means a person with respect to whom there has been filed with the clerk of any court a statement in writing setting forth facts tending to show that such person is a sexual psychopath.

(4) The term "criminal proceeding" means a proceeding in any court against a person for a criminal offense, and includes all stages of such a proceeding from (A) the time the person is indicted, charged by an information, or charged with an offense in the juvenile court of the District of Columbia, to (B) the entry of judgment, or, if the person is granted probation, the completion of the period of probation.

(June 9, 1948, 62 Stat. 347, ch. 428, title II, § 201; June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 991, ch. 646, § 32(b); May 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 107, ch. 139, § 127.)

CHANGE OF NAME

Act June 25, 1948, eff. Sept. 1, 1948, as amended by act May 24, 1949, substituted "United States District Court for the District of Columbia" for "District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia."

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Constitutionality 1
Nature of proceeding 2

1. Constitutionality

The statute defining sexual psychopaths and providing for their commitment to hospital for the insane after a judicial hearing and upon a finding by the court or verdict of a jury, if demanded, is not unconstitutional. Malone v. Overholser (1950, 93 F. Supp. 647).

2. Nature of proceeding

Proceedings under statute, to determine whether defendant in pending criminal action is sexual psychopath, is a civil one. Miller v. Overholser (1953, 206 F. 2d 415, 92 U.S. App. D.C. 110).

Statute providing for commitment of sexual psychopaths to hospital for the insane is not a criminal statute but merely extends the law relating to commitment of persons who are mentally incompetent so as to include persons who are sexual psychopaths as defined in the statute. Malone v. Overholser (1950, 93 F. Supp. 647).

(a) Whenever it shall appear to the United States attorney for the District of Columbia that any person within the District of Columbia, other than a defendant in a criminal proceeding, is a sexual psychopath, such attorney may file with the clerk of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia a statement in writing setting forth the facts tending to show that such a person is a sexual psychopath.

(b) Whenever it shall appear to the United States attorney for the District of Columbia that any defendant in any criminal proceeding prosecuted by such attorney or any of his assistants is a sexual psychopath, such attorney may file with the clerk of the court in which such proceeding is pending a statement in writing setting forth the facts tending to show that such defendant is a sexual psychopath.

(c) Whenever it shall appear to any court that any defendant in any criminal proceeding pending in such court is a sexual psychopath, the court may, if it deems such procedure advisable, direct the officer prosecuting the defendant to file with the clerk of such court a statement in writing setting forth the facts tending to show that such defendant is a sexual psychopath.

(d) Any statement filed in a criminal proceeding pursuant to subsection (b) or (c) may be filed only (1) before trial, (2) after conviction or plea of guilty but before sentencing, or (3) after conviction or plea of guilty but before the completion of probation.

(e) This section shall not apply to an individual in a criminal proceeding who is charged with rape or assault with intent to rape. (June 9, 1948, 62 Stat. 348, ch. 428, title II, § 202; June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 991, ch. 646, § 32(b); May 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 107, ch. 139, § 127.)

CHANGE OF NAME

A patient shall have the right to have the assistance of counsel at every stage of the proceeding under sections 22-3503 to 22-3511. Before the court appoints psychiatrists pursuant to section 22-3506 it shall advise the patient of his right to counsel and shall assign counsel to represent him unless the patient is able to obtain counsel or elects to proceed without counsel. (June 9, 1948, 62 Stat. 348, ch. 428, title II, § 203.)

(a) When a statement has been filed with the clerk of any court pursuant to section 22-3504, such court shall appoint two qualified psychiatrists to make a personal examination of the patient. The patient shall be required to answer questions asked by the psychiatrists under penalty of contempt of court. Each psychiatrist shall file a written report of the examination, which shall include a statement of his conclusion as to whether the patient is a sexual psychopath.

(b) The counsel for the patient shall have the right to inspect the reports of the examination of the patient. No such report and no evidence resulting from the personal examination of the patient shall be admissible against him in any judicial proceeding except a proceeding under sections 22-3503 to 22-3511 to determine whether the patient is a sexual psychopath. (June 9, 1948, 62 Stat. 348, ch. 428, title II, § 204.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

1. In general

Nature of crime of sodomy, with which accused was charged, was not sufficient alone, to require the District Court, before accepting guilty plea, to order a mental examination of accused, although court could properly consider nature of crime in that connection, and where there was no indication by prosecuting attorney that accused might be a sexual psychopath, and no request for a mental examination was made by prosecution or accused, convictions could not be set aside in collateral proceeding, such as coram nobis, because of court's failure to order examination on its own motion. Carter v. United States (1960, 283 F. 2d 200, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 405).

§ 22-3507. When hearing is required.

If, in their reports filed pursuant to section 22-3506, both psychiatrists state that the patient is a sexual psychopath, or if both state that they are unable to reach any conclusion by reason of the partial or complete refusal of the patient to submit to thorough examination, or if one states that the patient is a sexual psychopath and the other states that he is unable to reach any conclusion by reason of the partial or complete refusal of the patient to submit to thorough examination, then the court shall conduct a hearing in the manner provided in section 22-3508 to determine whether the patient is a sexual psychopath. If, on the basis of the reports filed, the court is not required to conduct such a hearing, the court shall enter an order dismissing the proceeding under sections 22-3503 to 22-3511 to determine whether the patient is a sexual psychopath. (June 9, 1948, 62 Stat. 349, ch. 428, title II, § 205.)

§ 22-3508. Hearing—Commitment to Saint Elizabeths Hospital.

Upon the evidence introduced at a hearing held for that purpose, the court shall determine whether or not the patient is a sexual psychopath. Such hearing shall be conducted without a jury unless, before such hearing and within fifteen days after the date on which the second report is filed pursuant to section 22-3506, a jury is demanded by the patient or by the officer filing the statement. The rules of evidence applicable in judicial proceedings in the court shall be applicable to hearings pursuant to this section; but, notwithstanding any such rule, evidence of conviction of any number of crimes the commission of which tends to show that the patient is a sexual psychopath and of the punishment inflicted therefor shall be admissible at any such hearing. The patient shall be entitled to an appeal as in other cases. If the patient is determined to be a sexual psychopath, the court shall commit him to Saint Elizabeths Hospital to be confined there until released in accordance with section 22-3509. (June 9, 1948, 62 Stat. 349, ch. 428, title II, § 206.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Generally 1
Confinement 2
Constitutionality 3
Nature of proceeding 4

1. Generally

Under statute providing for commitment of sexual psychopaths to hospital for the insane, alleged psychopath is entitled to a hearing before the court at which he is entitled to representation by counsel and he may be committed only upon a finding by the court or upon the verdict of a jury. Malone v. Overholser (1950, 93 F. Supp. 647).

2. Confinement

Intent of Sexual Psychopath Act is commitment for remedial treatment, and incarceration of sexual psychopath in place maintained for confinement of violent, criminal, hopeless insane, instead of in place designed and operated for mentally ill who are not insane, is not authorized by statute. Miller v. Overholser (1953, 206 F. 2d 415, 92 U.S. App. D.C. 110).

3. Constitutionality

The statute defining sexual psychopaths and providing for their commitment to hospital for the insane after a judicial hearing and upon a finding by the court or verdict of a jury, if demanded, is not unconstitutional. Malone v. Overholser (1950, 93 F. Supp. 647).

4. Nature of proceeding

Statute providing for commitment of sexual psychopaths to hospital for the insane is not a criminal statute but merely extends the law relating to commitment of persons who are mentally incompetent so as to include persons who are sexual psychopaths as defined in the statute. Malone v. Overholser (1950, 93 F. Supp. 647).

Any person committed under sections 22-3503 to 22-3511 may be released from confinement when the Superintendent of Saint Elizabeths Hospital finds that he has sufficiently recovered so as to not be dangerous to other persons, provided if the person to be released be one charged with crime or undergoing sentence therefor, the Superintendent of the hospital shall give notice thereof to the judge of the criminal court and deliver him to the court in obedience to proper precept. (June 9, 1948, 62 Stat. 349, ch. 428, title II, § 207.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Habeas corpus 1
Standards for release 2

1. Habeas corpus

One committed as a sexual psychopath to hospital for the insane may at any time after commitment test by habeas corpus proceeding the question of whether he has recovered. Malone v. Overholser (1950, 93 F. Supp. 647).

2. Standards for release

Standards provided for release of sexual psychopath from hospital are not so vague as to invalidate Sexual Psychopath Act. Miller v. Overholser (1953, 206 F. 2d 415, 92 U.S. App. D.C. 110).

§ 22-3510. Stay of criminal proceedings.

Any statement filed in a criminal proceeding pursuant to subsection (b) or (c) of section 22-3504 shall stay such criminal proceeding until whichever of the following first occurs:

(1) The proceeding under sections 22-3503 to 22-3511 to determine whether the patient is a sexual psychopath is dismissed pursuant to section 22-3507 or withdrawn;

(2) It is determined pursuant to section 22-3508 that the patient is not a sexual psychopath; or

(3) The patient is discharged from Saint Elizabeths Hospital pursuant to section 22-3509. (June 9, 1948, 62 Stat. 349, ch. 428, title II, § 208.)

Nothing in sections 22-3503 to 22-3511 shall alter in any respect the tests of mental capacity applied in criminal prosecutions under the laws of the District of Columbia. (June 9, 1948, 62 Stat. 350, ch. 428, title II, § 209.)

Chapter 36.—IMPLEMENTS OF CRIME

Sec.

22-3601. Possession of implements of crime—Penalty.

§ 22-3601. Possession of implements of crime—Penalty.

No person shall have in his possession in the District any instrument, tool, or other implement for picking locks or pockets, or that is usually employed, or reasonably may be employed in the commission of any crime, if he is unable satisfactorily to account for the possession of the implement. Whoever violates this section shall be imprisoned for not more than one year and may be fined not more than $1,000, unless the violation occurs after he has been convicted in the District of a violation of this section or of a felony, either in the District or in another jurisdiction, in which case he shall be imprisoned for not less than one nor more than ten years. (June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 97, ch. 159, § 209(a).)

Arrest 1
Constitutionality 2
Evidence 3
Intent 4
Presumption 5
Remand 6

1. Arrest

A small crowbar, three pairs of pliers and two screwdrivers, found in automobile at time of its owner's arrest, were not such tools as are usually employed or reasonably may be employed in commission of crime within former provision of section 22-3302 defining as a vagrant one found in possession of such tools without satisfactorily accounting therefor, so that his possession thereof was not a misdemeanor committed in arresting officer's presence, as required to justify arrest without warrant. Green v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1952, 91 A. 2d 712).

2. Constitutionality

This section prohibiting possession of implements of crime is unconstitutional in its application to crowbars. Washington v. United States (1956, 232 F. 2d 357, 98 U.S. App. D.C. 100).

This section providing that no person shall have in his possession any instrument, tool or other equipment or other implement which reasonably may be employed in commission of any crime if he is unable satisfactorily to account for possession of the implement places burden of proof of intent upon defendant and is unconstitutional as applied to implements which do not in themselves give rise to sinister implications. Benton v. United States (1956, 232 F. 2d 341, 98 U.S. App. D.C. 84).

3. Evidence

Under this section providing that no person shall have in his possession any instrument, tool, or other implement for picking locks or pockets, or that is usually employed or reasonably may be employed in commission of any crime, if he is unable satisfactorily to account for possession of implement, if order or demand was necessary, requirement was satisfied by evidence in prosecution thereunder. Benton v. United States (1956, 232 F. 2d 341, 98 U.S. App. D.C. 84).

On stating that he kept small crowbar, found on front seat of his automobile, to get starter out of jam and used pliers and screwdrivers, found on floor of automobile, to work on it, in answer to questions asked by police officer before arresting him without warrant on charge of vagrancy in possessing tools usually employed or reasonably employable in commission of crime without satisfactorily accounting therefor, gave legitimate reasons for possession of such tools, in view of evidence that he was a mechanic, so that tools were improperly received in evidence against him in prosecution for such offense. Green v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1952, 91 A. 2d 712).

4. Intent

No rational inference of criminal intent can be drawn from mere possession of tools which reasonably may be employed in crime. Benton v. United States (1956, 232 F. 2d 341, 98 U.S. App. D.C. 84).

Under this section providing that no person shall have in his possession any instrument, tool, or other implement for picking locks or pockets, or that is usually employed or reasonably may be employed in commission of any crime, if he is unable satisfactorily to account for possession of the implement, proof of intent is essential element of government's case. Id.

5. Presumption

Validity of presumption created by statute depends on presence of rational connection between facts proved and ultimate fact presumed and presumption cannot be sustained if inference of one from proof of the other is arbitrary because of lack of connection between the two in common experience. Benton v. United States (1956, 232 F. 2d 341, 98 U.S. App. D.C. 84).

6. Remand

Where defendant was convicted under first count of unlawful entry and his conviction under second count of possession of implements of crime consisting of crowbars was under statute which is unconstitutional in its application to crowbars, case was remanded with directions either to modify judgment by setting aside verdict on second count and dismissing that count or in the alternative to vacate judgment entirely, set aside verdict on second count, dismiss that count and resentence defendant for unlawful entry, notwithstanding that general sentence was for period less than maximum for unlawful entry. Washington v. United States (1956, 232 F. 2d 357, 98 U.S. App. D.C. 100).

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Evidence 1
Indictment 2
Prosecution by Corporation Counsel 3
United States Attorney 4

1. Evidence

A person cannot be convicted of one offense by proof that he committed another. Posey v. U.S. (D.C. Mun. App. 1945, 41 A. 2d 300).

Evidence of a separate offense other than one for which accused is on trial is admissible as an exception to the general rule, when the several offenses are so closely connected in time and locality as to be but parts of a single continuing transaction. Id.

2. Indictment

Indictment was not vitiated by presence of assistant to Attorney-General in grand jury room in oil lease case. United States v. Fall (1940, 10 F. 2d 648, 56 App. D.C. 83). See, also, United States v. Doheny (1940, 10 F. 2d 651, 56 App. D.C. 86).

3. Prosecution by Corporation Counsel

The making of false statement of lien under oath in application for certificate or duplicate certificate of title for motor vehicle in District of Columbia must be prosecuted by corporation counsel, under Motor Vehicle Lien Law, § 40-714. Shelton v. U.S. (1948, 165 F. 2d 241, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 32).

All traffic violations should be prosecuted by information filed by corporation counsel. Persham v. United States (1939, 104 F. 2d 249, 70 App. D.C. 116).

Under this section Congress intended that all prosecutions for violations of § 40-608, should be at instance of corporation counsel and in name of District of Columbia. District of Columbia v. Moyer (1938, 93 F. 2d 527, 68 App. D.C. 98).

Prosecutions of street railways under section 16 of the Act of May 23, 1908 (35 Stat. 246) (see §§ 44-202, 44-203, 44-206, 44-207) should be conducted by the corporation counsel in the name of the District of Columbia. United States v. Capital Trac. Co. (38 App. D.C. 469).

4. Prosecution by United States Attorney

Prosecution for violation of § 22-2701 rendering it unlawful to invite, entice or persuade any person fifteen years of age or over for purposes of prostitution or any other immoral or lewd purpose, should be conducted by United States attorney in name of and for benefit of United States, since offense is punishable by both fine and imprisonment. United States v. Paul Strothers (1956, 228 F. 2d 34, 97 U.S. App. D.C. 63).

Prosecution in District of Columbia for second-degree murder was properly conducted in name of the United States rather than in name of District of Columbia. Morton v. Welch (C.C.A. Va. 1947, 162 F. 2d 840, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 44, 332 U.S. 779, 92 L. Ed. 363, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 1498, 334 U.S. 848, 92 L. Ed. 1771).

Prosecutions for refilling registered containers under 1901 Code § 878c (§ 48-303), should be conducted by the district attorney in the name of the United States. District of Columbia v. Simpson (40 App. D.C. 498).

Corporation counsel "has no authority to prosecute offenses where the maximum punishment may be both a fine and imprisonment." Id.

Prosecutions of bucket-shops under D.C. Code of 1901 § 869a (§ 22-1509) et seq. should be in the name of the United States. United States v. Cella (37 App. D.C. 423, certiorari denied 32 S. Ct. 526, 223 U.S. 728, 56 L. Ed. 633).

If in any case any question shall arise as to whether under section 23-101 the prosecution should be conducted by the corporation counsel or by the attorney of the United States for the District of Columbia, the presiding justice shall forthwith, either of his own motion or upon suggestion of the corporation counsel or the attorney of the United States, certify the case to the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, which court shall hear and determine the question in a summary way. In every such case the defendant or defendants shall have the right to be heard in the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. The decision of such court shall be final. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1341, ch. 854, § 933; June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 537, ch. 1329; June 7, 1934, 48 Stat. 926, ch. 426.)

AMENDMENT

1902—Act June 30, 1902, substituted "corporation counsel" for "city solicitor."

CHANGE OF NAME

Act June 7, 1934, substituted "United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia" for "court of appeals of the District of Columbia."

NOTES TO DECISIONS

1. Certification by judge

Defendant cannot compel certification to court of appeals. "We think the language used means that whenever the judge or either of the officials named shall entertain a doubt as to who should conduct the prosecution, the question shall be certified to this court, and not otherwise. * * * If it is not so certified it becomes part of his regular defense." Mullowny v. Mowatt (43 App D. C. 49)

§ 23-103. Conduct of prosecutions—Jurisdiction.

Except as otherwise provided in sections 11-901 to 11-939, when the punishment of an offense may be imprisonment for more than one year the prosecution shall be in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia; when the maximum punishment is a fine only or imprisonment for one year or less the prosecution may be in the Municipal Court for the District of Columbia. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1341, ch. 854, § 934; June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 537, ch. 1329; June 25, 1936, 49 Stat. 1921, ch. 804; Apr. 1, 1942, 56 Stat. 190, ch. 207, § 1; June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 991, ch. 646, § 32(b); May 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 107, ch. 139, § 127.)

CODIFICATION

Section comprises the last two sentences of act Mar. 3, 1901, § 934. Section 934 is also classified to § 24-401.

The words "Except as otherwise provided in §§ 11-901 to 11-919" at the beginning of this section were inserted by the compilers.

AMENDMENT

1902—Act June 30, 1902, inserted after "is" the words "a fine only or."

CHANGE OF NAME

Act June 25, 1948, eff. Sept. 1, 1948, as amended by act May 24, 1949, substituted "United States District Court of the District of Columbia" for "District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia."

Act June 25, 1936, substituted "District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia" for "Supreme Court of the District of Columbia."

CONSOLIDATION OF POLICE COURT AND MUNICIPAL COURT

"Municipal Court for the District of Columbia" was substituted for "police court" to conform to act Apr. 1, 1942, which consolidated the Police Court and the Municipal Court. See section 11-751.

If any person charged with a criminal offense shall have been committed or held to bail to await the action of the grand jury, and within nine months thereafter the grand jury shall not have taken action on the case, either by ignoring the charge or by returning an indictment into the proper court, the prosecution of such charge shall be deemed to have been abandoned and the accused shall be set free or his bail discharged, as the case may be: Provided, however, That the United States District Court for the District of Columbia holding a special term as a criminal court, or, in vacation, any judge of said court, upon good cause shown in writing, and, when practicable, upon due notice to the accused, may from time to time enlarge the time for the taking action in such case by the grand jury. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1342, ch. 854, § 939; June 25, 1936, 49 Stat. 1921, ch. 804; June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 991, ch. 646, § 32(a), (b); May 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 107, ch. 139, § 127.)

Act June 25, 1936, substituted "District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia" for "Supreme Court of the District of Columbia."

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Indictment after 9-month period 1
Release of prisoners 2

1. Indictment after 9-month period

By this section prosecution of the offense is not finally barred so that accused may not be held to answer upon an indictment found after the 9-month period within which the grand jury may act has elapsed. United States v. Cadarr (1905, 25 S. Ct. 487, 197 U.S. 475, 49 L. Ed. 842). See, also, Arnstein v. United States (1924, 296 F. 946, 54 App. D.C. 199, certiorari denied 44 S. Ct. 454, 264 U.S. 595, 68 L. Ed. 867).

2. Release of prisoners

This is not a statute of limitations. "The result of the failure to prosecute has reference solely to the right in the pending prosecution to be freed, if imprisoned, or released from bail, if under bond." United States v. Cadarr (1905, 25 S. Ct. 487, 197 U.S. 475, 49 L. Ed. 842).

In all criminal prosecutions the United States or the District of Columbia, as the case may be, shall have the same right of appeal that is given to the defendant, including the right to a bill of exceptions: Provided, That if on such appeal it shall be found that there was error in the rulings of the court during a trial, a verdict in favor of the defendant shall not be set aside. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1341, ch. 854, § 935.)

1. Appeal by United States

In District of Columbia criminal appeals, the government is restricted as is the defendant, though this does not mean that United States cannot appeal from final decision unless opposite decision would also have been final; and government may appeal only from an order against it which terminates a prosecution or makes a decision whose distinct or plenary character meets the standards of precedents applicable to finality problems in all federal courts. Carroll v. United States (1957, 77 S. Ct. 1332, 354 U.S. 394, 1 L. Ed. 2d 1442).

In view of this section giving government same right of appeal in criminal prosecution as is given to defendant, government's right of appeal is determined by U.S. Code, title 18, § 3731 giving Courts of Appeals jurisdiction of appeals from all "final" decisions of district courts of United States. United States v. Cefaratti (1953, 202 F. 2d 13, 91 U.S. App. D.C. 297, certiorari denied 73 S. Ct. 646, 345 U.S. 907, 97 L. Ed. 1343).

An order that does not terminate an action but is, on the contrary, made in the course of an action, has the finality that is required for appeal under U.S. Code, title 28, § 1291 governing appellate jurisdiction of Courts of Appeals, if (1) it has a final and irreparable effect on the rights of the parties, being a final disposition of a claimed right; (2) it is too important to be denied review; and (3) claimed right is not an ingredient of cause of action and does not require consideration with it. Id.

United States may appeal cases and it need not be taken directly to the Supreme Court. United States v. Burroughs (1933, 65 F. 2d 796, 62 App. D.C. 163, affirmed in part 54 S. Ct. 287, 290 U.S. 534, 78 L. Ed. 484).

2. Appeal to circuit court

Where the trial court's decision is one arresting a judgment of conviction in a criminal case, it is not appealable unless such decision is for insufficiency of the indictment and based upon the invalidity or construction of the statutes, in which event, the appeal is taken directly to the Supreme Court. Accordingly, the Government should have appealed this case to the Supreme Court and we must certify the case to that court. United States v. Waters (1949, 175 F. 2d 340, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 127).

3. Arrest of judgment of conviction

Where the trial court's decision was one arresting a judgment of conviction in a criminal case, it is not appealable unless such decision was for insufficiency of the indictment and based upon the invalidity or construction of the statutes, in which event, the appeal is taken directly to the Supreme Court. Accordingly, the Government should have appealed this case to the Supreme Court and the case must be certified to that court. United States v. Waters (1949, 175 F. 2d 340, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 127).

4. Double jeopardy

Where guilt of defendant, as a matter of law and fact, is submitted to Municipal Court of the District of Columbia, an appeal by the United States is not permitted, since defendant cannot be retried for the same offense, and therefore, even if the ruling of the trial court were found to be erroneous, the judgment could not be vacated and a new trial ordered. United States v. Martin (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 81 A. 2d 651).

5. Finality of decisions

The underlying concepts of finality of decisions as prerequisite to appeal are the same under section 1291 of title 28, U.S. Code, defining appellate jurisdiction of Courts of Appeals, as the successor to applicable provision of 1901 District of Columbia Code, as to such section as successor to the nationally applicable appeal provisions of the Judicial Code. Carroll v. United States (1957, 77 S. Ct. 1332, 354 U.S. 394, 1 L. Ed. 2d 1442).

In District of Columbia criminal cases, the government is not permitted to appeal where decision against it may have some characteristics of finality, yet does not either terminate the prosecution or pertaining to an independent peripheral matter such as would be appealable in other federal courts. Id.

An order entered after indictment and before trial, granting motion to suppress the only substantial evidence in support of counts charging purchase and concealment of narcotics, was an appealable "final decision". United States v. Cefaratti (1953, 202 F. 2d 13, 91 U.S. App. D.C. 297, certiorari denied 73 S. Ct. 646, 345 U.S. 907, 97 L. Ed. 1343).

6. Judgment of acquittal

Where it was clear from repeated statements of trial judge in prosecution for having possession of a dangerous weapon, that the trial judge was not ruling on the information as such but on the ultimate guilt of the defendant under agreed statement of facts, and trial judge made an entry granting motion of defendant to dismiss and discharging defendant, such action was equivalent to the granting of a motion for judgment of acquittal, and therefore the United States had no right of appeal to Municipal Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia. United States v. Martin (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 81 A. 2d 651).

7. Jurisdiction of court of appeals

The appellate jurisdiction of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia in criminal cases is not affected by the act of 1907. United States v. Burroughs (1933, 53 S. Ct. 574, 289 U.S. 159, 77 L. Ed. 1096).

8. Order quashing indictment

Government may appeal from order quashing indictment and discharging defendant without day. Cadarr v. United States (24 App. D. C. 143 reversed on other grounds 197 U. S. 475, 49 L. Ed. 842).

9. Order quashing warrant of arrest

Under § 11-772 providing that any party aggrieved by any final order or judgment of the Municipal Court for the District of Columbia may appeal to the Municipal Court of Appeals, such court has jurisdiction of government's appeal from an order of the municipal court for such district quashing a warrant of arrest in a disorderly house case, in view of this section entitling the government to appeal in criminal prosecutions. U. S. v. Basiliko (D. C. Mun. App. 1944, 35 A. 2d 185).

An order quashing a warrant of arrest in a disorderly house case was appealable. Id.

10. Order sustaining demurrer

Government may appeal from order sustaining demurrer to indictment for violation of 1901 code, § 869a et seq. (§ 22-1509). United States v. Cella (37 App. D. C. 423, certiorari denied 32 S. Ct. 526, 233 U. S. 728, 56 L. Ed. 633).

11. Quashed information

The United States may appeal from an order of the Municipal Court for the District of Columbia quashing an information for failure to state a crime, and discharging the defendant. United States v. Martin (D.C. Mun. App. 1951, 81 A. 2d 651).

12. Verdicts

This section does not authorize an appeal by the government from a verdict of not guilty in a criminal case, because only the determination of a moot question is involved, which is not a judicial function and cannot be required by Congress of a federal court. United States v. Evans (30 App. D. C. 58, certiorari quashed 29 S. Ct. 58, 213 U. S. 297, 53 L. Ed. 803).

Court of appeals has no power to review, by writ of error, a judgment of not guilty rendered by the police court. District of Columbia v. Burns (32 App D. C. 203)

This section provided that in criminal prosecutions the United States or the District should have the same right of appeal as the defendant had, including a bill of exceptions, but provided that if there was error in the rulings of the court during the trial, a verdict for defendant should not be set aside. District of Columbia v. Kendall (1927, 20 F. 2d 287, 57 App. D. C. 271).

Whenever a person charged with crime is held to bail the court shall have power to allow a deposit with the clerk of such court of money in the amount of the bail instead of requiring a bond or recognizance, and in case of default to declare such deposit forfeited to the United States or the District of Columbia as the case may be. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1341, ch. 854, § 938.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

1. Appeal from conviction for contempt

Pending an appeal from an order refusing to discharge defendant on habeas corpus from conviction for contempt, defendant is entitled to bail. In re Moss (23 App. D. C. 474).

§ 23-107. Peremptory challenges.

In all trials for capital offenses the accused and the United States shall each be entitled to twenty peremptory challenges. In trials for offenses punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary the accused and the United States shall each be entitled to ten peremptory challenges. In all other cases, civil as well as criminal, in which the plaintiff is the United States or the District of Columbia, each party shall be entitled to three peremptory challenges; and if there are several defendants, they shall be treated as one person in the allowance of such challenges. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1338, ch. 854, § 918; June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 536, ch. 1329.)

AMENDMENT

1902—Act June 30, 1902, added "or the District of Columbia."

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Action by defendant 7
Cases consolidated for trial 1
Constitutional law 2
Exclusion of Negroes 3
Joint defendants 4
Purpose 5
Right to new panel 6

1. Cases consolidated for trial

When cases are consolidated for trial under U. S. R. S. § 1024, defendant is entitled, in cases of felony, to 10 peremptory challenges only. Miller v. United States (38 App. D.C. 361, 40 L.R.A., N.S., 973). See, also, Nestlerode v. U.S. (1941, 122 F. 2d 56, 74 App. D.C. 276).

2. Constitutional law

There is nothing in the Constitution which requires the Congress to grant peremptory challenges to defendants in criminal cases, and regulations are left to common law or enactments of Congress. United States v. Wood (1936, 57 S. Ct. 177, 299 U.S. 123, 81 L. Ed. 78, rehearing denied 57 S. Ct. 319, 299 U.S. 624, 81 L. Ed. 459).

While accused has a constitutional right to a speedy trial by an impartial jury, it does not follow that the rejection of qualified persons for insufficient cause would deprive appellant of that right. It is significant in this respect that although appellant was entitled to ten peremptory challenges he had not used any of them. Shettel v. United States (1940, 113 F. 2d 34, 72 App. D.C. 250).

3. Exclusion of Negroes

Fact that 19 members of jury panel selected in prosecution of three Negroes jointly indicted on charge of murder in perpetration of robbery were members of Negro race indicated that Negroes had not been systematically excluded from panel in violation of Fifth Amendment, and defendants could not complain that thereafter Government peremptorily challenged every Negro juror who had been called to sit in the panel. Hall v. U.S. (1948, 168 F. 2d 161, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 166, 4 A.L.R. 2d 1193, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 1509, 334 U.S. 853, 92 L. Ed. 1775, rehearing denied 69 S. Ct. 9, 335 U.S. 839, 93 L. Ed. 391).

4. Joint defendants

Five defendants jointly indicted for conspiracy are entitled to only 10 peremptory challenges to be shared between them. Lorenz v. United States (24 App. D. C. 337, certiorari denied 25 S. Ct. 796, 196 U.S. 640, 49 L. Ed. 631).

5. Purpose

"Peremptory challenges" are exercised by party in rejection, and not in selection of jurors, and is not aimed at disqualification but is exercised upon qualified jurors as a matter of favor to challenger. Hall v. U.S. (1948, 168 F. 2d 161, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 166, 4 A.L.R. 2d 1193, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 1509, 334 U.S. 853, 92 L. Ed. 1775, rehearing denied 69 S. Ct. 9, 335 U.S. 839, 93 L. Ed. 391).

6. Right to new panel

Defendant charged with adultery is entitled to a new jury panel when it appears that 12 members of the current panel acted as jurors in another case involving the keeping of a disorderly house, in which case it was shown that the defendant frequented that house for immoral purposes. Kleindienst v. United States (48 App. D. C. 190).

A failure to exhaust the peremptory challenges and to examine the jurors on the voir dire is no waiver of defendant's right to a new panel when such right exists Id.

7. Action by defendant

Action required to be taken by a "defendant" under provisions of District of Columbia Code relating to criminal procedure, where an accused has counsel, is to be taken by the counsel rather than by the accused personally. Hensley v. United States (C.A.D.C. 1960, 281 F. 2d 605).

§ 23-108. Cause of challenge not available to set aside verdict—Exception.

No verdict shall be set aside for any cause which might be alleged as ground for challenge of a juror before the jury are sworn, except when the objection to the juror is that he had a bias against the defendant such as would have disqualified him, and such disqualification was not known to or suspected by the defendant or his counsel before the juror was sworn. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1338, ch. 854, § 919.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

1. New trial

This section "gives no new right to the defendant, and adds nothing to the discretionary powers which the courts have always exercised in such cases. If not declaratory merely of a long-existing rule of practice, it would seem rather a limitation, than otherwise, of the ordinary discretionary power of the courts to grant new trials." Paolucci v. United States (30 App. D.C. 217, 12 Ann. Cas. 920, certiorari denied 28 S. Ct. 568, 208 U.S. 617, 52 L. Ed. 646).

A challenge to the jury panel because it contains names of women, made for first time on motion for new trial, will not be reviewed. Nelson v. United States (1932, 53 F. 2d 935, 60 App. D.C. 323).

§ 23-109. Witnesses for defense—Fees.

In any criminal trial the justice trying the case may allow such number of witnesses on behalf of the defendant as may appear to be necessary, the fees of such witnesses to be paid in the same manner as the fees of the witnesses for the government: Provided, That the defendant makes application under oath before the trial, or, in cases of manifest necessity, during the trial, setting forth that he is not possessed of sufficient means and is actually unable to pay the fees of such witnesses, and setting forth also the names of such witnesses and what he expects to prove by them, in order that the court may be advised whether or not the testimony be material to the issue. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1339, ch. 854, § 920.)

Immunity of witnesses in cases against prostitution, see § 22-2721.

When two or more persons are jointly indicted the court may, before a defendant has gone into his defense, direct any such defendant to be discharged, that he may be a witness for the United States. An accused party may also, when there is not sufficient evidence to put him upon his defense, be discharged by the court, or, if not discharged by the court, shall be entitled to the immediate verdict of the jury for the purpose of giving evidence for the other parties accused with him; and such order of discharge in either case, equally with the verdict of acquittal, shall be a bar to another prosecution for the same offense. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1339, ch. 854, § 921.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS1. Construction

This section, authorizing court to discharge defendant desiring to become witness for government, is not source of trial judge's authority to dismiss defendant so that he may be witness against his former codefendants, but is an immunity statute enacted for benefit and protection of defendant who is discharged for that purpose before he has been in jeopardy. Carrado v. United States (1954, 210 F. 2d 712, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 183, certiorari denied 74 S. Ct. 874, 347 U.S. 1018, 98 L. Ed. 1140)

As used in this section granting immunity to defendant discharged, before he has "gone into his defense", for purpose of becoming government witness, quoted words mean "before he has been put in jeopardy", and statute's draftsman intended it to provide immunity from second prosecution for defendant who would not otherwise be entitled to it because he had not been in jeopardy. Id.

If a material witness for the defendant resides beyond the District of Columbia, or is sick or infirm, or about to leave the District, the defendant may apply in writing to the court for a commission to examine such witness upon interrogatories thereto annexed when the deposition is to be taken beyond the District of Columbia, and orally in other cases, and the court may grant the same and pass an order stating for what length of time notice shall be given to the United States attorney before said witness shall be examined. At or before the time fixed in said notice, when the examination is upon written interrogatories, the United States attorney may file cross-interrogatories, but if he fail to do so the clerk shall file the following:

First. Are all your statements in the foregoing answers made from your own personal knowledge? And if not, show what is stated upon information and give its source.

Second. State everything you know in addition to what is stated in your above answers concerning this case favorable to either the United States or the defendant.

For good cause shown the court may order in any case that the examination be conducted orally. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1339, ch. 854, § 922; June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 537, ch. 1329; June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 909, ch. 646, § 1.)

AMENDMENT

1902—Act June 30, 1902, substituted "beyond the District of Columbia" for "more than a hundred miles from the city of Washington."

CHANGE OF NAME

Act June 25, 1948, eff. Sept. 1, 1948, substituted "United States Attorney" for "United States District Attorney." See U.S. Code, title 28, § 501.

NOTE TO DECISION1. In general

Action required to be taken by a "defendant" under provisions of District of Columbia Code relating to criminal procedure, where an accused has counsel, is to be taken by the counsel rather than by the accused personally. Hensley v. United States (C.A.D.C. 1960, 281 F. 2d 605).

§ 23-112. Commission to take depositions—Issuance and return.

The commission shall issue from the clerk's office, the examination of the witnesses shall be made and certified, and the return thereof made in the same manner as in civil cases, and unimportant irregularities or errors in the proceedings under said commission shall not cause the deposition to be excluded where no substantial prejudice can be wrought to the government by such irregularities or errors. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1339, ch. 854, § 923.)

If a new trial be not granted nor the judgment arrested the court may pronounce sentence upon the party convicted; but the execution of such sentence shall be postponed for a sufficient time to enable the defendant to prosecute an appeal, on the application of the defendant, if he shall give notice of his intention to appeal from the judgment to the court of appeals. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1339, ch. 854, § 924.)

§ 23-114. Time of execution of sentence of death.

In case of a sentence of death, the time fixed for the execution of the sentence shall not be considered an essential part of the sentence, and if it be not executed at the time therein appointed, by reason of the pendency of an appeal or for other cause, the court may appoint another day for carrying the same into execution. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1340, ch. 854, § 926.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS1. Construction

Section 23-703 must be read in connection with § 23-114 and with their legislative history. When this is done, it is clear that § 23-703 is intended not for the benefit of defendants upon whom death sentences are to be imposed but as an aid to the prison authorities charged with execution of such sentences. Wheeler v. Reid (1949, 175 F. 2d 829, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

§ 23-115. Powers of investigators assigned to United States attorney.

Any special investigator appointed by the Attorney General and assigned to the United States attorney for the District shall have authority to execute all lawful writs, process, and orders issued under authority of the United States, and command all necessary assistance to execute his duties, and shall have the same powers to make arrests as are possessed by members of the Metropolitan Police force of the District. (June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 102, ch. 159 § 402.)

Chapter 2.—INDICTMENTS

Sec.

- 23-201. Offenses that may be joined.
 23-202. Description of money—Sufficiency of proof.
 23-203. Indictment for intent to defraud—Sufficiency—Proof.
 23-204. Indictment for perjury—Sufficiency.
 23-205. Indictment for subornation of perjury—Sufficiency.

§ 23-201. Offenses that may be joined.

An indictment for larceny may contain a count for obtaining the same property by false pretenses, a count for embezzlement thereof, and a count for receiving or concealing the same property, knowing it to be stolen or embezzled, or any of such counts, and the jury may convict of any of such offenses, and may find any or all of the persons indicted guilty of any of said offenses. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1338, ch. 854, § 915.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

False pretenses and embezzlement 1
 Larceny and embezzlement 2

1. False pretenses and embezzlement

A general verdict of guilty on an indictment containing counts for false pretenses and embezzlement is inconsistent, and the rule "to the effect that in a criminal case a general judgment * * * of guilty on each count, cannot be reversed on error if any count is good and is sufficient to support the judgment does not apply." Davis v. United States (37 App. D.C. 126). See, also, Fulton v. United States (45 App. D.C. 27).

2. Larceny and embezzlement

It is not error to refuse to require the government to elect between larceny and embezzlement counts where the same evidence is relied on to support both counts. Means v. United States (1933, 65 F. 2d 206, 62 App. D.C. 118).

In every indictment, except for forgery, in which it is necessary to make an averment as to any money or bank bill or notes, United States Treasury notes, postal and fractional currency, or other bills, bonds, or notes, issued by lawful authority and intended to pass and circulate as money, it shall be sufficient to describe such money, bills, notes, currency, or bonds simply as money, without specifying any particular coin, note, bill, or bond; and such allegation shall be sustained by proof that the accused has stolen or embezzled any amount of coin, or any such note, bill, currency, or bond, although the particular amount or species of such coin, note, bill, currency, or bond be not proved. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1338, ch. 854, § 916.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

1. Purpose

The purpose of this section was to relieve the Government from the necessity of detailed particularization in either allegations or proof of money taken. Neufeld v. U.S. (1941, 118 F. 2d 375, 73 App. D.C. 174, certiorari denied 62 S. Ct. 580, 315 U. S. 798, 86 L. Ed. 1199).

In an indictment in which it is necessary to allege an intent to defraud, it shall be sufficient to allege that the party accused did the act complained of with intent to defraud, without alleging an intent to defraud any particular person or body corporate; and on the trial of such an indictment it shall not be necessary to prove an intent to defraud any particular person, but it shall be sufficient to prove a general intent to defraud. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1338, ch. 854, § 917.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

1. Forgery

Forgery of checks was done with intent to defraud. Easterday v. United States (1923, 292 F. 664, 53 App. D.C. 387, certiorari denied 44 S. Ct. 181, U.S. 719, 68 L. Ed. 523).

In every information or indictment to be prosecuted against any person for wilful and corrupt perjury, it shall be sufficient to set forth the substance of the offence charged upon the defendant, and by what court, or before whom the oath was taken (averring such court, or person or persons, to have a competent authority to administer the same) together with the proper averment or averments to falsify the matter or matters wherein the perjury or perjuries is or are assigned; without setting forth the bill, answer, information, indictment, declaration, or any part of any record or proceeding either in law or equity, other than as aforesaid; and without setting forth the commission or authority of the court, or person or persons before whom the perjury was committed; any law, usage or custom to the contrary notwithstanding. (23 Geo. II, ch. 11, § 1; Kilty's Rept. p. 252; Alex. Brit. Stat. 766.)

CODIFICATION

This section sets forth a British statute continued in force by virtue of act Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1189, ch. 854, § 1.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Constitutional guarantees 1
 Federal rules of criminal procedure 2
 Materiality 3
 Oath 4

1. Constitutional guarantees

In prosecution for perjury allegedly committed by witness before Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, count charging that witness perjured himself when he stated that he, while editor of magazine, had not published articles by persons, other than Russians, whom he knew to be Communists violated the First Amendment to the Federal Constitution providing that Congress shall make no law abridging freedom of speech or of the press, and the Sixth Amendment protecting an accused in the right to be informed of nature and cause of the accusation against him. United States v. Lattimore (1953, 112 F. Supp. 507).

2. Federal rules of criminal procedure

In prosecution for perjury allegedly committed by witness before Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, count of indictment charging that witness lied in denying that he had ever been a sympathizer or promoter of communism or Communist interests, was fatally defective because it did not meet requirements of Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 7, U.S. Code, title 18, Appendix, requiring that indictment shall be plain, concise and definite written statement of essential acts constituting offense charged. United States v. Lattimore (1953, 112 F. Supp. 507).

Under Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 7, U.S. Code, title 18, Appendix, a general allegation of materiality is sufficient in an indictment for perjury or subornation of perjury without setting forth in detail how and why the particular question addressed to the witness was material. U.S. v. Meyers (1948, 75 F. Supp. 486, affirmed 171 F. 2d 800, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 101, 11

3. Materiality

Indictment charging witness with perjury allegedly committed before Senate Internal Security Subcommittee was not invalid in its entirety because it failed to plead the particulars of materiality of testimony given by witness before committee. United States v. Lattimore (1953, 112 F. Supp. 507).

Perjury indictment setting out in each count a statement allegedly made by defendant in course of testimony before congressional subcommittee, alleging that such statement was false and setting forth what the true facts were and alleging generally that testimony sought to be elicited from defendant was material to the inquiry, was sufficient as against motion to dismiss. U.S. v. Meyers (1948, 75 F. Supp. 486, affirmed 171 F. 2d 800, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 101, 11 A.L.R. 2d 1, certiorari denied 69 S. Ct. 602, 336 U.S. 912, 93 L. Ed. 1076).

4. Oath

Failure to set forth person before whom oath was taken together with his authority to administer same was not fatal to perjury indictment, especially in view of rule requiring merely that indictment be plain, concise, and definite written statement of essential facts constituting offense charged and providing that it need not contain any other matter not necessary to such statement. United States v. Young (1953, 113 F. Supp. 20).

Indictment charging alleged perjury by witness before Senate Internal Security Subcommittee was not invalid because it failed to allege name of Senator administering oath to witness. United States v. Lattimore (1953, 112 F. Supp. 507).

In every information or indictment for subornation of perjury, or for corrupt bargaining or contracting with others to commit wilful and corrupt perjury, it shall be sufficient to set forth the substance of the offence charged upon the defendant, without setting forth the bill, answer, information, indictment, declaration, or any part of any record or proceeding either in law or equity, and without setting forth the commission or authority of the court, or person or persons before whom the perjury was committed, or was agreed or promised to be committed; any law, usage or custom to the contrary notwithstanding. (23 Geo. II, ch. 11, § 2; Kilty's Report 252; Alex. Brit. Stat. 766; Comp. Stat. D. C., p. 472, § 145.)

CODIFICATION

This section sets forth a British statute continued in force by virtue of act Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1189, ch. 854, § 1.

Chapter 3.—SEARCH WARRANTS AND ARREST

- 23-306. Arrests without warrant for unlawful possession of implements of crime—Burglar tools—Weapons—Lottery tickets—Stolen property.

Upon complaint, under oath, before the Municipal Court for the District of Columbia, or a United States commissioner, setting forth that the affiant believes and has good cause to believe that there are concealed in any house or place articles stolen, taken by robbers, embezzled, or obtained by false pretenses, forged or counterfeited coins, stamps, labels, bank bills, or other instruments, or dies, plates, stamps, or brands for making the same, books or printed papers, drawings, engravings, photographs, or pictures of an indecent or obscene character, or instruments for immoral use, or any gaming table, device, or apparatus kept for the purpose of unlawful gaming, or any lottery tickets or lottery policies, or any book, paper, memorandum, or device for or used in recording any bet or deposit of money or thing or consideration of value received for any share, ticket, certificate, writing, bill, slip, or token in any pool or lottery or as a wager on or in connection with any race, game, contest, election, or other gambling transaction or device of an unlawful nature as defined in sections 22-1501, 22-1503, 22-1504, 22-1505, 22-1507, 22-1508, particularly describing the house or place to be searched, the things to be seized, substantially alleging the offense in relation thereto, and describing the person to be seized, the said court or United States commissioner may issue a warrant either to the marshal or any officer of the Metropolitan Police commanding him to search such house or place for the property or other things, and, if found, to bring the same, together with the person to be seized, before the Municipal Court for the District of Columbia or United States commissioner issuing said warrant, as the case may be.

The said warrant shall have annexed to it, or inserted therein, a copy of the affidavit upon which it is issued, and may be substantially in the form following:

"Whereas there has been filed before _____ an affidavit, of which the following is a copy (here insert). These are therefore to command you to enter (here describe the place) and there diligently search for the said articles, goods, or chattels in the said affidavit described, and that you bring the same, or any part thereof, found on said search and also the body of _____ before the Municipal Court for the District of Columbia, or United States commissioner, as the case may be, to be dealt with and disposed of according to law." (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1337, ch. 854, § 911; Apr. 5, 1938, 52 Stat. 199, ch. 72, § 3; Apr. 1, 1942, 56 Stat. 190, ch. 207, § 1.)

AMENDMENT

1938—Act Apr. 5, 1938, omitted provisions for bringing complaints before justices of the peace and inserted provisions relative to United States commissioners, and also included those additional items for search following "lottery policies."

CONSOLIDATION OF POLICE COURT AND MUNICIPAL COURT

"Municipal Court for the District of Columbia" was substituted for "police court" to conform to act Apr. 1, 1942, which consolidated the Police Court and the Municipal Court. See section 11-751.

1. Compliance with federal rules of criminal procedure

Statute of the District of Columbia dealing with issuance of search warrants on complaint under oath need not be complied with when Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 41, U.S. Code, title 18, Appendix, dealing with search and seizure has been complied with. Shay v. United States (1954, 212 F. 2d 809, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 379, certiorari denied 74 S. Ct. 865, 347 U.S. 1012, 98 L. Ed. 1136).

Search warrant, which had been executed in accordance with Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 41, U.S. Code, title 18, Appendix, was valid even though it did not comply with this section authorizing issuance of search warrants. Ledbetter v. United States (1954, 211 F. 2d 628, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 155, certiorari denied 74 S. Ct. 789, 347 U.S. 977, 98 L. Ed. 1116).

2. Description of premises

Search warrant which described premises as "The Humidor" is sufficient to search entire four-story building. Irwin v. United States (1937, 89 F. 2d 678, 67 App. D.C. 41).

3. Espionage Act

There is nothing in the Espionage Act which makes it inapplicable in the District of Columbia and search warrant may be issued where property is used as means of committing felony. Nuckols v. United States (1938, 99 F. 2d 353, 69 App. D.C. 120, certiorari denied 59 S. Ct. 89, 305, U.S. 626, 83 L. Ed. 401).

Search warrant conforms in every respect to the requirements of the Espionage Act and does not infringe the rights of appellant under the Fourth Amendment. Hysler v. United States (C.C.A. Fla. 1937, 86 F. 2d 918).

4. Evidence as admissible

Where search bears a reasonable relation to the arrest, evidence secured during the search is admissible. Collins v. U. S. (D. C. Mun. App. 1945, 41 A. 2d 515).

In prosecution under indictment for housebreaking and grand larceny, admission of stolen article allegedly obtained by illegal search of defendant's room was not error in view of testimony that defendant agreed to the search and even pointed out stolen articles. Alderman v. U.S. (1948, 165 F. 2d 622, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 48).

5. Hotels

A hotel is a public place and search thereof is not so rigidly restricted as search of a private home. Collins v. U. S. (D. C. Mun. App. 1945, 41 A. 2d 515).

6. Illegal search, legalization

Under rule that officers should not be encouraged to proceed in an irregular manner on chance that all will end well, an illegal search cannot be legalized by what it brings to light. Darnall v. U. S. (D. C. Mun. App. 1943, 33 A. 2d 734).

7. Person aggrieved

In order to qualify as a "person aggrieved by an unlawful search and seizure" within Rule 41(e) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, U.S. Code, title 18, Appendix, authorizing such a person to move the court for district in which property was seized for return of the property and to suppress for use as evidence anything so obtained, one must have been a victim of a search or seizure, one against whom the search was directed, as distinguished from one who claims prejudice only through use of evidence gathered as a consequence of a search or seizure directed at someone else. Jones v. United States (1960, 80 S. Ct. 725, 362 U.S. 257, 4 L. Ed. 2d 697).

A defendant charged with violation of narcotics laws had standing to contend that entry and subsequent seizure were unlawful notwithstanding he testified that property seized was not his and that place of arrest was not his home, where to hold that defendant's failure to acknowledge interest in narcotics or premises prevented his attack upon search, would be to permit the Government to have advantage of contradictory positions as basis for conviction, since conviction flowed from defendant's possession of narcotics at time of search, yet fruits of that search, upon which conviction depended, were admitted into evidence on ground that defendant did not have possession of narcotics at that time, so that prosecution subjected defendant to penalties meted out to one in lawless possession while refusing him remedies designated for one in that situation. Id.

8. Probable cause

Affidavits before Commissioner were sufficient to satisfy requisite of probable cause for issuance both of arrest warrants of persons who were subsequently convicted of illegal gambling on evidence showing that they maintained betting office and issuance of search warrants for search of premises which contained such office. Silverman et al. v. United States (1960, 275 F. 2d 173, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 144, certiorari granted 80 S. Ct. 1237, 363 U.S. 801, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1145).

"Probable cause" exists for a search warrant if affiant has reasonable grounds at the time of his affidavit and the issuance of the warrant for the belief that the law was being violated on the premises to be searched, and if the apparent facts set out in the affidavit are such that a reasonably discreet and prudent man would be led to believe there was a commission of the offense charged. Herson v. United States (1936, 80 F. 2d 529, 65 App. D.C. 86).

Probable cause to justify a search must be determined by existence of facts known to officer before, not after, the search. Darnall v. U. S. (D. C. Mun. App. 1943, 33 A. 2d 734).

9. Search—Reasonableness

In testing the reasonableness of a search at time of arrest, all circumstances must be considered. Collins v. U. S. (D. C. Mun. App. 1945, 41 A. 2d 515).

Where police department had made a long, careful, and thorough investigation which indicated that hotel was being used for disorderly purposes and that misdemeanors were being committed therein continually, those in charge of the arrest were justified in organizing a raiding squad sufficiently large to make all necessary and proper arrests, and officers were properly permitted to testify as to what they saw while making search even though a search warrant had not been obtained. Id.

10. — Validity

Action of officers who, with permission of owners, entered vacant row house adjoining that in which they suspected defendants were maintaining unlawful betting office, in inserting antenna spike under baseboard and into party wall and connecting ear phones so that they were then able to overhear defendants conduct their betting business by telephone, did not constitute such an unlawful "search and seizure" as is proscribed by the betting business by telephone, did not constitute such Fourth Amendment to the federal Constitution and such actions did not constitute an interference with any communications system in violation of the Communications Act of 1934. Silverman et al. v. United States (1960, 275 F. 2d 173, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 144, certiorari granted 80 S. Ct. 1237, 363 U.S. 801, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1145).

A search may be made only under a valid search warrant or as an incident to a lawful arrest. Collins v. U. S. (D. C. Mun. App. 1945, 41 A. 2d 515).

Even in connection with a valid arrest, a search is unlawful if it is merely exploratory and general and made solely to find evidence of defendant's guilt. Id.

11. Sufficiency of copy

Where defendants although present at time when premises were searched pursuant to warrant, made no claim to property when inquiry was made in that respect by searching officers, and defendants disavowed any interest in premises, they were without right to have been served with a copy of search warrant, and could not claim that copy left on premises was defective. Shaw v. United States (1954, 209 F. 2d 298, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 90, certiorari denied 74 S. Ct. 430, 347 U.S. 905, 98 L. Ed. 1063).

When the warrant is executed by the seizure of the property or things described therein, the said property or things shall be delivered to the marshal, and shall be safely kept to be used as evidence. (Mar. 3 1901, 31 Stat. 1338, ch. 854, § 912.)

§ 23-303. Commitment of defendant—Retention of things seized.

If upon the examination the court is satisfied that the offense charged with reference to the things seized has been committed, the party accused shall be committed for trial or held to bail, and said things shall remain in the custody of the marshal until the accused is tried or the right of the claimant to said things is otherwise ascertained. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1338, ch. 854, § 913.)

§ 23-304. Return or destruction of property seized.

If the accused be discharged, the property or other things seized shall be returned to the person in whose possession they were found. If he be convicted, the property stolen, embezzled, or obtained by false pretenses shall be returned to its owner, and the other articles before described shall be destroyed, under direction of the court.

If the property seized be articles, games, devices, or contrivances maintained, kept set up, or used in violation of sections 22-1501 to 22-1508, they may be ordered destroyed, under direction of court, irrespective of any trial or the outcome thereof. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1338, ch. 854, § 914; Apr. 5, 1938, 52 Stat. 199, ch. 72, § 4.)

If any provision of sections 22-1501, 22-1502, 23-301, 23-304, 23-305, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is held invalid, the remainder of said sections, and the application of such provisions to other persons or circumstances, shall not be affected thereby. (Apr. 5, 1938, 52 Stat. 199, ch. 72, § 5.)

§ 23-306. Arrests without warrant for unlawful possession of implements of crime—Burglar tools—Weapons—Lottery tickets—Stolen property.

(a) Arrests without a warrant, and searches of the person and seizures pursuant thereto, may be made for violation of any section listed in subsection (b), by police officers, as in the case of a felony, upon probable cause that the person arrested is violating the section involved at the time of the arrest.

(b) Subsection (a) shall apply with respect to section 22-3601 (possession of implements of crime), sections 22-3203, 22-3204, and 22-3214, providing for the control of dangerous weapons in the District, and section 22-1502 (possession of lottery tickets).

(c) Arrests without a warrant, and searches of the person and seizures pursuant thereto, may be made for violation of section 22-2202 (petit larceny), by police officers, as in the case of a felony, upon probable cause that the person arrested has in his possession at the time of the arrest, property taken in violation of that section.

(d) No evidence discovered in the course of any arrest, search, or seizure authorized by this section shall be admissible in any criminal proceeding against the person arrested unless at the time of such arrest he was violating one of the sections referred to in subsection (b) or had in his possession property taken in violation of the section referred to in subsection (c). (June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 96, ch. 159, § 207.)

NOTES TO DECISIONSL. Probable cause

Where, over a period of two and a half months, officers had placed numbers bets on fifteen separate occasions at one location, and, on ten separate occasions, had observed a suspect depart from that location with bulging pockets and enter other premises, from which he subsequently departed "without the bulge," officers had reasonable grounds to believe that latter premises were being used in lottery operations, and that defendant, who at time such premises were searched pursuant to a search warrant was the only male present and was leaving "hastily," was participating therein, justifying arrest of defendant without an arrest warrant and seizure and use of incriminating evidence found in course of search of defendant made in connection with such arrest. Stephens v. United States (1959, 271 F. 2d 832, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 249).

Police officers who were on routine investigation of report that heroin was being "capped" at rooming house and who saw paraphernalia used by narcotics addicts in room from public hallway to which they had been properly admitted had probable cause to enter the room to arrest defendant, and having done so, properly seized heroin found in envelope and the paraphernalia. Jennings v. United States (1957, 247 F. 2d 784, 101 U.S. App. D.C. 198).

Where police officer observed defendant and another, both of whom he recognized as having prior convictions for larceny, carrying a console-type record player and followed them into a liquor store, saw that the record player was new and questioned them about the machine and defendant gave improbable and unbelievable answers, officer had probable cause to arrest defendant for petit larceny, and refusal of trial court to suppress the evidence seized at time of arrest was not erroneous. Brooks v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1960, 159 A. 2d 876).

Probable cause to justify arrest without warrant means more than a bare suspicion, and it exists where the facts and circumstances within officers' knowledge are sufficient in themselves to warrant a reasonable belief that an offense has been or is being committed. Cormier v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 137 A. 2d 212).

Where officers were told during nighttime, by a young girl, that a man fitting general description had chased girl out of house with a gun, officers had probable cause to arrest defendant without warrant. Id.

Where officers had probable cause to arrest defendant without warrant, ensuing search was legal and unregistered guns discovered thereby were admissible in evidence. Id.

Where officer observed person on street at 5:19 a.m., and, when asked what he was doing on street at such hour, person answered evasively, and when turning to leave, officer's elbow bumped solid unseen object on person's stomach, officer had probable cause for arrest and search which revealed concealed loaded pistol. Dickerson v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1956, 120 A. 2d 588).

In determining whether police officer had probable cause for arrest and search of person, which revealed concealed pistol, question was not whether person was proved guilty beyond reasonable doubt, but whether as practical matter, man of ordinary and reasonable caution would have reason to believe that person was carrying a gun. Id.

Where first defendant had once informed arresting officer that defendant was engaged in numbers business, and first defendant was known to have police record as numbers violator and had been acting suspiciously, and officer, while going to inform second defendant of parking violation, saw second defendant pass to first defendant, in manner and at time that number slips are usually passed, an envelope, officer could, without warrant, seize envelope and arrest defendants. Price et ano., v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1956, 119 A. 2d 718).

(a) In all cases where the laws of the United States provide that fugitives from justice shall be delivered up, the Chief Judge of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia shall cause to be apprehended and delivered up such fugitive from justice who shall be found within the District, in the same manner and under the same regulations as the executive authorities of the several States are required to do by the provisions of sections 5278 and 5279, title 66, of the Revised Statutes of the United States, "Extradition", and all executive and judicial officers are required to obey the lawful precepts or other process issued for that purpose, and to aid and assist in such delivery.

(b) The chief judge of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia may also surrender, on demand of the executive authority of any State, any person in the District of Columbia charged in such State in the manner provided in subsection (a) of this section with committing an act in the District of Columbia, or in another State, intentionally resulting in a crime in the State whose executive authority is making the demand, even though the accused was not in that State at the time of the commission of the crime, and has not fled therefrom.

(c) No person apprehended in accordance with the provisions of subsections (a) and (b) of this section shall be delivered over to the agent whom the executive authority demanding him shall have appointed to receive him unless he shall first be taken before the chief judge of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia who shall inform him of the demand made for his surrender, and of the crime with which he is charged, and that he has the right to demand and procure legal counsel; and if such person or his counsel shall state that he or they desire to test the legality of his arrest, the judge shall fix a reasonable time to be allowed him within which to apply for a writ of habeas corpus. When such writ is applied for, notice thereof, and of the time and place of hearing thereon, shall be given to the United States attorney for the District of Columbia, and to the said agent of the demanding State: Provided, however, That nothing contained in this subsection shall prevent such person from waiving his right to appear before the chief judge of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia and voluntarily returning in custody of a proper official to the jurisdiction of the State, Territory, or other possession of the United States which is demanding him. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1340, ch. 854, § 930; June 25, 1936, 49 Stat. 1921, ch. 804; June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 991, ch. 646, § 32(a), (b); May 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 107, ch. 139, § 127. June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 106, ch. 159, § 407.)

REFERENCE IN TEXT

1. Arrest in different State

Defendant indicted in State of Pennsylvania for obtaining money under false pretenses, arrested in District of Columbia upon warrant issued under this section on requisition of Governor of Pennsylvania, was remanded to custody of the agent of the State of Pennsylvania. Barrett v. Bigger (1927, 17 F. 2d 669, 57 App. D.C. 81, certiorari denied 47 S. Ct. 765, 274 U.S. 752, 71 L. Ed. 1332).

2. Burden of proof

If the extradition papers make out a prima facie case, the burden of proving absence from the State is on petitioner. Levy v. Splain (1920, 267 F. 333, 50 App. D.C. 31). See, also, Ellison v. Splain (1920, 267 F. 247, 49 App. D.C. 99).

3. Cruel and unusual punishment

Even if mental condition of alleged convict, who had allegedly escaped from custody in North Carolina, were such that, after extradition order had been properly entered, convict was in fact psychotic and could not assist counsel who had promptly filed habeas corpus petition after entry of the extradition order, return of convict to North Carolina would not be cruel and unusual punishment. Lathan v. Reid (1960, 280 F. 2d 66, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 58, certiorari denied 81 S. Ct. 107, 364 U.S. 865, 5 L. Ed. 2d 86).

4. Detention of accused person

"An accused person may be held a reasonable time to await the preparation and transmission of extradition papers from the demanding State." Stallings v. Splain (1919, 258 F. 510, 49 App. D.C. 38, affirmed 40 S. Ct. 537, 253 U.S. 339, 64 L. Ed. 940).

5. Duty and authority of chief judge

The Chief Judge of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia has executive authority similar to that of State governors in requisition proceedings. Maktos v. Matthews (1952, 194 F. 2d 354, 90 U.S. App. D.C. 183).

This section expressly confers upon the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court (District Court of the United States) of the District authority to act in requisition proceedings. Hill v. Dorsey (1928, 22 F. 2d 1003, 57 App. D.C. 305).

Chief Justice acts in extradition matters in an executive capacity. Reed v. Colpoys (1938, 99 F. 2d 396, 69 App. D.C. 163, certiorari denied 59 S. Ct. 97, 305 U.S. 598, 83 L. Ed. 379). See, also, Lee Won Sing v. Cottone (1941, 123 F. 2d 169, 74 App. D.C. 374).

6. Evidence

Where uncontradicted testimony showed that defendant was in Baltimore, Maryland, on day that Maryland indictment charged that he unlawfully deserted his wife and no evidence was offered by defendant to rebut presumption of fugitivity created by recitals of indictment, that issue was closed and there was ample basis for the requisition made by Governor of Maryland. Brown Sr., v. Ward, U.S. Marshal etc. (1960, 275 F. 2d 884, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 220).

Relator, held for extradition, could not complain that his petition for habeas corpus was denied on basis of evidence received at requisition hearing where his counsel made no request at any stage that relator be put on stand and no proffer at all of any evidence contradicting what was established at the requisition hearing. Id.

To justify commitment for extradition there must be evidence to prove guilt of the accused. Foster v. Goldsoll (48 App. D.C. 505, certiorari denied 39 S. Ct. 495, 250 U.S. 647, 63 L. Ed. 1188).

7. False imprisonment

Where after District of Columbia judge had issued executive order, in compliance with requisition proceedings from Pennsylvania, ordering the petitioner, arrested in District, be delivered to Pennsylvania authority, petitioner instituted habeas corpus proceedings, trial court denied writ, but did not order any stay of requisition proceedings, and while appeal of habeas corpus proceeding was pending, District Marshal delivered petitioner to Pennsylvania detective, detective was protected by his warrant and executive order of judge from liability to petitioner for false imprisonment when he received him and returned him to Pennsylvania. Robinson Jr. v. Harris, District Attorney (1955, 135 F. Supp. 239).

8. Finding of trial judge

If evidence is conflicting as to presence of defendant in demanding state, the finding of the trial judge will not be disturbed on appeal. Jackson v. Snyder (1924, 293 F. 842, 54 App. D.C. 23).

9. Fugitive from justice

Under U.S. Code, title 18, § 3182, implementing U.S. Const. Art. 4, § 2, concerning interstate extradition, the governor of the asylum state has for decision the legal question whether the demanded person has been substantially charged with a crime, and the factual question whether he is a fugitive from justice. Bruzaud v. Matthews (1953, 207 F. 2d 25, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 47).

If petitioner offers proof showing with precision that he left the demanding state before the commission of the alleged crime "it would then devolve upon the person detaining him 'to show that he was a fugitive from justice by producing evidence that he was in the state at the time charged in the indictment, or to prove that said date had been erroneously charged and could be carried back to the necessary time." Levy v. Splain (1920, 267 F. 333, 50 App. D.C. 31).

"To be a fugitive from justice, in the sense of the act of Congress regulating the subject under consideration, it is not necessary that the party charged should have left the state in which the crime is alleged to have been committed, after an indictment found, or for the purpose of avoiding a prosecution anticipated or begun, but simply that, having within a State committed that which by its laws constitutes a crime, when he is sought to be subjected to its criminal process to answer for his offense he has left its jurisdiction and is found within the territory of another." DePoilly v. Palmer (28 App. D.C. 324).

10. Habeas corpus

Where order for extradition of alleged convict from District of Columbia was properly entered, even if, at time of hearing on habeas corpus petition, which had been filed promptly by convict after extradition order had been entered, convict was psychotic and could not assist counsel, convict was not entitled to habeas corpus, and extradition would not be delayed until restoration of convict to competency. Lathan v. Reid (1960, 280 F. 2d 66, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 58, certiorari denied 81 S. Ct. 107, 364 U.S. 865, 5 L. Ed. 2d 86).

In habeas corpus proceeding brought by relator held for extradition, hearing court will not consider guilt or innocence of accused, will not try any issues in the criminal case, will not construe any statutes of requisitioning state and will not inquire into validity of the indictment. Brown Sr., v. Ward, U.S. Marshal, etc. (1960, 275 F. 2d 884, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 220).

On habeas corpus, where there is no claim that the extradition papers are not regular on their face, there is but one question open for investigation, namely, whether petitioner was in demanding state at the time the crime charged was committed. Levy v. Splain (1920, 267 F. 333, 50 App. D.C. 31). See, also, Watts v. Splain (1922, 277 F. 335, 51 App. D.C. 129).

When indictment charged conspiracy on a certain day without a continuando, the accused in extradition proceeding should be discharged on habeas corpus when he proved he was not in the state when the offense was charged to have been committed. Levy v. Splain (1920, 267 F. 333, 50 App. D.C. 31).

On habeas corpus review in court of asylum state of an extradition order of governor, the inquiry of the court is limited to the two questions which were before governor, namely, whether demanded person has been substantially charged with crime, and factual question whether he is a fugitive from justice. Bruzaud v. Matthews (1953, 207 F. 2d 25, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 47).

Where indictment involved in extradition proceeding charged commission of crime within Virginia, this section permitting extradition from the district without showing of fugitivity of person charged with committing, outside the demanding state, an act which intentionally resulted in a crime in the demanding State was not applicable. In re Gibson (1956, 147 F. Supp. 591).

Where extradition is sought for commission of crime within demanding state, it is jurisdictional that person sought to be extradited was in demanding state at time the alleged offense was committed, and, in absence of allegation as to date of offense in the indictment or papers accompanying request for requisition or of testimony as to such date at the requisition or habeas corpus proceeding, there is no prima facie case of fugitivity made by the warrant itself, and the usual presumption of fugitivity cannot arise. Id.

11. Indictment

U.S. Code, title 18, § 3182, does not permit a requisition to be based upon a warrant of arrest, but requires demanding governor to produce copy of an indictment of copy of an accusatory affidavit, and when an indictment had been returned and copy of it attached to requisition, no purpose was served by also attaching a copy of an earlier affidavit made by complaining witness, but affidavit was mere surplusage. Bruzaud v. Matthews (1953, 207 F. 2d 25, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 47).

"It is only in cases when it is apparent that the indictment does not charge an offense at all, that another court will pass on it." Wheeler v. Palmer (42 App. D. C. 395).

Indictment need only show that accused was substantially charged with a crime under the law of the demanding state. The legal sufficiency of the indictment as a pleading must be tested in the courts of the demanding state. Webster v. Splain (45 App. D.C. 567). See, also, Wheeler v. Palmer (42 App. D.C. 395); Farr v. Palmer (24 App. D.C. 234); DePoilly v. Palmer (28 App. D.C. 324); Goodale v. Splain (42 App. D.C. 235).

Formal defects in indictment will not prevent removal of petitioners to another district for trial but "if indictment were a mere information, or upon inspection, set forth no crime against United States, or a wholly different crime from that alleged as the basis for proceedings, or if such crime be charged to have been committed in another district from that to which the extradition is sought, the commissioner could not properly consider it as ground for removal." Whitaker v. Hitt (1923, 285 F. 797, 52 App. D.C. 149, 27 A.L.R. 951).

12. Mental competency

In hearing to determine whether to extradite from District of Columbia one who had allegedly escaped from custody in North Carolina, evidence supported finding that alleged fugitive was mentally competent for purposes of the hearing. Lathan v. Reid (1960, 280 F. 2d 66, 103 U.S. App. D.C. 58, certiorari denied 81 S. Ct. 107, 364 U.S. 865, 5 L. Ed. 2d 86).

Where alleged fugitive was competent for purposes of hearing to determine whether to extradite him from District of Columbia, and the government's evidence as to identity, fugitivity, and charge of criminality was clear and complete, extradition order was valid. Id.

13. Sheriff's application

It is immaterial when sheriff used the wrong gender of prisoner in application to the governor for a requisition on the authorities of the District of Columbia. John v. Splain (1921, 269 F. 717, 50 App. D.C. 201).

§ 23-402. When associate judge may act.

Any associate judge of said court shall have like power, in case of the illness, absence, or other disability of the chief judge, or when any such application shall be certified to him by the chief judge. in the bonding business in any such court until he shall by order of the court be authorized to do so. Such courts, in making such rules and regulations, and in granting authority to persons to engage in the bonding business, shall take into consideration both the financial responsibility and the moral qualities of the person so applying, and no person shall be permitted to engage, either as principal or agent, in the business of becoming surety upon bonds for compensation in criminal cases, who has ever been convicted of any offense involving moral turpitude, or who is not known to be a person of good moral character. NOTES TO DECISIONS

Evidence 1
Grounds for renewal of license 2
Nature of license 3
Revocation of license 4

1. Evidence

Evidence was insufficient to sustain finding that bondsman was guilty of infraction of court rule providing that any bondsman who procures or assists in procuring or attempts to procure retention or employment of any attorney to represent any person charged with offense cognizable in Municipal Court for the District of Columbia, or solicits or receives or enters into any agreement to receive any fee, commission money, or property or things of value for procuring or assisting or attempting to procure retention or employment of any attorney to represent any person charged with offense cognizable in Municipal Court, shall be suspended. Matter of Leon B. Greene (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 130 A. 2d 593).

2. Grounds for renewal of license

Order of District Court denying application of a professional bondsman for renewal of his license to engage in bonding business on ground that applicant lacked qualifications for a bondsman was set aside. In re Carter (1951, 192 F. 2d 15, 89 U.S. App. D.C. 310, certiorari denied 72 S. Ct. 89, 342 U.S. 862, 96 L. Ed. 648, rehearing denied 72 S. Ct. 173, 342 U.S. 889, 96 L. Ed. 667).

3. Nature of license

License to engage in bonding business, once granted, becomes a right, which ought not to be taken away on the strength of vague, indefinite, and uncorroborated testimony. Matter of Leon B. Greene (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 130 A. 2d 593).

4. Revocation of license

When an authorization to engage in the bonding business has been approved by the district court and is outstanding, it can be revoked, prior to the expiration of the term, only upon a proceeding which contains the elements of due process of law, i. e., a hearing and revelation of all matter upon which a decision is to be based. In re Carter (1949, 177 F. 2d 75, 85 U.S. App. D.C. 229, certiorari denied 70 S. Ct. 250, 338 U.S. 900, 94 L. Ed. 554).

It shall be unlawful for any police officer or other public official, in advance of any raid by police or other peace officers or public officials or the execution of any search warrant or warrant of arrest, to give or furnish, either directly or indirectly, any information concerning such proposed raid or arrest to any person engaged in any manner in the bonding business, or to any attorney at law: Provided, however, That it shall not be unlawful for any police or other peace officer, in conducting any raid or in executing any search warrant or warrant of arrest, to communicate to any attorney at law or person engaged in the bonding business, any fact necessary to enable such officer to obtain from such attorney at law or person engaged in the bonding business information necessary to enable such officer to carry out said raid or execute such process. (Mar. 3, 1933, 47 Stat. 1485, ch. 206, § 9.)

§ 23-610. Designation of official to take bail or collateral when court is not in session.

The judges of the Municipal Court for the District of Columbia shall have the authority to appoint some official of the Metropolitan police force of the District of Columbia to act as a clerk of the municipal court with authority to take bail or collateral from persons charged with offenses triable in the municipal court in criminal cases in the District of Columbia at all times when the municipal court is not open and its clerks accessible. The official so appointed shall have the same authority at said times with reference to taking bonds or collateral as the clerk of the municipal court had on March 3, 1933; shall receive no compensation for said services other than his regular salary; shall be subject to the orders and rules of the municipal court in discharge of his said duties, and may be removed as such clerk at any time by the judges of the municipal court. The United States District Court for the District of Columbia and the Juvenile Court of the District of Columbia each shall have power by order to authorize the official, appointed by the municipal court, to take bond of persons arrested upon writs and processes from those courts in criminal cases between four o'clock postmeridian and nine o'clock antemeridian and upon Sundays and holidays, and each of such courts shall have power at any time by order to revoke such authority granted by it. (Mar. 3, 1933, 47 Stat. 1485, ch. 206, § 10; June 25, 1936, 49 Stat. 1921, ch. 804; Apr. 1, 1942, 56 Stat. 190, ch. 207, § 1; June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 991, ch. 646, § 32(b); May 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 107, ch. 139, § 127.)

CHANGE OF NAME

Any person violating any provision of this chapter other than in the commission of perjury shall be punished by a fine of not less than $50 nor more than $100, or by imprisonment of not less than ten or more than sixty days in jail, or both, where no other penalty is provided by this chapter; and if the person so convicted be a police officer or other public official, he shall upon recommendation of the trial judge also be forthwith dismissed from office; if a bondsman, or the agent, clerk, or representative of a bondsman, he shall be disqualified from thereafter engaging in any manner in the bonding business for such a period of time as the trial judge shall order; and, if an attorney at law, shall be subject to suspension or disbarment as attorney at law. (Mar. 3, 1933, 47 Stat. 1485, ch. 206, § 11.)

It shall be the duty of the municipal court, juvenile court, and of the criminal divisions of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia to see that this chapter is enforced, and upon the impaneling of each grand jury in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia it shall be the duty of the judge impaneling said jury to give it in charge to the jury to investigate the manner in which this chapter is enforced and all violations thereof. (Mar. 3, 1933, 47 Stat. 1485, ch. 206, § 12; June 25, 1936, 49 Stat. 1921, ch. 804; Apr. 1, 1942, 56 Stat. 190, ch. 207, § 1; June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 991, ch. 646, § 32(b); May 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 107, ch. 139, § 127.)

Chapter 7.—DEATH PENALTY

Sec.

- 23-701. Capital punishment—How inflicted.
- 23-702. Commissioners to provide death chamber, appoint executioner and assistants, and fix fees.
- 23-703. Sentences to be in writing and certified copy furnished superintendent of District jail.
- 23-704. Who may be present at executions—Fact of execution to be certified to clerk of court.
- 23-705. Who may not be present at executions.
- 23-706. Place of execution.

The mode of capital punishment shall be by the process commonly known as electrocution. The punishment of death shall be inflicted by causing to pass through the body of the convict a current of electricity of sufficient intensity to cause death, and the application of such current shall be continued until such convict is dead. (Jan. 30, 1925, 43 Stat. 798, ch. 115, § 1.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

1. Authority to execute capital punishment

Regardless of the legislation under which the appeal was brought, Congress had unmistakably invested the respondent, the superintendent of the jail, with authority within the District to carry into effect the death sentence in capital cases. Price v. Moyer (1923, 288 F. 269, 53 App. D.C. 63).

The commissioners of the District of Columbia are authorized and required to provide a death chamber and necessary apparatus for inflicting the death penalty by electrocution, to designate an executioner and necessary assistants, not exceeding three in number, and to fix the fees thereof for services. (Jan. 30, 1925, 43 Stat. 799, ch. 115, § 2.)

Place of execution, see § 23-706.

Upon the conviction of any person in the District of Columbia of a crime the punishment of which is death, it shall be the duty of the presiding judge to sentence such convicted person to death according to the terms of sections 23-701 to 23-704, and to make such sentence in writing, which shall be filed with the papers in the case against such convicted person, and a certified copy thereof shall be transmitted, by the clerk of the court in which such sentence is pronounced, to the superintendent of the District jail, not less than ten days prior to the time fixed in the sentence of the court for the execution of the same. (Jan. 30, 1925, 43 Stat. 799, ch. 115, § 3.)

CROSS REFERENCE

Time of execution, see § 23-114.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

1. Construction

This section must be read in connection with § 23-114 and with their legislative history. When this is done, it is clear that this section is intended not for the benefit of defendants upon whom death sentences are to be imposed, but as an aid to the prison authorities charged with execution of such sentences. Wheeler v. Reid (1949, 175 F. 2d 829, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

At the execution of the death penalty as herein prescribed there shall be present the following persons, and no more, to wit:

The executioner and his assistant; the physician of the prison and one other physician if the condemned person so desires; the condemned person's counsel and relatives, not exceeding three, if they so desire; the prison chaplain and such other ministers of the Gospel, not exceeding two, as may attend by desire of the condemned; the superintendent of the prison, or, in the event of his disability, a deputy designated by him; and not fewer than three nor more than five respectable citizens whom the superintendent of the prison shall designate, and, if necessary to insure their attendance, shall subpoena to be present. The fact of execution shall be certified by the prison physician and the executioner to the clerk of the court in which sentence was pronounced, which certificate shall be filed by the clerk with the papers in the case. (Jan. 30, 1925, 43 Stat. 799, ch. 115, § 4.)

No person whatever under the age of twenty-one years, shall be allowed to witness any such execution. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1379, ch. 854, § 1203.)

§ 23-706. Place of execution.

Persons adjudged to suffer death shall be executed within the walls of the jail of the District, or within the yard or inclosure thereof, and not elsewhere. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1379, ch. 854, § 1200.)

As used in this chapter—

(a) The term "witness" includes a person whose testimony is desired in any proceeding or investigation by a grand jury or in a criminal action, prosecution, or proceeding.

(b) The word "State" includes any Territory of the United States and the District of Columbia.

(c) The word "summons" includes a subpoena, order, or other notice requiring the appearance of a witness. (Mar. 5, 1952, 66 Stat. 15, ch. 82, § 2.)

SHORT TITLE

Section 1 of act Mar. 5, 1952, provided: "This Act [this chapter] may be cited as the 'District of Columbia Uniform Act to Secure the Attendance of Witnesses From Without a State in Criminal Proceedings.'"

SEPARABILITY OF PROVISIONS

Section 6 of act Mar. 5, 1952, provided: "If any provision of this Act [this chapter] or the application thereof to any person or circumstances is held invalid, such invalidity shall not apply to other provisions of this Act."

§ 23-802. Hearing on recall of out-of-state witnesses by State Courts—Determination—Travel allowance—Penalty.

(a) If a judge of a court of record in any State which by its laws has made provision for commanding persons within that State to attend and testify in the District of Columbia certifies under the seal of such court (1) that there is a criminal prosecution pending in such court, or that a grand jury investigation has commenced or is about to commence, (2) that a person being within the District of Columbia is a material witness in such prosecution, or grand jury investigation, and (3) that his presence will be required for a specified number of days, upon presentation of such certificate to any judge of the municipal court for the District of Columbia, such judge shall fix a time and place for a hearing, and shall make an order directing the witness to appear at a time and place certain for the hearing.

(b) If at such hearing the judge determines that the witness is material and necessary, that it will not cause undue hardship to the witness to be compelled to attend and testify in the prosecution or a grand jury investigation in the other State, and that the laws of the State in which the prosecution is pending, or grand jury investigation has commenced or is about to commence and of any other State through which the witness may be required to pass by ordinary course of travel, will give to him protection from arrest and the service of civil and criminal process, he shall issue a summons, with a copy of the certificate attached, directing the witness to attend and testify in the court where the prosecution is pending, or where a grand jury investigation has commenced or is about to commence at a time and place specified in the summons. In any such hearing the certificate shall be prima facie evidence of all the facts stated therein.

(c) If said certificate recommends that the witness be taken into immediate custody and delivered to an officer of the requesting State to assure his attendance in the requesting State, such judge may, in lieu of notification of the hearing, direct that such witness be forthwith brought before him for said hearing; and the judge at the hearing being satisfied of the desirability of such custody and delivery, for which determination the certificate shall be prima facie proof of such desirability may, in lieu of issuing subpoena or summons, order that said witness be forthwith taken into custody and delivered to an officer of the requesting State.

(d) If the witness, who is summoned as above provided, after being paid or tendered by some properly authorized person the sum of 10 cents a mile for each mile by the ordinary traveled route to and from the court where the prosecution is pending and $5 for each day that he is required to travel and attend as a witness, fails without good cause to attend and testify as directed in the summons, he shall be punished in the manner provided for the punishment of any witness who disobeys a summons issued from the municipal court for the District of Columbia. (Mar. 5, 1952, 66 Stat. 15, ch. 82, § 3.)

§ 23-803. Certificate providing for attendance of witnesses at criminal prosecutions in the District of Columbia—Travel allowance—Penalty.

(a) If a person in any State, which by its laws has made provision for commanding persons within its borders to attend and testify in criminal prosecutions, or grand jury investigations commenced or about to commence, in the District of Columbia, is a material witness in a prosecution pending in a court of record in the District of Columbia, or in a grand jury investigation which has commenced or is about to commence, a judge of such court may issue a certificate under seal of the court stating these facts and specifying the number of days the witness will be required. Said certificate may include a recommendation that the witness be taken into immediate custody and delivered to an officer of the United States or the District of Columbia to assure his attendance in the District of Columbia. This certificate shall be presented to a judge of a court of record in the county in which the witness is found.

(b) If the witness is summoned to attend and testify in the District of Columbia he shall be tendered the sum of 10 cents a mile for each mile by the ordinary traveled route to and from the court where the prosecution is pending or where the grand jury investigation has commenced or is about to commence, and $5 for each day that he is required to travel and attend as a witness. A witness who has appeared in accordance with the provisions of the summons shall not be required to remain within the District of Columbia a longer period of time than the period mentioned in the certificate, unless otherwise ordered by the court. If such witness, after coming into the District of Columbia, fails without good cause to attend and testify as directed in the summons, he may be punished in the manner provided for the punishment of any other witness who disobeys a summons issued from the court in the District of Columbia where the prosecution has been instituted or the grand jury investigation has commenced or is about to commence. (Mar. 5, 1952, 66 Stat. 15, ch. 82, § 4.)

(a) If a person comes into the District of Columbia in obedience to a summons directing him to attend and testify in the District of Columbia he shall not while in the District of Columbia pursuant to such summons be subject to arrest or the service of process, civil or criminal, in connection with matters which arose before his entrance into the District of Columbia under the summons.

(b) If a person passes through the District of Columbia while going to another State in obedience to a summons to attend and testify in that State or while returning therefrom, he shall not while so passing through the District of Columbia be subject to arrest or the service of process, civil or criminal, in connection with matters which arose before his entrance into the District of Columbia under the summons. (Mar. 5, 1952, 66 Stat. 16, ch. 82 § 5.)

All such probation officers and assistants shall be appointed for a term of two years, with the exception of one assistant probation officer and one stenographer and typist, who shall be appointed for one year only, and may be removed by the respective courts appointing them. NOTES TO DECISIONS

Federal Probation Law 1
Sentence suspended indefinitely 2
Suspension of sentence 3

1. Federal probation law

The Federal Probation Law, 18 U.S. Code former § 724 [now U.S. Code, title 18, § 3651], does not apply to the District of Columbia. Cooper v. U.S. (D.C. Mun. App. 1946, 48 A. 2d 771).

2. Sentence suspended indefinitely

When Federal District Court exceeded its power and ordered that sentence be suspended indefinitely during good behavior, mandamus was the proper remedy. Ex parte United States (1917, 37 S. Ct. 72, 242 U.S. 27, 61 L. Ed. 129, L.R.A. 1917E, 1178, Ann. Cas. 1917B, 355).

3. Suspension of sentence

Where defendant was convicted for violation of a traffic regulation, and execution of sentence was suspended, such suspension must be vacated because such power is derived from the Federal Probation Act, U.S. Code, title 18, § 3651. Though under the §§ 24-101 to 24-105 the court is authorized to suspend execution, clearly the suspension in this case was not and did not purport to be exercised under the authority of the probation law and was beyond the power of the court. Ziegler v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1950, 71 A. 2d 618).

§ 24-102. When probation may be granted—Statement to probationer—Rules and regulations.

The United States District Court for the District of Columbia shall have power in any case, except those involving treason, homicide, rape, arson, kidnaping, or a second conviction of a felony, after conviction or after a plea of guilty of a felony or misdemeanor and after the imposition of a sentence thereon but before commitment, and the said Municipal Court for the District of Columbia shall have like power, after a conviction or a plea of guilty in any case of misdemeanor, to place the defendant upon probation, provided that it shall appear to the satisfaction of the court that the ends of justice and the best interests of the public as well as of the defendant would be subserved thereby, and may suspend the imposition or execution of the sentence, as the case may be, for such time and upon such terms as it may deem best and place the defendant in charge of a probation officer. The probationer shall be provided by the clerk of the court with a written statement of the terms and conditions of his probation at the time when he is placed thereon. He shall observe the rules prescribed for his conduct by the court and report to the probation officer as directed. No person shall be put on probation except with his or her consent. (June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 864, ch. 433, § 2; June 25, 1936, 49 Stat. 1921, ch. 804; Apr. 1, 1942, 56 Stat. 190, ch. 207, § 1; June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 991, ch. 646, § 32(b); May 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 107, ch. 139, § 127.)

PARTIAL REPEAL

Act June 20, 1958, 72 Stat. 216, Pub. L. 85-463, § 2, provides in part that this section is repealed insofar as it applies to the United States District Court for the District of Columbia.

CHANGE OF NAME

Act June 25, 1936, substituted "District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia" for "Supreme Court of the District of Columbia."

CONSOLIDATION OF POLICE COURT AND MUNICIPAL COURT

"Municipal Court for the District of Columbia" was substituted for "police court" to conform to act Apr. 1, 1942, which consolidated the Police Court and the Municipal Court. See section 11-751.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Appeal after probation 1
Power of Municipal Court 2
Reduction of sentence 3
Restitution 4
Time for probation 5

1. Appeal after probation

A defendant, who has been convicted and placed on probation, being subject to surveillance and discipline and terms and conditions imposed on him, retains his right of appeal, whether probation follows actual imposition of sentence or suspension of imposition of sentence. Blohm v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1955, 113 A. 2d 111).

2. Power of municipal court

The Municipal Court of the District of Columbia may in its discretion order restitution or reparation as a condition of probation. Basile v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1944, 38 A. 2d 620).

3. Reduction of sentence

Where order of probation was void because entered after defendant had been committed, release of defendant under the probation order was premature and it was duty of court to cause him to be recommitted, and the void probation order did not amount to an unconditional reduction of sentence. Peden v. Fleming (1946, 153 F. 2d 800, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 2).

The effect of a probation order is not to reduce sentence to time already served, but, while on probation, prisoner continues to be, in a sense, in custodia legis and the sentence is, through grace of this section, merely in a state of suspended animation, if probation has been properly granted. Id.

4. Restitution

Restitution was a proper probationary condition, notwithstanding contention that it amounted to use of criminal process to collect civil debt. Freeman v. United States (1958, 254 F. 2d 352, 103 U.S. App. D.C. 15).

Trust funds coming into possession of Chief Probation Officer of Federal District Court in criminal cases in which defendant is placed on probation on condition of making restitution or paying maintenance are not subject to garnishment. Manley v. Butterfield (1953, 111 F. Supp. 783).

Where defendant was not placed on probation and money which he informally gave to Probation Officer was not received to make restitution to aggrieved parties for actual damages or loss caused by offenses for which he had been convicted and court who sentenced defendant made no order in respect to restitution, money was subject to garnishment. Id.

Conditioning probation on restitution, to be made by paying compensation award, and revoking probation for failure to pay the award, was not improper as imprisoning probationer for debt. Basile v. U. S. (D. C. Mun. App. 1944, 38 A. 2d 620).

Failure of Congress to specifically authorize restitution as a condition of probation in District of Columbia, though specific authority was given under 18 U.S. Code former § 724 et seq. [now U.S. Code, title 18, § 3651], did not negative power of District of Columbia court to impose such a condition. Id.

Where defendant was convicted of failure to provide compensation insurance policy and placed on probation, conditioning the probation on his making restitution to compensation claimant by paying the total award of compensation was proper. Id.

5. Time for probation

Under this section, probation may be granted after appeal to and affirmance by appellate court but before service of sentence has begun. Gaston v. U.S. (1944, 143 F. 2d 10, 79 U.S. App. D.C. 37, certiorari denied 64 S. Ct. 1286, 322 U. S. 764, 88 L. Ed. 1591).

Under this section providing that probation may be granted after imposition of sentence but before commitment, Municipal Court of District of Columbia did not have power to enter a probation order after defendant had been committed. Peden v. Fleming (1946, 153 F. 2d 800, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 2).

§ 24-103. Investigations and reports by probation officers.

The probation officers shall carefully investigate all cases referred to them by the court, and make recommendations to the court to enable it to decide whether the defendant ought to be placed under probation, and shall report to the court, from time to time as may be required by it, touching all cases in their care, to the end that the court may be at all times fully informed of the circumstances and conduct of probationers. (June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 864, ch. 433, § 3.)

Recommending sentence 2

1. Abuse of discretion

Where probationer, against whom judgment of pater-nity had been entered, was committed once for being in arrears in weekly payments for support of child, but was released and was warned of action which the court would take for defaults in the future, and the court waited some 8 months, during which period probationer fell at least 12 payments in arrears, before acting on its warning and committing probationer for 30 days, there was no arbitrary, capricious, or wilful treatment of probationer at hands of court, and court did not abuse its discretion. Stevens v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1956, 127 A. 2d 147).

2. Recommending sentence

Where accused pleaded guilty to maintaining disorderly house and, on plea for probation, trial judge announced, that probation officer had recommended maxi-

imum sentence and, on objection to consideration of recommendation, trial judge, without express ruling thereon, sentenced defendant to the near maximum penalty, sentence was not set aside. Ishkanian v. U. S. (D. C. Mun. App. 1944, 35 A. 2d 176).

A recommendation by a probation officer to trial judge as to sentence to be imposed is not merely unauthorized by this chapter but is an infringement upon court's judicial function, which officer has no right to exercise and judge no right to permit. Id.

§ 24-104. Discharge from or continuance of probation—Modification or revocation of order.

Upon the expiration of the term fixed for such probation, the probation officer shall report that fact to the court, with a statement of the conduct of the probationer while on probation, and the court may thereupon discharge the probationer from further supervision, or may extend the probation, as shall seem advisable. At any time during the probationary term the court may modify the terms and conditions of the order of probation, or may terminate such probation, when in the opinion of the court the ends of justice shall require, and when the probation is so terminated the court shall enter an order discharging the probationer from serving the imposed penalty; or the court may revoke the order of probation and cause the rearrest of the probationer and impose a sentence and require him to serve the sentence or pay the fine originally imposed, or both, as the case may be, and the time of probation shall not be taken into account to diminish the time for which he was originally sentenced. (June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 865, ch. 433, § 4.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

- Abuse of discretion 1
- Extension of probation 2
- Probable cause 3
- Revocation 4
- Rights of probationer 5

1. Abuse of discretion

Where probationer, against whom judgment of paternity had been entered, was committed once for being in arrears in weekly payments for support of child, but was released and was warned of action which the court would take for defaults in the future, and the court waited some 8 months, during which period probationer fell at least 12 payments in arrears, before acting on its warning and committing probationer for 30 days, there was no arbitrary, capricious, or wilful treatment of probationer at hands of court, and court did not abuse its discretion. Stevens v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1956, 127 A. 2d 147).

2. Extension of probation

Where this section under which probation was extended did not require a hearing either at the time of extension or of revocation of probation, and procedure in the statute was complied with, probationer was not entitled to order setting aside revocation of extended probation on ground that extension of probation was entered ex parte. United States v. Freeman (1958, 160 F. Supp. 532, affirmed 254 F. 2d 352, 103 U.S. App. D.C. 15).

The extension of the probation every six months after the return unexecuted of an attachment for violation of terms of probation kept the probation alive and did not violate this section, which does not limit the number or length of extensions of probation. Cooper v. U. S. (D. C. Mun. App. 1946, 48 A. 2d 771).

3. Probable cause

A probationer who had been arrested on another charge was properly arrested by probation officer for violation of terms of probation when she appeared in another court to answer the new charge, since only the execution of the sentence had been suspended and the requirement as to probable cause for the commission of an offense did not apply to her. Cooper v. U. S. (D. C. Mun. App. 1946, 48 A. 2d 771).

4. Revocation

The court had jurisdiction to reconsider defendant's probation and revoke it if the public interest seemed to justify such action. Cooper v. U. S. (D. C. Mun. App. 1946, 48 A. 2d 771).

That the judge who had originally sentenced defendant was no longer in office did not prevent another judge of the same court from revoking the defendant's probation. Id.

5. Rights of probationer

Probationer, against whom judgment of paternity has been entered, does not stand on equal footing with other citizens, and privilege of probation could be revoked by court in any procedural fashion authorized by statute, and, apart from statute, probationer, committed summarily, has no recourse to the Constitution and may not insist on a trial in any strict or formal sense. Stevens v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1956, 127 A. 2d 147).

§ 24-105. Quarters for probation officers—Payment of expenses.

The chief probation officer of each court shall be entitled, for himself and his assistants, to a room in the building occupied by that court, and all necessary stationery and supplies for the transaction of the business of his office, and all the probation officers except volunteer officers shall be entitled to their necessary expenses in performing the duties of their office, under the direction of the court, the amount of the expense for such stationery, supplies, and expenses to be fixed and allowed by the court upon proper vouchers submitted to it by the probation officers, and accounts duly verified by their oath. (June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 865, ch. 433, § 5; Mar. 4, 1919, 40 Stat. 1325, ch. 122.)

Sentence 5

1. Constitutionality

This act does not violate the Fifth Amendment, and is not invalid as a delegation of judicial power to the executive branch of the Government. Sims v. Rives (1936, 84 F. 2d 871, 66 App. D.C. 24, certiorari denied 56 S. Ct. 960, 298 U.S. 682, 80 L. Ed. 1402). See, also, Tomlin v. United States (1936, 84 F. 2d 879, 66 App. D.C. 32).

2. Parole board

Authority of the new board and the system of parole which it was to supervise were confined to the penal institutions in the District of Columbia, and only persons therein confined were to be affected. Aderhold v. Lee (C.C.A. Ga. 1934, 68 F. 2d 824, certiorari denied 54 S. Ct. 718, 292 U.S. 633, 78 L. Ed. 1486).

Board pronouncing final judgment was vested by statute with full jurisdiction to determine the question at issue; at which the prisoner was accorded a fair hearing; to which he made no objection; and in which his only complaint is that he was not brought before the board upon a proper warrant. Jarman v. United States (C.C.A. Va. 1937, 92 F. 2d 309).

3. Purpose

Title 18, U.S. Code former §§ 710, 715—716b [now U.S. Code, title 18, §§ 4161, 4164, 4201, 4203, 4204] and this chapter regarding powers of federal board of parole and District of Columbia Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole indicate congressional intent to provide a uniform administration of federal and District laws with respect to the control of released prisoners. Gould v. Green (1944, 141 F. 2d 533, 78 U.S. App. D.C. 363).

4. Removal of prisoner from district

Prisoner sentenced after creation of special parole board for the District could, after federal board was given equal authority over those in District, be removed to penitentiary outside of the District. MacAboy v. Klecka (D.C. Md. 1938, 22 F. Supp. 960).

5. Sentence

Sentence imposed under this act for violation of Liquor Taxing Act of 1934, was valid. Sims v. Rives (1936, 84 F. 2d 871, 66 App. D.C. 24, certiorari denied 56 S. Ct. 960, 298 U.S. 682, 80 L. Ed. 1402).

A Board of Parole for the penal and correctional institutions of the District of Columbia is hereby created to consist of three members appointed by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, one of whom shall serve on a full-time basis and be designated by the Commissioners as Parole Executive. The other two members shall serve without compensation, one of whom shall be elected Chairman of the said Board. The Board of Parole shall select its own Chairman and shall have power to establish rules and regulations for its procedure. (July 17, 1947, 61 Stat. 378, ch. 263, § 1.)

TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS

Reorganization Order No. 33 dated May 28, 1953, and effective June 21, 1953, established a Board of Parole under the direction and control of a Commissioner and consisting of three members for the purpose of developing and administering an effective parole system. The new Board was authorized to exercise all powers of the previously existing Board of Parole which the order abolished. All positions under the previously existing Board of Parole were transferred to the new Board including the duties, powers, and authorities of all officers and employees. This order was issued pursuant to Reorganization Plan No. 5 of 1952. The order and plan are set out in the Appendix to title 1, Administration.

CROSS REFERENCE

Services of a psychiatrist and a psychologist available to the Board of Parole, see § 24-106.

§ 24-201b. Transfer of powers of Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole—Duties of parole executive—Cooperation with Board.

Upon appointment of the members of the Board of Parole, the powers of the Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole created by section 24-201, not specifically repealed, shall be transferred to and vested in the Board of Parole. The officers and employees of the Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole, except the members thereof, together with all official records, furniture and supplies, and all unexpended balances of any appropriations, shall be transferred to the Board of Parole. It shall be the duty of the parole executive to prepare for the consideration of the Board of Parole all applications of prisoners for parole in such form and at such times and together with such information and records as the Board of Parole may require, to perform such administrative duties as the Board may prescribe, and to supervise prisoners on parole in accordance with the terms and conditions prescribed by the Board. The Department of Corrections, and all other agencies and officials of the District shall cooperate with the Board and shall furnish the Board with such information, files, and records as it may deem necessary in the performance of its duties: Provided, That confidential information and records shall not be required to be produced. (July 17, 1947, 61 Stat. 378, ch. 263, § 2.)

§ 24-201c. Applications for reduction of minimum sentence—Jurisdiction of court—Limits on reduction for certain crimes.

When by reason of his training and response to the rehabilitation program of the Department of Corrections it appears to the Board that there is a reasonable probability that a prisoner will live and remain at liberty without violating the law, and that his immediate release is not incompatible with the welfare of society, but he has not served his minimum sentence, the Board in its discretion may apply to the court imposing sentence for a reduction of his minimum sentence. The court shall have jurisdiction to act upon the application at any time prior to the expiration of the minimum sentence and no hearing shall be required. If a prisoner is serving a sentence for a crime for which a minimum sentence is prescribed by section 24-203(b) his minimum sentence shall not be reduced under this section below the minimum sentence so prescribed. (July 17, 1947, 61 Stat. 379, ch. 263, § 4; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 92, ch. 159, § 201 (b).)

AMENDMENT

1953—Act June 29, 1953, added provisions forbidding reduction of a minimum sentence when said sentence was prescribed by section 24-203(b).

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1953 AMENDMENT

Section 201(c) of act June 29, 1953, provided that "The amendments made by this section [to this section and section 24-203] shall not apply with respect to any sentence imposed for a crime committed before the date of enactment of this Act [June 29, 1953]."

Section, acts July 15, 1932, 47 Stat. 697, ch. 492, § 2; June 6, 1940, 54 Stat. 242, ch. 254, § 1, related to employees of Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole, and is now covered by section 24-201b.

(a) Except as provided in subsections (b) and (c), in imposing sentence on a person convicted in the District of Columbia of a felony, the justice or judge of the court imposing such sentence shall sentence the person for a maximum period not exceeding the maximum fixed by law, and for a minimum period not exceeding one-third of the maximum sentence imposed, and any person so convicted and sentenced may be released on parole as herein provided at any time after having served the minimum sentence. Where the maximum sentence imposed is life imprisonment, a minimum sentence shall be imposed which shall not exceed fifteen years' imprisonment. Nothing in sections 22-2601, 24-201, 24-202 to 24-209 and 24-425 shall abrogate the power of the justice or judge to sentence the convicted prisoner to the death penalty as on June 6, 1940 or thereafter may be provided by law.

(b) The minimum sentence imposed under this section on a person convicted of an assault with intent to commit rape in violation of section 22-501, or of armed robbery in violation of section 22-3202 shall be not less than two years if the violation occurs after the person has been convicted in the District of Columbia or elsewhere of a crime of violence as defined in section 22-3201, providing for the control of dangerous weapons in the District of Columbia. The minimum sentence imposed under this section on a person convicted of rape in violation of section 22-2801, shall not be less than seven years if the violation occurs after the person has been convicted in the District of Columbia or elsewhere of a crime of violence, as so defined. The maximum sentence in each case to which this subsection applies shall not be less than three times the minimum sentence imposed, and shall not be more than the maximum fixed by law.

(c) For a person convicted of—

(1) a violation of section 22-505 (relating to assault with a dangerous weapon on a police officer) occurring after the person has been convicted of a violation of that section or of a felony, either in the District of Columbia or in another jurisdiction;

(2) a violation of section 22-3203, providing for the control of dangerous weapons in the District (relating to illegal possession of a pistol), occurring after the person has been convicted of violating that section; or

(3) a violation of section 22-3601 (relating to possession of implements of crime) occurring after the person has been convicted in the District of Columbia of a violation of that section or of a felony, either in the District of Columbia or in another jurisdiction, the minimum sentence imposed under this section shall not be less than one year, and the maximum sentence shall not be less than three times the minimum sentence imposed nor more than the maximum fixed by law. (July 15, 1932, 47 Stat. 697, ch. 492, § 3; June 6, 1940, 54 Stat. 246, ch. 254, § 2; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 91, ch. 159, § 201a.)

"(b) Where a justice or judge of the District Court of the United States has imposed or shall impose a sentence for a definite term of imprisonment on a prisoner convicted of a felony committed before this amendatory act takes effect, such prisoner shall be eligible to parole under the provisions of said act approved July 15, 1932, as amended, after having served one-third of the sentence imposed."

Sentences 8

1. Application of statute

This act is applicable to persons convicted in the District of Columbia of offenses defined in the general laws of the United States. Sims v. Rives (1936, 84 F. 2d 871, 66 App. D.C. 24, certiorari denied 56 S. Ct. 960, 298 U.S. 682, 80 L. Ed. 1402).

2. Constitutionality

The Indeterminate Sentence Act applies to convictions in the District for offenses defined in the general laws of the United States, and thus applied is constitutionally valid. Farnsworth v. Zerbst (C.C.A. Ga., 1938, 98 F. 2d 541).

3. Contempt

This section is inapplicable to a criminal contempt conviction not only because it ought not and is not intended to apply, but also because it cannot be made applicable in view of fact that trial judge has nonarbitrary discretion in matter of sentence. Warring v. Huff (1941, 122 F. 2d 641, 74 App. D.C. 302, certiorari denied 62 S. Ct. 183, 314 U. S. 678, 86 L. Ed. 543).

4. Crime committed before passage of act

Indeterminate Sentence Act was not applicable where crime of grand larceny was committed before passage of that act. De Benque v. United States (1936, 85 F. 2d 202, 66 App. D.C. 36, 106 A.L.R. 839, certiorari denied 56 S. Ct. 960, 298 U.S. 681, 80 L. Ed. 1402, rehearing denied 57 S. Ct. 6, 299 U.S. 620, 81 L. Ed. 457).

Where defendants were found guilty in 1939 of having committed robbery in District of Columbia on June 10, 1932, sentence to prison of 3 to 15 years was not void on theory that it should be for not less than 6 months nor more than 15 years. U.S. v. Neufeld (1945, 62 F. Supp. 600).

Claim of defendants that much had come to light after their conviction which would show that defendants were innocent could not be considered in passing on motion to set aside sentences as void because sentences allegedly did not comply with law in effect when offenses were committed. Id.

5. Jurisdiction upon conditional release

Where defendant was sentenced in 1936 to 30-year term for second-degree murder and was given conditional release when his accumulated good time and industrial good time allowances and his time already served totaled 30 years, defendant was thereafter under the supervision of the United States Board of Parole until his maximum sentence expired, not counting his good time and industrial time allowances. Johnson v. Ward, U.S. Marshal, etc. (1959, 171 F. Supp. 26).

6. Meaning of indeterminate sentence

An indeterminate sentence is one for the maximum period imposed by the court, subject to termination by the Parole Board at any time after service of the minimum period. Story v. Rives (1938, 97 F. 2d 182, 68 App. D.C. 325, certiorari denied 59 S. Ct. 71, 305 U.S. 595, 83 L. Ed. 377). See, also, U.S. v. Neufeld (1945, 62 F. Supp. 600).

An "indeterminate sentence" differs from a "determinate sentence" only in that the former imposes a minimum term; the good time and industrial time off provisions, however, are geared to the maximum term and the minimum term does not affect the computation. Johnson v. Ward, U.S. Marshal etc. (1959, 171 F. Supp. 26).

7. Second-degree murder

Indeterminate Sentence Act is inapplicable to second-degree murder and the existing statute providing a penalty of imprisonment for life or for not less than 20 years remains in effect. Anderson v. Rives (1936, 85 F. 2d 673, 66 App. D.C. 174).

8. Sentences

Where the first sentences imposed under Indeterminate Sentence law were void, since the said statute was by its own terms inapplicable, the passing of the term did not deprive the court of power to resentence. De Benque v. United States (1936, 85 F. 2d 202, 66 App. D.C. 36, 106 A.L.R. 839, certiorari denied 56 S. Ct. 960, 298 U.S. 681, 80 L. Ed. 1402, rehearing denied 57 S. Ct. 6, 299 U.S. 620, 81 L. Ed. 457).

This provision brings the described sentences, although not indeterminate ones, within the new scheme by treating one-fifth thereof as the equivalent of the minimum in an indeterminate sentence and may include prisoners sentenced before the date of the act if imprisoned in the institutions under the jurisdiction of the board, but it does not extend the board's jurisdiction to prisoners in other institutions nor require their return to the District although convicted there before the act was passed. Aderhold v. Lee (C.C.A. 5, 1934, 68 F. 2d 824).

As maximum sentence on each count was 3 years, and as it did not exceed the maximum of 10 years fixed by law, and when minimum sentence on each of four counts was 2 years, the sentence therefore did not exceed one-fifth of the maximum period fixed by law of 10 years and was not in violation of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole law. United States ex rel. Bracey v. Hill (C.C.A. 3, 1935, 77 F. 2d 970). See, also, Bracey v. Zerbst (C.C.A. 10, 1938, 93 F. 2d 8).

Sentence fixing a maximum of 12 years conformed with the act, as did the minimum period of 3 years, being for a minimum period not exceeding one-fifth of the maximum period fixed by law. McDonald v. Johnston (C.C.A. 9, 1937, 86 F. 2d 329).

A sentence is legal so far as it is within provisions of law and jurisdiction of court, and is void only as to excess when such excess is separable and may be dealt with without disturbing valid portion of sentence. U. S. v. Neufeld (1945, 62 F. Supp. 600).

Whenever it shall appear to the Board of Parole that there is a reasonable probability that a prisoner will live and remain at liberty without violating the law, that his release is not incompatible with the welfare of society, and that he has served the minimum sentence imposed or the prescribed portion of his sentence, as the case may be, the Board may authorize his release on parole upon such terms and conditions as the Board shall from time to time prescribe. While on parole, a prisoner shall remain in the legal custody and under the control of the Attorney General of the United States or his authorized representative until the expiration of the maximum of the term or terms specified in his sentence without regard to good time allowance. (July 15, 1932, 47 Stat. 697, ch. 492, § 4; June 6, 1940, 54 Stat. 242, ch. 254, § 3; July 17, 1947, 61 Stat. 378, ch. 263, § 3.)

AMENDMENTS

1947—Act July 17, 1947, amended section generally.

1940—Act June 6, 1940, inserted "or to such other place as the board may indicate," after "return to his home;" substituted the Attorney General or his representative in place of superintendent of the institution as the party to have control of the paroled prisoner; "without regard to the good-time allowance" for "less such good-time allowance as is, or may hereafter be, provided by law," and "paroled: Provided, however, That the conditions prescribed and the residential limits may be thereafter changed or modified as the Board in its judgment may determine" for "paroled, which limits, however, may be thereafter changed in the discretion of the board."

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Applicability of statute 1
Discretion of board 2
Intent of Congress 3
Jurisdiction upon conditional release 4
Prisoners confined outside district 5
Term of sentence 6

1. Applicability of statute

This section concerning paroles is not applicable to prisoner who is given a conditional release. Johnson v. Ward, U.S. Marshal, etc. (1959, 171 F. Supp. 26).

2. Discretion of board

A prisoner may be released from imprisonment before he has served the maximum period of his sentence, less lawful good-time allowance, only in the discretion of the Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole. De Benque v. United States (1936, 85 F. 2d 202, 66 App. D.C. 36, 106 A.L.R. 839).

The District of Columbia Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole has authority to impose conditions or to exercise supervision over prisoners convicted in the District of Columbia and thereafter released because of good conduct allowance. In re Reed (1947, 158 F. 2d 323, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 310).

3. Intent of Congress

Congress intended to provide uniform administration of Federal and District of Columbia law with respect to control of released prisoners. Johnson v. Ward, U.S. Marshal (1960, 278 F. 2d 245, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 365).

4. Jurisdiction upon conditional release

Where defendant was sentenced in 1936 to 30-year term for second-degree murder and was given conditional release when his accumulated good time and industrial good time allowances and his time already served totaled 30 years, defendant was thereafter under the supervision of the United States Board of Parole until his maximum sentence expired, not counting his good time and industrial time allowances. Johnson v. Ward, U.S. Marshal etc. (1959, 171 F. Supp. 26).

5. Prisoners confined outside district

Same privileges of parole are accorded to prisoners sentenced in the District of Columbia and committed to penal institutions outside of the District as to those sentenced and confined within the District. Bracey v. Hill. (D.C. Pa., 1935, 11 F. Supp. 148).

4. Parties interested

Where federal prisoner was released pursuant to U.S. Code, title 18, § 4164, a prisoner who has served term for which he was sentenced, less deductions allowed for good conduct, shall upon release be treated as if released on parole and be subject to laws relating to parole of federal prisoners until expiration of maximum term specified in sentence, released prisoner was under supervision of parole board until maximum sentence, not counting time off for good behavior, expired, as against contention that because parole law in effect when original criminal acts were committed provided for measurement of parole period by maximum sentence less good time allowance, prisoner could not be subject to conditions of parole law after his release because he had served maximum sentence less good-time allowance. Hicks v. Reid (1952, 194 F. 2d 327, 90 U.S. App. D.C. 109, certiorari denied 73 S. Ct. 51, 344 U.S. 840, 97 L. Ed. 653).

§ 24-205. Violation of parole—Warrant—Arrest—Return to confinement.

If said Board of Parole, or any member thereof, shall have reliable information that a prisoner has violated his parole, said board, or any member thereof, at any time within the term or terms of the prisoner's sentence, may issue a warrant to any officer hereinafter authorized to execute the same for the retaking of such prisoner. Any officer of the District of Columbia penal institutions, any officer of the Metropolitan Police Department of the District of Columbia, or any federal officer authorized to serve criminal process within the United States to whom such warrant shall be delivered is authorized and required to execute such warrant by taking such prisoner and returning or removing him to the penal institution of the District of Columbia from which he was paroled or to such penal or correctional institution as may be designated by the Attorney General of the United States. (July 15, 1932, 47 Stat. 698, ch. 492, § 5; June 6, 1940, 54 Stat. 242, ch. 254, § 4; July 17, 1947, 61 Stat. 378, ch. 263, § 2.)

AMENDMENT

1940—Act June 6, 1940, substituted "him to said penal institution," for "or removing him to the penal institution of the District of Columbia from which he was paroled or to such penal or correctional institution as may be designated by the Attorney General of the United States."

TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS

Board of Parole was substituted for Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole to conform to act July 17, 1947, which transferred the powers of the Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole not specifically repealed, to the Board of Parole. See § 24-201b.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Crime committed while on parole 1
Jail sentence while on probation 2
Jurisdiction 3
Parties interested 4
Return to confinement 5
Unexpired sentence 6

1. Crime committed while on parole

Petition for writ of habeas corpus, on the ground that petitioner's confinement after expiration of his sentence was illegal, was denied where petitioner had committed a crime while on parole, and the judge imposing the second sentence had no power to make it and the unexpired portion of the first sentence run concurrently. Hammer v. Huff (1940, 110 F. 2d 113, 71 App. D.C. 246).

2. Jail sentence while on probation

When probationer was actually serving a jail sentence while on probation with respect to another sentence, even in jail, he was subject to the conditions of the probation and by its terms he was to refrain from violation of law. Burns v. United States (1932, 53 S. Ct. 154, 287 U.S. 216, 77 L. Ed. 266).

3. Jurisdiction

Where petitioner was released from District of Columbia Reformatory on parole, but a warrant was subsequently issued against him for violation of that parole and petitioner was confined at a Federal Penitentiary in Kansas upon conviction of a new and separate offense in Missouri, District of Columbia Board of Parole did not lose its jurisdiction over petitioner to Federal Parole Board and had the right to file a detainer against petitioner. Noll v. Board of Parole for Government of District of Columbia (1951, 191 F. 2d 653, 89 U.S. App. D.C. 206).

4. Parties interested

Defendant who had not been paroled or retaken on warrant was not in a position to challenge the validity of this section under the Fourth Amendment. Sims v. Rives (1936, 84 F. 2d 871, 66 App. D.C. 24, certiorari denied 56 S. Ct. 960, 298 U.S. 682, 80 L. Ed. 1402).

5. Return to confinement

Where petitioner who had been granted parole by Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole for District of Columbia was re-arrested on reliable information for parole violation, was taken to United States Penitentiary outside District, hearing was had before Board of Parole, and certificate of revocation was signed by assistant parole executive of United States Board of Parole and transmitted to warden, certificate of revocation was valid although not issued by Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole for District of Columbia. Stillwell v. Looney (1953, 110 F. Supp. 1, affirmed 207 F. 2d 359).

6. Unexpired sentence

The unexpired portion of a parole violator's original sentence begins to run not when he is in prison by arrest or conviction for a new and separate offense but only when his parole has been revoked and he has been returned to custody of revoking authority. Noll v. Board of Parole for Government of District of Columbia (1951, 191 F. 2d 653, 89 U.S. App. D.C. 206).

Where petitioner was released from District of Columbia Reformatory on parole but a subsequent warrant was issued for violation of that parole, fact that petitioner served time in various places of detention other than in District of Columbia did not fulfill requirement of serving District of Columbia sentence. Id.

When a prisoner has been retaken upon a warrant issued by the Board of Parole, he shall be given an opportunity to appear before the Board, a member thereof, or an examiner designated by the Board. At such hearing he may be represented by counsel. The Board may then, or at any time in its discretion, terminate the parole or modify the terms and conditions thereof. If the order of parole shall be revoked, the prisoner, unless subsequently reparaoled, shall serve the remainder of the sentence originally imposed less any commutation for good conduct which may be earned by him after his return to custody. For the purpose of computing commutation for good conduct, the remainder of the sentence originally imposed shall be considered as a new sentence. The time a prisoner was on parole shall not be taken into account to diminish the time for which he was sentenced.

In the event a prisoner is confined in, or as a parolee is returned to a penal or correctional institution other than a penal or correctional institution of the District of Columbia, the Board of Parole created by section 723a of title 18, U.S. Code, shall have and exercise the same power and authority as the Board of Parole of the District of Columbia had the prisoner been confined in or returned to a penal or correctional institution of the District of Columbia. (July 15, 1932, 47 Stat. 698, ch. 492, § 6; June 6, 1940, 54 Stat. 242, ch. 254, § 5; July 17, 1947, 61 Stat. 379, ch. 263, § 5.)

REFERENCE IN TEXT

Section 723a of title 18, U.S. Code, referred to in the text, was repealed by act June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 862, ch. 645, § 21, and is now covered by section 4201 of title 18, U.S. Code.

AMENDMENTS

1947—Act July 17, 1947, amended section generally, and among other changes, permitted the parole violator, upon recommitment, to earn commutation for good conduct.

1940—Act June 6, 1940, added the provisions relating to the authority of the Board of Parole when a prisoner is removed to an institution designated by the Attorney General.

1. Appearance and hearing

The provision of this section that a paroled prisoner arrested for violation of parole should be given an opportunity to appear before board meant an effective appearance, including presence of counsel, if desired by prisoner, and receipt of testimony if he has testimony to present. Fleming v. Tate (1946, 156 F. 2d 848, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 205).

Participation by counsel in proceedings against parole violator need be no greater than necessary to insure that board is accurately informed from parolee's standpoint before it acts, and permitted presentation of testimony by parolee is governed by same rule. Id.

Prisoner who had been retaken on warrant issued by Board of Parole was entitled to explain before Board his assertion that he had been leading a decent life and was entitled to more than a pro forma proceeding, and he would either be given an opportunity to explain such matters before Board or be discharged. United States ex rel. McCreary v. Kenton (1960, 190 F. Supp. 689).

There is no denial of administrative due process to prisoner who is not entitled to have witnesses summoned and heard or who may not appear with counsel at hearing concerning revocation of parole. Id.

This section providing that a prisoner shall be given an opportunity to "appear" before the Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole of District of Columbia contemplates an effective appearance and not the mere physical presence of prisoner, and implies that he must be given a "hearing" wherein he is entitled to be represented by retained counsel, present evidence, and adduce witnesses. In re Tate (1946, 63 F. Supp. 961).

Under this section providing that a prisoner returned to an institution for alleged violation of his parole shall be given an opportunity to appear before the Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole of District of Columbia, a summary and informal hearing is sufficient. Id.

2. Assignment of counsel

Under this section providing that a prisoner returned to an institution for alleged violation of his parole shall be given an opportunity to appear before the Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole of District of Columbia, right of counsel is statutory and not constitutional, and prisoner would not be entitled to have counsel assigned to represent him. In re Tate (1946, 63 F. Supp. 961).

3. Certificate of revocation

Where petitioner who had been granted parole by Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole for District of Columbia was re-arrested on reliable information for parole violation, was taken to United States Penitentiary outside District, hearing was had before Board of Parole, and certificate of revocation was signed by assistant parole executive of United States Board of Parole and transmitted to warden, certificate of revocation was valid although not issued by Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole for District of Columbia. Stillwell v. Looney (1953, 110 F. Supp. 1, affirmed 207 F. 2d 359).

4. Commutation of sentence

Any right to commutation which defendant may have earned for good conduct at any time prior to recommitment was conditional and was forfeited by violation of parole. Jones v. Clemmer (1947, 163 F. 2d 852, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 288).

The amendment of July 17, 1947, to this section permitting parole violator to earn commutation for good conduct applied to service of remainder of sentences after recommitment, although sentences were originally imposed prior to such amendment. Id.

5. Construction

The amendment of July 17, 1947, to this section so as to permit parole violator upon recommitment to earn commutation for good conduct was remedial and was to be construed liberally. Jones v. Clemmer (1947, 163 F. 2d 852, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 288).

6. Discretion of board

Under this section, parolee should be permitted to present any pertinent matter, and, although board's discretion in continuing or revoking parole is uncontrolled, it cannot act in disregard of facts or refuse to hear argument. Fleming v. Tate (1946, 156 F. 2d 848, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 205).

The granting or revocation of a parole is within discretion of Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole of the District of Columbia. In re Tate (1946, 63 F. Supp. 961).

7. Habeas corpus

A parole violator, who was returned to prison without permitting counsel who had previously represented prisoner to appear in his behalf or permitting his employer to testify, was entitled to release in habeas corpus proceeding. Fleming v. Tate (1946, 156 F. 2d 848, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 205).

On writ of habeas corpus, District Court had no jurisdiction to review on merits a revocation of a parole by the Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole of District of Columbia, and only issue was whether petitioner had been deprived of his legal rights by manner in which revocation hearing was conducted. In re Tate (1946, 63 F. Supp. 961).

Where, at hearing before Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole of District of Columbia to revoke a parole, parolee's counsel was not permitted to appear, parolee's employer was not permitted to testify, and parole was revoked, parolee's right under this section to appear before the board was violated and parolee would be discharged on habeas corpus without prejudice to subsequent proceedings for revocation of his parole in conformity with this section. Id.

8. Jurisdiction

Where petitioner was released from District of Columbia Reformatory on parole, but a warrant was subsequently issued against him for violation of that parole and petitioner was confined at a Federal Penitentiary in Kansas upon conviction of a new and separate offense in Missouri, District of Columbia Board of Parole did not lose its jurisdiction over petitioner to Federal Parole Board and had the right to file a detainer against petitioner. Noll v. Board of Parole for Government of District of Columbia (1951, 191 F. 2d 653, 89 U.S. App. D.C. 206).

9. Revocation of parole

Failure of Board of Parole to give immediate hearing and revoke parole when paroled prisoner was returned to reformatory pursuant to sentences for crimes committed while on parole did not permit parole to continue running in satisfaction of original sentences after prisoner's reentry of reformatory. Washington v. Clemmer (1948, 169 F. 2d 300, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 268).

10. Right to counsel

In proceeding for writ of habeas corpus by petitioner who had been arrested for violation of conditional release and imprisoned, where there was no showing that petitioner was advised of his right to have his counsel present at hearing before parole board respecting revocation of conditional release, record failed to disclose that petitioner had made an election not to have his counsel present at hearing. Moore v. Reid et al. (1957, 246 F. 2d 654, 100 U.S. App. D.C. 373).

Where person was arrested and imprisoned for violation of conditional release and brought before the District of Columbia Parole Board for hearing on revocation of conditional release, under circumstances, his failure to have counsel present at hearing was critical and effectively denied him of his statutory right to appear before board. Id.

Under this section giving a paroled prisoner an opportunity to appear before Parole Board at hearing on revocation of his parole, appearance includes right to counsel if the prisoner so elects. Id.

11. Rules of evidence

Although parole violator is entitled to present testimony at hearing before board, it is not required that receipt of testimony be governed by strict rules of evidence. Fleming v. Tate (1946, 156 F. 2d 848, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 205).

12. Sentence upon reimprisonment

Section 4164 of title 18, U.S. Code, providing that federal prisoners shall be subject to all provisions of law relating to the parole of United States prisoners, did not require that a District of Columbia prisoner who had his conditional release revoked be recommitted under good conduct deduction provisions of the general federal statutes without regard to this section providing for computation of good conduct deductions for recommitted parolees, and fact that prisoner, as a result of application of this section was required to serve more time than a prisoner convicted under general federal law did not deny prisoner the equal protection or due process of law as guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment. Gilstrap v. Clemmer et al. (C.A. Va. 1960, 284 F. 2d 804).

The provision of this former section that unexpired term of imprisonment of any paroled prisoner shall begin to run from date he is returned to institution does not require that original sentence shall run from date of his imprisonment for new and separate offense, but refers only to reimprisonment on original sentence under order of parole board. Washington v. Clemmer (1948, 169 F. 2d 300, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 268).

13. Service of sentence

The unexpired portion of a parole violator's original sentence begins to run not when he is in prison by arrest or conviction for a new and separate offense but only when his parole has been revoked and he has been returned to custody of revoking authority. Noll v. Board of Parole for Government of District of Columbia (1951, 191 F. 2d 653, 89 U.S. App. D.C. 206).

Where petitioner was released from District of Columbia Reformatory on parole but a subsequent warrant was issued for violation of that parole, fact that petitioner served time in various places of detention other than in District of Columbia did not fulfill requirement of serving District of Columbia sentence. Id.

14. Violation of conditions

District of Columbia Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole had power to impose conditions upon release of prisoner who had served full time of sentence with deductions for good conduct and in event of violation of conditions to recommit him to serve out balance of his term. Gould v. Green (1944, 141 F. 2d 533, 78 U.S. App. D.C. 363).

§ 24-207. Repeal of inconsistent laws—Savings provision.

All acts or parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of sections 22-2601, 24-201, 24-202 to 24-209 and 24-425 are hereby repealed: Provided, however, That for any felony committed before July 15, 1932, the penalty, sentence, or forfeiture provided by law for such felony at the time such felony was committed shall remain in full force and effect and shall be imposed, notwithstanding said sections. (July 15, 1932, 47 Stat. 698, ch. 492, § 7.)

REFERENCES IN TEXT

Sections 24-201 and 24-202, referred to in the text, were repealed by act July 17, 1947, 61 Stat. 379, ch. 263, § 7.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Prisoners confined outside District 1
Purpose 2

1. Prisoners confined outside District

Parole board under Indeterminate Sentence Act had no jurisdiction over prisoners convicted of murder in the District of Columbia, but confined in the United States penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga. Aderhold v. Lee (C.C.A. 5, 1934, 68 F. 2d 824, certiorari denied 54 S. Ct. 718, 292 U.S. 633, 78 L. Ed. 1486).

2. Purpose

This section was intended to repeal those provisions of existing acts requiring the imposition of a definite, as distinguished from an indeterminate, sentence. Ander-son v. Rives (1936, 85 F. 2d 673, 66 App. D.C. 174).

§ 24-208. Power of Board—Prisoners sentenced to more than 180 days—Minimum sentence required to be served.

The power of the Board of Parole shall extend to all prisoners whose sentences exceed one hundred and eighty days regardless of the nature of the offense: Provided, That in the case of a prisoner convicted of an offense other than a felony, including violations of municipal regulations and ordinances and Acts of Congress in the nature of municipal regulations and ordinances, the prisoner may not be paroled until he has served one-third of the sentence imposed, and in the case of two or more sentences for other than a felony, no parole may be granted until after the prisoner has served one-third of the aggregate sentences imposed. (July 15, 1932, 47 Stat. 698, ch. 492, § 9; June 6, 1940, 54 Stat. 242, ch. 254, § 7 (a); July 17, 1947, 61 Stat. 379, ch. 263, § 6.)

AMENDMENTS

1947—Act July 17, 1947, amended section generally.

1940—Act June 6, 1940, substituted "any prisoner convicted of two or more crimes other than a felony, including violations of municipal regulations and ordinances and Acts of Congress in the nature of municipal regulations and ordinances, when the aggregate of the sentences imposed is in excess of one year, said Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole may parole said prisoner, under the provisions of this Act, after said prisoner has served one-third of the aggregate sentence imposed", for "a prisoner convicted of felony committed prior to the effective date of this Act [July 15, 1932] and in the case of any prisoner convicted of misdemeanor when the aggregate sentence imposed is in excess of one year, said Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole may parole said prisoner, under the provisions of this Act, after said prisoner has served one-fifth of the sentence imposed."

CONVICTION OF PRIOR MISDEMEANORS OR FELONIES

Subsection (b) of section 7 of act June 6, 1940, provided: "In the case of a prisoner convicted of misdemeanors committed prior to the effective date of this amendatory act [June 6, 1940], when the aggregate sentence imposed is in excess of one year, and in the case of a prisoner convicted of felony committed prior to the effective date of said act approved July 15, 1932, said Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole may parole said prisoner under the provisions of said act approved July 15, 1932, as amended, after said prisoner has served one-fifth of the sentence imposed."

NOTES TO DECISIONS

1. Powers of board

Under this section creating District of Columbia Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole and providing for transfer of powers from federal board of parole to district board upon appointment of members of district board, the district board receives such powers over prisoners confined in penal institutions of district as existed in federal board of parole on date of appointment of members of district board, and not merely powers which existed in federal board of parole at time this chapter became effective. Gould v. Green (1944, 141 F. 2d 533, 78 U.S. App. D.C. 363).

Under this section creating District of Columbia Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole and providing for transfer of powers from federal board of parole over prisoners confined in penal institutions in District of Columbia to district board upon appointment of members of district board, authority of district board was not limited to prisoners thereafter convicted. Id.

§ 24-209. Federal Parole Board—Authority over United States prisoners convicted in the District of Columbia.

The Board of Parole created by section 723a of title 18, U.S. Code, shall have and exercise the same power and authority over prisoners convicted in the District of Columbia of crimes against the United States and now or hereafter confined in any United States penitentiary or prison (other than the penal institutions of the District of Columbia) as is vested in the Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole over prisoners confined in the penal institutions of the District of Columbia. (July 15, 1932, ch. 492, § 10, as added June 5, 1934, 48 Stat. 880, ch. 391.)

REFERENCE IN TEXT

Section 723a of title 18, U.S. Code, referred to in the text, was repealed by act June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 862, ch. 645, § 21, and is now covered by section 4201 of title 18, U.S. Code.

1. In general

There is no doubt that Congress intended this section to be applicable to persons convicted in the District of Columbia of crimes against the general laws of the United States. Sims v. Rives (1936, 84 F. 2d 871, 66 App. D. C. 24).

This section gives to the United States Board of Parole the same power and authority over prisoners convicted in the District of Columbia of crimes against the United States as is vested in the Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole. Story v. Rives (1938, 97 F. 2d 182, 68 App. D.C. 325).

The term "prisoners confined in", as used in this section transferring power over prisoners confined in penal institutions of District of Columbia from United States Board of Parole to the District Board of Penal Institutions, is used to designate group of persons by institutions rather than to delimit powers of District board to such persons only while they are in confinement. Ex parte Gould (1943, 51 F. Supp. 354).

The power of United States Board of Parole to impose conditions on release on account of deductions for good conduct of United States prisoners passed from United States Board of Parole to District Board of Penal Institutions with respect to United States prisoners in penal institutions of the District of Columbia. Id.

2. Jurisdiction

Where petitioner was released from District of Columbia Reformatory on parole, but a warrant was subsequently issued against him for violation of that parole and petitioner was confined at a Federal Penitentiary in Kansas upon conviction of a new and separate offense in Missouri, District of Columbia Board of Parole did not lose its jurisdiction over petitioner to Federal Parole Board and had the right to file a detainer against petitioner. Noll v. Board of Parole for Government of District of Columbia (1951, 191 F. 2d 653, 89 U.S. App. D.C. 206).

3. Prisoners confined outside district

This section is not inconsistent with the authority of the Attorney General to transfer prisoners from the District of Columbia. Bracey v. Hill (D.C. Pa. 1935, 11 F. Supp. 148).

The same privileges of parole are accorded prisoners sentenced in the District of Columbia and committed to penal institutions outside of the District as to those sentenced and confined within the District. Id.

This section removes the question whether a defendant, who was sentenced in the District of Columbia, could be committed to a penal institution outside of the District because of the deprivation of parole. Id.

One sentenced for violation of the laws of the District of Columbia, convicted and confined in District, could be confined outside the District, and such confinement does not violate any constitutional rights. MacAboy v. Klecka (D.C. Md. 1938, 22 F. Supp. 960).

The United States Board of Parole and not the District Board of Penal Institutions, has jurisdiction over prisoners convicted in District of Columbia and transferred to some Federal institution other than penal institutions of the District. Ex parte Gould (1943, 51 F. Supp. 354).

4. Release of prisoners not on parole

Neither this section nor §§ 24-201 to 24-208 have any bearing upon the release of prisoners other than on parole, and neither restricts in any way the power of the United States Board to supervise prisoners so released from institutions other than in the District under the provisions of section 4 of the act of June 29, 1932 (U.S. Code, title 18, former § 716b [now U.S. Code, title 18, § 4164]). Story v. Rives (1938, 97 F. 2d 182, 68 App. D.C. 325).

5. Release of prisoners on parole

This act constituted an extension of power in the United States Board over District of Columbia prisoners in that it permitted the board to release such prisoners on parole from non-District institutions after serving only one-fifth of their maximum terms. Story v. Rives (1938, 97 F. 2d 182, 68 App. D.C. 325).

6. Service of sentence

The unexpired portion of a parole violator's original sentence begins to run not when he is in prison by arrest or conviction for a new and separate offense but only when his parole has been revoked and he has been returned to custody of revoking authority. Noll v. Board of Parole for Government of District of Columbia (1951, 191 F. 2d 653, 89 U.S. App. D.C. 206).

Where petitioner was released from District of Columbia Reformatory on parole but a subsequent warrant was issued for violation of that parole, fact that petitioner served time in various places of detention other than in District of Columbia did not fulfill requirement of serving District of Columbia sentence. Id.

7. United States prisoner

Prisoner sentenced for violation of the laws of the District of Columbia is a "United States prisoner" within the meaning of U.S. Code, title 18, § 716b [now U.S. Code, title 18, § 4164]. MacAboy v. Klecka (D.C. Md. 1938, 22 F. Supp. 960).

Chapter 3.—INSANE CRIMINALS

Sec.

24-301. Commitment of persons of unsound mind to the District of Columbia General Hospital—Certification to the court—Acquittal by jury on grounds of insanity—Confinement in a mental institution—Conditions for release after confinement—Conditional release—Expenses—Writ of habeas corpus—Inconsistent provisions of Federal Statutes superseded.

24-302. Commitment of mentally ill person while serving sentence.

24-303. Restoration to sanity—Delivery of person to court—Delivery of person to Director of Department of Corrections.

§ 24-301. Commitment of persons of unsound mind to the District of Columbia General Hospital—Certification to the court—Acquittal by jury on grounds of insanity—Confinement in a mental institution—Conditions for release after confinement—Conditional release—Expenses—Writ of habeas corpus—Inconsistent provisions of Federal Statutes superseded.

(a) Whenever a person is arrested, indicted, charged by information, or is charged in the juvenile court of the District of Columbia, for or with an offense and, prior to the imposition of sentence or prior to the expiration of any period of probation, it shall appear to the court from the court's own observations, or from prima facie evidence submitted to the court, that the accused is of unsound mind or is mentally incompetent so as to be unable to understand the proceedings against him or properly to assist in his own defense, the court may order the accused committed to the District of Columbia General Hospital or other mental hospital designated by the court, for such reasonable period as the court may determine for examination and observation and for care and treatment if such is necessary by the psychiatric staff of said hospital. If, after such examination and observation, the superintendent of the hospital, in the case of a mental hospital, or the chief psychiatrist of the District of Columbia General Hospital, in the case of District of Columbia General Hospital, shall report that in his opinion the accused is of unsound mind or mentally incompetent, such report shall be sufficient to authorize the court to commit by order the accused to a hospital for the mentally ill unless the accused or the Government objects, in which event, the court, after hearing without a jury, shall make a judicial determination of the competency of the accused to stand trial. If the court shall find the accused to be then of unsound mind or mentally incompetent to stand trial, the court shall order the accused confined to a hospital for the mentally ill.

(b) Whenever an accused person confined to a hospital for the mentally ill is restored to mental competency in the opinion of the superintendent of said hospital, the superintendent shall certify such fact to the clerk of the court in which the indictment, information, or charge against the accused is pending and such certification shall be sufficient to authorize the court to enter an order thereon adjudicating him to be competent to stand trial, unless the accused or the Government objects, in which event, the court, after hearing without a jury, shall make a judicial determination of the competency of the accused to stand trial.

(c) When any person tried upon an indictment or information for an offense, or tried in the juvenile court of the District of Columbia for an offense, is acquitted solely on the ground that he was insane at the time of its commission, that fact shall be set forth by the jury in their verdict.

(d) If any person tried upon an indictment or information for an offense, or tried in the juvenile court of the District of Columbia for an offense, is acquitted solely on the ground that he was insane at the time of its commission, the court shall order such person to be confined in a hospital for the mentally ill.

(e) Where any person has been confined in a hospital for the mentally ill pursuant to subsection (d) of this section, and the superintendent of such hospital certifies (1) that such person has recovered his sanity, (2) that, in the opinion of the superintendent, such person will not in the reasonable future be dangerous to himself or others, and (3) in the opinion of the superintendent, the person is entitled to his unconditional release from the hospital, and such certificate is filed with the clerk of the court in which the person was tried, and a copy thereof served on the United States Attorney or the Corporation Counsel of the District of Columbia, whichever office prosecuted the accused, such certificate shall be sufficient to authorize the court to order the unconditional release of the person so confined from further hospitalization at the expiration of fifteen days from the time said certificate was filed and served as above; but the court in its discretion may, or upon objection of the United States or the District of Columbia shall, after due notice, hold a hearing at which evidence as to the mental condition of the person so confined may be submitted, including the testimony of one or more psychiatrists from said hospital. The court shall weigh the evidence and, if the court finds that such person has recovered his sanity and will not in the reasonable future be dangerous to himself or others, the court shall order such person unconditionally released from further confinement in said hospital. If the court does not so find, the court shall order such person returned to said hospital. Where, in the judgment of the superintendent of such hospital, a person confined under subsection (d) above is not in such condition as to warrant his unconditional release, but is in a condition to be conditionally released under supervision, and such certificate is filed and served as above provided, such certificate shall be sufficient to authorize the court to order the release of such person under such conditions as the court shall see fit at the expiration of fifteen days from the time such certificate is filed and served pursuant to this section: Provided, That the provisions as to hearing prior to unconditional release shall also apply to conditional releases, and, if, after a hearing and weighing the evidence, the court shall find that the condition of such person warrants his conditional release, the court shall order his release under such conditions as the court shall see fit, or, if the court does not so find, the court shall order such person returned to such hospital.

(f) When an accused person shall be acquitted solely on the ground of insanity and ordered confined in a hospital for the mentally ill, such person and his estate shall be charged with the expense of his support in such hospital.

(g) Nothing herein contained shall preclude a person confined under the authority of this section from establishing his eligibility for release under the provisions of this section by a writ of habeas corpus.

(h) The provisions of this section shall supersede in the District of Columbia the provisions of any Federal statutes or parts thereof inconsistent with this section. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1340, ch. 854, § 927; Apr. 14, 1906, 34 Stat. 113, ch. 1624; July 2, 1945, 59 Stat. 311, ch. 217; Aug. 9, 1955, 69 Stat. 609, ch. 673, § 1.)

AMENDMENTS

1955—Act Aug. 9, 1955, amended section generally.

1945—Act July 2, 1945, inserted the references to the juvenile court of the District of Columbia wherever appearing, provided for committing the accused to the Gallinger Municipal Hospital for psychiatric evaluation, and for a report on the accused's sanity by the psychiatric staff, and substituted "Federal Security Administrator" for "Secretary of the Interior."

1906—Act Apr. 14, 1906, inserted "or is charged by an information" following "whenever a person is indicted."

TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS

Reorganization Order No. 57 of the Board of Commissioners dated June 30, 1953, and effective Aug. 15, 1953, established under the direction and control of a Commissioner, a Department of Public Health headed by a Director, for the purpose of planning, implementing, and directing public health and hospital care programs, and for performing certain other allied medical functions. The order abolished the previously existing Gallinger Municipal Hospital and transferred all of its positions and functions to the new department. It further provided that within the department the District of Columbia General Hospital is to perform all functions previously performed by Gallinger Municipal Hospital. This order was issued pursuant to Reorganization Plan No. 5 of 1952. The order and plan are set out in the Appendix to title 1, Administration.

1. Appeal

Where accused was found not guilty by reason of insanity and was committed to hospital and some two months thereafter accused petitioned for writ of habeas corpus without prepayment of costs and District Court denied such petition without a hearing and without stating reasons for denial, case would be remanded and District Court, if it rejected allegation of poverty, would be required to state basis for such rejection, and if leave to file without costs was permitted or if accused should pay necessary filing fees, hospital superintendent would be directed to report as to accused's condition, and upon the return the District Court should conduct hearing to determine whether accused had recovered sanity and would not be dangerous to himself or others in reasonable future. Tatem, Sr. v. United States (1960, 275 F. 2d 894, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 230).

Where it appeared to Court of Appeals reviewing conviction of an attempted abortion resulting in death that evidence did not permit trial of fact to conclude beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant had no mental disease or defect, case would be remanded with instructions that unless Government advised trial court without unreasonable delay that it can meet its burden of proof at a new trial, defendant is to be acquitted on ground of insanity and committed to a mental hospital and dealt with in accordance with statute, that is, hospitalized until she is free from such abnormal condition as would render her dangerous to herself or community in the reasonably foreseeable future. Hopkins v. United States (1960, 275 F. 2d 155, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 126).

Where trial court did not have benefit of construction of Court of Appeals respecting this section providing for the conditional release of patients who have been committed to mental hospital after acquittal of crime by reason of insanity, Court of Appeals would refrain from review of evidence and allow trial court to evaluate it in the first instance in light of principles held applicable. Hough v. United States (1959, 271 F. 2d 458, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 192).

Though jury was not warranted on evidence in failing to entertain reasonable doubt that except for diseased mental condition defendant would have committed robberies, Court of Appeals would not direct that defendant be acquitted by reason of insanity, but would remand for a new trial, where testimony of expert who had not testified at second trial would be available at retrial, resolvable ambiguities existed in testimony, and dearth of prosecution's nonmedical testimony, might be overcome. Douglas v. United States (1956, 239 F. 2d 52, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 232).

Appeal from commitment to St. Elizabeths Hospital under this section was moot in view of the fact that petitioner had been determined by a jury to be of sound mind and had been released from the hospital. Savage v. White (1926, 14 F. 2d 352, 56 App. D.C. 365).

2. Burden of proof

Petitioner maintaining proceeding for writ of habeas corpus to secure release from mental institution in which he has been confined upon his acquittal of criminal charge by reason of insanity has heavy burden of proof that he is not dangerous or potentially dangerous to himself or others, exceeding a standard of proof by a preponderance of evidence, and in a close case, even where preponderance of evidence favors the petitioner, the doubt, if reasonable doubt exists about danger to public or patient, cannot be resolved so as to risk danger to public or individual. Ragsdale v. Overholser, Supt. etc. (C.A.D.C. 1960, 281 F. 2d 943).

Where there is evidence that accused was of unsound mind when offenses occurred, prosecution is under necessity of establishing to satisfaction of jury beyond reasonable doubt that offenses were not result of accused's insanity. Douglas v. United States (1956, 239 F. 2d 52, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 232).

In order to justify conviction, where there is evidence that accused was of unsound mind when offenses occurred, proof, considered with presumption of sanity, must exclude beyond reasonable doubt the hypothesis that conduct indicted was product of a diseased mind or mental defect. Id.

When lack of mental capacity is raised as a defense to a charge of crime, the law presumes that the defendant is sane, but as soon as some evidence of mental disorder is introduced, sanity must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt as part of prosecution's case. Durham v. United States (1954, 214 F. 2d 862, 94 U.S. App. D.C. 228, 45 A.L.R. 2d 1430).

In forgery prosecution, testimony of two psychiatrists and a lay witness to effect that defendant was, in their opinion, suffering from mental illness when he committed the crimes charged satisfied requirement that defendant produce some evidence, and shifted burden of proving sanity to government. United States v. Amburgey (1960, 189 F. Supp. 687).

In habeas corpus proceeding brought by petitioner claiming right to be released from hospital for the mentally ill, it was necessary for petitioner to show not only that he had recovered his sanity but also that superintendent of hospital was arbitrarily and capriciously withholding certificate of recovered sanity; and, on record presented, such burden was not sustained. O'Beirne v. Overholser, Superintendent etc. (1960, 180 F. Supp. 572).

3. Certification of sanity

Court may not authorize release of person confined in hospital for mentally ill unless hospital superintendent certifies that he has recovered his sanity. O'Beirne v. Overholser, Superintendent etc. (1960, 180 F. Supp. 572).

Purpose of requirement of this section that superintendent of hospital certify that person seeking release has recovered his sanity is to safeguard public against release of insane criminals who might possibly repeat their depredations. Id.

4. Commitment procedure

Although inmate of mental hospital had not been informed that possible alternative to commitment, pursuant to this section requiring confinement in mental hospital of those acquitted solely on ground of insanity, was to ask for new trial, inmate whose only possible defense was insanity and whose chances for acquittal on a second trial were minuscule was properly committed to hospital after being acquitted. Curry v. Overholser, Supt. etc. (C.A.D.C. 1960, 287 F. 2d 137).

When person suspected of insanity is also accused of crime, trial court is not to be permitted to commit such person to a mental hospital without benefit of a jury or of the Mental Health Commission, even though the person is competent to stand trial, but there must be a report and recommendation by the commission, a jury's verdict if demanded, and a district court order. Williams v. Overholser, Supt, etc. (1958, 259 F. 2d 175, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 18).

5. Competency to stand trial

Under District of Columbia law pertaining to insane criminals, any hearing must be on issue of defendant's competency to stand trial, and nothing more. Williams v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1959, 147 A. 2d 773).

6. Conditional release

Under this section governing conditional release of persons who have been committed to mental hospital after acquittal of crime by reason of insanity, to order conditional release upon a challenged certification court must conclude individual has recovered sufficiently so that under proposed conditions, or under conditions which this section empowers court to impose, such person will not in the reasonable future be dangerous to himself or others. Hough v. United States (1959, 271 F. 2d 458, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 192).

7. Constitutionality

Provision requiring commitment to mental institution of persons acquitted of crimes by reason of insanity did not deprive one committed pursuant thereto of liberty without due process of law, as there was rational connection between known evidence of the person's mental disease and mandatory commitment provision, and as statute authorizes one so confined to test legality of confinement by habeas corpus proceeding which provides de novo hearing to examine into mental condition. Ragsdale v. Overholser, Supt. etc. (C.A.D.C. 1960, 281 F. 2d 943).

"There can be no reasonable objection to the validity of the provision of this section. It makes ample provision for the inquiry which is conducted with due regard to the protection of the defendant." Wagner v. White (38 App. D. C. 554).

This section is constitutional and valid. Ormsby v. United States (C.C.A. 6, 1921, 273 F. 977).

8. Criminal responsibility

In determining issue whether or not indicted conduct was product of mental disease or mental defect, or whether accused acted because of mental disorder, there need be only reasonable doubt about it to entitle accused to an acquittal. Douglas v. United States (1956, 239 F. 2d 52, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 232).

While issue of criminal responsibility of defendant suffering from mental disease is not an issue of fact in same sense as the commission of the offense, it still is an issue of fact. Id.

The court-formulated test of insanity that accused is not criminally responsible if his unlawful act was product of mental disease or mental defect could not be applied retrospectively but only prospectively. Watson, Jr. v. United States (1956, 234 F. 2d 42, 98 U.S. App. D.C. 221).

Term "disease", as used in rule that an accused is not criminally responsible if his unlawful act was product of mental disease or mental defect, means condition which is considered capable of either improving or deteriorating, and term "defect" as so used means condition which is not considered capable of improving or deteriorating and which may be either congenital, or traumatic, or the residual effect of physical or mental disease. Durham v. United States (1954, 214 F. 2d 862, 94 U.S. App. D.C. 228, 45 A.L.R. 2d 1430).

In District of Columbia, formulation of tests of criminal responsibility is entrusted to the courts, and they may adopt changes in such tests retroactively. Id.

Whenever there is some evidence that the accused suffered from a diseased or defective mental condition at the time the unlawful act was committed, trial court must provide jury with guides for determining whether accused can be held criminally responsible. Id.

An accused is not criminally responsible if his unlawful act was product of mental disease or mental defect. Id.

A defendant is entitled to verdict of not guilty on ground of insanity, if jury finds that offense charged was insane act by application of any one of three tests as to whether defendant was able to distinguish between right and wrong, able to adhere to right and refrain from doing wrong, or suffered from mental disease or defect which caused criminal act. United States v. Fielding (1956, 148 F. Supp. 46, reversed on other grounds 251 F. 2d 878, 102 U.S. App. D.C. 167).

9. Directed verdict

Where a trial court, in a criminal prosecution, should have directed a judgment of acquittal by reason of insanity, notwithstanding the verdict, judgment of conviction would be vacated on appeal and case remanded with directions. Isaac v. United States (C.A.D.C. 1960, 284 F. 2d 168).

On record presented, in robbery prosecution, it was error to deny defendant's motion for directed verdict on ground of insanity. Satterwhite v. United States (1959, 267 F. 2d 675, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 398).

10. Discretion of court

In proceeding brought by one who was confined to mental institution following his acquittal of criminal charge by reason of insanity, to secure his release from institution, District Court, in denying writ, made permissible choice between expert evidence that he was dangerous and other evidence, including testimony of laymen, tending to suggest that he was not. Ragsdale v. Overholser, Supt. etc. (C.A.D.C. 1960, 281 F. 2d 943).

Under this section authorizing persons confined to mental institution by reason of having been acquitted of crime on ground of insanity to test legality of their commitments by habeas corpus, certificate of superintendent of mental institution, in form of conclusion, may be disregarded by the district judge if it is not supported by medical recitals which satisfy or persuade him that the conclusion is correct. Id.

"Whether a prima facie case has been made by the petitioner requiring submission of the issue (of insanity) to a jury is a question submitted to the sound discretion of the trial judge." Gonzales v. United States (40 App. D.C. 450). See, also, Neely v. U.S. (1945, 150 F. 2d 977, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 187, certiorari denied 66 S. Ct. 166, 326 U.S. 768, 90 L. Ed. 463).

Refusal of trial court to submit to a jury the question of defendant's mental responsibility was not an abuse of its discretion, where there had never been any suggestion that he should be restrained of his liberty because of insanity, and where at his trial it did not appear and was not suggested that he was not fully and entirely responsible from a mental standpoint. Jackson v. United States (1928, 25 F. 2d 549, 58 App. D.C. 125).

11. Evidence

Evidence supported finding that inmate, who was seeking release from confinement in mental hospital as insane criminal, was at time of the habeas corpus proceeding suffering from abnormal mental condition and would be dangerous to himself and others if released. Curry v. Overholser, Supt. etc. (C.A.D.C. 1960, 287 F. 2d 137).

In habeas corpus proceeding by one who had been committed to mental hospital after being found not guilty of robbery by reason of insanity, where superintendent of hospital had refused to certify that petitioner had recovered sanity and would not in reasonable future be dangerous to himself or others, evidence did not warrant release of petitioner despite opinion of two psychiatrists denying present mental disease, where seven psychiatrists agreed that petitioner was a sociopathic personality with dyssocial outlook and would be dangerous to community if released. Overholser etc. v. Leach (1958, 257 F. 2d 667, 103 U.S. App. D.C. 289, certiorari denied 79 S. Ct. 1152, 359 U.S. 1013, 3 L. Ed. 2d 1038).

When issue of insanity is raised by introduction of "some evidence" so that presumption of sanity is no longer absolute, trier of fact must weigh the whole evidence, including that supplied by the presumption of sanity, on the issue of capacity in law of accused to commit the crime, and failure so to weigh the whole evidence on such issue is reversible error. Durham v. United States (1954, 214 F. 2d 862, 94 U.S. App. D.C. 228, 45 A.L.R. 2d 1430).

Evidence concerning events of defendant's youth, none of them more recent than 15 years prior to time of hearing on petition for sanity inquisition after conviction of murder, and indicating that defendant as a youth had been reckless, imprudent, and brutal, was of no value to establish insanity. Neely v. U.S. (1945, 150 F. 2d 977, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 187, certiorari denied 66 S. Ct. 166, 326 U.S. 768, 90 L. Ed. 463).

Opinion evidence by lay witness that a defendant convicted of murder was insane, was valueless to establish prima facie that defendant was insane so as to authorize granting of a petition for sanity inquisition. Id.

Denial of motion of one of the two defendants jointly indicted on charge of killing another in perpetrating robbery for a mental examination was not error, where moving defendant did not make prima facie showing of mental incapacity. Wheeler v. U.S. (1948, 165 F. 2d 225, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 363, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 448, 830 U.S. 333, 92 L. Ed 1115.) See, also, Wheeler v. Reid (1949, 175 F. 2d 829, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

In prosecution for drunkenness, evidence which was taken in prior proceeding to determine competency of defendant to stand trial could not be used to sustain a finding of not guilty by reason of insanity. In re Williams (1958, 165 F. Supp. 879).

In prosecution for intoxication, evidence was insufficient to support trial judge's finding that defendant was not guilty because of insanity. Williams v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1959, 147 A. 2d 773).

In prosecution for intoxication, trial judge, in determining issue of defendant's competency under District of Columbia law to stand trial, could not use evidence introduced in previous hearing as to defendant's sanity where hearing was held after defendant entered plea of guilty on same charge. Id.

12. Expense of support

Where disability compensation due incompetent veteran was discontinued by Veterans' Administration because veteran was being cared for by government, government retained money for care of veteran, and veteran was not liable for board and maintenance at government hospital. Silverstein v. United States (1954, 210 F. 2d 19, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 174).

13. Habeas corpus

All indigent inmates who petition for habeas corpus for release from confinement in a hospital, including those committed as insane prisoners, may demand expert testimony of members of Commission on Mental Health, or court on its own motion may require it. Curry v. Overholser, Supt. etc. (C.A.D.C. 1960, 287 F. 2d 137).

Habeas corpus jurisdiction of District Court was properly invoked for release from hospital to which petitioner was committed by Municipal Court on being found not guilty of crime by reason of insanity. O'Beirne v. Overholser (C.A.D.C. 1960, 287 F. 2d 133).

In habeas corpus proceeding brought by one who had been committed to mental institution upon acquittal of criminal charges on ground of insanity, brought to secure release from institution, finding that petitioner was no longer mentally ill was clearly erroneous. Overholser, Supt etc. v. Russell (1960, 283 F. 2d 195, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 400).

Under statutory provisions authorizing one confined to mental institution because of his acquittal of crime by reason of insanity to maintain habeas corpus proceeding to test legality of his confinement, habeas corpus hearing is de novo proceeding to examine into petitioner's existing mental condition, and at such hearing he is free to put in evidence, both lay and expert, to demonstrate that he has recovered to the point where he will not be dangerous to himself or others. Ragsdale v. Overholser, Sup't etc. (C.A.D.C. 1960, 281 F. 2d 943).

Where accused who had been adjudged insane pursuant to verdict of jury appointed to inquire into his sanity and who had been ordered confined to hospital subsequently filed petition for writ of habeas corpus which contained crucial statement that he was of sound mind and acting superintendent of hospital in response to rule to show cause why writ should not issue alleged that accused was of unsound mind, giving details of asserted malady and opinion that accused was not mentally competent to stand trial, an issue of fact as to whether accused had regained his sanity was presented, he was entitled to hearing thereon and court erred in dismissing petition without hearing. Lewis v. Overholser, Sup't etc. (1960, 274 F. 2d 592, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 83).

Where petitioner was committed to hospital after acquittal by reason of insanity and his petition for habeas corpus failed to allege that he would not in the reasonable future be dangerous to himself or others and the hospital superintendent stated that he could not certify that the petitioner had recovered and petitioner failed to put in issue the superintendent's conclusion, district judge properly concluded that a hearing was not necessary. Fielding v. Overholser, Superintendent, etc. (1959, 268 F. 2d 898, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 23).

Where, after setting aside accused's plea of guilty to charge of public drunkenness, and committing accused to hospital for examination and observation, the municipal court found accused of unsound mind and ordered him confined to another hospital but did not determine whether accused was competent to stand trial, accused would be entitled to release on writ of habeas corpus unless the municipal court determined that he was mentally incompetent to stand trial and ordered him confined on that ground or unless proper lunacy proceedings were instituted. Williams v. Overholser, Sup't, etc. (1958, 259 F. 2d 175, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 18).

In habeas corpus proceeding brought by petitioner who had been committed to St. Elizabeths Hospital after being found not guilty of criminal charge by reason of insanity and who alleged that he was receiving no individual psychotherapy at hospital and that no further institutional care was necessary, petitioner was not, on facts disclosed, entitled to independent examination by member of mental health commission. Hayward v. Overholser, Sup't etc. (1960, 191 F. Supp. 464).

Records of Municipal Court imported verity, and in habeas corpus proceeding brought by patient of hospital for the mentally ill, court would not go behind record to determine whether patient had had opportunity to present his defense in Municipal Court prosecution in which he had been found not guilty by reason of insanity at time offense was committed. O'Beirne v. Overholser, Superintendent, etc. (1960, 180 F. Supp. 572).

Use of writ of habeas corpus may not be limited by statute, and person who claims to be deprived of his liberty illegally may always resort to writ. Id.

In habeas corpus proceeding brought by petitioner claiming right to be released from hospital for the mentally ill, court could not try de novo issue as to whether petitioner had ever been insane, or whether he had recovered his sanity. Id.

Where municipal court found accused charged with being drunk or intoxicated on a public street to be of unsound mind and committed him to mental hospital, but made no judicial determination on competency to stand trial, such failure constituted an illegal detention cognizable under writ of habeas corpus since such failure resulted in denial of a right given him by statute as well as his right, if competent, to speedy trial under the constitution. Williams v. Overholser (1958, 162 F. Supp. 514, modified on other grounds 259 F. 2d 175, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 18).

It is not the function of the district court to determine in habeas corpus proceeding, the mental competency of an accused to stand trial on a charge pending against him in the municipal court, but the only court that may determine that fact is the court having jurisdiction of such charge. Id.

14. Instructions

In prosecution for murder, instruction that if verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity was returned defendant would be committed to mental hospital until such time as it was established that he was no longer insane, was not objectionable for failure to add that he would be kept in hospital until he would not in reasonable future be dangerous to himself or others. Starr, Jr. v. United States (1959, 264 F. 2d 377, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 91, certiorari denied 79 S. Ct. 652, 359 U.S. 936, 3 L. Ed. 2d 639).

If it affirmatively appears on record that defendant, who pleaded not guilty by reason of insanity, did not want instruction as to effect of verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity, Court of Appeals will not regard failure of trial court to give such instruction as grounds for reversal. Lyles v. United States (1958, 254 F. 2d 725, 103 U.S. App. D.C. 22, certiorari denied 78 S. Ct. 997, 356 U.S. 961, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1067).

When instruction is given jury as to effect of verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity, jury should simply be informed that such verdict means that accused will be confined in hospital for mentally ill until superintendent has certified, and court is satisfied, that accused has recovered his sanity and will not in reasonable future be dangerous to himself or to others, in which event and at which time court shall order his release either unconditionally or under such conditions as court may see fit. Id.

Where defendant pleads not guilty by reason of insanity, jury has right to know meaning of verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity as accurately as it knows by common knowledge the meaning of verdict of guilty and verdict of not guilty. Id.

Evidence of mental condition at a given time is relevant to determination of mental condition at another time not unreasonably far removed, and it might be proper to inquire as to probability that as of time of act charged, an accused's mental condition was the same as it was found to be somewhat earlier, or somewhat later, but such rule does not justify judge in warning jury that if they acquit accused who has pleaded insanity they will be releasing a dangerous man to prey upon society. Blunt v. United States (1957, 244 F. 2d 355, 100 U.S. App. D.C. 266).

In prosecution for housebreaking, wherein judge told jury that hospital Acting Superintendent had advised court that accused was found competent to stand trial and assist in his own defense, and after stating that court would commit accused to hospital if he were found not guilty by reason of insanity, judge added that accused would remain there until determined to be "of sound mind" by hospital authorities and that "if the authorities adhered to their last opinion on this point, he will be released very shortly", latter statement was highly prejudicial since it implied a warning that dire consequences might result from finding that accused was not guilty by reason of insanity. Durham v. United States (1956, 237 F. 2d 760, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 132).

When accused person has pleaded insanity, counsel may and judge should inform jury that if he is acquitted by reason of insanity he will be presumed to be insane and may be confined in hospital for insane as long as public safety and welfare require. Taylor v. United States (1955, 222 F. 2d 398, 95 U.S. App. D.C. 373).

Instructions to jury relative to criminal responsibility must in substance advise jury that they may find defendant guilty only if they find, beyond reasonable doubt, from evidence and from facts fairly deducible, (1) that defendant was not suffering from diseased or defective mental condition at time of the act, or (2) that the act was not the result of such condition. Durham v. United States (1954, 214 F. 2d 862, 94 U.S. App. D.C. 228, 45 A.L.R. 2d 1430).

15. Judge's comments on evidence

If trial judge submits to jury question of probable release of defendant at some future date from mental hospital, submits evidence to jury on that point, or comments to jury respecting speculative possibilities in that regard, trial judge commits error. A. Lyles v. United States (1958, 254 F. 2d 725, 103 U.S. App. D.C. 22, certiorari denied 78 S. Ct. 997, 356 U.S. 961, 2 L. Ed. 1067).

Statement by trial judge that doctor testified that on prior occasion he found no mental disorder whatever in defendant, and that defendant was a man of average intelligence, was not reversible error, though made in connection with statement to jury that if defendant should be acquitted by reason of insanity, he would be committed to a mental institution, where statement as to testimony of doctor was a remark in single sentence in middle of long charge, and trial judge did not relate testimony of doctor to time of trial or to any possible future time. Id.

16. Judicial determination

Under this section trial court may or may not make a finding on whether accused is of unsound mind, but must determine whether he is mentally competent to stand trial, when objection is made to the report from hospital and a hearing is held, and if accused is found to be of unsound mind this section requires court to commit defendant to a mental hospital, and if court also determines him to be incompetent to stand trial statute requires the same commitment, but section requires a judicial determination in the latter type of mental condition, but does not require a determination in the former. Williams v. Overholser (1958, 162 F. Supp. 514, modified on other grounds 259 F. 2d 175, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 18).

17. Jury trial

This section providing for commitment of accused found incompetent to stand trial to a mental hospital is not unconstitutional for absence of provision for jury trial since all that is required is due process which is satisfied by judicial hearing which is provided for. Williams v. Overholser (1958, 162 F. Supp. 514, modified on other grounds 259 F. 2d 175, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 18).

18. Law governing

Where doctor, who had examined defendant for purpose of determining his mental competency to stand trial, did not testify to any statement made by defendant on issue of guilt and judge's finding of mental competency to stand trial was not brought to notice of jury, it was immaterial whether commitment to mental institution for determination of mental competency to stand trial was made under federal statute or under District of Columbia statute; and neither statute barred doctor's testimony expressing his opinion that defendant was sane when he committed act. Edmonds v. United States (1959, 273 F. 2d 108, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 373, certiorari denied 80 S. Ct. 1062, 362 U.S. 977, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1012).

If this section stating procedure to be followed by federal District Court for District of Columbia in determining an accused person's mental competence to stand trial requires a jury, it has been superseded in that respect by U.S. Code, title 18, § 4244 which does not require a jury and which has general application in Federal Court throughout nation, and federal District Court for District of Columbia did not err in proceeding under later statute without intervention of jury in determining mental competency of an accused to stand trial on murder charge. Jordan v. United States (1953, 207 F. 2d 28, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 65).

19. Motion for leave to appeal

Where defendant's motion to vacate sentences was denied without hearing and district judge also denied defendant's application for leave to appeal in forma pauperis, defendant's motion in the Court of Appeals for leave to so appeal and for appointment of counsel would be granted in view of fact that trial judge denied such motion without hearing on erroneous grounds that competency to stand trial was not subject to collateral attack but was waived if not advanced at trial, and that defendant did not allege he was in fact mentally incompetent when tried, and that an amendment to this section abrogated requirement for a judicial determination of restored competency before trial. Blunt v. United States (1957, 244 F. 2d 355, 100 U.S. App. D.C. 266).

20. Potentially dangerous

Under this section concerning commitment of insane criminals to hospital, a sane person cannot be confined in a mental hospital simply because he is thought to be potentially dangerous if released and his dangerous tendencies must be attributable to an abnormal mental condition if he is to be retained in confinement. Starr, Jr. v. United States (1959, 264 F. 2d 377, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 91, certiorari denied 79 S. Ct. 652, 359 U.S. 936, 3 L. Ed. 2d 639).

Under this section relating to commitment of insane criminals to hospital, a defendant, acquitted because of insanity and committed to mental hospital because of the verdict, may not be released if, despite some recovery, doctors certify and in the exercise of its own function the court finds he is, and in the reasonably foreseeable future will be, dangerous because of mental disease or defect. Id.

21. Presumption of sanity

In prosecution for housebreaking, psychiatrist's opinion that defendant had been of unsound mind on date when crime was committed was sufficient to satisfy "some evidence" test and thereby to shift to prosecution the burden of proving defendant's sanity, though psychiatrist could not state categorically that defendant had not known right from wrong. Durham v. United States (1954, 214 F. 2d 862, 94 U.S. App. D.C. 228, 45 A.L.R. 2d 1430).

Trial court's erroneous holding that there was no evidence of alleged housebreaker's mental state as of date when crime was committed, and that presumption of sanity therefore prevailed, was prejudicial and required reversal. Id.

22. Pretrial mental examination

Nature of crime of sodomy, with which accused was charged, was not sufficient alone, to require the District Court, before accepting guilty plea, to order a mental examination of accused, although court could properly consider nature of crime in that connection, and where there was no indication by prosecuting attorney, that accused might be a sexual psychopath, and no request for a mental examination was made by prosecution or accused, convictions could not be set aside in collateral proceeding, such as coram nobis, because of court's failure to order examination on its own motion. Carter v. United States (1960, 283 F. 2d 200, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 405).

A prosecutor who knows that the accused's mental state at the time of the crime will be the critical issue at trial has an obligation to see that any pretrial mental examination of the accused that may be ordered be broad enough to cast light on that issue, and such course is required not only to protect the rights of the accused, but also to protect society's interest in hospitalizing the accused, if his violent acts sprang from mental disorder, so that he will not be released, as he would be after completion of a prison sentence, without medical assurance that he is not likely to be dangerous to himself or others in the reasonably foreseeable future. Winn v. United States (1959, 270 F. 2d 326, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 133).

There is a vast difference between that mental state which permits an accused to be tried and that which permits him to be held responsible for a crime, and in view of fact that an examination made for the purpose of determining competency to stand trial requires less than an examination designed to determine sanity for the purpose of criminal responsibility, it is not to be assumed that a psychiatrist who has been ordered to prepare an opinion as to man's trial competency will conduct a type of examination which is necessary to provide the trier of facts with information essential for a proper determination of criminal responsibility. Id.

Where the prosecuting attorney moved for a complete and thorough mental examination of the accused, but district court's order upon the motion required only such examination as was necessary to permit formulation of an opinion as to whether defendant was presently of unsound mind or mentally incompetent so as to be unable to understand the proceeding against him or properly to assist in his own defense, the complete and thorough type of examination required for a proper determination of the issue of responsibility would be deemed never made because it was not ordered as requested in the prosecutor's pretrial motion, and therefore defendant's conviction would be reversed and he would be granted a new trial. Id.

23. Procedure

Where doctors who testified at habeas corpus proceeding for release of inmate who had been committed after acquittal by reason of insanity were among those whom he had called as witnesses in his own behalf at criminal trial and were thoroughly familiar with his history and behavior at hospital, and inmate did not request testimony of members of Commission on Mental Health, although private psychiatrists were not available to testify as to inmate's mental condition at time of proceeding, inmate received due process of law. Curry v. Overholser, Sup't etc. (C.A.D.C. 1960, 287 F. 2d 137).

Under statutes relating to insane criminals, a reasonable doubt about insanity of accused required acquittal and authorized hospital confinement. Ragsdale v. Overholser, Sup't etc. (C.A.D.C. 1960, 281 F. 2d 943).

Procedure which governs lunacy inquisition in case of person charged with criminal offense is different from that governing ordinary lunacy inquisition. Evans v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1951, 83 A. 2d 876).

24. Public policy

The community is not without means of protecting itself if at time that a prisoner's sentence ends he is found to be a sexual psychopath, or to be insane or mentally incompetent. Carter v. United States (1960, 283 F. 2d 200, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 405).

The existence of possibilities to protect society from, and to treat, prisoner convicted of sodomy, or other sexual crimes, in the event he is found to be a sexual psychopath, or insane, of unsound mind or otherwise defective during imprisonment or at time his sentence ends, does not relieve bench and bar of responsibility of endeavoring to reach at the earliest possible stage, ideally prior to trial and sentence, the approach to a particular case which appears to be most just and appropriate, having regard to the individual's mental condition, his history, and the possibility of rehabilitating him and restoring him to usefulness in the community. Id.

Policies underlying distinction in treatment between mentally responsible law breakers, who are sent to prison, and mentally irresponsible law breakers, who are sent to hospitals, are (1) that it is both wrong and foolish to punish where there is no blame and where punishment cannot correct, and (2) that community's security may be better protected by hospitalization than by imprisonment. Williams v. United States (1958, 250 F. 2d 19, 102 U.S. App. D.C. 51).

25. Purpose

Although this section respecting release of persons committed to mental hospitals after acquittal by reason of insanity does not speak of temporary release from hospital, its purpose is to assure that members of exceptional class be kept under hospital restraint until District Court, in exercise of a discretion reviewable by Court of Appeals, approves relaxation of that restraint. Hough v. United States (1959, 271 F. 2d 458, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 192).

Purpose of this section pertaining to commitment to hospital of an accused who is mentally incompetent to stand trial is to prescribe procedure for determining whether an accused can understand the proceedings against him and properly assist in his defense and, in event he cannot, to provide for his confinement in a hospital instead of a jail until he can. Williams v. Overholser, Sup't., etc. (1958, 259 F. 2d 175, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 18).

The purpose of this section providing that whenever prima facie evidence is submitted that accused is insane, the court may cause a jury to be impaneled to inquire into the sanity of accused, is to prevent the infliction of punishment upon a person so lacking in mental capacity as to be unable to understand the nature and purpose of the punishment. Neely v. U.S. (1945, 150 F. 2d 977, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 187, certiorari denied 66 S. Ct. 166, 326 U.S. 768, 90 L. Ed. 463).

Purpose of this section making it mandatory for court to commit to a mental hospital any defendant in a criminal case who is found not guilty on ground of insanity, and placing certain safeguards against release of such person from mental hospital after his commitment thereto, is to protect public and discourage unfounded pleas of insanity and statute must be construed in a manner to best effectuate those objectives. In re Milton T. Rosenfield (1958, 157 F. Supp. 18, remanded on other grounds 262 F. 2d 34, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 322).

Purpose of this section providing for mental examination of person charged with crime before trial is to determine whether prisoner is then capable of understanding the nature and object of the proceedings so as to properly conduct his defense at a trial of the charge against him. Evans v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 83 A. 2d 876).

26. Record of determination of competency

Where defendant's motion for mental examination has been granted, determination of competency should be noted of record. Watson v. United States (1956, 234 F. 2d 42, 98 U.S. App. D.C. 221).

27. Release

Under this section providing that a person committed to hospital for mentally ill because he was acquitted for criminal offense solely on ground that he was insane at time of commission may be unconditionally released by District Court if superintendent of hospital certifies, inter alia, that in his opinion such person will not in reasonable future be dangerous to himself or others, the danger to the public need not be possible physical violence or crime of violence but it is enough to preclude release if there is competent evidence that he may commit any criminal act. Overholser Sup't etc. v. Russell (1960, 283 F. 2d 195, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 400).

In view of this section providing that person who has been committed to hospital for mentally ill because he was acquitted of criminal offense solely on ground of insanity at time of commission may be released unconditionally by District Court if superintendent certifies that he has recovered, that he will not in reasonable future be dangerous to himself or others, and that, in opinion of superintendent, he is entitled to unconditional release, to demonstrate at habeas corpus hearing that he is entitled to unconditional release, the patient must show that he has recovered, that he will not in reasonable future be dangerous to others and that superintendent acted arbitrarily and capriciously in refusing to certify him and recommend him for unconditional release. Id.

This section governing release of one committed to mental institution after being found not guilty of crime by reason of insanity, based upon certificate that such person has recovered sanity and will not in a reasonable future be dangerous to himself or others, does not, by phrase "establishing his eligibility for release", establish the test of whether particular individual, engaged in ordinary pursuits of life, is committable to mental institution under the law governing civil commitments, but requires freedom from such abnormal mental condition as would make the individual dangerous to himself or the community in the reasonably foreseeable future. Overholser etc. v. Leach (1958, 257 F. 2d 667, 103 U.S. App. D.C. 289, certiorari denied 79 S. Ct. 1152, 359 U.S. 1013, 3 L. Ed. 2d 1038).

Insane person, found not guilty of homicide by reason of insanity, and committed to asylum, must prove sanity and that he is no longer a menace, to obtain release. Barry v. White (1933, 64 F. 2d 707, 62 App. D.C. 69).

In habeas corpus proceeding seeking unconditional release from mental institution to which petitioner had been committed after acquittal on ground of insanity, return to writ of habeas corpus filed on behalf of superintendent of mental hospital stating that psychosis from which petitioner was suffering was in remission since his readmission to hospital on a certain date did not warrant granting of petitioner's unconditional release from hospital. In re Milton T. Rosenfield (1958, 157 F. Supp. 18, remanded on other grounds 262 F. 2d 34, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 322).

28. Report of commission

Where the examination of accused as to his insanity was made by the Commission of Health at accused's request, and in support of his attempt to make a prima facie showing so as to authorize granting of petition for sanity inquisition after conviction of murder, the court was not required to disregard the Commission's report on theory that to permit its consideration would have the effect of a waiver of privilege upon part of accused. Neely v. U.S. (1945, 150 F. 2d 977, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 187, certiorari denied 66 S. Ct. 166, 326 U.S. 768, 90 L. Ed. 463).

29. Right to counsel

Though due process does not absolutely require appointment of counsel in all cases where person is deprived of his liberty because of unsound mind, where person charged with criminal offense of assault was subjected to lunacy inquisition prior to trial, due process required that defendant be represented by counsel in spite of ostensible waiver of that right or privilege. Evans v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 83 A. 2d 876).

A lunacy inquisition, held before trial to determine if accused is capable of going to trial, is not a criminal proceeding and does not fall within ambit of the Sixth Amendment. Id.

30. Setting aside verdict

In appropriate case there is duty to set aside verdict of guilty and to direct verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity; though this duty is to be performed with caution because of deference due jury in resolving factual issues. Douglas v. United States (1956, 239 F. 2d 52, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 232).

31. Suspension of proceedings

The sole effect of section 301 et seq. of this title governing procedure in case of insanity of person charged with crime is to suspend the criminal proceedings during the period of insanity but jurisdiction of court continues and when sanity is restored, the case may proceed as if the interregnum had not occurred. Haislip v. U.S. (1942, 129 F. 2d 53, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 91).

Sole effect of this section providing for mental examination of person charged with criminal offense before trial is, in proper case, to suspend criminal proceedings during period of insanity. Evans v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1951, 83 A. 2d 876).

32. Temporary leave

Where hospital authorities have decided that a patient committed to the hospital after acquittal by reason of insanity has reached stage where temporary leave from hospital is necessary and proper, authorities should certify that fact to District Court and obtain an appropriate order. Hough v. United States (1959, 271 F. 2d 458, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 192).

33. Verdict

Under this section providing for commitment to mental institution of persons acquitted of criminal charges by reason of insanity, it is contemplated that a person acquitted on a charge calling for a maximum sentence of 18 months may be confined to mental institution for two, five or ten years or beyond that, and nothing less will fulfill protective and rehabilitative purposes of this section. Ragsdale v. Overholser, Supt. etc. (C.A.D.C. 1960, 281 F. 2d 943).

A general verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity carried with it a finding that, except for the question as to his sanity, defendant was guilty as charged. Rucker v. United States (1960, 280 F. 2d 623, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 75).

In prosecution for assault with intent to kill and possession of a rifle with intent to use it unlawfully against another, where the court found the defendant not guilty by reason of insanity and it did not appear that defendant actually understood and acquiesced that the question of his guilt was being tried in that it did not appear that he understood and acquiesced in what was being accomplished without witnesses or evidence and he protested promptly a few days after the verdict, the defendant was entitled to a new trial. Id.

It is common knowledge that verdict of not guilty means that prisoner goes free and that verdict of guilty means that he is subject to such punishment as court may impose, but it is not common knowledge that verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity means that he will be confined in hospital for mentally ill until superintendent of hospital certifies, and court is satisfied, that he has recovered his sanity. Lyles v. United States (1958, 254 F. 2d 725, 103 U.S. App. D.C. 22, certiorari denied 78 S. Ct. 997, 356 U.S. 961, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1067).

Verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity means that defendant will be confined in hospital for mentally ill until superintendent of hospital certifies, and court is satisfied, that defendant has recovered his sanity and will not in reasonable future be dangerous to himself or others. Id.

Instruction that if defendant is found not guilty on ground of insanity, it then becomes duty of court to commit him to hospital, where he will remain until he is cured, and it is deemed safe to release him, and that when such time arrives, he will be released and will suffer no further consequences from his offense, was not reversibly erroneous. Id.

Whenever defense of insanity is fairly raised, trial judge should instruct jury as to legal meaning of verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity. Id.

Where accused was found to be of unsound mind and was committed to hospital, the verdict of insanity spoke as of the date thereof and was a legal determination that accused was not then mentally qualified to stand trial but when he was restored to sanity, certificate of hospital superintendent to that effect removed the previous bar. Haislip v. U.S. (1942, 129 F. 2d 53, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 91).

Verdict of insanity of accused given as result of lunacy inquisition spoke as of that date and was legal determination that defendant was not then mentally qualified to stand trial. Evans v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 83 A. 2d 876).

34. Estoppel

Inmate who had elected to seek verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity could not be heard to complain of commitment to mental hospital pursuant to this section requiring confinement in mental hospital of those acquitted solely on ground of insanity. Curry v. Overholser, Supt. etc. (C.A.D.C. 1960, 287 F. 2d 137).

Any person while serving sentence of any court of the District of Columbia for crime, in a District of Columbia penal institution, and who, in the opinion of the Director of the Department of Corrections of the District of Columbia, is mentally ill, shall be referred by such Director to the psychiatrist functioning under section 24-106, and if such psychiatrist certifies that the person is mentally ill, this shall be sufficient to authorize the Director to transfer such person to a hospital for the mentally ill to receive care and treatment during the continuance of his mental illness. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1340, ch. 854, § 928; Aug. 9, 1955, 69 Stat. 611, ch. 673, § 2.)

AMENDMENT

1955—Act Aug. 9, 1955, amended section generally. Prior to amendment, section read as follows: "Any person becoming insane while undergoing a sentence of any court of the District of Columbia for crime may, in like manner, be committed to said hospital for the insane, by order of the Secretary of the Interior, to receive the same treatment as other patients during the continuance of his disorder."

NOTES TO DECISIONS

1. In general

The community is not without means of protecting itself if at time that a prisoner's sentence ends he is found to be a sexual psychopath, or to be insane or mentally incompetent. Carter v. United States (1960, 283 F. 2d 200, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 405).

The existence of possibilities to protect society from, and to treat, prisoner convicted of sodomy, or other sexual crimes, in the event he is found to be a sexual psychopath, or insane, of unsound mind or otherwise defective during imprisonment or at time his sentence ends, does not relieve bench and bar of responsibility of endeavoring to reach at the earliest possible stage, ideally prior to trial and sentence, the approach to a particular case which appears to be most just and appropriate, having regard to the individual's mental condition, his history, and the possibility of rehabilitating him and restoring him to usefulness in the community. Id.

If prisoner serving sentence on conviction of crime is presently insane or of unsound mind or otherwise defective, prison authorities may and presumably should transfer him to an appropriate institution, so that he may be given treatment for his condition. Id.

§ 24-303. Restoration to sanity—Delivery of person to court—Delivery of person to Director of Department of Corrections.

(a) When any person confined in a hospital for the mentally ill, charged with crime and subject to be tried therefor, shall be found competent to stand trial in the opinion of the superintendent of such hospital, the superintendent shall certify such fact to the clerk of the court in which the indictment, information, or charge is pending, in accordance with the procedure specified in section 24-301, and deliver such person to the court according to its proper precept.

(b) When any person confined in a hospital for the mentally ill while serving sentence shall be restored to mental health within the opinion of the superintendent of the hospital, the superintendent shall certify such fact to the Director of the Department of Corrections of the District of Columbia and such certification shall be sufficient to deliver such person to such Director according to his request. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1340, ch. 854, § 929; Aug. 9, 1955, 69 Stat. 611, ch. 673, § 3.)

AMENDMENTS

1955—Act Aug. 9, 1955, amended section generally. Prior to amendment, section read as follows: "When any person confined in the hospital for the insane, charged with crime and subject to be tried therefor or undergoing sentence therefor, shall be restored to sanity the superintendent of the hospital shall give notice thereof to the justice holding the criminal court and deliver him to the court according to its proper precept."

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Certification of sanity 1
Construction with other laws 2
Habeas corpus 3
Jurisdiction 4
Prisoner convicted but not sentenced 5

1. Certification of sanity

Where accused charged with incest was found by jury to be of unsound mind and was committed to hospital, upon discharge of accused from hospital as cured and in absence of anything showing invalidity of certificate of hospital superintendent, court was required to proceed with trial on the suspended criminal indictment and no further proceedings on the question of sanity was necessary. Haislip v. U.S. (1942, 129 F. 2d 53, 76 U.S. App. D. C. 91).

Where accused was found to be of unsound mind and was committed to hospital, the verdict of insanity spoke as of the date thereof and was a legal determination that accused was not then mentally qualified to stand trial but when he was restored to sanity, certificate of hospital superintendent to that effect removed the previous bar. Id.

2. Construction with other laws

Where accused was charged with incest, found to be of unsound mind and committed to hospital and thereafter hospital superintendent certified that accused was not insane, in determining whether trial court had duty to ascertain judicially if superintendent's certificate correctly fixed accused's mental condition, § 21-320 relating to method of inquisition in case of persons believed to be of unsound mind was inapplicable. Haislip v. U.S. (1942, 129 F. 2d 53, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 91).

3. Habeas corpus

"But we find in this section nothing that precludes the right of the prisoner to have a judicial inquiry made into the fact of restoration to sanity," and he may apply for a habeas corpus in the event that the superintendent refuses to certify to his restoration to sanity. Wagner v. White (38 App. D. C. 554).

In habeas corpus proceeding by petitioner, who had been committed as an insane person pursuant to verdict, in murder prosecution, of not guilty by reason of insanity, evidence sustained determination that petitioner had not been restored to mental health and justified discharge of writ. Orencia v. Overholser (1947, 163 F. 2d 763, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 285).

4. Jurisdiction

The sole effect of § 24-301 et seq. is to suspend the criminal proceedings during the period of insanity but jurisdiction of court continues and when sanity is restored, the case may proceed as if the interregnum had not occurred. Haislip v. U.S. (1942, 129 F. 2d 53, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 91).

5. Prisoner convicted but not sentenced

This section includes one convicted of crime but not yet sentenced. Ormsby v. United States (C.C.A. 6, 1921, 273 F. 977).

SUBCHAPTER I.—PRISONS

When any person shall be sentenced to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months the court may direct that such imprisonment shall be either in the workhouse or in the jail. When any person is sentenced for a term longer than six months and not longer than one year such imprisonment shall be in the jail, and where the sentence is imprisonment for more than one year it shall be in the penitentiary. Cumulative sentences aggregating more than one year shall be deemed one sentence for the purposes of the foregoing provision. When the punishment of an offense may be imprisonment for more than one year the prosecution shall be in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia. When the maximum punishment is a fine only or imprisonment for one year or less the prosecution may be in the Municipal Court for the District of Columbia. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1341, ch. 854, § 934; June 25, 1936, 49 Stat. 1921, ch. 804; Apr. 1, 1942, 56 Stat. 190, ch. 207, § 1; June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 991, ch. 646, § 32(b); May 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 107, ch. 139, § 127.)

CHANGE OF NAME

Act June 25, 1936, substituted "District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia" for "Supreme Court of the District of Columbia."

CONSOLIDATION OF POLICE COURT AND MUNICIPAL COURT

"Municipal Court for the District of Columbia" was substituted for "police court" to conform to act Apr. 1, 1942, which consolidated the Police Court and the Municipal Court. See section 11-751.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

- Authority to designate institution 1
 Cumulative sentences 2
 Direction contrary to statute 3
 Federal crimes 4
 Hard labor 5
 Probation 6
 Sentence before repeal of Eighteenth Amendment 7
 Term exceeding one year 8

1. Authority to designate institution

Attorney General of the United States has authority to designate an institution outside of the District of Columbia for service of sentence of a person convicted in the District of Columbia. Stoneburg v. Hiatt (D.C. Pa. 1943, 47 F. Supp. 596).

2. Cumulative sentences

Under this section cumulative sentences aggregating more than one year must be deemed one sentence for the purpose of determining the place of imprisonment. Kelleher v. United States (1930, 35 F. 2d 877, 59 App. D.C. 107).

The purpose of the cumulative sentence provision was merely the adoption of a policy that District of Columbia prisoners sentenced for more than a year should serve time in a penitentiary rather than in the District jail, at least when the sentence was imposed by the district court. Brosius v. Botkin (1940, 114 F. 2d 22, 72 App. D.C. 279).

Sentences for two separate offenses, each for a term from six months to a year, were properly served in a reformatory in Virginia. Id.

Sentences imposed by Municipal Court of the District of Columbia can be cumulated with sentences imposed in District Court of the District of Columbia, and all served in a United States penitentiary. Stoneburg v. Hiatt (D.C. Pa. 1943, 47 F. Supp. 596).

Municipal court could impose a sentence to commence at termination of that imposed for another distinct offense, irrespective of whether initial sentence was imposed by the municipal court or by the district court. Williams v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 133 A. 2d 112).

The statute providing that when punishment for offense charged may be for more than one year, prosecution shall be in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia does not preclude the Criminal Division of the Municipal Court from giving sentence imposing a 120 day confinement to take effect after expiration of District Court sentence for a distinctly different offense, though the combined sentences would run for more than a year. Id.

"The provision relating to cumulative sentences 'has no reference to a sentence to pay a pecuniary fine, followed by imprisonment in default of payment, but relates only to cases in which the punishment is to be imprisonment.'" Hartranft v. Mullowny (43 App. D.C. 44, error dismissed 38 S. Ct. 518, 247 U.S. 295, 62 L. Ed. 1123).

Sentences are not cumulative "merely because two imprisonments are made successive in point of time, if it happens that the prisoner convicted upon two separate informations receives two separate definite sentences for the two separate offenses." Harris v. Lang (27 App. D.C. 84). See, also, Harris v. Nixon (27 App. D.C. 94).

3. Direction contrary to statute

A direction by Municipal Court of District of Columbia that sentences imposed should be served in a jail type institution, if not in accordance with statutes applicable to the particular situation, would have no effect. Stoneburg v. Hiatt (D.C. Pa. 1943, 47 F. Supp. 596).

4. Federal crimes

Intention of Congress was that the trial judge should be invested with the power to designate the type of penal institution in which persons convicted of Federal crimes should be confined. Andreas v. Clark (C.C.A. 9, 1934, 71 F. 2d 908).

5. Hard labor

When defendant had been tried upon an information in the juvenile court of the District and sentenced to imprisonment at hard labor for six months, the statute authorizing such punishment was unconstitutional, and juvenile court was without jurisdiction to try capital or other infamous crimes. United States v. Moreland (1922, 42 S. Ct. 368, 258 U.S. 433, 66 L. Ed. 700, 24 A.L.R. 992).

Police court will not sentence to imprisonment in any institution where hard labor is lawfully required of the prisoners therein because such a sentence would place the offense itself within the category of infamous crimes and thereby oust the court of its jurisdiction. Cleveland v. Mattingly (1923, 287 F. 948, 52 App. D.C. 374).

6. Probation

District Court had no power to release defendant on probation after he had entered upon the execution of his sentence when he was committed to jail to await transportation to the final place of imprisonment. Moss v. United States (C.C.A. 4, 1934, 72 F. 2d 30).

7. Sentence before repeal of Eighteenth Amendment

When person was committed to jail before Eighteenth Amendment and Prohibition Act were repealed, he was not entitled to discharge by habeas corpus on theory that each day in prison was a new and distinct offense. Rives v. O'Hearne (1935, 73 F. 2d 984, 64 App. D.C. 48).

8. Term exceeding one year

"Section 934 (this section) provides generally that where the sentence on any conviction is for a term exceeding one year the imprisonment shall be in the penitentiary, and applies to section 810 (§ 22-2901) as directly as if it had been incorporated therein." United States v. Evans (28 App. D. C. 264).

§ 24-402. Sentence of prisoners to jail, reformatory, or penitentiary for more than one year—Jurisdiction of Commissioners over prisoners in reformatory—Transfer of prisoners from penitentiary to reformatory.

Whenever any person has been convicted of crime in any court in the District of Columbia and sentenced to imprisonment for more than one year by the court, the imprisonment during the term for which he may have been sentenced or during the residue of said term may be in some suitable jail or penitentiary or in the reformatory of the District of Columbia; and it shall be sufficient for the court to sentence the defendant to imprisonment in the penitentiary without specifying the particular prison or the reformatory of the District of Columbia and the imprisonment shall be in such penitentiary, jail, or the reformatory of the District of Columbia as the Attorney-General shall from time to time designate: Provided, That the commissioners of the District of Columbia are vested with jurisdiction over such male and female prisoners as may be designated by the Attorney-General for confinement in the reformatory of the District of Columbia from the time they are delivered into their custody or into the custody of their authorized superintendent, deputy, or deputies, and until such prisoners are released or discharged under due process of law: And provided further, That the residue of the term of imprisonment of any person who has prior to July 1, 1916, been convicted of crime in any court in the District of Columbia and sentenced to imprisonment for more than one year by the court may be in the reformatory of the District of Columbia instead of the penitentiary where such persons may be confined on July 1, 1916, and the Attorney-General, when so requested by the commissioners of the District of Columbia, is authorized to, and he shall, deliver into the custody of the superintendent of said reformatory or his deputy or deputies any such person confined in any penitentiary in pursuance of any judgment of conviction in and sentence by any court in the District of Columbia, and the commissioners of the District of Columbia are vested with jurisdiction over such prisoners from the time they are delivered into the custody of said superintendent or his duly authorized deputy or deputies, including the time when they are in transit between such penitentiary and the reformatory of the District of Columbia, and during the period they are in such reformatory or until they are released or discharged under due process of law. The Attorney-General shall pay the cost of the maintenance of said prisoners so transferred, said payment to be from appropriations for support of convicts, District of Columbia, in like manner as payments are made for the support of District convicts in federal penitentiaries. Nothing herein contained shall be construed as applying to the National Training School for Boys or the National Training School for Girls. (Sept. 1, 1916, 39 Stat. 711, ch. 433.)

EFFECTIVE DATE

Act Sept. 1, 1916, provided in part that: "The provisions of this paragraph shall take effect on and after July first, nineteen hundred and sixteen."

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Constitutional law 1
Federal institutions 2
Penal or correctional institutions 3
Place of confinement 4
Transfer of prisoners 5

1. Constitutional law

Act giving Attorney General power to designate places of confinement for Federal prisoners does not violate Fifth Amendment. Stewart v. Johnston (C.C.A. 9, 1938, 97 F. 2d 548).

2. Federal institutions

This section impliedly recognizes the fact that District of Columbia prisoners may be incarcerated in Federal institutions. Story v. Rives (1938, 97 F. 2d 182, 68 App. D.C. 325).

Prisoner released on parole by Federal parole board as a matter of discretion but Congress adopted a new procedure of conditional release because it realized that society would be better served if prisoners were subjected to the same supervision as parolees. Id.

3. Penal or correctional institutions

A sentence to serve a term in a penal institution could not be served in a correctional institution, except under authority given to the Attorney General to transfer prisoners. Wilson v. Aderhold (C.C.A. 5, 1936, 84 F. 2d 806).

4. Place of confinement

The Attorney General of the United States had the authority to designate an institution located outside of the District of Columbia and beyond the control of local penal officials for service of sentence by one who was convicted in the District of Columbia of a violation of § 22-1504, since the offense punished thereby was an "offense against the United States" within meaning of this section. Beard v. Bennett (1940, 114 F. 2d 578, 72 App. D.C. 269).

Attorney General was duly authorized to designate the prison where a defendant was sentenced in the courts of the District of Columbia to imprisonment exceeding one year, and his designation was in proper form. (Decided under D.C. 1901, § 925). Myers v. Morgan (C.C.A. 8, 1915, 224 F. 413).

Attorney General, under the broad powers conferred upon him, had authority to cause appellee to be placed and held in the Atlanta penitentiary under any general sentence of imprisonment for more than a year, the court could have imposed. Aderhold v. Edwards (C.C.A. 5, 1934, 71 F. 2d 297).

5. Transfer of prisoners

Transfer of inmates of Atlanta penitentiary who are eligible to parole, to an institution in District of Columbia, can not be required by the courts. Aderhold v. Lee (C.C.A. 5, 1934, 68 F. 2d 824, certiorari denied 54 S. Ct. 718, 292 U.S. 633, 78 L. Ed. 1486).

Attorney General has authority to change the place of confinement from a Federal penitentiary to a local jail, when it is proper to do so, in the exercise of his discretion, and it is not necessary that a prisoner be remanded to the trial court merely for the purpose of having the designation of the jail changed. Cox v. McConnell (C.C.A. 5, 1936, 80 F. 2d 258).

In imposing sentences, courts are restricted to specifying the type of institution in which the prisoner is to be confined and he is committed to the custody of the Attorney General, who designates the place of confinement, and the Attorney General may transfer any prisoner from one institution to another for any reason sufficient to himself. Zerbst v. Kidwell (C.C.A. 5, 1938, 92 F. 2d 756).

U.S. Code, title 18, § 753f (now §§ 4082, 4083) if in any respect inconsistent with this section, is so only to the extent that it broadens the Attorney General's authority so that he may designate a place of confinement other than one of the District of Columbia. Beard v. Bennett (1940, 114 F. 2d 578, 72 App. D.C. 269).

§ 24-403. Transfer of prisoners from jail to workhouse.

The United States District Court for the District of Columbia, the Attorney-General, and the superintendent of the Washington Asylum and Jail, when so requested by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, shall deliver into the custody of the superintendent or the authorized deputy or deputies of said superintendent of the workhouse, male and female prisoners sentenced to confinement in said jail for offenses against the common law or against statutes or ordinances relating to the District of Columbia, and, in the discretion of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia and the Attorney-General, male and female prisoners serving sentence in said jail for offenses against the United States, for such work or services as may be necessary, in the discretion of the commissioners of said District, in connection with the construction, maintenance, and operation of said workhouse, or the prosecution of any other public work at said institution or in the District of Columbia: Provided, That, on the direction of said commissioners, male and female prisoners confined in any existing workhouse existing on March 2, 1911, or in the Washington Asylum and Jail of the District of Columbia shall be delivered into the custody of said superintendent or the authorized deputy or deputies of said superintendent aforesaid, to perform similar work or services to those hereinbefore required of male and female prisoners serving sentences in the District of Columbia Jail: Provided further, That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia are hereby vested with jurisdiction over such male and female prisoners from the time they are so delivered into the custody of said superintendent or the duly authorized deputy or deputies of said superintendent, including the time when such prisoners are in transit between the District of Columbia and the site acquired for such workhouse, and during the period such prisoners are on such site or in the District of Columbia until they are released or discharged under due process of law. (Mar. 2, 1911, 36 Stat. 1002, ch. 192; June 25, 1936, 49 Stat. 1921, ch. 804; June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 991, ch. 646, § 32(b); May 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 107, ch. 139, § 127.)

CHANGE OF NAME

Act June 25, 1936, substituted "District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia" for "Supreme Court of the District of Columbia."

NOTES TO DECISIONS

1. Habeas corpus

District Court had jurisdiction to issue habeas corpus writ, for petitioner was committed by a court of the District to a jail of the District under the control of an official of the District who in turn was personally within the District and within the jurisdiction of the court. Sanders v. Allen (1939, 100 F. 2d 717, 69 App. D.C. 307).

2. Transfer to workhouse

Provision of this section authorizing transfer to the workhouse by direction of the commissioners was attached by law to the sentence, and had the same effect as if the court, under statutory authority, had expressed in the sentence that the convict might be transferred to the workhouse under order of the commissioners. Whittaker v. Brannan (C.C.A. 4, 1918, 252 F. 556).

§ 24-404. Commutation of fine.

In all cases in the District of Columbia where a defendant is sent to jail or to the workhouse in default of the payment of a fine he shall be released upon the payment of the balance of the fine due by him after crediting thereon as paid an amount equal to the proportion the time thus served by him in the jail or workhouse bears to the whole time he was to serve under the sentence. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1341, ch. 854, § 936.)

All persons sentenced to and imprisoned in the jail or in the workhouse of the District of Columbia, and confined there for a term of one month or longer who conduct themselves so that no charge of misconduct shall be sustained against them shall have a deduction upon a sentence of not more than one year of five days for each month; upon a sentence of more than one year and less than three years, six days for each month; upon a sentence of not less than three years and less than five years, seven days for each month; upon a sentence of not less than five years and less than ten years, eight days for each month; and upon a sentence of ten years or more, ten days for each month, and shall be entitled to their discharge so much the earlier upon the certificate of the superintendent of the Washington Asylum and Jail for those confined in the jail, and upon the certificate of the superintendent of the workhouse for those confined in the workhouse, of their good conduct during their imprisonment. When a prisoner has two or more sentences the aggregate of his several sentences shall be the basis upon which his deduction shall be estimated. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1341, ch. 854, § 937; Mar. 2, 1911, 36 Stat. 1003, ch. 192; June 6, 1940, 54 Stat. 245, ch. 254, § 10.)

CODIFICATION

Act Mar. 2, 1911, combined as one institution, known as the Washington Asylum and Jail, the jail of the District of Columbia and the Washington Asylum, and created the position of Superintendent of the Washington Asylum and Jail and vested in him the powers theretofore vested in and exercised by the warden of the former jail and the superintendent of the former Washington Asylum.

AMENDMENT

1940—Act June 6, 1940, among other changes, substituted provisions prescribing the maximum deduction for good behavior for persons confined under particular sentences for provisions which authorized a deduction of 5 days for each month, inserted provisions requiring the aggregate of several sentences to be the basis for deduction, and eliminated provisions which required the judge to make a docket entry of the discharge.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

1. Good conduct allowance

The good conduct deduction under the District of Columbia Code does not apply to those sentenced to a penitentiary. Johnson v. Ward, U.S. Marshal (1960, 278 F. 2d 245, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 365).

An allowance on a sentence for good conduct is a privilege and not a vested right. It may be denied as to all cumulative sentences for an infraction of the rules occurring during the service of any of the sentences. Aderhold v. Hudson (C.C.A. 5, 1939, 84 F. 2d 559).

§ 24-406. Prisoners in workhouse and reformatory to be returned to and released in District of Columbia.

All inmates of the workhouse and reformatory for the District of Columbia shall be returned to and released in said District on the day of the expiration of sentence. (June 10, 1910, 36 Stat. 464, ch. 282.)

§ 24-407. Jail and Washington Asylum combined.

The jail of the District of Columbia and the Washington Asylum of said District shall be combined as one institution, known as the Washington Asylum and Jail. (Mar. 2, 1911, 36 Stat. 1003, ch. 192.)

§ 24-408. Commitments to Washington Asylum and Jail.

Whenever and wherever authority of law exists to sentence, commit, order committed, or confine any person to or in the jail of the District of Columbia or the Washington Asylum of said District, said authority shall be exercised by sentence, commitment, order of commitment, or confinement to or in said Washington Asylum and Jail. (Mar. 2, 1911, 36 Stat. 1003, ch. 192.)

§ 24-409. Board of Public Welfare to have exclusive management and control of workhouse, reformatory, and Washington Asylum and Jail.

The Board of Public Welfare shall have complete and exclusive management and control of (a) the workhouse at Occoquan in the State of Virginia; (b) the reformatory at Lorton, in the State of Virginia; (c) the Washington Asylum and Jail. (Mar. 16, 1926, 44 Stat. 209, ch. 58, § 6.)

CODIFICATION

This section is comprised of part of section 6 of act Mar. 16, 1926. Section 6 of said act is set out in its entirety as section 3-106.

TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS

Board of Public Welfare abolished and specified functions transferred to Department of Public Health and Department of Public Welfare, see note under section 3-102.

§ 24-410. Detention of United States prisoners in Washington Asylum and Jail.

The Board of Public Welfare is hereby authorized and directed to receive and keep in the Washington Asylum and Jail all prisoners committed thereto for offenses against the United States. (Mar. 2, 1911, 36 Stat. 1003, ch. 192.)

TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS

Board of Public Welfare abolished and specified functions transferred to Department of Public Health and Department of Public Welfare, see note under section 3-102.

§ 24-411. Superintendent and all other employees—Appointment—Discharge—Supervision of Board of Public Welfare.

The superintendents and all other employees engaged on March 16, 1926 in the operation of the institutions enumerated in section 24-409 shall after March 16, 1926 be subject to the supervision of the Board. Each superintendent shall have the management and control of the institution to which he is appointed and shall be subordinate to the director of public welfare. Where defendant had been duly committed to jail upon other charges and was being legally detained, and defendant was delivered to custody of policemen by jail officials for purpose of going to police headquarters to take a lie detector test, to which defendant had agreed to submit, though jailer exceeded his authority in surrendering defendant, fact that defendant was in temporary care of police at time of making written confession to murder charge did not render confession inadmissible at his trial. Tyler v. United States (1952, 193 F. 2d 24, 90 U.S. App. D.C. 2, certiorari denied 72 S. Ct. 639, 343 U.S. 908, 96 L. Ed. 1326).

The purpose of this chapter is to establish a program for the rehabilitation of alcoholics, promote temperance, and provide for the medical, psychiatric, and other scientific treatment of chronic alcoholics; to minimize the deleterious effects of excessive drinking on those who pass through the courts of the District of Columbia; to reduce the financial burden imposed upon the people of the District of Columbia by the abusive use of alcoholic beverages, as is reflected in mounting accident rates, decreased personal efficiency, growing absenteeism, and a general increase in the amount and seriousness of crime in the District of Columbia, and to substitute for jail sentences for drunkenness medical and other scientific methods of treatment which will benefit the individual involved and more fully protect the public. In order to accomplish this purpose and alleviate the problem of chronic alcoholism, the courts of the District of Columbia are hereby authorized to take judicial notice of the fact that a chronic alcoholic is a sick person and in need of proper medical, institutional, advisory, and rehabilitative treatment, and the court is authorized to direct that he receive appropriate medical, psychiatric, or other treatment as provided under the terms of this chapter. (Aug. 4, 1947, 61 Stat. 744, ch. 472, § 1.)

The term "chronic alcoholic" means any person who chronically and habitually uses alcoholic beverages to the extent that he has lost the power of self-control with respect to the use of such beverages, or while under the influence of alcohol endangers the public morals, health, safety, or welfare. (Aug. 4, 1947, 61 Stat. 744, ch. 472, § 2.)

(a) The Commissioners of the District of Columbia are hereby authorized and directed to establish and equip a clinic in connection either with some existing hospital or with some correctional institution or other facility for the diagnosis, classification, hospitalization, confinement, treatment, and study of persons who are found to be chronic alcoholics, as defined herein, by the Municipal Court for the District of Columbia.

(b) The Commissioners of the District of Columbia are also directed to utilize the alcoholic clinic services for the treatment of the chronic alcoholic as authorized by this chapter and for the purpose of preparing and administering a program for the rehabilitation of alcoholics and the promotion of temperance through teaching and training of professional personnel and use through community organization. (Aug. 4, 1947, 61 Stat. 744, ch. 472, § 3.)

In any criminal case, brought to trial before the Municipal Court for the District of Columbia, in which the evidence indicates that the defendant is a chronic alcoholic within the meaning of section 24-502, the judge may suspend the proceedings in the case and order that a hearing be held, upon sufficient notice, to determine whether the defendant is a chronic alcoholic. The hearing shall be conducted by the judge without a jury, unless the defendant requests a jury. The defendant shall be entitled to representation at the hearing by an attorney of his own choice, and if the defendant does not select an attorney, the court shall appoint an attorney to represent the defendant. If, after the hearing, the judge, or the jury, as the case may be, determines that the defendant is a chronic alcoholic, the court may order that he be committed to the clinic for diagnosis, classification, and treatment as his condition may require, provided the term of commitment shall not exceed ninety days. (Aug. 4, 1947, 61 Stat. 745, ch. 472, § 4.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

1. Discretion of court

This section which provides that the court may order the defendant committed to a clinic clearly indicates that such commitment is generally a matter of discretion of the court. Peeples v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1950, 75 A. 2d 845).

§ 24-505. Classification and diagnostic center.

The director of the clinic shall provide a classification and diagnostic center. Every person committed to the clinic shall first be sent to this classification and diagnostic center for observation, examination, and classification. The classification center shall make a complete study of each person committed, including mental and physical condition, personal traits, pertinent circumstances of school and family life, and any delinquency, criminal experience, or other factors contributing to his addiction to alcohol. (Aug. 4, 1947, 61 Stat. 745, ch. 472, § 5.)

§ 24-506. Director's recommendation to committing judge—Court order—Designation of director as representative of Attorney General.

(a) The director may then recommend to the committing judge that the person committed (1) be permitted to remain at liberty conditionally and under supervision, or (2) be placed in an appropriate agency, hospital, institution in the District of Columbia for treatment as a chronic alcoholic, or (3) be returned to the court from which he was committed for trial upon the original offense charged or for such action as the court may deem proper. The court may thereupon, in its discretion, issue such orders as it deems necessary and proper in the case.

(b) The Attorney General of the United States may, in order to carry out the purposes of this chapter, designate the director of the clinic as his authorized representative under section 24-425. (Aug. 4, 1947, 61 Stat. 745, ch. 472, § 6.)

§ 24-507. Discharge at expiration of term—Second hearing on director's recommendation—Recommendation.

At the expiration of the term of commitment the chronic alcoholic must be discharged, unless the director of the clinic recommends to the court prior to the expiration of the term of commitment that he is in need of additional treatment in an appropriate hospital or institution, in which event the court will conduct a second hearing, in the same manner and upon the same conditions as provided in section 24-504 for the first hearing, as to his condition, and may order the chronic alcoholic recommitted for an additional period of ninety days or less as his condition requires. (Aug. 4, 1947, 61 Stat. 745, ch. 472, § 7.)

§ 24-508. Supervision by probation officer or other agency.

A chronic alcoholic committed to the clinic and who is permitted to remain at liberty or conditionally released shall be under the supervision of the probation office of the court in which he was committed, or the clinic, or such other agency, public or private, as the court may determine. (Aug. 4, 1947, 61 Stat. 745, ch. 472, § 8.)

No chronic alcoholic shall be committed to a clinic, agency, hospital, or institution under the terms of this chapter until the District Commissioners shall certify to the municipal court for the District of Columbia the extent to which proper and adequate treatment facilities and personnel have been provided to carry out the purposes of this chapter. (Aug. 4, 1947, 61 Stat. 745, ch. 472, § 9.)

§ 24-510. Voluntary submission for treatment—Admission—Payment of costs—Rules and regulations—Rights as citizen retained.

(a) Any resident of the District of Columbia who is a chronic alcoholic within the meaning of this chapter may voluntarily submit himself for admission, examination, and treatment in the clinic. If he is found to be a chronic alcoholic, the applicant may be admitted to the clinic for such period of time as is estimated by the director as necessary to effect a cure. He may be given such treatment, guidance, and help as the director deems appropriate except that he may not be committed to a correctional institution. Any such chronic alcoholic voluntarily applying may be required to pay the cost of his subsistence, care, and treatment. All such money shall be covered into the credit of the appropriation from which the expenditure was made. The Commissioners may establish or approve such rules and regulations as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

(b) Any resident of the District of Columbia who voluntarily submits himself for admission and treatment in the clinic shall not forfeit or abridge thereby any of his rights as a citizen of the United States, nor shall the fact that he has submitted himself for admission and treatment or that he has been given help or has submitted himself to any study, treatment, or guidance be used against him in any proceeding in any court. The record of any application under this section by any individual for admission and treatment in the clinic and the record of any study of, or treatment, guidance, or help furnished to, any individual admitted in the clinic under this section shall be confidential, and not be divulged except on order of the court. No order may be made under section 24-506 with respect to any such individual except as provided under the rules and regulations of the Commissioners in effect at the time such individual voluntarily submitted himself for admission and treatment in the clinic. (Aug. 4, 1947, 61 Stat. 746, ch. 472, § 10.)

The Congress intends that Federal criminal laws shall be enforced against drug users as well as other persons, and sections 24-601 to 24-611 shall not be used to substitute treatment for punishment in cases of crime committed by drug users. (June 24, 1953, 67 Stat. 77, ch. 149, § 2; July 24, 1956, 70 Stat. 609, ch. 676, title I, § 101.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Construction 1
Juveniles 2

1. Construction

This chapter is not a criminal statute and when it places a juvenile under jurisdiction of Juvenile Court in an institution for treatment, it does no more than change custody of juvenile under commitment and does not impair Juvenile Court jurisdiction. In re Whisaker (1955, 134 F. Supp. 864).

This chapter providing for commitment of all narcotics addicts to institutions for treatment, except persons charged with a criminal offense, does not impliedly repeal Juvenile Court Act, § 11-901 et seq., insofar as jurisdiction over juveniles who are addicted to narcotics is concerned. Id.

2. Juveniles

The intention of Congress was to include juveniles within the operation of this chapter. In re Whisaker (1955, 134 F. Supp. 864).

Under this chapter, court had authority to examine juvenile for purpose of determining whether she should be committed for treatment as a narcotics user, even though juvenile had been previously committed to the Department of Public Welfare by the Juvenile Court. Id.

(b) The term "narcotic drugs" shall have the same meaning as that given to such term by section 4731 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

(c) The term "patient" means any person ordered to appear before the Commissioners, pursuant to the provisions of section 24-603.

(d) The term "Commissioners" means the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, sitting as a Board, or their designated agent or agents. (June 24, 1953, 67 Stat. 77, ch. 149, § 3; July 24, 1956, 70 Stat. 609, ch. 676, title I, § 101.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

1. In general

This act did not repeal the Liquor Taxing Act of 1934. Sims v. Rives (1936, 84 F. 2d 871, 66 App. D.C. 24, certiorari denied 56 S. Ct. 960, 298 U.S. 682, 80 L. Ed. 1402).

§ 25-102. Short title—Application.

This chapter may be cited as the "District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Act." It shall apply only to the District of Columbia and shall not authorize the delivery of alcoholic beverages outside of the District of Columbia in violation of the law of the place of delivery. (Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 319, ch. 4, § 2.)

CROSS REFERENCE

Application and exemptions from chapter, see §§ 25-108, 25-109, 25-115, 25-127, 25-137.

In the interpretation of this chapter, unless the context indicates a different meaning:

(a) The word "alcohol" means ethyl alcohol, hydrated oxide of ethyl, or spirit of wine, from whatever source or by whatever processes produced.

(b) The word "spirits" means any beverage which contains alcohol obtained by distillation mixed with drinkable water and other substances in solution, including brandy, rum, whisky, cordials, and gin.

(c) The word "wine" means the product of the normal alcoholic fermentation of the juice of fresh, sound, ripe grapes, with the usual cellar treatment and necessary additions to correct defects due to climatic, saccharine and seasonal conditions, including champagne, sparkling, artificially carbonated and fortified wine. No other product obtained by the fermentation of the natural sugar contents of fruits or other agricultural products containing sugar shall be called "wine" unless designated by appropriate prefix descriptions of the fruit or other product from which the same was predominantly produced, or as artificial or imitation wine. Light wines shall mean wines containing 14 per centum or less of alcohol by volume, other than champagne.

(d) The word "beer" means any fermented beverages of any name or description manufactured from malt, wholly or in part, or from any substitute therefor.

(e) The words "alcoholic beverage" or "beverage" include the four varieties of liquor above defined (alcohol, spirits, wine, and beer) and every liquid or solid, patented or not, containing alcohol, spirits, wine, or beer and capable of being consumed by a human being. Any liquid or solid containing more than one of the four varieties above defined is considered as belonging to that variety which has the higher percentage of alcohol, according to the order in which they are above defined, except as provided in subsection (c) hereof. The provisions of this section and of this chapter shall not apply to any liquid or solid containing less than one half of 1 per centum of alcohol by volume, nor shall anything contained in this chapter be construed as affecting the manufacture of apple cider or the sale thereof.

(g) The word "club" means a corporation for the promotion of some common object (not including corporations organized for any commercial or business purpose, the object of which is money profit), owning, hiring, or leasing a building or space in a building of such extent and character as in the judgment of the Board may be suitable and adequate for the reasonable and comfortable use and accommodations of its members and their guests, and including such space outside of the building and adjoining it as may be approved by the Board, and provided with such suitable and adequate kitchen and dining-room space and equipment, implements, and facilities, and employing such a sufficient number of employees for cooking, preparing, and serving meals for its members and their guests, as shall satisfy the Board that the sale of beverages intended is not more than an incident to and is not the prime source of revenue from such space; and the affairs and management of such corporation are conducted by a board of directors, executive committee, or similar body chosen by the members at least once each calendar year and no officer, agent, or employee of the club is paid directly or indirectly, or receives in the form of salary or other compensation, any profit from the disposition or sale of beverages to the club or to the members of the club or guests introduced by members beyond the amount of such salary as may be fixed and voted by the members, or by its directors, or other governing body.

(j) The word "hotel" means a suitable building or other structure, approved by the Board, including such suitable space outside of the building and adjoining it as may be approved by the Board, kept, used, maintained, advertised, or held out to the public to be a place where meals are served and sleeping accommodations offered for pay to transient guests; in which thirty or more rooms are used for the sleeping accommodations of such transient guests, and having one or more dining rooms where meals are served to such transient guests, such sleeping accommodations and dining rooms being conducted in the same building or in connecting buildings, and such building or buildings, structure or structures being provided with such adequate kitchen and dining-room equipment and capacity and having employed therein such number and kinds of employees for preparing, cooking, and serving meals for its guests as shall satisfy the Board that such dining room is intended for use primarily as a place for preparing, cooking, and serving meals and that the chief source of revenue to be derived from the operation of such dining room shall be from the preparation, cooking, and serving of meals and not from the sale of beverages. No such dining room shall be considered suitable if any business is conducted therein other than the preparation, cooking, and serving of meals, except such a business as is incidental to a bona fide dining room.

(k) The word "manufacture" shall include rectification.

(l) The word "meals" means the usual assortment of foods commonly ordered at various hours of the day; and such food and victuals as sandwiches and salads shall not be regarded as a "meal."

(m) The word "person" includes an individual, partnership, corporation, and association.

(n) The word "restaurant" means a suitable space in a suitable building, approved by the Board, including such suitable space outside of the building and adjoining it as may be approved by the Board, kept, used, maintained, advertised, or held out to the public to be a place where meals are served, such space being provided with such adequate kitchen and dining-room equipment and capacity, and having employed therein such number and kinds of employees for preparing, cooking, and serving meals for its guests as shall satisfy the Board that such space is intended for use primarily as a place for preparing, cooking, and serving meals, and that the chief source of revenue to be derived from the operation of such place shall be from the preparation, cooking, and serving of meals and not from the sale of beverages. No such space shall be considered suitable if any business is conducted therein other than the preparation, cooking, and serving of meals, except such a business as is incidental to a bona fide restaurant.

(o) The word "sell" or "sale" shall include offering for sale, keeping for sale, trafficking in, bartering, delivering for value, exchanging for goods, or in any way other than purely gratuitously, and every delivery of any alcoholic beverage made otherwise than by purely gratuitous title shall constitute a sale.

(q) The word "tavern" means a suitable space in a suitable building approved by the Board, including such suitable space outside the building and adjoining it, as may be approved by the Board, kept, used, maintained, advertised, or held out to the public to be a place where sandwiches or light lunches are prepared and served for consumption on the premises in such quantities as to satisfy the Board that the sale of beer and light wines intended is no more than an incident to and not the prime source of revenue of such "tavern." (Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 319, ch. 4, § 3; Aug. 27, 1935, 49 Stat. 897, ch. 756, § 1.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Barroom 1
Evidence 2
Hotel 4
Judicial notice 3

1. Barroom

A barroom is a place in which intoxicating liquors are sold to be drunk on the premises. Army & Navy Club v. District of Columbia (8 App. D. C. 544).

2. Evidence

In prosecution for keeping for sale and selling alcoholic beverages without license, testimony of officers that from their experience in tasting and smelling liquor, it was their conclusion that liquid purchased at club was liquor, and that they tasted liquid and it contained whiskey, was sufficient proof of corpus delicti, notwithstanding failure to prove alcoholic content by chemical analysis. Stagecrafters Club v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1952, 89 A. 2d 876).

3. Judicial notice

From testimony that officers, from their experience in tasting and smelling liquor, concluded that liquid purchased was liquor, and that they tasted liquid and that it contained whiskey, courts may take judicial notice of alcoholic content of whiskey. Stagecrafters Club v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1952, 89 A. 2d 876).

4. Hotel

Requirement in District of Columbia licensing regulations that a building must have at least 30 bedrooms in order to be licensed as a hotel was within licensing authority of Commissioners of the District of Columbia. Courembis v. District of Columbia et al. (1951, 193 F. 2d 18, 89 U.S. App. D.C. 372).

Requirement of District of Columbia licensing regulations that a building must have at least 30 bedrooms in order to be licensed as a hotel was not arbitrary. Id.

Where plaintiff's application for building permit showed that he wished to operate a hotel but two weeks before plaintiff got his permit Commissioners of District of Columbia had given public notice of a hearing with regard to proposed new licensing regulations, and a month after he got permit and several months before he completed his alterations, new licensing regulations were adopted providing that a building must have at least 30 bedrooms to be licensed as a hotel, and it did not appear that plaintiff was prevented from continuing to use his 18 bedroom property as before, there was no basis for estoppel against refusal to grant license to operate a hotel. Id.

§ 25-104. Alcoholic Beverage Control Board—Appointment—Term—Employees.

The Commissioners of the District of Columbia shall appoint a Board of three persons, subject to removal by the Commissioners, to be called the "Alcoholic Beverage Control Board," each of the members of which shall be a citizen of the United States and a resident of the District of Columbia for at least three years immediately preceding his appointment and have during that period claimed residence nowhere else. Of the three persons first appointed as members of said Board, one shall be appointed for two years, one for three years and one for four years, and thereafter all appointments shall be for the term of four years, except such appointments as may be made for the remainder of unexpired terms. Vacancies caused by death, resignation, or otherwise shall be filled by the Commissioners only for the unexpired terms. Members shall be eligible for reappointment. The Commissioner shall designate one of the members of the Board to be chairman thereof. The Commissioners are authorized to employ such other personal services, including three additional assistant corporation counsel, as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this chapter, and to provide for the expenses of the Board. The salaries of employees, other than members of the Board, shall be fixed in accordance with the provisions of the Classification Act of 1949, as amended. The Commissioners shall include in their annual estimates such amounts as may be required for the salaries and expenses herein authorized. (Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 321, ch. 4, § 4; Apr. 20, 1948, 62 Stat. 176, ch. 217, § 2; Oct. 28, 1949, 63 Stat. 972, ch. 782, title XI, § 1106(a).)

AMENDMENTS

1949—Act Oct. 28, 1949, substituted "Classification Act of 1949" for "Classification Act of 1923."

1948—Act Apr. 20, 1948, eliminated sentence reading "The salary of each of the members of the Board shall be five thousand dollars per annum" following provision for designation of a chairman.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1948 AMENDMENT

Section 2 of act Apr. 20, 1948, provided in part that the amendment of this section shall be effective when the classifications provided for by section 25-104a shall have been effected.

TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS

All functions of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, including functions of all officers and employees, were transferred to the Board of Commissioners, the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, including the office of the chairman of the Board, was abolished effective at such time as the Board of Commissioners should specify but not later than June 30, 1953, a new office or agency was authorized to be established with such name or title as the Board of Commissioners should determine, and the Board of Commissioners was empowered to delegate the performance of any of its functions with stated exceptions, including the transferred functions, to any member of the Board of Commissioners or any other officer, employee or agency of the Government of the District of Columbia and to transfer personnel, property, records and funds by 1952 Reorg. Plan No. 5, eff. July 1, 1952, 66 Stat. 824.

All functions, duties, powers and authority vested in the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board and the chairman thereof on July 1, 1952, the effective date of 1952 Reorg. Plan No. 5, and transferred to the Board of Commissioners were delegated to and continued to be vested in the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board and the chairman thereof, until otherwise ordered, by Reorg. Order No. 1 of the Board of Commissioners, dated July 1, 1952.

Reorg. Order No. 35 of the Board of Commissioners dated and effective June 16, 1953, established under the direction and control of a Commissioner, an Alcoholic Beverage Control Board consisting of three members appointed by the Board of Commissioners. The order provided that all powers and authorities authorized by statute or by the Board of Commissioners to be exercised by the previously existing Alcoholic Beverage Control Board would thereafter be vested in the new Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, and the members of the previous board were reappointed to the new board. The order abolished the previously existing Alcoholic Beverage Control Board. This order was issued pursuant to 1952 Reorg. No. 5.

The Reorganization Orders and Plan are set out in the Appendix to title 1, Administration.

NOTES TO DECISION

1. Injunction

Where there was no genuine issue of material fact as to whether alcoholic beverage control board had discriminated against liquor licensee in deciding not to renew his license, suit to enjoin board from putting such decision into effect was properly resolved by summary judgment procedure. Minkoff v. Payne et al. (1954, 210 F. 2d 689, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 123).

The positions of members of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board for the District of Columbia shall be classified in accordance with the Classification Act of 1949, as amended. (April 20, 1948, 62 Stat. 176, ch. 217, § 1; Oct. 28, 1949, 63 Stat. 972, ch. 782, title XI, § 1106(a).)

§ 25-105. Interest of Board member or employee in manufacture, transporting, or storing of alcoholic beverages forbidden.

No provision of this section, however, shall prevent any such member or such employee from purchasing, transporting, and keeping in his possession any alcoholic beverage for the personal use of himself or members of his family or guests. The right, power, and jurisdiction to issue, transfer, revoke, and suspend all licenses under this chapter shall be vested solely in the Board, and the action of the Board on any question of fact shall be final and conclusive; except that, in case a license is revoked or is suspended for a period of more than thirty days by the Board, the licensee may, within ten days after the order of revocation, or the order of suspension for a period of more than thirty days is entered, appeal in writing to the Commissioners to review said action of the Board, the hearings on said appeal to be submitted either orally or in writing at the discretion of the Commissioners, and the Commissioners shall not be required to take evidence, either oral, written, or documentary. 1. Examination of witnesses

In hearing on application for renewal of liquor license, which alcoholic beverage control board refused to renew on ground that applicant was not generally fit and did not have necessary good moral character, which conclusion was based in part upon alleged conspiracy with bootleggers not to make bookkeeping entries required by Internal Revenue Code, applicant's cross-examination of one of the alleged bootleggers, on question of bias, was not so restricted as to constitute lack of procedural due process. Minkoff v. Payne et al. (1954, 210 F. 2d 689, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 123).

2. Injunction

Where this section provided that decision of Board of Commissioners of District of Columbia on questions of fact on appeal from Alcoholic Beverage Control Board should be final, but order revoking liquor license was upheld by a one to one vote, an injunction would be granted against enforcement of order which would terminate when appeal was reinstated, and after appeal was reinstated the license would stand suspended during time reasonably necessary for commissioners to reach a final decision. Lambros v. Young (1945, 145 F. 2d 341, 79 U.S. App. D. C. 247).

Under circumstances disclosed, including showing that net effect of board's failure to prescribe adequate rules and regulations had been to by-pass wishes of community, plaintiffs were entitled to preliminary injunction against operation of liquor store pending review of board's grant of application for transfer of liquor license. Palisades Citizens Association Inc., et al. v. Weakly et al. (1958, 166 F. Supp. 591, appeal dismissed in part, reversed in part on other grounds 265 F. 2d 372, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

3. Interim affirmance

The effect of a one to one vote of Board of Commissioners of District of Columbia upholding order of Alcoholic Beverage Control Board revoking liquor license is an interim affirmance of the Board which suspends the license until final decision of the commissioners. Lambros v. Young (1945, 145 F. 2d 341, 79 U.S. App. D.C. 247).

4. Mandamus

In action in the nature of a petition for writ of mandamus to require Alcoholic Beverage Control Board to issue a retailers' Class "C" license to petitioning restaurant, question before the court was whether action of the Board was based upon substantial evidence, and if it was, mandamus would not lie, whereas if it was not, next question was whether action of Board was arbitrary or capricious. Clore Restaurant v. Payne (1947, 72 F. Supp. 677).

5. Procedure for renewal of license

In application for renewal of liquor license, board properly followed procedure applicable to application for license in first instance, rather than that prescribed for revocation or suspension of license already issued. Minkoff v. Payne et al. (1954, 210 F. 2d 689, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 123).

6. Questions of fact

Under this section governing appeal to Board of Commissioners of District of Columbia from Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, provision that decision of commissioners on questions of fact should be final means that the Board of Commissioners must actually make a decision. Lambros v. Young (1945, 145 F. 2d 341, 79 U.S. App. D. C. 247).

A one to one vote of Board of Commissioners of District of Columbia upholding order of Alcoholic Beverage Control Board revoking liquor license did not constitute a "decision of fact" within this section providing that decision of commissioners on question of fact should be final. Id.

7. Review—Administrative

Decision of alcoholic beverage control board rejecting application for renewal of liquor license was not reviewable by commissioners of the District of Columbia. Minkoff v. Payne et al. (1954, 210 F. 2d 689, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 123).

8. — Judicial

Right of review in liquor license case was not restricted to owners of stores immediately adjacent to licensed premises nor to unsuccessful applicants, and property owners who had taken an active interest at hearing and had presented the "wishes of the neighborhood" were entitled to seek judicial review under District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Act. Palisades Citizens Association Inc., et al. v. Weakly et al. (1958, 166 F. Supp. 591, appeal dismissed in part, reversed in part on other grounds 265 F. 2d 372, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

Where the ruling of the majority of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board denying application for a retailers' Class "C" license is based upon sound legal principles and upon substantial evidence, the federal court would not be justified in interfering, but if there is no substantial evidence upon which to predicate a rejection, the action of the Board is subject to judicial review. Clore Restaurant v. Payne (1947, 72 F. Supp. 677).

9. Suspension

While license of any person appealing from order of Board revoking license is suspended until final decision of Board of Commissioners, the commissioners have no right to cause suspension of license to continue indefinitely by arbitrarily refusing to decide issue of fact. Lambros v. Young (1945, 145 F. 2d 341, 79 U.S. App. D.C. 247).

§ 25-107. Powers of Commissioners—Rules and regulations—Licenses.

The Commissioners are hereby authorized to prescribe such rules and regulations not inconsistent with this chapter as they may deem necessary to carry out the purposes thereof and to control and regulate the manufacture, sale, keeping for sale, offer for sale, solicitation of orders for sale, importation, exportation, and transportation of alcoholic beverages in the District of Columbia for the protection of the public health, comfort, safety, and morals, and the Commissioners are further authorized to prescribe such rules and regulations not inconsistent with this chapter as they may deem necessary to properly and adequately control the consumption of alcoholic beverages on premises licensed under paragraph (1) of section 25-111, with specific authority to prescribe the hours during which alcoholic beverages may be consumed on such premises.

The Commissioners shall have specific authority to make rules and regulations for the issuance, transfer, and revocation of licenses; to facilitate and insure the collection of taxes; to govern the operation of the business of licensees, with full power and authority to prescribe the terms and conditions under which alcoholic beverages may be sold by each class of licensees; to forbid the issuance of licenses for manufacture, sale, or storage of alcoholic beverages in such localities in, and such sections and portions of, the District of Columbia as they may deem proper in the public interest; to limit the number of licenses of each class to be issued in the District of Columbia and to limit the number of licenses of each class in any locality in, or sections or portions of, the District of Columbia as they may deem proper in the public interest; to forbid the issuance of licenses for businesses conducted on such premises as they, in the public interest, may deem inappropriate; to forbid the issuance of any class or classes of licenses for businesses established subsequent to January 24, 1934, near or around schools, colleges, universities, churches, or public institutions, to prescribe the hours during which beverages may be sold and to forbid the sale on Sundays; but the Commissioners shall not authorize the sale by any licensee, other than the holder of a retailer's license, class E, of any beverages on Sundays other than light wines and beer, and any such sale is hereby prohibited. The powers and authorities expressly enumerated are to be construed as in addition to, and not by way of limitation of, the general powers herein granted. Different regulations may be prescribed for the different classes of licenses, for the different classes of beverages, and for different localities in or sections or portions of the District of Columbia.

Any regulations promulgated hereunder shall become effective five days after being published in any daily newspaper of general circulation in the District of Columbia. Such regulations may be altered or amended from time to time as the Commissioners may deem desirable. The Commissioners shall also have authority in any time of public emergency, without previous notice or advertisement, to prohibit the sale of any or all beverages during the period of such emergency. (Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 322, ch. 4, § 7; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 102, ch. 159, § 404(a).)

1. Admissibility of evidence

Where sole issue determined by convictions of corporate tenant and its officers was sale of liquor on leased premises in violation of statute, judgments of conviction were admissible as prima facie evidence of unlawful use of premises by tenant in subsequent civil suit by tenant. Stagecrafters' Club v. District of Columbia Division of American Legion (1953, 111 F. Supp. 127).

In prosecution for keeping for sale and selling alcoholic beverages without a license, Municipal Court properly permitted police officer, who participated in arrest of defendant, to testify that, when defendant was arrested, defendant complained that the police had arrested him before for selling whiskey, since the statement by the defendant to the police officer was part of the res gestae and admissible though it tended to show the commission of an independent crime. Jackson v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1956, 125 A. 2d 50).

Where police officer under assumed name joined non-profit social club operating "after-hours bottle club" which would not have given him membership card had they known he was police officer and purpose of his mission, but membership was available to any one who walked up to door and paid membership fee, and officer did not obtain membership card surreptitiously, there was no fraudulent entry or entry by false representation which would warrant suppression of evidence in prosecution for keeping for sale and selling alcoholic beverages without license. Stagecrafters' Club v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1952, 89 A. 2d 876).

2. Affidavits of juror

Affidavit in present case does not present facts justifying an exception to the rule that jurors in the federal courts will not be heard for the purpose of impeaching the verdict returned where the facts sought to be shown are such that they essentially inhere in the verdict and only an extreme case will bring about an exception. Edwards v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1949, 68 A. 2d 286).

3. Argument to jury

No prejudicial error was committed by the prosecuting attorney, who, in his argument to the jury, explained the failure to introduce the marked money by saying "it had not been introduced because it could not be determined which was used for the purchase of the whiskey and which was used for other purposes" and assuming that "other purposes" referred to the purchase of lottery tickets, there was no prejudicial error since there was no testimony in respect of claim that defendants were anywhere connected with the sale of lottery tickets. Edwards v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1949, 68 A. 2d 286).

4. Arrest, search and seizure

Where police officer purchased whiskey from certain party with marked money in attempt to locate his source of supply, and as purchase was being completed, another officer appeared with warrant for party's arrest, arrested party stated he had purchased the whiskey from defendant, and officers searched defendant, found part of the marked money on him, and arrested him, officers had no right to search defendant, and evidence found in such search should have been excluded in prosecution for keeping for sale and selling alcohol beverage without license to do so. Smallwood v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1955, 116 A. 2d 599).

Right to search person incident to lawful arrest is beyond question, but search of body is illegal when purpose of search is to discover grounds as yet unknown for arrest or accusation. Id.

Where defendants were charged with violating statute in the sale of alcoholic beverages, the intervention of Sunday did not prevent a valid execution of the search warrant but the relevancy of the validity of the search warrant was not apparent where under the ruling of the trial court, no evidence seized under the warrant was used in evidence against defendant. Edwards v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1949, 68 A. 2d 286).

5. Cross-examination

In prosecution for keeping and selling alcoholic beverages without license, defendant, whose counsel elicited police detective's testimony that he did not ask defendant for written statement because he knew from defendant's record that she had been around and would not have given him such a statement in answer to question on cross-examination as to whether reason why witness did not ask for statement was because defendant denied her guilt at all times, was in no position to complain of such testimony as to defendant's record on appeal from judgment on verdict of conviction. Young v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1954, 102 A. 2d 754).

6. Forfeiture of lease

Landlord's acceptance of rent after tenant's conviction for selling liquor on leased premises without license did not constitute waiver of landlord's right, under lease, to forfeit lease for breach of tenant's covenant that premises would not be used for any unlawful purpose in view of facts that landlord had specifically reserved its right to declare a forfeiture if conviction were affirmed on appeal and that no rent was accepted after affirmance of conviction. Stagecrafters' Club, Inc. v. District of Columbia Division of American Legion (1953, 110 F. Supp. 481, supplemented 111 F. Supp. 127).

7. Instructions

In prosecution for keeping and selling alcoholic beverages without license, instructions to jury that seller's transfer of goods to buyer through means of another person in seller's presence is a sale, in answer to jury's inquiry as to whether accused must have physically delivered merchandise and physically received money therefor from consumer to be considered the seller, was not erroneous as peremptorily directing jury to find defendant guilty nor as misleading or inaccurate. Young v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1954, 102 A. 2d 754).

8. Joint trial

In prosecution for violations of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Law, defendants were properly charged and tried together since it would be assumed that average jury would not be so bereft of intelligence and discrimination that it would be unable to properly decide if any of the defendants had violated law. Simato et al. v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1954, 108 A. 2d 376).

9. Motion to quash information

On hearing on motion to quash information charging keeping for sale and selling alcoholic beverages without license, testimony of officers that they bought drinks of whiskey at club was sufficient to warrant denial of motion, apart from allegedly improperly obtained evidence under warrant. Stagecrafters' Club v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1952, 89 A. 2d 876).

10. Place of committing offense

Failure of government in prosecution for keeping and selling alcoholic beverages without a license, to offer specific proof offenses were committed in District of Columbia, but merely giving location of house by its street number, was not ground for reversal. Hoover v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1945, 42 A. 2d 730).

11. Separate offenses

In prosecution for keeping and selling alcoholic beverages without a license, the admission of evidence that defendant, who had been identified as person who paid rent for house and one by whose bedside whiskey and marked money were found, had come from an adjoining bedroom into room where liquor was being sold and consumed, and joined in a crap game, was not erroneous as allowing proof of separate offense. Hoover v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1945, 42 A. 2d 730).

12. Sufficiency of evidence

Evidence sustained conviction for selling and keeping for sale alcoholic beverages without a license. Turner v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 132 A. 2d 149).

In prosecution for unlicensed sale of alcoholic beverages, evidence established sufficient proof of continuous possession by the Government of the bottled evidence by the Bureau of Internal Revenue so as to justify denial of directed verdict of acquittal though there was no testimony by receiving clerk as to his possession and disposition of the bottles. Kelly v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1954, 102 A. 2d 308).

In prosecution for keeping for sale and selling alcoholic beverages without license, evidence was sufficient to submit case to jury. Stagecrafters' Club v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1952, 89 A. 2d 876).

13. Suppression of evidence

Where counsel for defendant charged with keeping and selling alcoholic beverages without a license objected to admission of bottles of liquor and marked money on ground search warrant had not been produced in evidence, without moving to suppress during more than two weeks between arraignment and trial, admission of testimony that raiding officers who came upon premises after the first group of officers had made their purchases were there pursuant to a search warrant, was not error. Hoover v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1945, 42 A. 2d 730).

14. Witnesses, competency of

On hearing on motion to quash information charging keeping for sale and selling alcoholic beverages without license, fact that officers who testified that they bought drinks at club were unable to recall from unprompted memory, and that parts of testimony gave conclusions of law, would not justify calling officers legally incompetent. Stagecrafters' Club v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1952, 89 A. 2d 876).

§ 25-110. Licenses — Applications for — To whom granted—Records.

The Board is authorized to issue licenses to individuals, partnerships, or corporations, but not to unincorporated associations, on application duly made therefor, for the manufacture, sale, offer for sale, consumption on premises of clubs where food, nonalcoholic beverages, or entertainment are sold or provided for compensation, or solicitation of orders for sale of alcoholic beverages within the District of Columbia. The Board shall keep a full record of all applications for licenses, and of all recommendations for and remonstrances against the granting of licenses and of the action taken thereon. (Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 324, ch. 4, § 10; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 103, ch. 159, § 404(c).)

AMENDMENT

1953—Act June 29, 1953, amended section to empower the Board to issue licenses to permit the consumption of alcoholic beverages on premises of clubs where food, non-alcoholic beverages or entertainment are sold or provided for compensation.

TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS

Status of Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, see notes under section 25-104.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

1. Mandamus

Rejection by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, of application for a retailers' Class "C" license on ground that area was adequately serviced, was arbitrary and capricious, in absence of any evidence on the point. Clore Restaurant v. Payne (1947, 72 F. Supp. 677).

In action in the nature of a petition for writ of mandamus to require Alcoholic Beverage Control Board to issue a retailers' Class "C" license to petitioning restaurant, question before the court was whether action of the Board was based upon substantial evidence, and if it was, mandamus would not lie, whereas if it was not, next question was whether action of Board was arbitrary or capricious. Id.

(Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 324, ch. 4, § 11; Apr. 30, 1934, 48 Stat. 654, ch. 181, § 1; June 18, 1934, 48 Stat. 997, ch. 588; July 2, 1935, 49 Stat. 444, ch. 359; Aug. 27, 1935, 49 Stat. 398, 899, ch. 756, §§ 3-7; June 15, 1938, 52 Stat. 691, ch. 396, §§ 1, 2; May 27, 1949, 63 Stat. 133, ch. 146, title V, § 501; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 103, ch. 159, § 404(d).)

AMENDMENTS

§ 25-115. Applications for licenses—Qualification of applicants—Moral character—Citizenship—Prior convictions—Ownership—Interest of manufacturer in retail business—Character of premises—Advertising application—Hearing of protests—Objection of property owners—Removal of bonded liquor from Government warehouses—Penalty.

(a) Any individual, partnership, or corporation desiring a license under this chapter shall file with the Board an application in such form as the Commissioners may prescribe, and such application shall contain such additional information as the Board may require, and (except in the case of an application for a manufacturer's license, retailer's license, class E, or solicitor's license) shall contain a statement setting forth the name and address of the true and actual owner of the premises upon which the business to be licensed is to be conducted. Before a license is issued the Board shall satisfy itself:

1. That the applicant, if an individual, or, if a partnership, each of the members of the partnership, or, if a corporation, each of its principal officers and directors, is of good moral character and generally fit for the trust to be in him reposed.

2. That the applicant, if an individual, or, if a partnership, each of the members of the partnership, or, if a corporation, each of its principal officers, is a citizen of the United States, not less than twenty-one years of age, and has not, within five years prior to the filing of such application, been convicted of a misdemeanor under the National Prohibition Act, as amended and supplemented, or, within ten years prior to such filing, been convicted of any felony.

3. Except in the case of an application for a solicitor's license, that the applicant is the true and actual owner of the business for which the license is desired, and that he intends to carry on the business authorized by the license for himself and not as the agent of any individual, partnership, association, or corporation, and that he intends to superintend in person the management of the business licensed, or intends to have some other person, to be approved by the Board, manage the business for him, which said manager must possess all of the qualifications required of a licensee hereunder.

4. That in the case of an applicant for a wholesaler's license or a retailer's license (except a retailer's license class E), no manufacturer or wholesaler of beverages other than the applicant (including a stockholder holding 25 per centum or more of the common stock, or an officer of any manufacturer or wholesaler of beverages, if such manufacturer or wholesaler is a corporation), has such a substantial interest, direct or indirect, in the business for which the license is requested, or in the premises in respect of which such license is to be issued, as in the judgment of the Board may tend to influence such licensee to purchase beverages from such manufacturer or wholesaler, and that such business will not be conducted with any money, equipment, furniture, fixtures, or property rented from or loaned or given by any such manufacturer or wholesaler (including such stockholder or officer) or sold by such manufacturer or wholesaler (including such stockholder or officer) to any such licensee for less than the fair market value or upon a conditional sale agreement or chattel trust.

5. That the place for which the license is to be issued is an appropriate one considering the character of the premises, its surroundings, and the wishes of the persons residing or owning property in the neighborhood of the premises for which the license is desired.

(b) Before granting a license under section 25-111(1) or a retailer's license, except a retailer's license class E or class F, the Board shall give notice by advertisement published once a week and for at least two weeks in some newspaper of general circulation published in the District of Columbia. The advertisement so published shall contain the name of the applicant and a description by street and number, or other plain designation, of the particular location for which the license is requested and the class of license desired. Such notice shall state that remonstrants are entitled to be heard before the granting of such licenses and shall name the time and place of such hearing. There shall also be posted by the Board a notice, in a conspicuous place, on the outside of the premises. This notice shall state that remonstrants are entitled to be heard before the granting of such license and shall name the same time and place for such hearing as set out in the public advertisement; and, if remonstrance against the granting of such license is filed, no final action shall be taken by the Board until the remonstrant shall have had an opportunity to be heard, under rules and regulations prescribed by said Board. Any person wilfully removing, obliterating, marring, or defacing said notice shall be deemed guilty of a violation of this chapter. The provisions of this subsection relating to notice by advertisement in some newspaper of general circulation shall not apply to the issuance of a license to a retailer for any place of business if such retailer is the holder of a license of the same class for the same place and if said last-mentioned license is in effect on the date the application for the new license is filed.

(c) Except in the case of a retailer's license class C or class D or a license issued under section 25-111(1) to be issued for a hotel or club or a retailer's license class B or class E, no place for which a license under this chapter has not been issued and in effect on the date the written objections hereinafter provided for are filed, shall be deemed appropriate if the owners of a majority of the real property within a radius of six hundred feet of the boundary lines of the lot or parcel of ground upon which is situated the place for which the license is desired, shall, on a form to be prescribed by the Commissioners filed with the Board, object to the granting of such license. In determining the sufficiency of such objections the owners of all such property not lying within a residential use district as defined in the zoning regulations and shown in the official atlases of the Zoning Commission shall be taken as consenting to the granting of such license, except that the Commissioners shall have power to file objections on behalf of any property lying within such radius owned by the United States or the District of Columbia. This subsection shall be construed as a limitation upon the discretion of the Board in granting a license and not as a limitation upon the discretion of the Board in refusing a license: Provided, however, That none of the provisions of this chapter shall prevent the Board from promulgating regulations to permit the lawful bona fide owners of warehouse receipts for bonded liquors stored in Government warehouses either in the District of Columbia or elsewhere from withdrawing such bonded liquors for personal use on payment to the Collector of Taxes for the District of Columbia, taxes at such rates as provided in this chapter: Provided, That such bona fide holder of such warehouse receipts held legal title to such warehouse receipts prior to the passage of this chapter.

(d) A separate application shall be filed with respect to each place of business, except that a company engaged in interstate commerce may file one application for a license for the operation thereunder of all of its dining, club, and lounge cars operated on railroads within the District of Columbia. The required license fee shall be paid to the collector of taxes and his duplicate receipt shall accompany the application for license. In the event the license is denied the fee shall be returned. Every such application shall be verified by the affidavit of the applicant, if an individual, or by all of the members of a partnership, or by the president or vice president of a corporation. If any false statement is knowingly made in such application, or in any accompanying statement under oath which may be required by the Commissioners or the Board, the person making the same shall be deemed guilty of perjury. The making of a false statement in any such application, or in any such accompanying statement, whether made with or without the knowledge or consent of the applicant, shall, in the discretion of the Board, constitute sufficient cause for the revocation of the license. (Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 327, ch. 4, § 14; Aug. 25, 1937, 50 Stat. 802, 803, ch. 766, §§ 1, 2; June 15, 1938, 52 Stat. 691,

NOTES TO DECISIONS

In general 1
Factors considered in grant of license 2
Injunction 3
Mandamus 4
Parties 5
Procedural errors 6
Review 7

1. In general

Rejection by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, of application for a retailers' Class "C" license on ground that area was adequately serviced, was arbitrary and capricious, in absence of any evidence on the point. Clore Restaurant v. Payne (1947, 72 F. Supp. 677).

2. Factors considered in grant of license

In license transfer case, question is whether wishes of neighborhood and character of premises warrant granting of liquor license for locality; and previous location and history of store are beside the point. Palisades Citizens Association Inc. et al. v. Weakly et al. (1958, 166 F. Supp. 591, appeal dismissed in part, reversed in part on other grounds 265 F. 2d 372, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

3. Injunction

Under circumstances disclosed, including showing that net effect of board's failure to prescribe adequate rules and regulations had been to by-pass wishes of community, plaintiffs were entitled to preliminary injunction against operation of liquor store pending review of board's grant of application for transfer of liquor license. Palisades Citizens Association Inc. et al. v. Weakly et al. (1958, 166 F. Supp. 591, appeal dismissed in part, reversed in part on other grounds 265 F. 2d 372, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

4. Mandamus

In action in the nature of a petition for writ of mandamus to require Alcoholic Beverage Control Board to issue a retailers' Class "C" license to petitioning restaurant, question before the court was whether action of the Board was based upon substantial evidence, and if it was, mandamus would not lie, whereas if it was not, next question was whether action of Board was arbitrary or capricious. Clore Restaurant v. Payne (1947, 72 F. Supp. 677).

5. Parties

Under statute forbidding alcoholic beverage control board of District of Columbia to issue license for new location to operate liquor store if the owners of a majority of the real property within a radius of 600 feet of the place for which the license is desired object to the granting of such license, individuals who own property within 600-foot radius of new location and an association having members who own property within such 600-foot radius had standing to bring action against licensee and members of the board to set aside license for new location. MacArthur Liquors Inc. v. Palisades Citizens Ass'n Inc. et al. (1959, 265 F. 2d 372, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

6. Procedural errors

Where owners within 600-foot radius of proposed new location of retail liquor store, objected to granting license for the new location on District of Columbia alcoholic beverage control board's form meant for use in connection with statute requiring board, before granting license, to consider wishes of persons residing or owning property in neighborhood of premises rather than on board's form meant for use in connection with statute forbidding board to issue license for new location if owners of majority of real property within 600-foot radius of new location object, the board should not have refused to correct the owners signing such form but should have either ignored the formal error or allowed it to be corrected. MacArthur Liquors, Inc. v. Palisades Citizens Ass'n Inc., et al. (1959, 265 F. 2d 372, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

7. Review

Right of review in liquor license case was not restricted to owners of stores immediately adjacent to licensed premises nor to unsuccessful applicants, and property owners who had taken an active interest at hearing and had presented the "wishes of the neighborhood" were entitled to seek judicial review under District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Act. Palisades Citizens Association Inc. et al. v. Weakly et al. (1958, 166 F. Supp. 591, appeal dismissed in part, reversed in part on other grounds 265 F. 2d 372, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

1934—Act June 16, 1934, added class B to the exception.

(Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 330, ch. 4, § 16; May 27, 1949, 63 Stat. 135, ch. 146, title V, § 503.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

In general 1
Evidence 2

1. In general

Where defendant, convicted of being drunk in a public park and unable to pay fine, was imprisoned, his argument that general authority given by sections 11-606 and 11-616 was limited by this section, was without merit where the general statute existed before the special one Congress must have been aware of the older statutes, and had it intended later to modify the earlier, would have done so. Peeples v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1950, 75 A. 2d 845).

2. Evidence

In prosecution for intoxication, evidence was insufficient to support trial judge's finding that defendant was not guilty because of insanity. Williams v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1959, 147 A. 2d 773).

§ 25-129. Search warrants for illegal alcoholic beverages—Penalty for resisting officer—Disposition of illegal beverages—Payment of bona fide liens.

(a) A search warrant may be issued by any judge of The Municipal Court for the District of Columbia or by a United States commissioner for the District of Columbia when any alcoholic beverages are manufactured for sale, kept for sale, sold, or consumed in violation of the provisions of this chapter, and any such alcoholic beverages and any other property designed for use in connection with such unlawful manufacture for sale, keeping for sale, selling, or consumption may be seized thereunder, and shall be subject to such disposition as the court may make thereof, and such alcoholic beverages may be taken on the warrant from any house or other place in which it is concealed.

(b) A search warrant can not be issued but upon probable cause supported by affidavit particularly describing the property and the place to be searched.

(c) The judge or commissioner must, before issuing the warrant, examine on oath the complainant and any witness he may produce, and require their affidavits or take their depositions in writing and cause them to be subscribed by the parties making them.

(d) The affidavits or depositions must set forth the facts tending to establish the grounds of the application or probable cause for believing that they exist.

(e) If the judge or commissioner is thereupon satisfied of the existence of the grounds of the application or that there is probable cause to believe their existence, he must issue a search warrant signed by him with his name of office to the major and superintendent of police of the District of Columbia or any member of the Metropolitan police department, stating the particular grounds or probable cause for its issue and the names of the persons whose affidavits have been taken in support thereof, and commanding him forthwith to search the place named for the property specified and to bring it before the judge or commissioner.

(f) A search warrant may in all cases be served by any of the officers mentioned in its direction, but by no other person, except in aid of the officer on his requiring it, he being present and acting in its execution.

(g) The officer may break open any outer or inner door or window of a house, or any part of a house, or anything therein, to execute the warrant, if, after notice of his authority and purpose, he is refused admittance.

(h) The judge or commissioner must insert a direction in the warrant that it be served in the daytime unless the affidavit is positive that the property is in the place to be searched in which case he must insert a direction that it be served at any time in the day or night.

(i) A search warrant must be executed and returned to the judge or commissioner who issued it within ten days after its date; after the expiration of this time the warrant, unless executed, is void.

(j) When the officer takes property under the warrant, he must give a copy of the warrant together with a receipt for the property taken (specifying it in detail) to the person from whom it was taken by him, or in whose possession it was found; or, in the absence of any person, he must leave it in the place where he found the property.

(k) The officer must forthwith return the warrant to the judge or commissioner and deliver to him a written inventory of the property taken, made publicly or in the presence of the person from whose possession it was taken, and of the applicant for the warrant, if they are present, verified by the affidavit of the officer at the foot of the inventory and taken before the judge or commissioner at the time, to the following effect: "I, R. S., the officer by whom this warrant was executed, do swear that the above inventory contains a true and detailed account of all the property taken by me on the warrant."

(l) The judge or commissioner must thereupon, if required, deliver a copy of the inventory to the person from whose possession the property was taken and to the applicant for the warrant.

(m) The judge or commissioner must annex the affidavits, search warrant, return, inventory, and evidence, and at once file the same, together with a copy of the record of his proceedings, with the clerk of the municipal court.

(n) Whoever shall knowingly and wilfully obstruct, resist, or oppose any such officer or person in serving or attempting to serve or execute any such search warrant, or shall assault, beat, or wound any such officer or person, knowing him to be an officer or person so authorized, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned not more than two years.

(o) If the accused be discharged, the beverages and other property seized shall be returned to the person in whose possession they were found; if he be convicted, the said beverages and other property shall be forfeited, and may be destroyed by the police department or delivered for medicinal, mechanical, or scientific uses to any department or agency of the United States Government or the District of Columbia government or any hospital or other charitable institution in the District of Columbia, or sold at public auction, as the court may direct.

(p) If any of said property so seized, other than the said beverages and the containers thereof, shall be subject to a lien which is established by intervention or otherwise to the satisfaction of the court as being bona fide and as having been created without the lienor's having any notice that said property was to be used in connection with the illegal manufacture for sale, keeping for sale, or selling of alcoholic beverages, the court, upon the conviction of the accused, shall order a sale of said property at public auction and the officer making the sale, after deducting the expenses of keeping the property, the fee for the seizure and the cost of the sale, shall pay all such liens according to their priorities, and such lien or liens shall be transferred from the property to the proceeds of the sale thereof. (Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 334, ch. 4, § 29; Apr. 1, 1942, 56 Stat. 190, ch. 207, § 1; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 104, ch. 159, § 404(i).)

AMENDMENT

1953—Subsec. (a) amended by act June 29, 1953, which substituted "The Municipal Court for the District of Columbia" for "the police court of the District of Columbia" to conform to change in name effected by act Apr. 1, 1942, substituted "commissioner" for "Commissioner" and provided for the seizure of alcoholic beverages and other property designed for use in connection with unlawful consumption.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

1. Subject of search

Where, in searching defendant's premises under a valid search warrant authorizing search for alcoholic beverages or any property designed for use in connection with violation of Alcoholic Beverage Control Act, police officer looked behind a movable partition closing off a fireplace and discovered two large clean paper bags in the midst of rubble, and, although the feel and weight of such bags indicated to him that they did not contain bottles, the officer looked into the bags and discovered therein a quantity of marihuana, the officer's action in looking into the bags did not constitute an unreasonable search, but was lawful. United States v. White (1954, 122 F. Supp. 664).

§ 25-130. Minor misrepresenting age to procure beverage—Penalty.

Any minor who falsely represents his age for the purpose of procuring any beverage shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and be fined for each offense not more than $25 and, in default in the payment of such fine, shall be imprisoned not exceeding ten days. (Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 335, ch. 4, § 30.)

§ 25-131. Issuance of new permits under Beverage License Act of 1933 forbidden—Surrender of permit and refund of fees—Repeal.

After the date of the approval of this chapter no permit shall be issued under the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to provide revenue for the District of Columbia by the taxation of beverages and for other purposes," approved April 5, 1933, and no permits issued thereunder shall be renewed, but the Commissioners are hereby authorized to extend the expiration dates of permits issued under said act to a date designated by them not to exceed sixty days after the approval of this chapter, upon such terms and conditions, including the payment of such fees as the Commissioners may prescribe. Any permittee thereunder may make an application for a license under this chapter and, if said application is approved by the Board, such permittee shall surrender his permit and he shall be allowed a refund of the permit fee prorated as hereinafter provided. Any permittee under said Act of April 5, 1933, may surrender his permit and receive a refund of the permit fee prorated from the date of surrender of such permit to the date of expiration thereof. All such refunds shall be paid from the permanent indefinite appropriation for refunding erroneously paid taxes in the District of Columbia. All permits issued under said Act of April 5, 1933, shall remain in force and effect for the respective periods for which they were issued, unless sooner surrendered. After the approval of this chapter no taxes shall be collected under section 11 of the Act approved April 5, 1933. (Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 336, ch. 4, § 31.)

REFERENCES IN TEXT

The Beverage License Act of 1933 was repealed by section 31 of act Jan. 24, 1934, effective one year from Jan. 24, 1934.

§ 25-132. Penalty for violation where no specific penalty provided—Prosecutions.

Whosoever violates any of the provisions of this chapter for which no specific penalty is provided, or any of the rules and regulations promulgated pursuant thereto, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000 or by imprisonment for not longer than one year or by both such fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court.

Prosecutions for violations of this chapter shall be on information filed in the municipal court by the corporation counsel or any of his assistants, except for such violations as are felonies, and prosecutions for such violations as are felonies, shall be by the United States Attorney in and for the District of Columbia or any of his assistants. (Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 336, ch. 4, § 33; Apr. 1, 1942, 56 Stat. 190, ch. 207, § 1.)

CONSOLIDATION OF POLICE COURT AND MUNICIPAL COURT

"Municipal court" was substituted for "police court" to conform to act Apr. 1, 1942, which consolidated the Police Court and the Municipal Court. See section 11-751.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Consolidation 1
Examination of witnesses 2
Failure to report violation 3
Instructions 4
Officers of the United States 5

1. Consolidation

It was not error for trial court to refuse to consolidate the counts of keeping liquor for sale where motion was made at end of government's case on ground that appellant could have asked for a bill of particulars before trial and could have pleaded a defective information. Davenport v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1949, 67 A. 2d 522).

2. Examination of witnesses

A court may not limit cross-examination upon a pertinent subject at the outset, but after a substantial exploration of the subject, a judge is within his right in limiting examination which may become needlessly protracted and where the record discloses that during a trial for the illegal sale of alcoholic beverages, appellant's counsel was permitted freely and fully to cross-examine all government witnesses, there was no undue restriction or limitation upon the right of cross-examination. Davenport v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1949, 65 A. 2d 209, appeal denied 180 F. 2d 909, 85 U.S. App. D.C. 430).

Where government witness admitted that during a recess, he had talked with another government witness who had been excluded from the court room, trial court did not abuse its discretion in permitting him to testify. Id.

3. Failure to report violation

It is an offense for any officer to fail to report prohibition violations to the corporation counsel. Donnelley v. United States (1928, 48 S. Ct. 400, 276 U.S. 505, 72 L. Ed. 767).

4. Instructions

Where judge's charge stated "I charge you it is his constitutional right not to take the stand if he [the appellant] wishes not to do so," it was not prejudicial error not to have stated that the fact appellant had not taken the witness stand, should not be construed in any way to his prejudice. Davenport v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1949, 67 A. 2d 522).

Police officers who, though privately employed, are engaged in keeping law and order in a public place, are neither informers nor detectives engaged in the business of spying for hire and are not the type of witnesses whose testimony the court must instruct must be received with caution. Davenport v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1949, 65 A. 2d 209, appeal denied 180 F. 2d 909, 85 U.S. App. D.C. 430).

5. Officers of the United States

Prohibition agent appointed by the commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary of Treasury, is not an "officer of the United States"; however police captains are officers of the District but not of the United States Keehn v. United States (C.C.A. 1, 1924, 300 F. 493).

§ 25-133. Sale by retailer of beverages on credit prohibited—Exceptions.

No holder of a retailer's license, except a retailer's license, class E, shall sell on credit any beverages except beer and light wines. This section shall not prohibit a club from extending credit to its members or the guests of members or a hotel from extending credit to its registered guests. (Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 336, ch. 4, § 35.)

CROSS REFERENCE

Other provisions concerning sale of beverages on credit, see §§ 25-119, 25-120.

§ 25-134. Containers to be labeled—Content.

No rectified or blended spirits shall be sold unless the container in which it is sold shall bear a legible label firmly affixed thereto stating the nature and percentage of each ingredient therein (except water), the age of each such ingredient, and the alcoholic content of such spirits by volume. (Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 336, ch. 4, § 36.)

§ 25-135. Offenses under National Prohibition Act to be prosecuted.

Any offense committed, or any right accrued, or any penalty or obligation incurred, or any seizure or forfeiture made, prior to the effective date of this chapter, under the provisions of the National Prohibition Act, as amended and supplemented, or under any permit or regulation issued thereunder, or under any other provision of law repealed by this chapter, may be prosecuted or enforced in the same manner and with the same effect as if this chapter had not been enacted. (Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 337, ch. 4, § 37.)

§ 25-136. Separability of provisions.

If any provision of this chapter, or the application thereof to any person or circumstances, is held invalid, the remainder of the chapter, and the application of such provisions to other persons or circumstances, shall not be affected thereby. (Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 337, ch. 4, § 38.)

§ 25-137. Unlawful transportation—Penalty.

(a) It shall be unlawful for anyone, except a public or common carrier or the holder of a manufacturer's, wholesaler's, or retailer's license issued under this chapter, to transport, import, bring, or ship or cause to be transported, imported, brought, or shipped into the District of Columbia from without the District of Columbia any wines, spirits, or beer in a quantity in excess of one gallon at any one time.

(b) No public or common carrier shall transport or bring into the District of Columbia wine, spirits, or beer in a quantity in excess of one gallon at any one time for delivery to any one person in the District of Columbia other than the holder of a manufacturer's, wholesaler's, or retailer's license issued under this chapter.

(c) The provisions of this section shall not apply to bona fide possessors of old stocks who are moving into the District of Columbia nor to embassies or diplomatic representatives of foreign countries, nor to wines imported for religious or sacramental purposes, nor to wine, spirits, and beer to be delivered to the holder of a manufacturer's, wholesaler's, or retailer's license issued under this chapter.

(d) The penalty for violation of this section shall consist of the forfeiture of the beverages transported, imported, or shipped or caused to be transported, imported, brought, or shipped in violation of this section, and a fine of not more than $500 or imprisonment for not more than six months. (Jan. 24, 1934, ch. 4, § 39, as added Aug. 25, 1937, 50 Stat. 803, ch. 766, § 4.)

CROSS REFERENCE

Other provisions concerning transportation, see §§ 25-112, 25-138.

§ 25-138. Tax on beer.

(a) There shall be levied and collected by the District of Columbia on all beer sold by the holder of a manufacturer's or wholesaler's license, except such beer as may have been purchased from a licensee under this chapter, and except such beer as may be sold to a dealer licensed under the laws of any State or Territory of the United States and not licensed under this chapter, and on all beer purchased for resale by the holder of a retailer's license, except such beer as may have been purchased from a licensee under this chapter, a tax of $1.50 for every barrel containing not more than thirty-one gallons and at a like rate for any other quantity or for the fractional parts thereof. Unless the Commissioners shall by regulation prescribe otherwise, the collection and payment of such tax shall be in the manner following:

(1) Each holder of a manufacturer's or wholesaler's license shall, on or before the 10th day of each month, furnish to the assessor of the District of Columbia, on a form to be prescribed by the Commissioners, a statement under oath showing the quantity of beer subject to taxation hereunder sold by him during the preceding calendar month and shall, on or before the 15th day of each month, pay to the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia the tax hereby imposed upon the quantity of beer subject to taxation hereunder sold by him during the preceding calendar month.

(2) No licensee holding a retailer's license shall transport or cause to be transported into the District of Columbia for resale any beer, other than the regular stock on hand in a passenger-carrying marine vessel operating in and beyond the District of Columbia, or a club car or a dining car on a railroad operating in and beyond the District of Columbia, for which a retailer's license, class C or D, has been issued under this chapter, unless such licensee has first obtained a permit so to do from the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board. No such permit shall issue until the tax imposed by this section shall have been paid for the beer for which the permit is requested. Such permit shall specifically set forth the quantity, character, and brand or trade name of the beer to be transported and the names and addresses of the seller and of the purchaser. Such permit shall accompany such beer during its transportation in the District of Columbia to the licensed premises of such retail licensee and shall be exhibited upon the demand of any police officer or duly authorized inspector of the Board. Such permit shall, immediately upon receipt of the beer by the retail licensee, be marked "canceled" and retained by him.

(b) The Commissioners are authorized and empowered to prescribe by regulation such other methods or devices or both for the assessment, evidencing of payment, and collection of the taxes imposed by this section in addition to or in lieu of the method hereinbefore set forth whenever, in their judgment, such action is necessary to prevent frauds or evasions.

(c) The taxes imposed hereby, when collected, shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the District of Columbia. (Jan. 24, 1934, ch. 4, § 40, as added May 16, 1938, 52 Stat. 376, ch. 223, § 8, and amended May 27, 1949, 63 Stat. 136, ch. 146, title V, § 508; May 18, 1954, 68 Stat. 115, ch. 218, § 804; Mar. 31, 1956, 70 Stat. 83, ch. 154, § 305.)

§ 25-139. Building or place of violation declared a nuisance—Procedure to enjoin or abate.

(a) Any building, ground, premises, or place where any intoxicating beverage is manufactured, sold, kept for sale, or permitted to be consumed in violation of this chapter is hereby declared to be a nuisance, and may be enjoined and abated as hereinafter provided.

(b) An action to enjoin any nuisance defined in subsection (a) of this section may be brought in the name of the District of Columbia by the corporation counsel of the District of Columbia or any of his assistants, in the civil branch of The Municipal Court for the District of Columbia against any person conducting or maintaining such nuisance or knowingly permitting such nuisance to be conducted or maintained. The rules of The Municipal Court for the District of Columbia relating to the granting of an injunction or restraining order shall be applicable with respect to actions brought under this subsection, except that the District as complaining party shall not be required to furnish bond or security. It shall not be necessary for the court to find the building, ground, premises, or place was being unlawfully used as aforesaid at the time of the hearing, but on finding that the material allegations of the complaint are true, the court shall enter an order restraining the defendant from manufacturing, selling, keeping for sale, or permitting to be consumed any alcoholic beverage in violation of this chapter. When an injunction, either temporary or permanent, has been granted it shall be binding on the defendant throughout the District of Columbia. Upon final judgment of the court ordering such nuisance to be abated, the court may order that the defendant, or any one claiming under him, shall not occupy or use, for a period of one year thereafter, the building, ground, premises, or place upon which the nuisance existed, but the court may, in its discretion, permit the defendant to occupy or use the said building, ground, premises, or place, if the defendant shall give bond with sufficient security to be approved by the court, in the penal and liquidated sum of not less than $500 nor more than $1,000, payable to the District of Columbia, and conditioned that intoxicating beverages will not thereafter be manufactured, sold, kept for sale, or permitted to be consumed in or upon the building, grounds, premises, or place in violation of this chapter.

(c) In the case of the violation of any injunction, temporary or permanent, rendered pursuant to the provisions of this section, proceedings for punishment for contempt may be commenced by the corporation counsel or any of his assistants, by filing with the court in the same case in which the injunction was issued a petition under oath setting out the alleged offense constituting the violation and serving a copy of said petition upon the defendant requiring him to appear and answer the same within ten days from the service thereof. The trial shall be promptly held and may be upon affidavits or either party may demand the production and oral examination of the witnesses. Any person found guilty of contempt under the provisions of this section shall be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000 or by imprisonment for not more than twelve months, or by both such fine and imprisonment. (Jan. 24, 1934, ch. 4, § 41, as added June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 104, ch. 159, § 404 (j).)

All savings banks, or savings companies, or trust companies, or other banking institutions, organized under authority of any act of Congress to do business in the District of Columbia, or organized by virtue of the laws of any of the States of this Union, and having an office or banking house located within the District of Columbia where deposits or savings are received, shall be, and are hereby, required to make to the Comptroller of the Currency and to publish all the reports which national banking associations are required to make and publish under the provisions of sections 161, 163, and 164 of title 12, U.S. Code, and shall be subject to the same penalties for failure to make such reports as are therein provided, which penalties may be collected by suit before the United States District Court for the District of Columbia. 1. Authority to take possession

Comptroller's authority and power to take possession was precisely the power given him by statute to take possession of a national bank; and, if we are correct in this position, then it follows equally that under the powers vested in him by law he was authorized to investigate the condition of the bank and declare it insolvent, and to appoint a receiver and make an assessment against the stockholders. Dunn v. O'Connor (1937, 89 F. 2d 820, 67 App. D. C. 76).

2. Constitutionality

This act is constitutional. Lyons v. Bank of Discount (C.C. N.Y. 1907, 154 F. 391).

3. Construction

This act incorporates all the United States Bank Acts which have to do with administration in the case of insolvent banks and gives to the Comptroller the same control and management as in the case of national banks. Hamilton v. Offutt (1935, 78 F. 2d 735, 64 App. D. C. 385).

Determination of Comptroller of Currency as to necessity for assessments is conclusive. Harper v. Moran (1935, 76 F. 2d 980, 64 App. D. C. 210, certiorari denied 56 S. Ct. 104, 296 U.S. 592, 80 L. Ed. 419).

4. Foreign bank

Where foreign bank establishes house in District of Columbia, it submitted itself to the provisions of this act. Washington Loan & Trust Co. v. Allman (1934, 70 F. 2d 282, 63 App. D. C. 116).

The liquidation of bank organized under West Virginia law and doing business solely in District of Columbia was governed by this chapter, and not by law of West Virginia. Parsons v. Barry (1945, 59 F. Supp. 221, affirmed 148 F. 2d 21, 80 U. S. App. D. C. 409, certiorari denied 66 S. Ct. 32, 326 U.S. 726, 90 L. Ed. 431, rehearing denied 66 S. Ct. 136, 326 U.S. 808, 90 L. Ed. 492).

5. Insolvency

Where the Comptroller of the Currency has held a bank to be insolvent and has appointed a receiver for it, the court will not substitute its judgment for the judgment of the Comptroller, unless it appears by convincing proof that the Comptroller's action is plainly arbitrary, and made in bad faith. United States Sav. Bank v. Morgenthau (1936, 85 F. 2d 811, 66 App. D. C. 234).

6. Liability of stockholders

This section does not impose double liability on stockholders where State laws impose none. Hamilton v. Offutt (1935, 78 F. 2d 735, 64 App. D. C. 385, certiorari denied 56 S. Ct. 121, 296 U.S. 592, 80 L. Ed. 419). See, also, Hamilton v. Bergling (1936, 85 F. 2d 249, 66 App. D. C. 83).

Though bank stockholders' liability under state law may be enforced in the District of Columbia by a receiver appointed by the Comptroller of the Currency, both the existence and the duration of the liability must be determined by the law of the state of the bank's incorporation. Moran v. Cobb (1941, 120 F. 2d 16, 73 App. D. C. 200, certiorari dismissed 62 S. Ct. 134, 314 U. S. 703, 86 L. Ed. 562).

7. National Savings Bank

The National Savings Bank of the District of Columbia was organized by the act of May 24, 1870, to accept deposits from depositors, to invest such funds for their benefit, and disburse revenues to the depositors and the corporators have no shares and receive no profits, and have not such interest as will warrant an action for an account and distribution of the profits. Huntington v. National Sav. Bank (1877, 96 U. S. 388, 6 Otto 388, 24 L. Ed. 777).

8. Payment of interest in liquidation

When assets of insolvent bank being liquidated under Comptroller of the Currency are sufficient to pay more than 100 percent of principal amount of depositors' claims, depositors are entitled to interest on their claims from date of suspension until paid, computed at statutory or legal rate of jurisdiction in which the liquidation is had. Parsons v. Barry (1945, 59 F. Supp. 221, affirmed 148 F. 2d 21, 80 U. S. App. D. C. 409, certiorari denied 66 S. Ct. 32, 326 U.S. 726, 90 L. Ed. 431, rehearing denied 66 S. Ct. 136, 326 U. S. 808, 90 L. Ed. 492).

Interest on time and savings deposits should be computed to date of bank's closing at contract rate, and after closing, deposits, whether savings or demand, should bear interest at local statutory rate on judgments. Id.

A judgment of United States Court of Appeals for District of Columbia that no part of assets of closed bank organized under state authority and doing business in District of Columbia could be turned over by receiver to stockholders until after principal and interest on debts were paid was res judicata of depositors' right to interest on their deposits. Id.

9. Personal liability of directors

Directors of bank not liable personally for deposits made after expiration of charter, where bank continued business. Thompson v. Park Sav. Bank (1935, 77 F. 2d 955, 64 App. D. C. 308, certiorari denied 56 S. Ct. 104, 296 U.S. 592, 80 L. Ed. 419).

10. Receiver

Receiver is the mere instrument of the Comptroller, and the declaration of the Comptroller, rather than the receiver, is the essential factor in determining the necessity for the assessment and where the Comptroller has made the decision, his conclusion is not subject to attack or open to review except for fraud. Harper v. Moran (1935, 76 F. 2d 980, 64 App. D. C. 210).

Plaintiff was appointed and qualified as receiver of the bank by the Comptroller of the Currency. Moran v. Schlosberg (1937, 90 F. 2d 408, 67 App. D. C. 163).

11. Reorganization plan

Comptroller of the Currency was acting within his statutory authority in holding that the plan of reorganization proposed by appellant was not fair and equitable as to the depositors and other creditors of the bank, and is not in the public interest, and that the Comptroller was right in refusing to adopt appellant's proposed plan, and consequently that his action in this behalf was not arbitrary or capricious. Cooper v. Woodin (1934, 72 F. 2d 179, 63 App. D. C. 311).

(Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1303, ch. 854, § 714; Mar. 4, 1933, 47 Stat. 1566, ch. 274, § 3.)

1933—Act Mar. 4, 1933, changed the first par. of this section which originally provided that the Comptroller might cause examination of any bank in the District organized under act of Congress, that he might, at his discretion, report thereon to Congress, and that the expense should be paid out of any appropriation made by Congress for special bank examinations to read as above, designated such provision as subsec. (a) and added subsecs. (b) and (c).

ALTERATION, AMENDMENT OR REPEAL

Section 9 of act Mar. 4, 1933, provided that: "The right to alter, amend, or repeal this Act is hereby expressly reserved. If any clause, sentence, paragraph, or part of this Act shall for any reason be adjudged by any court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, such judgment shall not affect, impair, or invalidate the remainder of this Act, but shall be confined in its operation to the clause, sentence, paragraph, or part thereof directly involved in the controversy in which such judgment shall have been rendered."

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Banks operating prior to statute 1
State law determining liability 2

1. Banks operating prior to statute

Bank incorporated under a state law operating a bank in the District of Columbia prior to April 26, 1922, was entitled to continue (33 O. A. G. 395).

2. State law determining liability

In absence of words creating liability claimed, or finding by necessary implication that the section plainly and convincingly adopts the national banking law of double liability, the law of Virginia as the place where bank was created would govern in measuring liability of appellees as stockholders. Hamilton v. Offutt (1935, 78 F. 2d 735, 64 App. D. C. 385).
